1. A municipal ordinance requiring a local license to be obtained as a condition precedent to conducting an express business within the municipality should be construed, in the absence of a controlling decision of the courts of the state, as not applicable to the transaction by an express company of its interstate business, since, construed otherwise, the ordinance would be invalid as an unconstitutional regulation of commerce.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III. d, 10, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — municipal license of express company — validity.

2. A municipality cannot require an express company to obtain a local license as a condition precedent to transacting within the city its interstate business, nor, so far as interstate business is concerned, can it exact an annual license fee from such company.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III. d, 10, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Municipal corporations — regulation of express companies — effect of partial invalidity.

3. The requirement of a municipal ordinance that every owner of a public express must give a bond "for each and every vehicle licensed," to be conditioned "for the safe and prompt delivery of all baggage, packages," etc., intrusted to the owner or driver "of any such licensed express," must fall, as applied to the interstate business of an express company, with the invalid provisions of such ordinance, under which the obtaining of a local license may be made a condition precedent to the transaction within the city by the express company of its interstate business.

---

NOTE.—On state licenses or taxes generally as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle, 9 L.R.A. 366; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 217; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311; and Pittsburgh & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 538.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, II. b; Statutes, I. d, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — conflicting state and Federal regulations — express business.

4. Congress has so far occupied, by the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288), the field of regulation with regard to the obligations to be assumed by interstate express carriers, as to invalidate, as applied to the interstate business of an express company, the provisions of a municipal ordinance requiring every owner of a public express to give a bond "for each and every vehicle licensed," to be conditioned "for the safe and prompt delivery of all baggage, packages," etc., intrusted to the owner or driver "of any such licensed express."

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c; III. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Municipal corporations — regulation of express companies — effect of partial invalidity.

5. The invalidity of the license scheme of a municipal ordinance as applied to the interstate business of an express company doing business in New York city renders invalid also, as applied to the wagons and drivers employed in such commerce, the further provisions of such ordinance for the licensing of drivers of a "licensed hack or express," upon the indorsement of two reputable residents of the city, and for the marking of the vehicles with the designation of the business and with the official license numbers, the exhibition of licenses upon demand, and the inspection of "licensed vehicles and places of business."

[For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, II. b; Statutes, I. d, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 83 and 84.]

Argued December 3 and 4, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

CROSS APPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a decree enjoining in part the enforcement of certain municipal ordinances as applied to the interstate business of an express company. Reversed and remanded for the entry of a decree in favor of complainant.

See same case below, on motion for preliminary injunction, 183 Fed. 793; on final hearing, 189 Fed. 268.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William D. Guthrie argued the cause and filed a brief for William N. Barrett:

No state or municipality can require any party to take out a license or pay license fees or give bonds for the right or privilege of carrying on any business in interstate commerce. It matters not how specious the pretext may be.

Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 58, 35 L. ed. 649, 652, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 302, 38 L. ed. 719, 723, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 306, 45 L. ed. 862, 872, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 135; Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 33, 46 L. ed. 785, 792, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 162, 47 L. ed. 995, 999, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; St. Clair County v. Interstate Sand & Car Transfer Co. 192 U. S. 454, 468, 48 L. ed. 518, 524, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 21, 54 L. ed. 355, 363, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; International Text-Book Co. v. Pigg. 217 U. S. 91, 108, 54 L. ed. 678, 686, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; Buck Stove & Range Co. v. Vickers, 226 U. S. 205, 215, 57 L. ed. 189, 192, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 401, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1542, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 185, 218, 41 L. ed. 965, 976, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604.

The local transportation of interstate packages is interstate commerce, and so within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal government.

Railroad Commission v. Texas & P. R. Co. 229 U. S. 336, 341, 57 L. ed. 1215, 1218, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837; St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 161, 57 L. ed. 1129, 1134, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Sabine Tram Co. 227 U. S. 111, 57 L. ed. 442, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; United States v. Union Stockyard & Transit Co. 226 U. S. 286, 57 L. ed. 226, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; Railroad Commission v. Worthington, 225 U. S. 101, 56 L. ed. 1004, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653; Southern P. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 498, 526, 55 L. ed. 310, 320, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Heyman v. Southern R. Co. 203 U. S. 270, 274, 51 L. ed. 178, 180, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104, 7 Ann. Cas. 1130; Jewel Tea Co. v. Lee's Summit, 189 Fed. 281, 198 Fed. 532.

The interstate commerce clause of the Constitution guarantees the right to ship merchandise from one state into another, and covers and protects the shipment from the time it commences its transit, by whatever means, local or interstate, until the termination of the shipment by delivery at the place of consignment.

Digitized by Google

The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 565, 19 L. ed. 999, 1002; American Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 133, 142, 49 L. ed. 417, 421, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182; Adams Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 147, 49 L. ed. 424, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 559, 50 L. ed. 1142, 1147, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 206 U. S. 129, 51 L. ed. 987, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606; American Exp. Co. v. Iowa, 196 U. S. 133, 142, 49 L. ed. 417, 421, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182.

It is true that it was once held by this court in Osborne v. Mobile, 16 Wall. 479, 21 L. ed. 470, that an ordinance requiring interstate express companies to be licensed before they could carry on their business in the city of Mobile was valid; but this ruling was recognized to be erroneous in the subsequent case of Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 647, 32 L. ed. 311, 314, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380, where the court, speaking of the earlier case, said: "In view of the course of decisions which have been made since that time [i. e., since 1872], it is very certain that such an ordinance would now be regarded as repugnant to the power conferred upon Congress to regulate commerce among the several states."

The doctrine of the Crutcher Case has repeatedly received the unqualified approval of this court upon every point decided in it.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 19, 54 L. ed. 355, 362, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; International Text-Book Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 108, 54 L. ed. 678, 686, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; Buck Stove & Range Co. v. Vickers, 226 U. S. 205, 215, 57 L. ed. 189, 192, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41.

It must be clear that if the interstate express companies were within the scope and operation of that statute, every driver and every wagon employed in collecting and delivering intrastate shipments would clearly be engaged in interstate commerce, even though part of the service related to intrastate shipments.

Pedersen v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 229 U. S. 146, 57 L. ed. 1125, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 57 L. ed. 1129, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

Within the principle of these cases, any railroad employee employed in collecting and delivering interstate shipments in carts or wagons would be engaged in interstate commerce.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Porter, 207 Fed. 311; Jewel Tea Co. v. Lee's Summit, 189 Fed. 280, 198 Fed. 532; United States v. Colorado & N. W. R. Co. 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 167, 85 C. C. A. 27, 157 Fed. 323, 13 Ann. Cas. 893.

The plain intent and purpose of the ordinances in question were to regulate the business of express carriers.

Detroit v. C. H. Little Co. 163 Mich. 448, 128 N. W. 767.

General usage, indeed, long continued and hitherto unquestioned, has great force; and the practical construction of the law by so many public officers, though not given upon adverse litigation, has still much of the weight of judicial decision.

Easton v. Pickersgill, 55 N. Y. 315; Tiffany v. Jamestown, 179 N. Y. 459, 72 N. E. 512; New York v. New York City R. Co. 193 N. Y. 543, 86 N. E. 565; Grimmer v. Tenement House Dept. 205 N. Y. 549, 98 N. E. 332; People ex rel. Werner v. Prendergast, 206 N. Y. 411, 99 N. E. 1047; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 307, 45 L. ed. 862, 872, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 135; Studebaker v. Perry, 184 U. S. 258, 268, 46 L. ed. 528, 533, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; United States v. Sweet, 189 U. S. 471, 473, 47 L. ed. 907, 908, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; McMichael v. Murphy, 197 U. S. 304, 312, 49 L. ed. 766, 769, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460; Komada v. United States, 215 U. S. 392, 396, 54 L. ed. 249, 252, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136.

The re-enactment by Congress, without change, of a statute which had previously received long-continued executive construction, is an adoption by Congress of such construction.

United States v. Cerecedo Hermanosy Compañia, 209 U. S. 337, 339, 52 L. ed. 821, 822, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v. Territorial Bd. of Equalization, 206 U. S. 474, 479, 51 L. ed. 1143, 1146, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695; United States v. Falk, 204 U. S. 143, 152, 51 L. ed. 411, 414, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 401, 50 L. ed. 515, 525, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

The same principle should apply to the adoption by a municipal legislature of the executive construction of an ordinance by repeatedly re-enacting it substantially in the form in which it was construed.

People ex rel. Outwater v. Green, 56 N. Y. 466; Pouch v. Prudential Ins. Co. 204 N. Y. 281, 288, 97 N. E. 731, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1191.

The court cannot remodel or reconstruct the ordinance so as to make it read as if its operation were expressly limited to the wagons and drivers of the interstate carriers who are engaged in local business, and thus compel such carriers, at prohibitive expense and inconvenience, to separate the local from the interstate business.

Digitized by Google

Williams v. Talladega, 226 U. S. 404, 419, 57 L. ed. 275, 281, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116; Illinois C. R. Co. v. McKendree, 203 U. S. 514, 529, 51 L. ed. 298, 304, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 153; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 191 U. S. 171, 179, 48 L. ed. 134, 138, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39.

The right of a state or a city to apply its police power to subjects under the exclusive control of Congress, but in regard to which congress has been silent, ceases as soon as Congress acts on the subject and manifests its purpose to call into effect its exclusive power.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 222 U. S. 370, 56 L. ed. 237, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 56 L. ed. 257, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140, 222 U. S. 444, 56 L. ed. 263, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Hudson County, 227 U. S. 248, 57 L. ed. 499, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Edwards, 227 U. S. 265, 57 L. ed. 506, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 262; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hughes, 201 Fed. 727.

Legislation of Congress in regard to matters of interstate commerce need not be inhibitive, but only to occupy the field, in order to supersede state statutes [or municipal ordinances] on the same subject.

Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 444, 56 L. ed. 263, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145.

An assertion of power by Congress over a subject within its domain must be treated as coterminous with its authority over the subject, and leaves no element of the subject to the control of the state.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hughes, 201 Fed. 750; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Hudson County, 227 U. S. 248, 57 L. ed. 499, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269.

This court has repeatedly pointed out the limit of the rule of severability and the danger of attempting to enforce part of a statute or ordinance, and thus make by judicial construction an enactment which the particular legislative body did not make and might not be willing to make, if the matter were again before that body.

Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 82, 99, 25 L. ed. 550, 553; Allen v. Louisiana, 103 U. S. 80, 83, 26 L. ed. 318, 319; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 304, 29 L. ed. 185, 197, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962; California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 29, 32 L. ed. 150, 153, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U. S. 678, 685, 30 L. ed. 766, 768, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 656, 763; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 158 U. S. 601, 635, 39 L. ed. 1108, 1125, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 565, 46 L. ed. 679, 692, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 262, 49 L. ed. 1040, 1043, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Illinois C. R. Co. v. McKendree, 203 U. S. 514, 529, 51 L. ed. 298, 304, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 153; New York ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon, 204 U. S. 152, 160, 51 L. ed. 415, 422, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188, 9 Ann. Cas. 736; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 501, 52 L. ed. 297, 310, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 87, 97, 54 L. ed. 106, 111, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 113, 54 L. ed. 678, 688, 27 L.R.A. (N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; Meyer v. Wells, F. & Co. 223 U. S. 298, 302, 56 L. ed. 445, 448, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218; Butts v. Merchants' & M. Transp. Co. 230 U. S. 126, 133, 57 L. ed. 1422, 1425, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 964.

Complainant has the right to relief in equity.

Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 838, 6 L. ed. 204, 228; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 161, 52 L. ed. 714, 729, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764; Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Andrews, 216 U. S. 165, 54 L. ed. 430, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; United States Exp. Co. v. Hemmingway, 39 Fed. 60; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Mobile, 179 Fed. 960; Simpson-Crawford Co. v. Atlantic Highlands, 158 Fed. 372; Hutchinson v. Beckham, 55 C. C. A. 333, 118 Fed. 399; Jewel Tea Co. v. Lee's Summit, 198 Fed. 532; Southern Exp. Co. v. Ensley, 116 Fed. 761; Kansas City Gas Co. v. Kansas City, 198 Fed. 510; Southern R. Co. v. Asheville, 69 Fed. 360.

Mr. Terence Farley argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Archibald R. Watson and William E. C. Mayer, filed a brief for the city of New York:

The ordinances are a valid exercise of the police power of the municipality, which has been delegated to it by the state, and are reasonable and just.

Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 47 L. ed. 108, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. 778, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 14 Ann. Cas. 1101; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 352, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 299, 41 L. ed. 166, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 43 L. ed. 191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Olsen v. Smith, 195 U. S. 332, 49 L. ed. 224, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 51 L. ed. 78, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; New York ex rel. Silz v. Hesterberg, 211 U. S. 31, 53 L. ed. 75, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

Digitized by Google

There is in them not a direct regulation of, but only an indirect beneficial assistance to, interstate commerce,—a right long since recognized as remaining with the state in the absence of direct legislation on the subject by Congress.

Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 402, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1542, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

It should never be held that Congress intends to supersede, or by its legislation suspend, the exercise of the police powers of the states, even when it may do so, unless its purpose to effect that result is clearly manifested.

Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 47 L. ed. 108, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506.

The license fees of $5 for each express wagon and of 50 cents for each driver thereof, therefore, are merely the necessary sums reasonably fixed to cover the ordinary and usual expenses of administration, supervision, and inspection; and, as such, are sums collected in aid of the exercise of the police powers, and are not an exercise of the taxing power. The distinction between licenses and fees in connection therewith, exacted in the exercise of the police power, and license taxes, levied under the taxing power, has long been recognized.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. New Hope, 187 U. S. 419, 47 L. ed. 240, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204; Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 47 L. ed. 995, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. New Hope, 192 U. S. 55, 48 L. ed. 338, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Taylor, 192 U. S. 64, 48 L. ed. 342, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Duluth Brewing & Malt. Co. v. Superior, 59 C. C. A. 481, 123 Fed. 358; Barrett v. New York, 183 Fed. 796.

The contention of possible inconvenience or burden upon the express company in case each state or city should enact its own regulations is fully met by the ruling of this court in New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418, wherein it was held that the remedy for such inconvenience lies in Congress alone, which could, by its own regulations, supersede those of the various states. So long as Congress remains inactive, the local regulations prevail, and inconveniences occasioned thereby cannot be deemed an unlawful burden upon interstate commerce.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought to restrain the enforcement against the Adams Express Company of a group of ordinances of the Board of Aldermen of the city of New York, upon the ground that, as applied to that company, these ordinances constitute an unconstitutional interference with interstate commerce and deny to it the equal protection of the laws. The ordinances are contained in [24] chapter 7 of the Code of Ordinances adopted in the year 1906, as amended (Cosby's ed. 1911), and the material sections, together with portions of the context, are set forth in the margin.†

The chapter relates to specified businesses in which no one is permitted to engage except under an annual license granted by the mayor and revocable by him. Among these is the business of "expressmen" (§§ 305, 306). [25] It is provided that no person is to be licensed "except a citizen of the United States, or one who has regularly declared intention to become a citizen" (§ 307). The license fee is "for each express wagon," $5, and "for each driver of any licensed vehicle," 50 cents, [26] with provision for renewal at one-half these rates (§ 308). Every person driving a licensed "express" is to be "licensed as such driver, and every application for such license shall be indorsed, in writing, by two reputable [27] residents of the city of New York, testifying to the competence of the applicant" (§ 315). Every vehicle "kept or used for the conveyance of baggage, packages, parcels, and other articles within or through the city of New [28] York for pay" is to be deemed a public express (§ 330). It is to bear a designation according with its official number (§ 331). Its owner is to give a bond to the state for "every vehicle licensed in a penal sum of $100, with sufficient surety, approved by the mayor or chief of the Bureau of Licenses, conditioned for the safe and prompt delivery" of all articles (§ 332). Provision is also made for the regular inspection of "all licensed vehicles and places of business"

†Chapter 7.

Title I.—Bureau of Licenses.

(§§ 300-304)

. . . . . .

Title II.—The Granting and Regulation of Licenses.

Article I.—Business Requiring a License.

§ 305. The following businesses must be duly licensed as herein provided; namely,

Digitized by Google

(§ 374), the report of any change of residence to the Bureau of Licenses (id. the exhibition of licenses upon demand (§ 375), and the display of the prescribed letters and numbers (§ 376). Penalties are provided for the violation of these requirements, and any person carrying on any business regulated by the ordinance, without license, is guilty of a misdemeanor (§§ 307, 315, 379).

The Adams Express Company, an unincorporated association organized under the laws of New York, has been engaged in interstate commerce, as a common carrier of packages, since the year 1854. It transacts its business in many states; and in the city of New York it handles daily about 50,000 interstate shipments, employing 341 wagons and 68 automobiles. About one half of these wagons are stabled in Jersey City. Its shipments from New York City to the south and west are hauled to Jersey City and there loaded on express cars of the Pennsylvania Railroad; those destined to points east are taken to the terminal in New York city of the New York, New Haven, & Hartford Railroad; and there is also traffic for points on the New York, Ontario, & Western Railroad, and tributary thereto, which is carried to the ter-public cartmen, truckmen, hackmen, cabmen, expressmen, drivers, junk dealers, dealers in secondhand articles, hawkers, peddlers, venders, ticket speculators, coal scalpers, common shows, shooting galleries, bowling alleys, billiard tables, dirt carts, exterior hoists and stands within stooplines and under the stairs of the elevated railroad stations. (Ord. app. May 22, 1899, § 1.)

§ 306. No person shall engage in or carry on any such business without a license therefor under a penalty of not less than $2 nor more than $25 for each offense, and for the purposes of this ordinance the term "person" shall include any human being or lawful association of such. (Id., § 2.)

Article II.—Licenses and License fees.

§ 307. All licenses shall be granted by authority of the mayor and issued by the Bureau of Licenses for a term of one year from the date thereof, unless sooner suspended or revoked by the mayor, and no person shall be licensed except a citizen of the United States, or one who has regularly declared intention to become a citizen.

The mayor shall have power to suspend or revoke any license or permit issued under the provisions of this ordinance. The mayor shall also have power to impose a fine of not more than $5 or less than $1 for any violation of the regulations herein provided, and to suspend the license pending payment of such fine, which, when collected, shall be paid into the sinking fund for the redemption of the city debt. (Id. § 3.)

§ 308. The annual license fees shall be as below enumerated:

. . . . . .

For each express wagon $5.00

. . . . . .

For each driver of any licensed vehicle ..... .50

(Id. § 4.)

§ 309. Any license, before its expiration, or within thirty days thereafter, may be renewed for another term, upon payment of one half the license fee above designated therefor.

All licenses in force when this ordinance takes effect for any business enumerated above may be renewed under the foregoing provisions regulating renewals of licenses hereunder issued. (Id. § 5.)

Article III.—Special Regulations and Rates.

I. Public Carts and Cartmen.

. . . . . .

II. Drivers of Licensed Vehicles.

§ 315. Every person driving a licensed hack, or express, shall be licensed as such driver, and every application for such license shall be indorsed, in writing, by two reputable residents of the city of New York, testifying to the competence of the applicant. No owner of a licensed hack or express shall employ an unlicensed driver under a penalty of $10 for each and every offense. (Amend. app. June 29, 1909.)

III. Public Hacks and Hackmen.

. . . . . .

IV. Public Hack Stands.

. . . . . .

IVa.—Public Porters.

. . . . . .

V. Expresses and Expressmen.

§ 330. Every vehicle of whatever construction kept or used for the conveyance of baggage, packages, parcels, and other articles within or through the city of New York for pay shall be deemed a public express, and the owner thereof shall be deemed a public expressman, and the term "expressman" shall be deemed to include any common carrier of baggage, packages, parcels, or other articles within or through the city of New York. (Ord. app. May 22, 1899, § 18.)

§ 331. Every public express shall show on each outside thereof the word "Express," or the letters "Exp.," together with the figures of its official number. (Id. § 19.)

§ 332. Every owner of a public express shall give a bond to the city of New York for each and every vehicle licensed in a penal sum of $100, with sufficient surety, approved by the mayor or chief of the Bureau of Licenses, conditioned for the safe and prompt minal of that road at Weehawken, New Jersey. Shipments received from out of the state for delivery in New York city are taken by the company's vehicles to the consignees either directly from these railroad terminals or through intermediate distributing offices. The company also [29] does a local business in the city of New York, and, in addition, receives packages for transportation between that city and such points within the state of New York as are on the line of the New York, New Haven, & Hartford Railroad. The interstate business, however, in the number of packages, comprises 98 per cent of the total business transacted in New York city, and, it being impracticable to effect a separation, the local and the other intrastate shipments are handled in the same vehicles, and by the same men, that are employed in connection with the interstate transportation. It was not until recently that the city sought to compel the company, in the transaction of this business, to comply with its license ordinances, although there have been ordinances requiring licenses for both express wagons and their drivers for over fifty years (Kent's ed. [1856]; Valentine's ed. [1859] pp. 374, 375; Shepard & Shafer's ed. [1881] §§ 380-386; Laird's ed. [1894] delivery of all baggage, packages, parcels, and other articles or things intrusted to the owner or driver of any such licensed express. (Id. § 20.)

Digitized by Google

§ 333. The legal rates for regular deliveries, unless otherwise mutually agreed shall be as follows in the city:

Between points within any borough—

Not more than 5 miles apart, each piece	$0 40
Not more than 10 miles apart, each piece	55
Not more than 15 miles apart, each piece	75

Between points in different boroughs: One half the above rates in addition.

Special deliveries at rates to be mutually agreed upon. (Id. § 21.)

[The succeeding provisions of article III. (subdivisions VI.-XVI.) and article IV., relate to junk dealers, dealers in secondhand articles, peddlers, etc., being the remaining businesses described in § 305.]

Title 3.—General Regulations and Complaints.

§ 373. All license fees received by the Bureau of Licenses shall be regularly paid over to the city treasury, except the license fees received from hackmen, dealers in junk and secondhand articles, and for stands within stoop-lines, which shall be paid into the sinking funds for the redemption of the city debt. (Ord. app. May 22, 1899, § 56.)

§ 374. The mayor shall have power to appoint inspectors in the Bureau of Licenses to see that the provisions of this ordinance are fully and properly complied with; and all licensed vehicles and places of business shall be regularly inspected, and the result of such inspection shall be indorsed on the official license therefor, together with the date of inspection and the signature of the inspector, and all inspections shall be regularly reported to the Bureau of Licenses. (Id. § 57.)

§ 375. Every licensee shall have the official license and exhibit the same upon the demand of any person; and shall report within three days to the Bureau of Licenses any change of residence or place of business; and shall at all times perform the public duties of the business licensed when called upon so to do, if not actually unable. (Id. § 58.)

§ 376. All words, letters, and numbers hereinbefore prescribed for licensed vehicles shall be shown permanently and conspicuously on each outside thereof in colors contrasting strongly with background, and not less than 2 inches high, as directed and approved by the mayor or chief of the Bureau of Licenses, and shall be kept legible and plainly visible at all times during the term of the license; and shall be obliterated or erased upon change of ownership or expiration of the license; and no person shall have or use any vehicle with words, letters, or numbers thereon like those herein prescribed for licensed vehicles without being duly licensed therefor. (Id. § 59.) . . .

§ 378. The chief of the Bureau of Licenses, or deputy chief, shall have power to hear and determine complaints against licensees hereunder, and impose a fine of not more than $5 or less than $1 for any violation of the regulations herein provided, subject to the approval of the mayor, who shall have power to suspend the license pending payment of such fine. All such fines, when collected, shall be paid into the sinking fund for the redemption of the city debt. (Id. § 61.)

Title 4.—Violations.

§ 379. Except as hereinbefore otherwise provided, no person shall violate any of the regulations of this ordinance under a penalty of $10 for each offense. No such violation shall be continued under a penalty of $1 for each day so continued. Any person engaging in or carrying on any business herein regulated without a license therefor, or any person violating any of the regulations of this ordinance, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof by any magistrate, either upon confession of the party or competent testimony, may be fined not more than $10 for each offense, and in default of payment of such fine may be committed to prison by such magistrate until the same be paid; but such imprisonment shall not exceed ten days. (Id. § 62, as amended June 29, 1909.)

Digitized by Google

§§ 380–386; Percy & Collins's ed. §§ 497–504). The provisions here involved (except § 315) received their present form in 1899. (Ord. app. May 22, 1899, ante, p. 204, note.) It is conceded that the company has never been compelled to obtain a license for the conduct of its interstate express business, and that its wagons and drivers employed therein have never been licensed, except "that for several years last past about fourty licenses for wagons and drivers have been taken out." The evidence shows that in 1908 an arrangement was made, by way of compromise, that the forty licenses should be issued (twenty having been taken out the year before). The company agreed to this number, without prejudice, asserting that it was larger in proportion to the total number of wagons than the local business warranted, and also that the latter was merely incidental to the interstate business, and hence not subject to the license requirements. In the fall of 1910, however, at a time when the business of the company was interrupted [30] by a strike of its drivers, and it was endeavoring to replace those who had stopped work, the city, through its officers, undertook to enforce the ordinances with respect to all the wagons and drivers of the company, threatening to arrest unlicensed drivers of unlicensed wagons notwithstanding they might be engaged in interstate transportation, and to remove, if necessary, unlicensed wagons from the streets. This was the occasion of the present suit.

The circuit court held that §§ 305 and 306 were inoperative so far as they purported to require the complainant to obtain a local license for transacting its interstate business, and further, that the requirement of licenses as to express automobiles and chauffeurs had been superseded by a state statute (Laws of 1910, chap. 374). To this extent the city and its officers, who were codefendants, were enjoined. But with respect to the payment of license fees for express wagons and drivers, and the other regulations which we have briefly described, the court held that the enactments were valid and an injunction was refused. 189 Fed. 268. Both parties appeal, the company insisting that it was entitled to the entire relief sought, and the city, that no relief whatever should have been granted.

In restraining the enforcement of §§ 305 and 306, as stated, we think that the court was right. In the absence of a controlling state decision construing the group of ordinances in question and the statute authorizing the city to license businesses (Greater New York charter, § 51), we are not satisfied that they were designed, despite the broad definition contained in § 330, to apply to interstate business. The practical construction which they received before the present controversy arose is very persuasive to the contrary (New York City v. New York City R. Co. 193 N. Y. 543, 549, 86 N. E. 565; United States v. Cerecedo Hermanos y Compañia, 209 U. S. 338, 339, 52 L. ed. 821, 822, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532.) But, if the above-mentioned sections are [31] to be deemed to require that a license must be obtained as a condition precedent to conducting the interstate business of an express company, we are of the opinion that, so construed, they would be clearly unconstitutional. It is insisted that, under the authority of the state, the ordinances were adopted in the exercise of the police power. But that does not justify the imposition of a direct burden upon interstate commerce. Undoubtedly, the exertion of the power essential to assure needed protection to the community may extend incidentally to the operations of a carrier in its interstate business, provided it does not subject that business to unreasonable demands and is not opposed to Federal legislation. Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 299, 41 L. ed. 166, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465. It must, however, be confined to matters which are appropriately of local concern. It must proceed upon the recognition of the right secured by the Federal Constitution. Local police regulations cannot go so far as to deny the right to engage in interstate commerce, or to treat it as a local privilege, and prohibit its exercise in the absence of a local license. Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 652, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 496, 30 L. ed. 694, 697, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 645, 32 L. ed. 311, 313, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Stoutenburgh v. Hennick, 129 U. S. 141, 148, 32 L. ed. 637, 639, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 51 L. ed. 295, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; International Text Book Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 109, 54 L. ed. 678, 686, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 221 U. S. 229, 260, 55 L. ed. 716, 728, 35 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1193, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Buck's Stove & Range Co. v. Vickers, 226 U. S. 205, 215, 57 L. ed. 189, 192, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; Crenshaw v. Arkansas, 227 U. S. 389, 57 L. ed. 565, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep.

Digitized by Google

294; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard), 230 U. S. 352, 401, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1542, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729. As was said by this court in Crutcher v. Kentucky, supra, "a state law is unconstitutional and void which requires a party to take out a license for carrying on interstate commerce, no matter how specious the pretext may be for imposing it."

The requirements of §§ 305 and 306, with the schedule [32] of fees in § 308, cannot be regarded as imposing a fee, or tax, for the use of the streets; if they were such, the question would at once arise as to the validity of the discrimination involved in such an exaction. Nor can they be considered as a regulation in the interest of safety in street traffic. Other ordinances provide for the "rules of the road" to which wagons of express companies, as well as those of other persons, are subject (Code of Ordinances, chap. 12). The sections now under consideration constitute a regulation of the express "business." Article I. is entitled, "Business Requiring a License;" § 305, containing the enumeration, provides that "the following businesses must be duly licensed;" and § 306, that "no person shall engage in or carry on any such business without a license therefor" under a stated penalty (ante, p. 204, note). The right of public control, in requiring such a license, is asserted by virtue of the character of the employment; but while such a requirement may be proper in the case of local or intrastate business, it cannot be justified as a prerequisite to the conduct of the business that is interstate. Not only is the latter protected from the action of the state, either directly or through its municipalities, in laying direct burdens upon it, but, in the present instance, Congress has exercised its authority and has provided its own scheme of regulation in order to secure the discharge of the public obligations that the business involves. Act of June 29, 1906, chap. 3591, 34 Stat. at L. 584, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288; Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 505, 57 L. ed. 314, 319, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; United States v. Adams Exp. Co. 229 U. S. 381, 57 L. ed. 1237, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 878.

It would seem to follow, necessarily, that the annual license fees prescribed by § 308 (ante, p. 205, note) cannot be exacted, so far as the interstate business is concerned. They cannot be regarded as coming within the category of inspection fees, which are sustained when fairly commensurate with the cost of local supervision of such matters as are under local control (Western U. Teleg. Co. v. [33] New Hope, 187 U. S. 419, 425, 47 L. ed. 240, 243, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204; Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 164, 47 L. ed. 995, 1000, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817). The provisions of § 308 are inseparably connected with those of §§ 305 and 306. The sums fixed "for each express wagon" and "for each driver" measure the amount to be exacted for the granting of the license required for the carrying on of business. And it is difficult to see how the payment can be enforced as to the interstate business if the taking out of the license therefor cannot be compelled.

Similar considerations are controlling with respect to the provision of § 332 for the giving of license bonds. This in terms is related to the requirement of § 305. It is provided that a bond shall be given "for each and every vehicle licensed," and it is to be conditioned "for the safe and prompt delivery of all baggage, packages," etc., intrusted to the owner or driver "of any such licensed express." As applied to the company's business of interstate transportation, it must fall with the provision regarding the license, and, further, it must be regarded as repugnant to the exclusive control asserted by Congress in occupying the field of regulation with regard to the obligations to be assumed by interstate express carriers. Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, supra; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 56 L. ed. 257, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 444, 447, 56 L. ed. 263, 264, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145.

Section 315 provides for separate licenses for drivers. We may assume the propriety of suitable provision to insure careful driving over the city streets, and the existence of ample power to meet this local necessity. It is also clear that regulations for this purpose, when the movement of interstate traffic is involved, should be entirely reasonable and should not arbitrarily restrict the facilities upon which it must depend. If the provision of § 315 could be regarded as severable from the requirement of a license for the conduct of business, we should still have great difficulty in sustaining it as a reasonable regulation [34] with regard to drivers employed in the interstate transportation which has been described. Reading § 315 in connection with § 307, as we understand the city contends it should be read, no driver can be licensed except a citizen of the United States, or one who has regularly declared intention to become a citizen, and the assurance of his qualifications does not depend simply upon the applicant's ability to meet appropriate tests so as to satisfy the official judgment, but the application must be accompanied by the indorsement in writing of two reputable residents of the city testifying to his competence. When the importance to the entire country of promptness and facility in the conduct of the business of the express companies in New York City, and the obvious convenience of their being able to secure drivers in Jersey City as well as in New York, are considered, the provision would seem to be unnecessarily burdensome. We are not called upon, however, to decide this point. Section 315 relates exclusively to drivers of a "licensed hack or express." There is no such provision as to drivers of wagons generally. While the driver's license is separate, the ordinance refers only to such drivers as are employed in the business for the carrying on of which a license may be required. Whatever might otherwise be the city's power as to the regulation of drivers, this provision cannot be divorced from the license scheme of which it is a part.

Digitized by Google

Other requirements, such as the marking of the vehicles with their official numbers, the exhibition of licenses upon demand, and the inspection of "licensed vehicles and places of business" have obvious reference to the same license plan.

We conclude that the complainant was entitled to an injunction restraining the enforcement of the ordinances in question against the company with respect to the conduct of its interstate business and its wagons and drivers [35] employed in interstate commerce. In this view it is unnecessary to consider whether the ordinances have been superseded, as to automobiles, by the state statute.

The decree of the Circuit Court is reversed and the case is remanded to the District Court, with direction to enter a decree in favor of the complainant in conformity with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

EDWARD T. PLATT, as Treasurer of the United States Express Company, etc., Appt.,

v.

CITY OF NEW YORK et al. (No. 85.)

CITY OF NEW YORK et al., Appts.,

v.

EDWARD T. PLATT, as Treasurer of the United States Express Company, etc. (No. 86.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 35–37.)

This case is governed by the decision in Barrett v. New York, ante, 483.

[Nos. 85 and 86.]

Argued December 3 and 4, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

CROSS APPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a decree enjoining in part the enforcement of certain municipal ordinances as applied to the interstate business of an express company. Reversed and remanded for the entry of a decree in favor of complainant.

See same case below, on motion for preliminary injunction, 183 Fed. 793; on final hearing, 189 Fed. 268.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Walker D. Hines argued the cause and filed a brief for Edward T. Platt:

The various specific provisions upheld below, even if they could be regarded as regulations as to the use of the streets, are not separable from the remainder of the ordinance.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 395, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1022, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Haskell v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 224 U. S. 217, 222, 56 L. ed. 738, 740, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442.

The reasonableness of the regulation is a question for the court; and the inquiry is broader under the commerce clause than under the 14th Amendment.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 300, 301, 43 L. ed. 702, 707, 708, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 16, 43 L. ed. 49, 55, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Gladson v. Minnesota, 166 U. S. 427, 41 L. ed. 1064, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Illinois, 177 U. S. 514, 44 L. ed. 868, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722.

The interstate commerce act requires carriers subject thereto to perform transportation upon reasonable request, and to establish reasonable regulations and practices to secure the safe and prompt delivery of property. Upon the basis of these provisions this court has declared various state regulations to be inoperative, such as requirements that a carrier shall make delivery within a specified time (Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Greenwood Grocery Co. 227 U. S. 1, 57 L. ed. 389, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213), and requirements that cars shall be furnished for shipment (Hampton v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 227 U. S. 456, 57 L. ed. 596, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hardwick Farmers' Elevator Co. 226 U. S. 426, 57 L. ed. 284, 46 L.R.A. (N.S.) 203, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174).

If any considerable number of municipalities should follow this New York city requirement and exact with respect to every vehicle engaged in interstate transportation a bond for the safe delivery of property transported, there would be very serious embarrassment to interstate carriers, in addition to the confusion which would arise as to the extent of liability and as to persons entitled to institute actions. All such local regulations should be regarded as superseded by the Federal legislation.

Digitized by Google

Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 505, 506, 57 L. ed. 314, 319, 320, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 649, 57 L. ed. 683, 687, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

There are three distinct and important reasons why there is no basis for the view that any part of this ordinance can be sustained as being "in aid of interstate commerce."

1. The cases which have upheld such state legislation have been cases where there was no Federal legislation on the subject. This distinction is pointed out and characterized as important in Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 436, 56 L. ed. 257, 260, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140. Therefore, no part of this ordinance can be upheld as to interstate commerce upon the view that it is an "aid to interstate commerce" in insuring the proper performance of the duties of interstate express companies to their patrons. Those duties are dealt with by the interstate commerce act.

2. In none of the cases upholding state legislation of this character has the legislation sought to effectuate this regulation through a scheme of licenses. A confusion of ideas is involved in the notion that a state or municipal regulation is "in aid of interstate commerce" when it proceeds upon the theory that interstate commerce will not be permitted unless state or municipal licenses shall be taken out. If the Georgia statutes involved in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 661, 40 L. ed. 1105, 1108, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934, had required the telegraph companies to take out state licenses before sending interstate messages, such requirement would have violated the Federal Constitution, even though the purpose of the requirement might have been to insure the diligent delivery of messages.

3. In none of the cases upholding state legislation of this character was there any attempt to impose a license fee or any sort of tax in connection with the regulation. There is a confusion of ideas in the notion that a state or municipal regulation is "in aid of interstate commerce" when interstate commerce is taxed for the purpose of paying the expense of the "aid" thus forced upon the public. Both in James Case, supra, and in Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Mazursky, 216 U. S. 122, 54 L. ed. 411, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 378, the fact that no tax was imposed was referred to.

Mr. Terence Farley argued the cause, and, with Mr. Archibald R. Watson, filed a brief for the city of New York et al.

For contentions of counsel, see their brief as reported in Barrett v. New York, ante, 483.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought by the complainant as treasurer of the United States Express Company to restrain the enforcement against that company of certain license requirements contained in the ordinances of the city of New York. The ordinances are the same as those which were under consideration in Barrett v. New York, decided this day [232 U. S. 14, ante, 483, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203], and the decree of the circuit court was to the same effect in both cases. 189 Fed. 268.

The United States Express Company is an unincorporated association, organized under the laws of New York, and is extensively engaged in interstate commerce as a common carrier of packages. Over 98 per cent of its total business in New York city consists of the handling of traffic in interstate transportation. The interstate shipments in New York city are hauled by the company's wagons to and from the rail terminals of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and the Delaware, Lackawanna, & Western Railroad, all within the state of New Jersey. It employs in its business 343 express wagons, of which 189 are stabled in and operated exclusively from Jersey City, New Jersey; 123 are similarly kept in Communipaw, New Jersey; and the remainder, or 31, are kept in the borough of Manhattan. Both the local and interstate traffic are handled in these wagons indiscriminately. The company has never taken out any licenses in the city of New York for its wagons or drivers.

The questions are the same as those which were presented in Barrett v. New York supra, and a like [37] decree should be entered restraining the enforcement of the ordinances against the company with respect to the conduct of its interstate business and its wagons and drivers employed in interstate commerce.

The decree of the Circuit Court is reversed and the case is remanded to the District Court, with direction to enter a decree in favor of the complainant, in conformity with this opinion.

Digitized by Google

It is so ordered.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner,
v.
JAMES B. REGAN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 37–50.)

Evidence — in action for penalty — reasonable doubt — civil or criminal proceeding.

The violation by the defendant of the contract labor provisions of the alien immigration act of February 20, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 898, chap. 1134, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 499), § 4, need not be established beyond a reasonable doubt in an action of debt brought by the United States under § 5 of that act, to recover the penalty incurred thereunder for such violation, but a reasonable preponderance of the proof is sufficient, since the action is civil, and not criminal, although the act penalized is by the statute denominated a misdemeanor.

[For other cases, see Evidence, 2552–2554; Action or Suit, 7–9, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 503.]

Argued October 22, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a judgment which, on a second writ of error, affirmed a judgment of the District Court for the Southern District of New York in favor of defendant in an action to recover a penalty for an alleged violation of the alien immigration act. Reversed with a direction for a new trial.

See same case below, 121 C. C. A. 543, 203 Fed. 433.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Denison argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Harr, filed a brief for petitioner:

The rule as to proof beyond a reasonable doubt in criminal prosecutions has no application to civil suits to recover penalties or forfeitures.

Adams v. Woods, 2 Cranch, 336, 2 L. ed. 297; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 140, 178 Fed. 12; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. People, 227 Ill. 270, 81 N. E. 342; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Calcraft v. Gibbs, 5 T. R. 19; Campbell v. Burns, 94 Me. 127, 46 Atl. 812; Chaffee v. United States, 18 Wall. 516, 538, 21 L. ed. 908, 911; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. United States, 220 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 582, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612; Coffey v. United States, 116 U. S. 427, 29 L. ed. 681, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 432; Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 562, 35 L. ed. 1110, 1113, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; De Veaux v. Clemens, 17 Ohio C. C. 33, 9 Ohio C. D. 647; Ellis v. Buzzell, 60 Me. 209, 11 Am. Rep. 204; Glenwood v. Roberts, 59 Mo. App. 167; Hawlowetz v. Kass, 23 Blatchf. 395, 25 Fed. 765; Hepner v. United States, 213 U. S. 103, 108, 53 L. ed. 720, 722, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 739, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474, 16 Ann. Cas. 960; Hitchcock v. Munger, 15 N. H. 97; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. State, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 103 S. W. 449; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 11 Bush, 587, 21 Am. Rep. 223; Lees v. United States, 150 U. S. 476, 37 L. ed. 1150, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Lilienthal v. United States, 97 U. S. 237, 24 L. ed. 901; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hill, 115 Ala. 334, 22 So. 163; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 112 Ky. 635, 66 S. W. 505; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 143, 178 Fed. 15; Montana C. R. Co. v. United States, 90 C. C. A. 388, 164 Fed. 403; Munson v. Atwood, 30 Conn. 102; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. United States, 91 C. C. A. 519, 165 Fed. 833; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. United States, 112 C. C. A. 46, 191 Fed. 302; Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U. S. 320, 53 L. ed. 1013, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; O'Connell v. O'Leary, 145 Mass. 311, 14 N. E. 143; Palmer v. People, 109 Ill. App. 269; People v. Briggs, 114 N. Y. 56, 20 N. E. 820; Regan v. United States, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1073, 105 C. C. A. 505, 183 Fed. 293; Riker v. Hooper, 35 Vt. 457, 82 Am. Dec. 646; Roberge v. Burnham, 124 Mass. 277; Ruth v. Abingdon, 80 Ill. 418; Sparta v. Lewis, 91 Tenn. 370, 23 S. W. 182; State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 122 Iowa, 22, 101 Am. St. Rep. 254, 96 N. W. 904; State ex rel. Essex v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 70 Mo. App. 643; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. United States, 106 C. C. A. 136, 183 Fed. 770; Stockwell v. United States, 13 Wall. 531, 20 L. ed. 491; Toledo, P. & W. R. Co. v. Foster, 43 Ill. 480; United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 170 Fed. 456; United States v. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. 86 C. C. A. 223, 159 Fed. 38; United States v. Boston & M. R. Co. 168 Fed. 148; United States v. Brown, Deady, 566, Fed. Cas. No. 14,662; United States v. Central of Georgia R. Co. 157 Fed. 893; United States v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 162 Fed. 775; United States v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 173 Fed. 684; United States v.

NOTE.—As to whether suit for statutory penalty is a civil or criminal prosecution—see note to Hepner v. United States, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 746.

Digitized by Google

Halberstadt, Gilpin, 262, Fed. Cas. No. 15,276; United States v. Illinois C. R. Co. 95 C. C. A. 628, 170 Fed. 542; United States v. Illinois C. R. Co. 156 Fed. 182; United States v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 93 C. C. A. 58, 167 Fed. 308; United States v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 162 Fed. 185; United States v. Nevada County Narrow Gauge R. Co. 167 Fed. 695; United States v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 162 Fed. 408; United States v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 160 Fed. 696; United States v. Shapleigh, 4 C. C. A. 237, 12 U. S. App. 26, 54 Fed. 126; United States v. Southern P. Co. 157 Fed. 459; United States v. Southern P. Co. 162 Fed. 412; United States v. Southern R. Co. 170 Fed. 1014; United States v. Stevenson, 215 U. S. 190, 54 L. ed. 153, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; United States v. The Burdett, 9 Pet. 682, 9 L. ed. 273; United States v. Wabash R. Co. 105 C. C. A. 234, 182 Fed. 804; United States v. Zucker, 161 U. S. 475, 40 L. ed. 777, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; Webster v. People, 14 Ill. 367; 4 Wigmore, Ev. §§ 2497, 2498; Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 758, 2 Revised Rep. 515.

Assistant Attorney General Denison also filed a separate brief for petitioner:

It is immaterial that the fact to be proved may be a crime, so long as the case itself is not a criminal case.

United States v. Zucker, 161 U. S. 475, 40 L. ed. 777, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; Lilienthal v. United States, 97 U. S. 237, 271, 24 L. ed. 901, 906; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 11 Bush, 593, 21 Am. Rep. 223; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hill, 115 Ala. 334, 22 So. 163; Munson v. Atwood, 30 Conn. 102; People v. Briggs, 114 N. Y. 56, 20 N. E. 820; Lyon v. Fleahmann, 34 Ohio St. 151; DeVeaux v. Clemens, 17 Ohio C. C. 33, 9 Ohio C. D. 647; State v. Intoxicating Liquor, 82 Vt. 287, 73 Atl. 586; Bruff v. Northwestern Mut. Fire Asso. 59 Wash. 125, 109 Pac. 280, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 1138; Grella v. Lewis Wharf Co. 211 Mass. 54, 97 N. E. 745, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 1136; Fountain v. Bigham, 235 Pa. 35, 84 Atl. 131, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 1185; Suell v. Derricott, 161 Ala. 259, 23 L.R.A.(N.S.) 996, 49 So. 895, 18 Ann. Cas. 636; Modern Woodmen v. Craiger, 175 Ind. 30, 92 N. E. 113, 93 N. E. 209; Kramer v. Weigand, 91 Neb. 47, 135 N. W. 230; Lay v. Linke, 122 Tenn. 433, 25 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1215, 123 S. W. 746; Kurz v. Doerr, 180 N. Y. 88, 105 Am. St. Rep. 716, 72 N. E. 926, 2 Ann. Cas. 71.

The reason for the rule requiring proof beyond reasonable doubt is founded upon the severities of criminal prosecutions.

United States v. Zucker, 161 U. S. 475, 481, 40 L. ed. 777, 779, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U. S. 320, 336, 53 L. ed. 1013, 1020, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; 10 Am. L. Rev. 642, 651, 659; 4 Wigmore, Ev. § 2498; Ellis v. Buzzell, 60 Me. 209, 11 Am. Rep. 204.

Mr. David L. Podell argued the cause, and Mr. Max D. Steuer filed a brief for respondent:

By the provision of the statute its violation is made a misdemeanor. In order to recover the penalty provided thereby the violation must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

Chaffee v. United States, 18 Wall. 516, 21 L. ed. 908; Lilienthal v. United States, 97 U. S. 237, 24 L. ed. 901; United States v. The Burdett, 9 Pet. 682, 9 L. ed. 273; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Lees v. United States, 150 U. S. 476, 37 L. ed. 1150, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

[40] Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action of debt prosecuted by the United States, under § 5 of the act of February 20, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 898, chap. 1134, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 499), known as the alien immigration act, to recover $1,000 as a penalty for an alleged violation by the defendant of § 4 of that act; and the question now to be considered is whether it was essential to a recovery that the evidence should establish the violation beyond a reasonable doubt. The district court instructed the jury that this measure of proof was required, and the instruction was approved by the circuit court of appeals. 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1073, 105 C. C. A. 505, 183 Fed. 293, 121 C. C. A. 543, 203 Fed. 433. The two sections are as follows:

"Sec. 4. That it shall be a misdemeanor for any person, company, partnership, or corporation, in any manner whatsoever, to prepay the transportation or in any way to assist or encourage the importation or migration of any contract laborer or contract laborers into the United States, unless such contract laborer or contract laborers are exempted under the terms of the last two provisos contained in section two of this act.

"Sec. 5. That for every violation of any of the provisions of section four of this act the persons, partnership, company, or corporation violating the same by knowingly assisting, encouraging, or soliciting the migration or importation of any contract laborer into the United States shall forfeit and pay for every such offense the sum of one thousand dollars, which may be sued for and recovered by the United States, or by any person who shall first bring his action therefor in his own name and for his own benefit, including any such alien thus promised labor or service of any kind as aforesaid, as debts of like amount are now recovered in the courts of the United States; and separate suits may be brought for each alien thus promised [41] labor or service of any kind as aforesaid. And it shall be the duty of the district attorney of the proper district to prosecute every such suit when brought by the United States."

Digitized by Google

These sections are largely copied from the like-numbered sections of the act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 1213, chap. 1012), the words "shall be unlawful" in § 4 being changed to "shall be a misdemeanor," and the words "shall forfeit and pay for every such offense," § 5, with what follows them, remaining as before.

Whether cases like this are civil or criminal, and whether they are attended by the incidents of the one or the other, have been so often considered by this court that our present duty, as we shall see, is chiefly that of applying settled rules of decision.

In Stockwell v. United States, 13 Wall. 531, 20 L. ed. 491, the question arose whether the United States could maintain a civil action of debt to recover a penalty incurred under the act of March 3, 1823 (3 Stat. at L. 781, chap. 58), providing that any person receiving, concealing, or buying merchandise, knowing that it was illegally imported and subject to seizure, should, "on conviction thereof," forfeit and pay double the value of the merchandise, there being also a provision that the penalty might be "sued for and recovered," in the name of the United States, in any court of competent jurisdiction; and this court held that the civil action was maintainable, saying (p. 542): "But it is insisted that when the government proceeds for a penalty based on an offense against law, it must be by indictment or by information. No authority has been adduced in support of this position, and it is believed that none exists. It cannot be that whether an action of debt is maintainable or not depends upon the question who is the plaintiff. Debt lies whenever a sum certain is due to the plaintiff, or a sum which can readily be reduced to a certainty,—a sum requiring no future valuation to settle its amount. [42] It is not necessarily founded upon contract. It is immaterial in what manner the obligation was incurred, or by what it is evidenced, if the sum owing is capable of being definitely ascertained." And again (p. 543): "The expression 'sued for and recovered' is primarily applicable to civil actions, and not to those of a criminal nature."

In United States v. Zucker, 161 U. S. 475, 40 L. ed. 777, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641, the government, by an action of debt, sought to recover, as a penalty, the value of imported merchandise the entry of which had been fraudulently secured in violation of § 9 of the act of June 10, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 131, chap. 407, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1886), which subjected one committing that offense to a forfeiture of the merchandise, or its value, and to a fine and imprisonment. At the trial the United States sought to read in evidence the deposition of an absent witness, theretofore taken in the cause, but the deposition was excluded upon the theory that the case, though civil in form, was in substance criminal, and therefore that the defendants were entitled, under the 6th Amendment to the Constitution, to be confronted with the witnesses against them. This resulted in a judgment for the defendants, and when the case came here this court pronounced the trial court's theory untenable, sustained the government's right to read the deposition, and reversed the judgment, saying (p. 481): "A witness who proves facts entitling the plaintiff in a proceeding in a court of the United States, even if the plaintiff be the government, to a judgment for money only, and not to a judgment which directly involves the personal safety of the defendant, is not, within the meaning of the 6th Amendment, a witness against an 'accused' in a criminal prosecution; and his evidence may be brought before the jury in the form of a deposition, taken as prescribed by the statutes regulating the mode in which depositions to be used in the courts of the United States may be taken. The defendant, in such a case, is no more entitled to be confronted at the trial with the witnesses [43] of the plaintiff than he would be in a case where the evidence related to a claim for money that could be established without disclosing any facts tending to show the commission of crime."

In Hepner v. United States, 213 U. S. 103, 53 L. ed. 720, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474, 16 Ann. Cas. 960, the government had brought an action of debt, under § 5 of the alien immigration act of 1903, to recover the penalty prescribed for a violation of § 4 of that act,—they being the sections from which those now under consideration are largely copied,—and in the progress of the cause it became necessary for this court to consider whether a verdict for the government could be directed under the rule applicable in civil actions. Upon an extended review of the cases bearing upon the subject, including Atcheson v. Everitt, Cowp. pt. 1, p. 382, the question was answered in the affirmative, and it was said: (p. 108). "It must be taken as settled law that a certain sum, or a sum which can readily be reduced to a certainty, prescribed in a statute as a penalty for the violation of law, may be recovered by civil action, even if it may also be recovered in a proceeding which is technically criminal. Of course, if the statute by which the penalty was imposed contemplated recovery only by a criminal proceeding, a civil remedy could not be adopted. United States v. Claflin, 97 U. S. 546, 24 L. ed. 1082. But there can be no doubt that the words of the statute on which the present suit is based are broad enough to embrace, and were intended to embrace, a civil action to recover the prescribed penalty. It provides that the penalty of one thousand dollars may be 'sued for' and recovered by the United States or by any 'person' who shall first bring his 'action' therefor 'in his own name and for his own benefit,' 'as debts of like amount are now recovered in the courts of the United States;' and 'separate suits' may be brought for each alien thus promised labor or service of any kind. The district attorney is required to prosecute every such [44] 'suit' when brought by the United States. These references in the statute to the proceeding for recovering the penalty plainly indicate that a civil action is an appropriate mode of proceeding.

Digitized by Google

. . . . . .

(p. 111) "But the decision in the Zucker Case is important in that it recognizes the right of the government, by a civil action of debt, to recover a statutory penalty, although such penalty arises from the commission of a public offense. It is important also in that it decides that an action of that kind is not of such a criminal nature as to preclude the government from establishing, according to the practice in strictly civil cases, its right to a judgment by depositions taken in the usual form, without confronting the defendant with the witnesses against him.

. . . . . .

(p. 115) "The defendant was, of course, entitled to have a jury summoned in this case, but that right was subject to the condition, fundamental in the conduct of civil actions, that the court may withdraw a case from the jury and direct a verdict, according to the law, if the evidence is uncontradicted and raises only a question of law."

In Atcheson v. Everitt, approvingly cited in that case, the question for decision was whether certain testimony, admissible by statute in civil, but not in criminal, causes, could be received in an action of debt for the pecuniary penalty for bribery at an election of a member of Parliament,—an act not merely prohibited, but indictable as a crime. Notwithstanding the defendant's insistent objection, the testimony was held to be rightly receivable, it being said by Lord Mansfield, who spoke for the entire court (p. 391): "Penal actions were never yet put under the head of criminal law, or crimes. The construction of the statute must be extended by equity to make this a criminal case. It is as much a civil action as an action for money had and received."

[45] In Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 753, 758, also approvingly cited in the Hepner Case, one of the questions was whether, after a verdict for the defendant, a new trial could be granted, upon the plaintiff's motion, in an action of debt for the pecuniary penalty for bribing voters (an indictable crime). and the court gave an affirmative answer and awarded a new trial, Lord Kenyon, Ch. J., observing: "All the cases of indictments I lay out of the case, because they are criminal cases, and are exceptions to the general rule. But I consider this as a civil action."

In United States v. Stevenson, 215 U. S. 190, 54 L. ed. 153, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35, which was a prosecution by indictment for a violation of § 4 of the present alien immigration act, the question for decision was whether that mode of enforcing the penalty was admissible in view of the provisions of § 5, permitting a civil action. It was held that an indictment would lie, and in the course of the opinion, after observing that, in the absence of some provision to the contrary, a statutory penalty may be recovered by either a criminal prosecution or a civil action of debt, it was said (p. 198): "It is to be noted that this statute (§ 5 of the immigration act) does not in terms undertake to make an action for the penalty an exclusive means of enforcing it, and only provides that it may be thus sued for and recovered. There is nothing in the terms of the act specifically undertaking to restrict the government to this method of enforcing the law. It is not to be presumed, in the absence of language clearly indicating the contrary intention, that it was the purpose of Congress to take from the government the well-recognized method of enforcing such a statute by indictment and criminal proceedings." And then, after commenting upon the change in § 4 whereby the words "shall be unlawful" were replaced by "shall be a misdemeanor," and observing that the only purpose in this was to make clear the right of the government to prosecute as for a crime, it was further said (p. 199): "Congress having [46] declared the acts in question to constitute a misdemeanor, and having provided that an action for a penalty may be prosecuted, we think there is nothing in the terms of the statute which will cut down the right of the government to prosecute by indictment if it shall choose to resort to that method of seeking to punish an alleged offender against the statute. Nor does this conclusion take away any of the substantial rights of the citizen. He is entitled [meaning in a prosecution by indictment] to the constitutional protection which requires the government to produce the witnesses against him, and no verdict against him can be directed, as might be the case in a civil action for the penalty. Hepner v. United States, 213 U. S. 103, 53 L. ed. 720, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474, 16 Ann. Cas. 960."

Digitized by Google

The latest case in this court bearing upon the subject is Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. United States, 220 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 582, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612, which was an action to recover penalties incurred by the violation of the safety appliance acts of Congress. In the trial court the government prevailed, and when the judgment came here for review the railway company contended that the action was in effect a criminal prosecution, and in consequence not controlled by the prior decision in St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464,—a strictly civil case arising under the same statutes, and upon which the government relied; but it was held otherwise, the court saying (p. 578): "This contention is unsound, because the present action is a civil one."

It is a necessary conclusion from these cases (1) that, as respects a pecuniary penalty for the commission of a public offense, Congress competently may authorize, and in this instance has authorized, the enforcement of such penalty by either a criminal prosecution or a civil action; (2) that the present action is a civil one and appropriate under the statute; and (3) that, if not directed otherwise, such an action is to be conducted and determined according [47] to the same rules and with the same incidents as are other civil actions.

It is of no moment in this case that the act penalized, which theretofore was declared unlawful and styled an offense, was by the statute of 1907 denominated a misdemeanor, for the purpose in that, as was explained in United States v. Stevenson, was merely to make clear the government's alternative right to prosecute as for a crime. There was no purpose to revoke the existing right to resort to a civil action, or to take from the action any of the usual incidents of a civil case. Indeed, a purpose to the contrary is shown by the re-enactment, without change, of the provision authorizing the action. It not only specifies who shall have the civil right of recovery, but also the mode of its exercise and enforcement; for it declares that the penalty "may be sued for and recovered" by the United States, or by any person, including the alien, who shall first bring the action in his own name and for his own benefit, "as debts of like amount are now recovered in the courts of the United States." This plainly contemplates that the proceedings in the action are to be in conformity with the recognized mode of adjudicating and enforcing debts of like amount in those courts, and this whether the action be by the government or by an individual.

While the defendant was entitled to have the issues tried before a jury, this right did not arise from article 3 of the Constitution or from the 6th Amendment, for both relate to prosecutions which are strictly criminal in their nature (Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 563, 35 L. ed. 1110, 1114, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; United States v. Zucker, 161 U. S. 475, 481, 40 L. ed. 777, 779, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 549, 32 L. ed. 223, 226, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1301), but it did arise out of the fact that in a civil action of debt involving more than $20 a jury trial is demandable. And while in a strictly criminal prosecution the jury may not return a verdict against the defendant unless the evidence establishes [48] his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, in civil actions it is the duty of the jury to resolve the issues of fact according to a reasonable preponderance of the evidence, and this although they may involve a penalized or criminal act.

So, in providing that the penalty may be sued for and recovered as debts of like amount are recovered, we think it was intended that a reasonable preponderance of the proof should be sufficient, that being one of the recognized incidents of an action of debt as well as of other civil actions.

This is the view which other Federal courts have generally applied in the administration of statutes authorizing a civil recovery of such penalties. United States v. Brown, Deady, 566, Fed. Cas. No. 14,662; 3880 Boxes of Opium v. United States, 23 Fed. 367; Hawlowetz v. Kass, 23 Blatchf. 395, 25 Fed. 765; The Good Templar, 97 Fed. 651; United States v. Southern P. Co. 162 Fed. 412; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. United States, 91 C. C. A. 519, 165 Fed. 833; United States v. Illinois C. R. Co. 95 C. C. A. 628, 170 Fed. 542; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 140, 178 Fed. 12; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. United States,

Digitized by Google

106 C. C. A. 136, 183 Fed. 770. And such, also, is the prevalent course of decision in the state courts. 4 Wigmore, Ev. § 2498; People v. Briggs, 114 N. Y. 56, 20 N. E. 820; State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 122 Iowa, 22, 101 Am. St. Rep. 254, 96 N. W. 904; Hitchcock v. Munger, 15 N. H. 97; Sparta v. Lewis, 91 Tenn. 370, 23 S. W. 182; O'Connell v. O'Leary, 145 Mass. 311, 312, 14 N. E. 143; Munson v. Atwood, 30 Conn. 102; State ex rel. Essex v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 70 Mo. App. 634; Deveaux v. Clemens, 17 Ohio C. C. 33, 6 Ohio C. D. 647; Semon v. People, 42 Mich. 141, 3 N. W. 304; Walker v. State, 6 Blackf. 1; Roberge v. Burnham, 124 Mass. 277. In the last case the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, in applying this measure of persuasion in an action for a penalty, said:

[49] "The rule of evidence requiring proof beyond a reasonable doubt is generally applicable only in strictly criminal proceedings. It is founded upon the reason that a greater degree of probability should be required as a ground of judgment in criminal cases, which affect life or liberty, than may safely be adopted in cases where civil rights only are ascertained. 2 Russell, Crimes, 7th Am. ed. 727. It often happens that civil suits involve the proof of acts which expose the party to a criminal prosecution. Such are proceedings under the statute for the maintenance of bastard children, proceedings to obtain a divorce for adultery, actions for assaults, actions for criminal conversation or for seduction, and others which might be named. And in such actions, which are brought for the determination of civil rights, the general rule applicable to civil suits prevails, that proof by a reasonable preponderance of the evidence is sufficient."

The cases upon which the defendant relies do not compel or lead to a different conclusion. While in United States v. The Burdett, 9 Pet. 682, 9 L. ed. 273, language was used giving color to the contention that in an action such as this the true measure of persuasion is that applied in criminal prosecutions, the court was careful in Lilienthal v. United States, 97 U. S. 237, 24 L. ed. 901, to point out (pp. 266, 267) the distinction in this regard between criminal prosecutions and civil cases, and to show (p. 272) that the case of The Burdett is not an authority for disregarding the distinction, and that in an action to enforce a forfeiture the jury, if satisfied of the truth of the charge upon which the forfeiture depends, "may render a verdict for the government, even though the proof falls short of what is required in a criminal case prosecuted by indictment." In Chaffee v. United States, 18 Wall. 516, 21 L. ed. 908, the trial court, probably in deference to what was said in the case of The Burdett, had instructed the jury that proof beyond a reasonable doubt was essential to a recovery; but, as the government [50] had a verdict and judgment, and was not in a position to assign error upon the instruction, the case hardly can be regarded as settling the propriety of such an instruction, especially as in Coffey v. United States, 116 U. S. 436, 443, 29 L. ed. 684, 686, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437, thirteen years later, it was plainly assumed that in such actions the true measure of persuasion is not proof beyond a reasonable doubt, but the preponderating weight of the evidence. The cases of Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524, and Lees v. United States, 150 U. S. 476, 37 L. ed. 1150, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163, are without present application, for they deal with the guaranty in the 5th Amendment to the Constitution against compulsory self-incrimination, which, as this court has held, embraces proceedings to enforce penalties and forfeitures as well as criminal prosecutions, and is of broader scope than are the guaranties in article 3 and the 6th Amendment governing trials in criminal prosecutions. Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 563, 35 L. ed. 1110, 1114, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; United States v. Zucker, 161 U. S. 475, 481, 40 L. ed. 777, 779, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; Hepner v. United States, 213 U. S. 103, 112, 53 L. ed. 720, 724, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474, 16 Ann. Cas. 960. See also Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 549, 32 L. ed. 223, 226, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1301; Schick v. United States, 195 U. S. 65, 68, 49 L. ed. 99, 101, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826, 1 Ann. Cas. 585.

We conclude that it was error to apply to this case the standard of persuasion applicable to criminal prosecutions; and the judgment is accordingly reversed, with a direction for a new trial.

Judgment reversed.

---

[51] JOSEPH SWIFT, Plff. in Err.,
v.
DONALD A. McPHERSON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 51-57.)

Judgment — res judicata — dismissal.

1. A decree of dismissal was not a final

NOTE.—On judgment as a contract protected by the contract clause of the Federal Constitution—see note to Rockwell v. Butler, 17 L.R.A. 614.

On conclusiveness of judgments, generally adjudication upon the merits that plaintiff had no enforceable rights under the contract which forms the basis of the suit, where it was rendered after a demurrer to the bill had been overruled, and defendant had asked leave to withdraw his affirmative defense, offering to submit to a decree in plaintiff's favor, to which plaintiff had responded by a motion to dismiss the bill, asserting in such motion rights under the contract which provided for a future adjustment of profits and liabilities whenever the amount of profits or losses should ultimately be determined by a sale of certain land.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Judgment, III. f. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — impairing contract obligations —full faith and credit.

2. The refusal of a state court to treat a decree of dismissal in a Federal court as conclusive of a point which had been left open did not impair the obligation of that decree as a contract, nor deny the full faith and credit to which it was entitled, nor deprive the defendant of it as property without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law 441–499, 1450–1474; Judgment, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 77.]

Argued November 14, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of South Dakota to review a decree which, on a second appeal, affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court of Lawrence County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action to enforce rights under a contract relating to real property. Affirmed.

See same case below, on first appeal, 22 S. D. 165, 133 Am. St. Rep. 907, 116 N. W. 76; on second appeal, 27 S. D. 296, 130 N. W. 768.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

McPherson, as assignee of Miller, brought suit against Swift in a circuit court of South Dakota, seeking to establish his rights to an undivided one-half interest in certain land then in the possession of Swift. The defendant denied that McPherson had any interest in the property. He further claimed that McPherson had once before brought a similar suit which, after being removed to the circuit court of the United States, had been dismissed, and that this dismissal finally adjudicated the matters at issue in favor of Swift and against McPherson. The record in the former suit was set out in the answer; and as the pleadings in the two cases both deal with the same matters, it will conduce to brevity to state the facts in narrative form.

[52] Swift, on May 8, 1888, purchased a tract of land in Deadwood, South Dakota, paying therefor $18,500, and taking the deed in his own name. Miller, who was a resident of Deadwood, had been active in securing the land, and, on May 14, 1888, Swift and he made a contract which recited that Miller "had purchased the land for Swift and for joint account." For his services in collecting the rents and looking after the property, Miller was to receive one half of the net profits, first deducting 8 per cent interest on the purchase price of $18,500. "In consideration of Miller's agreement to pay Swift one half of any ultimate loss that might accrue on said purchase, Swift agreed that Miller should receive one half of the profits ultimately accruing from the sale of the property over and above the purchase price,"—$18,500.

Miller died January 12, 1891, and his administrator obtained an order for the sale of Miller's interest in the land described in the agreement with Swift. After advertisement, this interest was sold to McPherson for $5,005. Thereupon, on May 18, 1893, McPherson filed in the state court a bill against Swift, which was removed to the United States circuit court. In it McPherson set out his purchase of Miller's interest, and alleged that at all times since Miller's death, the land could have been sold for a sum largely in excess of $18,500, but that Swift had neglected to sell or to account for the rents and profits. McPherson, in the bill, tendered Swift $9,250, one-

—see notes to Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572; Bollong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank, 3 L.R.A. 142; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 577; Morrill v. Morrill, 11 L.R.A. 155; Shores v. Hooper, 11 L.R.A. 308; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson Steel Street Rail Co. v. Wharton, 38 L. ed. U. S. 429; and Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

Generally as to full faith and credit to be given to state records and judicial proceedings—see notes to Lindley v. O'Reilly, 1 L.R.A. 79; Cummington v. Belchertown, 4 L.R.A. 131; Rand v. Hanson, 12 L.R.A. 574; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 578; Darby v. Mayer, 6 L. ed. U. S. 367; Mills v. Duryee, 3 L. ed. U. S. 411; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 13 L. ed. U. S. 648; and Huntington v. Attrill, 36 L. ed. U. S. 1123.

Generally as to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Henderson v. State, Soldiers' & S. Monument Comrs. 13 L.R.A. 169; and Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162.

Digitized by Google

half of the original purchase price, and demanded a conveyance and an accounting. Swift's demurrer having been overruled, he answers, alleging, among other things, that the original contract had been fraudulently procured by Miller, but claiming that, if originally valid, it was a mere contract of employment which had been revoked by the death of Miller, and which therefore could not pass to McPherson under the administrator's sale.

A replication was filed. Several terms passed without [53] any testimony having been taken, and Swift finally notified McPherson that he would accept the tender of $9,250, and recognized him as a partner and joint owner on the terms stated in the bill. McPherson made no reply to this offer, and thereupon Swift filed a petition in the cause, reciting McPherson's refusal to pay the $9,250 tendered in the bill, renewed his offer to accept the tender, and asked leave to withdraw from his answer those paragraphs which set up an affirmative defense, and "to submit to a decree in plaintiff's favor on such terms as might by the court be found equitable and just."

A copy of this petition was served on McPherson, who was required to show cause why it should not be granted.

At the February term (1896) McPherson appeared in person and by his solicitors, filed a response under oath, in which he moved the court to dismiss his bill of complaint, stating that his tender had been made at a time when the value of the property was such that it could have been sold at a price to net a profit; that Swift had declined to accept the tender, and the property was now much depreciated in value; and that the tender had been withdrawn before the procurement of the order to show cause. McPherson's response concluded by the statement that "the contract does not require this affiant to pay any part of the purchase money for the property, but the same is to be paid at affiant's option out of the proceeds of the sale; and while he was willing to have paid the $9,250 at the time the tender was made, the defendant's refusal for an unreasonable time, and the depreciation of the value was so great that affiant is not willing now to exceed the strict letter of the contract in reference to the mode and manner of reimbursing the defendant for the original purchase price, wherefore he prays the court to discharge the order to show cause, and to dismiss the complaint herein as prayed for in this motion."

After argument by counsel, the court made an order reciting [54] that "the cause coming on to be heard on the application of Swift for leave to withdraw pars. 13 and 14 of his answer, and to submit to a decree in plaintiff's favor on such terms as might be equitable . . . and the resisting affidavit of the plaintiff, who, at the same time, by his solicitors, moved to dismiss the bill . . . and the court having heard the matter upon the affidavit, bill of complaint, verified answer, and replication, it is ordered that Swift's application be denied, and it is further adjudged and decreed that this suit and bill of complaint . . . be and the same is hereby dismissed, and that defendant have and recover of plaintiff, McPherson, the costs of this suit." The defendant excepted, but there is no record of any appeal having been taken by Swift.

In June, 1901, five years later, McPherson brought the present suit in the state court, alleging that Swift had collected large sums by way of rent on the land and the sale of lots, which sums were more than sufficient to reimburse Swift for the purchase price of $18,500, interest and expenses, and that upon an accounting, McPherson would be entitled to one half of these net profits and to an undivided one half of the lots remaining unsold. McPherson prayed for such relief and for partition.

The defendant answered, attacking the validity of the contract. He also set out the proceedings in the former suit, and pleaded that decree of dismissal by the United States circuit court as a bar to the present suit.

The trial resulted in Swift's favor, but the decree was reversed by the supreme court of the state. 22 S. D. 179, 133 Am. St. Rep. 907, 116 N. W. 76. On the second trial the court found that there had been no fraud on Miller's part; that the contract was not one of employment, but created an interest in the property which was assignable; that McPherson was the owner thereof by virtue of the administrator's sale; that Swift had received $103,436 from rental and sale of land, and [55] that after proper deductions there was a net profit of $22,374. A decree was thereupon entered in favor of McPherson for $11,187, and also for an undivided one half of over 100 city lots remaining unsold. On appeal the decree was affirmed (27 S. D. 296, 130 N. W. 768), and the case was then brought here by writ of error.

Mr. Edwin Van Cise argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William H. Beck, Frank L. Grant, and Philip S. Van Cise, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The Federal court should have denied the application to dismiss as coming too late, and granted defendant's application as constituting a contract.

Digitized by Google

3 Bl. Com. 296; 1 Freeman, Judgm. 4th ed. §§ 262, 478; 2 Black, Judgm. § 700; Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. 46, 74, 80, 7 L. ed. 47, 59, 61; Evans v. McMahan, 1 Ala. 45; Thomason v. Odum, 31 Ala. 108, 68 Am. Dec. 159; South Branch R. Co. v. Long, 26 W. Va. 692; Wohlford v. Compton, 79 Va. 337; Barnard v. Daggett, 68 Ind. 305; Merritt v. Campbell, 47 Cal. 542; Cunningham v. Schley, 68 Ga. 105; Harris v. Preston, 10 Ark. 201; Hallack v. Loft, 19 Colo. 81, 34 Pac. 568; Waldron v. Angleman, 71 N. J. L. 166, 58 Atl. 568; O'Brien & Cockcroft, Enc. Forms, 531–534; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 877; 18 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 898; United States v. Parker, 120 U. S. 89, 95, 30 L. ed. 601, 604, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; Fraser v. Weller, 6 McLean, 11, Fed. Cas. No. 5,064; Cunningham v. Milwaukee, 13 Wis. 120; Hyatt v. Challiss, 55 Fed. 267, 59 Kan. 422, 53 Pac. 467; Crossman v. Davis, 79 Cal. 603, 21 Pac. 963; Phillpotts v. Blasdel, 10 Nev. 19; Plummer v. Douglas, 14 Iowa, 69, 81 Am. Dec. 456; Ford v. Roberts, 14 Colo. 291, 23 Pac. 322; Axiom Min. Co. v. Little, 6 S. D. 438, 61 N. W. 441; Axiom Min. Co. v. White, 6 S. D. 610, 62 N. W. 956; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 138, 43 L. ed. 108, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808; American Steel & Wire Co. v. Mayer & E. Co. 123 Fed. 204; Hat-Sweat Mfg. Co. v. Waring, 46 Fed. 87; Pullman's Palace-Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 49 Fed. 261; Hershberger v. Blewett, 55 Fed. 170; Callahan v. Hicks, 90 Fed. 539; Welsbach Light Co. v. Mahler, 88 Fed. 427; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Union Rolling Mill Co. 109 U. S. 713, 716, 27 L. ed. 1085, 1086, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Rumbly v. Stainton, 24 Ala. 712; Orphan Asylum Soc. v. M'Cartee, Hopk. Ch. 372; Bank of State v. Rose, 1 Rich. Eq. 292; Bethia v. McKay, Cheves, Eq. 93; Hall v. McPherson, 3 Bland, Ch. 529; Willard v. Wood, 164 U. S. 521, 41 L. ed. 539, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; 1 Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pr. 6th Am. ed. *791. But as it did not, its action must be construed as a finality,—a dismissal on the merits.

While the effect given a state judgment may be governed by the decisions of the state court (Union & Planters' Bank v. Memphis, 189 U. S. 71, 47 L. ed. 712, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604), another rule prevails as to the construction of a proceeding and decree of the Federal court (Gunter v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 200 U. S. 273, 290, 291, 50 L. ed. 477, 486, 487, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Deposit Bank v. Frankfort, 191 U. S. 499, 516, 517, 48 L. ed. 276, 283, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 346, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 5 L. ed. 257; Ohio L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L. ed. 997; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 43 L. ed. 382, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134; Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black, 436, 443, 17 L. ed. 173, 177; Douglas v. Kentucky, 168 U. S. 488, 500, 42 L. ed. 553, 557, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199).

The recitals in the decree of February 22, 1896, are useful here as conclusively showing what evidence was used upon the hearing (to wit, the affidavits and the pleadings), and such recitals are sanctioned.

2 Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pr. 6th Am. ed. 1002, 1003; Putnam v. Day, 22 Wall. 60, 67, 22 L. ed. 764, 766.

This decree answers all the requirements of a final judgment. It was rendered (1) after a hearing; (2) upon the pleadings and the affidavits; (3) upon being fully advised; and (4) it is ordered, considered, adjudged, and decreed without qualifying words, and awards costs. It was and is a finality.

1 Freeman, Judgm. § 270; Story, Eq. Jur. § 1523; 1 Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pr. 6th Am. ed. 659, 793; 2 Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pr. *994; Baker v. Cummings, 181 U. S. 117, 125, 45 L. ed. 776, 780, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Leary v. Long, 131 U. S. ccxviii Appx. and 26 L. ed. 301; Hubbell v. United States, 171 U. S. 203, 43 L. ed. 136, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 828; Jaros Hygienic Underwear Co. v. Fleece Hygienic Underwear Co. 65 Fed. 424; American Exp. Co. v. Mullins, 212 U. S. 311, 314, 53 L. ed. 525, 527, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 381, 15 Ann. Cas. 536; Gove v. Lyford, 44 N. H. 525; Taylor v. Yarbrough, 13 Gratt. 183; Foote v. Gibbs, 1 Gray, 412; Borrowscale v. Tuttle, 5 Allen, 377; Edgar v. Buck, 65 Mich. 356, 32 N. W. 644; Schulmeister v. Blendon Twp. 126 Mich. 488, 86 N. W. 237; Scully v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 46 Iowa, 528; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. McCabe, 213 U. S. 207, 53 L. ed. 765, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430; Fayerweather v. Ritch, 195 U. S. 276, 49 L. ed. 193, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58.

In the absence of the words "without prejudice" or other equivalent qualifications, it is held in the Federal courts, and in those maintaining separate jurisdictions for law and chancery, that the decree is presumptively on the merits. In addition to cases already cited, we refer to the following:

Durant v. Essex Co. 7 Wall. 107, 19 L. ed. 154; Case v. Beauregard (Case v. New Orleans & C. R. Co.) 101 U. S. 688, 25 L. ed. 1004; Lyon v. Perin & G. Mfg. Co. 125 U. S. 698, 31 L. ed. 839, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1024; Lawrence v. Nelson, 143 U. S. 215, 36 L. ed. 130, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440; Bigelow v. Winsor, 1 Gray, 301; Blackinton v. Blackinton, 113 Mass. 231; Knowlton v. Hanbury, 117 Ill. 471, 5 N. E. 581; Stickney v. Goudy, 132 Ill. 213, 23 N. E. 1034; Adams v. Cameron, 40 Mich. 506; Billing v. Gilmer, 8 C. C.

Digitized by Google

A. 645, 23 U. S. App. 168, 60 Fed. 336; Thurston v. Thurston, 99 Mass. 39.

Mr. Norman T. Mason argued the cause, and, with Messrs. James G. Stanley and Chambers Kellar, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The complainant, McPherson, in a Federal equity case, had the absolute right to dismiss his bill without prejudice.

Simkins, Fed. Eq. Suit, 2d ed. p. 349 and cases; Langlois v. Matthiessen, 155 Ill. 230, 40 N. E. 496; 6 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 833, and note; The Bainbridge, 118 C. C. A. 88, 199 Fed. 404; Morton Trust Co. v. Keith, 150 Fed. 606; 1 Beach, Eq. Pr. 469-473.

A judgment to be res judicata must be on the merits.

Ex parte Loung June, 160 Fed. 254, and cases cited; Haldeman v. United States, 91 U. S. 584, 23 L. ed. 433; Stratton v. Essex County Park Commission, 164 Fed. 901.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

In the record there are sixty assignments of error, involving many rulings of the trial court and the construction of the contract. We can only consider those which present the Federal question that, in failing to sustain the plea of res judicata, the court denied plaintiff a right arising under the laws of the United States. The refusal of the state court to treat the decree of the United States court as a bar to the present action is said to have impaired the obligation of that decree as a contract; denied the full faith and credit to which it was entitled, and deprived Swift of it as property without due process of law. But all these contentions finally resolve themselves into the single question as to whether the dismissal was on the merits, finally adjudicating that McPherson had no enforceable rights under the contract which was the basis of that suit.

Ordinarily, such a question is answered by a mere inspection of the decree,—the presumption being that a [56] dismissal in equity, without qualifying words, is a final decision on the merits. That presumption of finality, however, disappears whenever the record shows that the court did not pass upon the merits, but dismissed the bill because of a want of jurisdiction, for want of parties, because the suit was brought prematurely, because the plaintiff had a right to file a subsequent bill on the same subject-matter, or on any other ground not going to the merits. The scope of such decree must in all cases be measured not only by the allegations of the bill, but by the ground of the demurrer or motion on which the dismissal was based. Hughes v. United States, 4 Wall. 237, 18 L. ed. 305; Vicksburg v. Henson, 231 U. S. 259, ante, 209, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95.

From an examination of this record it is evident that the dismissal by the United States court was not for want of merit in the bill, because the demurrer had already been overruled. It was not for insufficiency of the testimony, because none had been taken though answer and replication had been filed. It was not a dismissal after a hearing on bill and answer alone, for the defendant was asking to withdraw his affirmative defense, and insisting that a decree be entered in favor of McPherson. It was not a dismissal as on a retraxit, for the plaintiff not only did not renounce his cause of action, but, in his motion asserted his rights under a contract which provided for a future adjustment of profits and liabilities, whenever the amount of profits or losses was ultimately determined by the actual sale of the land.

McPherson seems, at first, to have assumed that it was not necessary to wait until the property had been sold, but that by a then present payment of $9,250, he could at once acquire title to an undivided half interest in the lots. His tender of that sum was, however, declined by Swift, who, a year or more later, finally decided to accept the money, and asked that a decree be entered in McPherson's favor. McPherson then refused to pay what [57] he had previously offered, explaining in his response to Swift's motion, that since the rejection of the tender the land had decreased in value, and asserting that he was not then willing to do more than was required by the contract,—under which he could wait until the ultimate sale of the property to determine what, if anything, he was bound to pay. He thereupon "moved the court to dismiss the bill, as prayed for in this motion." The motion was granted, and Swift excepted.

The record presented an unusual and somewhat ludicrous shifting of positions,—with the defendant insisting that a decree be entered against himself; the complainant resisting a decree in his favor; and the defendant, with no cross bill filed, excepting to a dismissal. Of course, this reversal of position does not change the legal effect of the decree, but it serves to emphasize the fact that it was not a decree against plaintiff on the merits, but one based on McPherson's motion which asserted a contract fixing liability and giving him rights dependent on the ultimate outcome of the investment. The court did not decide what those rights were, nor did it adjudicate that a suit to enforce them could not thereafter be filed. The decree, not being on the merits, could not be a bar to such subsequent suit in a state or United States court (Texas Cotton Products Co. v. Starnes, 128 Fed. 183). The refusal to treat the decree as conclusive of a point which had been left open did not deprive Swift of any Federal right, and the judgment of the Supreme Court of South Dakota must be affirmed.

Digitized by Google

---

[58] NATIONAL SAFE DEPOSIT COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
WILLIAM H. STEAD, Attorney General of the State of Illinois; Andrew Russell, State Treasurer of the State of Illinois; and Walter K. Lincoln, Inheritance Tax Attorney.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 58–71.)

Error to state court — questions reviewable — construction of contract.

1. The construction by a state court of the contract relation between a safe deposit company and its box renters as one of l...ilor and bailee is conclusive upon the Federal Supreme Court when determining upon writ of error to the state court the constitutionality of the provisions of the Illinois inheritance tax law of July 1, 1909, which operate to seal safe deposit boxes for a limited period after the death either of a sole renter, or of one of two or more joint renters, unless by such construction the statute is made to violate U. S. Const., 14th Amend., as being an arbitrary attempt to create liabilities arising out of possession where there is no possession in fact.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2072–2226, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — inheritance tax — sealing safe deposit boxes upon death of renter.

2. A safe deposit company is not arbitrarily charged, without due process of law, with a duty to supervise the delivery and to determine the ownership of property over which it has no control, by the provisions of the Illinois inheritance tax law of July 1, 1909, under which the contents of safe deposit boxes cannot be removed after the death of the renter, whether standing solely in his name or in the joint name of the decedent and others, or in the name of a partnership of which he was a member, except after ten days' notice to the attorney general and state treasurer, and even then, not without retaining possession of enough of the assets to pay the tax, where in law and by contract the safe deposit company stood in such relation to the property as to make it liable for allowing unauthorized persons to take possession.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 6, b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — safe deposit boxes — retaining assets for inheritance tax.

3. Prohibiting a safe deposit company from permitting the removal of the contents of a safe deposit box after the death of the renter, whether standing solely in his name or in the joint name of the deceased and others, or in the name of a partnership of which he was a member, without retaining assets sufficient to pay the state inheritance tax, as is done by Ill. act of July 1, 1909, does not deprive the company of its property without due process of law, nor arbitrarily burden it with a liability.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 6, b, in Digest Sup. Ct 1908.]

Constitutional law — impairing contract obligations — charter of safe deposit company.

4. Charter power to do a safe deposit business is not impaired by the provisions of the Illinois inheritance tax law of July 1, 1909, under which the contents of safe deposit boxes cannot be removed after the death of the renter, whether standing solely in his name or in the joint name of the decedent and others, or in the name of a partnership of which he was a member, except after ten days' notice to the attorney general and the state treasurer, and even then not without retaining possession of enough of the assets to pay the tax.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 1379–1383, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — scope of review — Federal question — searches and seizures.

5. A question respecting an alleged violation of the prohibition of U. S. Const., 4th Amend., against unreasonable searches and seizures, cannot be reviewed by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court, since such prohibition does not apply to the states.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2072–2226, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — impairing contract obligations — sealing safe deposit boxes after death of renter.

6. The obligations of the contract between a safe deposit company and its joint or firm box renters are not impaired by the provisions of the Illinois inheritance tax law of July 1, 1909, under which the contents of safe deposit boxes cannot be removed after the death of the renter, whether standing solely in his name or in the joint name of the decedent and others, or in the name of a partnership of which he was a member, except after ten days' notice to the attorney general and the state treas-

---

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On writs of error to state courts in cases involving questions of due process of law—see note to Burt v. Smith, 51 L. ed. 121.

As to levy upon or garnishment of contents of sealed package or locked receptacle—see note to Tillinghast v. Johnson, 41 L.R.A.(N.S.) 764.

Digitized by Google

urer, and even then not without retaining possession of enough of the assets to pay the tax, since the company, joint renters, or firms, each made the contract in the light of the power of the state to legislate for the protection of the estate of any one of the joint renters or partners that might die during the term.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 1450-1474, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — impairing contract obligations — safe deposit box rentals.

7. All renewals of contracts of joint rental of safe deposit boxes, made after the enactment of the Illinois inheritance tax law of July 1, 1909, under which the contents of safe deposit boxes cannot be removed after the death of the renter, whether standing solely in his name or in the joint name of decedent and others, or in the name of a partnership of which he was a member, except after ten days' notice to the attorney general and state treasurer, and even then not without retaining possession of enough of the assets to pay the tax, are made in the light of the provisions of such statute.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 1450-1474, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 138.]

Argued December 16, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court of Cook County, in that State, sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing the bill in a suit to enjoin the enforcement of the provisions of the state inheritance tax law, sealing safe deposit boxes after the death of the sole or joint renter. Affirmed.

See same case below, 250 Ill. 584, 95 N. E. 973, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 430.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

By the act of July 1 1909, the Illinois legislature passed an inheritance tax law like that considered in Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594. The 9th section of the statute provides in substance:

That no safe deposit company, corporation, or person [59] having in possession or under control securities or assets belonging to or standing in the name of a decedent, or in the joint name of the decedent and another person, or in the name of a partnership of which he was a member, shall deliver such assets to the legal representative of the deceased or to the survivor of the joint holders, or to the partnership of which he was a member, without ten days' notice to the attorney general and treasurer of the state, who were authorized to examine the securities at the time of the delivery. It was further provided that no delivery should be made unless such holder should retain a sufficient portion of the assets to pay the state tax thereafter assessed, unless such state officers gave consent in writing. Failure to give the notice or to retain such amount rendered the deposit company, corporation, or person liable for the tax and to a penalty of $1,000.

On March 15, 1910, the National Safe Deposit Company filed in the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, a bill against the treasurer and attorney general, alleging that the company was incorporated in 1881 to do a safe deposit business, and that, in pursuance of its charter, it had erected a building with large vaults into which 13,291 safe deposit boxes had been built and 9,702 rented,—317 to partnerships and 4,104 were held jointly by more than one person. That prior to July 1, 1909, it had made yearly contracts for the rental of said boxes, most of which were still of force. The rent contracts recited that in consideration of $——— paid, the company "had rented to ——— safe No. ——— in the vaults of this company for the term of one year," and that its liability was limited to the exercise of ordinary diligence in preventing the opening of the safe by any person other than the renter or his duly authorized representative. "No one except the renter, or his deputy, to be designated in writing on the books of the company, or, in case of death, his legal representative, to have access to the safe" . . . No renter will be [60] permitted to enter the vaults except in the presence of the vault keeper. In case of loss of key or combination the lock will be changed at the expense of the renter. . . .

The bill alleged that the safes could be opened only by two keys, or two combinations, one of which keys or combinations was held by or known only to the renter, the other being held or known only by the company's agents. So that it required the joint act of the customer and the company to secure access to the contents,—the company having no right or means of access to the box itself, nor did it possess any knowledge or information as to the ownership of the securities deposited therein.

The bill further alleged that, notwithstanding these facts, the defendants insisted that the Deposit Company had such possession or control of the contents as to make it incumbent upon it to prevent access thereto by all persons for ten days after the death of the sole or joint renter; that this deprived the Deposit Company of the right to do the business for which it had been chartered, made it break its contract that it would allow no one except the renter or his agent or representative to have access to the boxes; interfered with its business by depriving the representative and survivor of their right to use the box and contents; imposed upon the Deposit Company the risk of determining who was the owner of the contents of the box, and imposed the duty of acting as a tax-collecting agent for the state. The bill also alleged that the company had been threatened with suits by depositors if it yielded to the command of such void act. In order to prevent a multiplicity of suits, and to avoid the heavy statutory penalties, the company prayed that the defendants be enjoined from enforcing the statute against it.

Digitized by Google

The defendants' demurrer was sustained. That ruling was affirmed by the supreme court of Illinois, three judges dissenting (250 Ill. 584, 95 N. E. 973, Ann. Cas. 1912 B, 430). The case was then brought here by writ of error.

Messrs. George Packard and John S. Miller argued the cause, and, with Mr. Merritt Starr, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

For the purposes of the constitutional question raised here, this court must determine what the true relation between the safety deposit company and its customers is; and we maintain that it clearly is not that of bailment.

Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 513, 46 L. ed. 666, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372.

The essential elements of bailment are wholly wanting in the transaction; i. e., receipt, possession, delivery.

Union Trust Co. v. Wilson, 198 U. S. 530, 537, 49 L. ed. 1154, 1156, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766; Moore v. Mansfield, 182 Mass. 302, 94 Am. St. Rep. 657, 65 N. E. 398; 2 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 783; Story, Bailm. 9th ed. § 2; Jones, Bailm. 1; Schouler, Bailm. § 2; Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 421, 51 L. ed. 1117, 1121, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 11 Ann. Cas. 789.

It is argumentatively said in the opinion of the state court that as the state has, upon and from the death of the decedent, a "vested," i. e., an accrued, right, in the tax, which is a tax on the right of succession, and not on the property of a decedent, it therefore has a vested financial right in the estate or property by which the tax is measured. This is an unfounded process of reasoning which only serves to obscure the issue.

Kochersperger v. Drake, 167 Ill. 122, 41 L.R.A. 446, 47 N. E. 321; Merrifield v. People, 212 Ill. 400, 72 N. E. 446; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 47, 44 L. ed. 969, 972, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 594, 33 L. ed. 1025, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 162, 55 L. ed. 389, 417, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312.

Where an impairment of contract or a deprivation of property rights without due process is relied upon, this court will determine for itself the existence and nature of the contract or the property right.

Hoadley v. San Francisco (Clark v. San Francisco) 124 U. S. 645, 31 L. ed. 556, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 659; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 45, 38 L. ed. 896, 901, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108.

A corporation is a "person" protected by the provision against deprivation of property.

W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 45 L. ed. 619, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 199 U. S. 401, 409, 50 L. ed. 246, 249, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 154, 41 L. ed. 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 50 L. ed. 652, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370; National Council v. State Council, 203 U. S. 162, 51 L. ed. 137, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 46.

"Possession" means exercise of power over a corporate thing, at pleasure, to the exclusion of all others.

Union Trust Co. v. Wilson, 198 U. S. 530, 537, 49 L. ed. 1154, 1156, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766; Rice v. Frayser, 24 Fed. 463; Gilkerson-Sloss Commission Co. v. London, 53 Ark. 88, 7 L.R.A. 403, 13 S. W. 513; Smith v. Race, 76 Ill. 491.

"Control" has no legal or technical meaning apart from its popular sense, and is synonymous with "manage."

Ure v. Ure, 185 Ill. 218, 56 N. E. 1087.

Taking possession and control and the right to possession and control from the box lessee's personal representative, and bestowing it on the safe deposit lessor, against its consent, at the same time superimposing a power of delivery and transfer and the power to retain, and so the power to seize in order to retain, in direct conflict with the basic principle of the safety deposit business, is a legislative interference amounting to a deprivation without process of law, of the latter's right to carry on its lawful business, —a deprivation, that is, of its liberty and property rights of contract.

State v. Peel Splint Coal Co. 36 W. Va. 802, 17 L.R.A. 385, 15 S. E. 1000; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L.R.A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 589, 41 L. ed. 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 154, 41 L. ed. 666, 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Carroll v. Greenwich

Digitized by Google

Ins. Co. 199 U. S. 409, 50 L. ed. 249, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 69, 22 L.R.A. 340, 37 Am. St. Rep. 206, 35 N. E. 62.

A lawful vocation is not to be arbitrarily and vexatiously burdened.

People v. Steele, 231 Ill. 351, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 361, 121 Am. St. Rep. 321, 83 N. E. 236.

There is no process of law. The mere passage of the act making interference with plaintiff in error's business possible is not due process of law.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 102, 24 L. ed. 616, 618; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 535, 28 L. ed. 232, 238, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 527, 42 L. ed. 842, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The privilege of contracting is both a liberty and a property right.

Mathews v. People, 202 Ill. 401, 67 N. E. 28; Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 270, 274, 45 L. ed. 186, 188, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Bailey v. People, 190 Ill. 33, 54 L.R.A. 838, 83 Am. St. Rep. 116, 60 N. E. 98.

To impose upon one a trusteeship without his consent deprives him of his property right of contract.

Bethune v. Dougherty, 21 Ga. 257; Underhill, Tr. Am. ed. 190; Perry, Tr. § 259; 28 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 971; 39 Cyc. 77, 252; Taylor v. Holmes, 14 Fed. 509; Beckett, Trusts & Trustees, § 548.

There is a forced classification of safe deposit companies who do not have possession or control, with those having in possession and under control the property of another, and the result of the classification and the duties imposed thereby is subversive of the business of safety deposit. They are not so subversive of the business of banks, trust companies, etc., which actually have property in possession and control. Therefore, there is denial of the equal protection of the laws.

Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 31, 25 L. ed. 989, 992; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31, 28 L. ed. 923, 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 71, 30 L. ed. 578, 580, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 38 L. ed. 485, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 165, 41 L. ed. 666, 671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255.

The legislative grant to carry on the business of safety deposit is impaired. That contract consists of the right to continue to lease carefully guarded space in a manner utterly to exclude the relation of bailment. The imposition of the relation of bailor and bailee destroys the business and impairs plaintiff in error's contract with the state. It is not a regulation of the chartered right.

Venner v. Chicago City R. Co. 246 Ill. 176, 138 Am. St. Rep. 229, 92 N. E. 643, 20 Ann. Cas. 607.

The existence, scope, and effect of the contract claimed to be impaired is open for determination by this court, as part of the Federal question involved.

Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Tennessee, 153 U. S. 486, 494, 38 L. ed. 793, 796, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 968; Douglas v. Kentucky, 168 U. S. 488, 502, 42 L. ed. 553, 557, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199; Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 115 U. S. 683, 29 L. ed. 510, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. ed. 788, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Indiana, 194 U. S. 579, 589, 48 L. ed. 1124, 1129, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767; Powers v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 201 U. S. 543, 556, 50 L. ed. 860, 864, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556.

The act complained of deprives safe deposit companies of their property right to pursue a lawful calling by the unconstitutional invasion of their customer's rights. This is not championing the wrongs of an outsider. The company is not a stranger to the grievance of its customers.

Lampasas v. Bell, 180 U. S. 276, 45 L. ed. 527, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368.

The company is directly and certainly affected by the unconstitutional operation of the law. The outrage of its customer's rights destroys its business. The ways in which the act affects the company and its customers are set out at length in the bill as seriously threatening the property rights of the company. Both considerations operate to deprive the company of rights protected by the Federal Constitution.

Chadwick v. Kelley, 187 U. S. 540, 547, 47 L. ed. 293, 296, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 175; Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 419, 48 L. ed. 1050, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; Standard Stock Feed Co. v. Wright, 225 U. S. 540, 550, 56 L. ed. 1197, 1201, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784.

Interference with free access to the property of surviving joint box renters, and examination thereof by ministerial officials, or by a safe deposit company, without notice or judicial hearing, particularly where the object of the inquiry in no wise appertains to that particular property, is deprivation of property without due process of law. It matters not that the inconvenience might be trifling in some instances.

Chicago v. Wells, 236 Ill. 132, 23 L.R.A. (N.S.) 405, 127 Am. St. Rep. 282, 86 N. E. 197.

Where one is clothed with the state's powers, his acts are that of the state.

Raymond v. Chicago Union Traction Co. 207 U. S. 20, 35, 52 L. ed. 78, 87, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7, 12 Ann. Cas. 757; Chicago, B. & Q.

Digitized by Google

L.R.A. 446, 47 N. E. 321; Re Speed, 216 Ill. 23, 108 Am. St. Rep. 189, 74 N. E. 809; Re Mulford, 217 Ill. 242, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 341, 108 Am. St. Rep. 249, 75 N. E. 345, 3 Ann. Cas. 986; Re Graves, 242 Ill. 212, 89 N. E. 978; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

Where there is a succession tax due the state, the state has a vested interest.

National Safe Deposit Co. v. Stead, 250 Ill. 597, 95 N. E. 973, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 430; Re Stanford, 126 Cal. 112, 45 L.R.A. 788, 58 Pac. 462; Re Graves, 242 Ill. 212, 89 N. E. 978; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

As to contracts made after the act complained of was passed, it cannot be urged that the act is contrary to § 10, article 1 of the Federal Constitution, providing that no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts.

Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 388, 30 L. ed. 1059, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 916; Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. ed. 439, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277.

The unreasonable search and seizure provision of the 4th Amendment does not prevent a state from adopting effectual means to collect a tax which it has imposed.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 176, 55 L. ed. 389, 423, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312.

The 4th Amendment does not prohibit the issuing of process to require attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books and papers.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. ed. 1047, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 48 L. ed. 860, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563.

The 4th Amendment does not prohibit providing for the inspection and surveying of a mine in the possession of another.

Montana Co. v. St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. 152 U. S. 161, 38 L. ed. 398, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

Any legal procedure enforced by public authority, whether sanctioned by age and custom or newly devised in the discretion of the legislature, in furtherance of the general public good, must be held to be due process of law.

Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 537, 28 L. ed. 239, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312.

The mere temporary invasion of one's possession to determine a right is not the taking of property without due process of law.

Montana Co. v. St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. supra.

The liberty of contract guaranteed by the court against deprivation without due process of law is the liberty of natural, and not artificial, persons.

Western Turf Asso. v. Greenberg, 204 U. S. 359, 363, 51 L. ed. 520, 522, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384; Northwestern Nat. L. Ins. Co. v. Riggs, 203 U. S. 243, 255, 51 L. ed. 168, 173, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126, 7 Ann. Cas. 1104.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The Illinois inheritance tax law operates to seal safe [67] deposit boxes for at least ten days after the death of the renter. In view of the uncertainty as to who might own the contents of boxes standing in the joint name of the deceased and others, the statute sealed their boxes also for a like period. The act further provided that in neither case could the securities be removed except after notice to officers designated by the state, and even then the company was required to retain possession of enough of the assets to pay the state's tax. The Deposit Company insists that this statute violated the 14th Amendment, for that, without due process of law, it imposed upon the company a duty as to property over which it had no control; required it to assume the risk of determining who was the true owner, and forced upon it the obligations and liabilities of a tax-collecting agent of the state. In the court below and on the argument here, the validity of the section under review was said to depend upon the relation between the company and the renter,—it being argued for the state that the contract was one of bailment where, on the death of the bailor, the Deposit Company, as bailee, was bound to surrender the securities to the owner or person having a right thereto, one of whom, in each case, was the state to the extent of its tax. On the other hand, the complainant insisted that if there was no possession in fact, there could be no possession in law; and that if no possession existed, it was beyond the power even of the legislature to charge the company with liabilities that could only arise out of a possession actually existing.

This is one of that class of cases which illustrate the fact that, both in common speech and in legal terminology, there is no word more ambiguous in its meaning than possession. It is interchangeably used to describe actual possession and constructive possession which often so shade into one another that it is difficult to say where one ends and the other begins. Union Trust Co. v. Wilson, 198 U. S. 537, 49 L. ed. 1156, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766. Custody may be in the servant and possession [68] in the master; or title and right of control may be in one and the property within the protection of the house of another, as in Bottom v. Clarke, 7 Cush. 489, where such possession of a locked trunk was held not to include possession of the contents. So that, as pointed out by Pollock and Wright in their work on the subject, controversies arising out of mixed possession have inevitably led to many subtle refinements in order to determine the rights of conflicting claimants, or to lay the proper charge of ownership in prosecutions for larceny of goods belonging to one, in the custody of another, or found by the defendant.

Digitized by Google

In the present case, however, the Federal question presented by the record does not call for a decision as to the exact relation between the parties during the life of the renter,—whether there was a strict bailment; whether the renter was in possession of the box with the Deposit Company as guard over the contents; whether the property was in the custody of the company with the renter having a license to enter the building and remove the securities; or whether, as held in People ex rel. Glynn v. Mercantile Safe Deposit Co. (159 App. Div. 98, 143 N. Y. Supp. 849), construing a similar statute of New York, the relation was that which exists between tenants and landlord of an office building who keeps under his control the general means of access to the building and offices therein, but as to which offices and their contents, the rights of the tenants are exclusive. The Illinois supreme court held that the relation created by the Deposit Company's contract was that of bailor and bailee. That construction by the state court is controlling, unless, as claimed by the complainant, it makes the statute violate the 14th Amendment, as being an arbitrary attempt to create liabilities arising out of possession, where there was no possession in fact.

Certainly the person who rented the box was not in actual possession of its contents. For the valuables were [69] in a safe built into the company's vault, and therefore in a sense "under the protection of the house." The owner could not obtain access to the box without being admitted to the vault, nor could he open the box without the use of the company's master key. Both in law, and by the express provisions of the contract, the company stood in such relation to the property as to make it liable if, during the lifetime of the owner, it negligently permitted unauthorized persons to remove the contents, even though it might be under color of legal process. Roberts v. Stuyvesant Safe Deposit Co. 123 N. Y. 57, 9 L.R.A. 438, 20 Am. St. Rep. 718, 25 N. E. 294, 1 Am. Neg. Cas. 535; Mayer v. Brensinger, 180 Ill. 110, 72 Am. St. Rep. 196, 54 N. E. 159. After his death, it would be likewise liable if it permitted unauthorized persons, be they heirs, legal representatives, or joint renters, to take the property of the decedent. In the exercise of its power to provide for the distribution of his property, the state could make it unlawful, except on conditions named, for his personal representative to receive or the holder to deliver, effects belonging, or apparently belonging, in whole or in part, to the deceased. As the state could provide for the appointment of administrators, for the distribution to heirs or legatees of all the property of the deceased, and for the payment of a tax on the transfer, it could, of course, legislative as to the incidents attending the collection of the tax and the time when the administrator or executor could take possession. If, before representatives were appointed, anyone, having the goods in possession or control, delivered them to an unauthorized person, he would be held liable as an executor de son tort. The fixing by this statute of the time and condition on which delivery might be made by a deposit company was also, in effect, a limitation on the right of the heir or representatives to take possession. If they had no right to receive except on compliance with the statutory conditions, neither could the Safe Deposit Company, as bailee or custodian, surrender the contents except upon like compliance with statutory conditions.

[70] The contention that the company could not be arbitrarily charged with the duty of supervising the delivery and determining to whom the securities belonged is answered by the fact that in law and by contract it had such control as to make it liable for allowing unauthorized persons to take possession. Both by the nature of its business and the terms of its contract it had assumed the obligation cast upon those having possession of property claimed by different persons. If the parties could not agree as to who owned the securities, the company had the same remedy by bill of interpleader that was afforded all others confronted with similar conditions. There was certainly nothing arbitrary or unreasonable in compelling one who had received such control of property from another, to surrender it after his death only to those having the right thereto. Nor was there any deprivation of property, nor any arbitrary imposition of a liability, in requiring the company to retain assets sufficient to pay the tax that might be due to the state. There are many instances in which, by statute, the amount of the tax due by one is to be reported and paid by another,—as in the case of banks required to pay the tax on the shares of a stockholder. First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 363, 19 L. ed. 704. These conclusions answer the other constitutional objections and make it unnecessary to deal with each of them separately at length.

Digitized by Google

It is contended that the statute impaired the complainant's charter power to do a safe deposit business. But it no more interferes with the right of the company to do that business than it does with the right of a private person to contract to take possession or control of securities belonging to another. But, having regard to the radical change wrought by the death of the owner, and the subsequent duty to make delivery to one authorized by law to receive possession, the statute points out when and on what conditions such delivery may be made to the personal [71] representative, surviving partners, or persons jointly interested.

The objection that the act, in directing the state officers to inspect the contents of the box, operates as an unreasonable search and seizure, raises no Federal question, since the prohibition on that subject in the 4th Amendment does not apply to the states. Ohio ex rel. Lloyd v. Dollison, 194 U. S. 447, 48 L. ed. 1065, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703.

The claim that the statute compels the company to break its contract with joint renters and deprives the latter, for ten days, of access to the box and the right to use it or remove the contents, is without merit. The company, joint renters, or firms, each made the contract in the light of the state's power to legislate for the protection of the estate of any one of the joint renters or partners that might die during the term. As it now appears that all of the rentals were from year to year, and that all had expired before final hearing, and were renewed after the passage of the law, it can also be said that all such contracts of joint rental are made in the light of the provisions of this particular statute. The boxes were leased with the knowledge that the state had so legislated as not only to protect the interests of one dying after the rental, but also to secure the payment of the state tax out of whatever might be found in the box belonging to the deceased. The inconvenience was one of the not unreasonable incidents of the joint relationship.

Judgment affirmed.

[72] UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.
EUGENE BUCHANAN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 72-77.)

Public lands — obstruction to settlement — prior entry.

Land covered by a homestead claim after entry and before patent is not "public land" within the meaning of the act of February 25, 1885 (23 Stat. at L. 322, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1525), § 3, making it unlawful to prevent "any person from peaceably entering upon or establishing a settlement or residence on any tract of public land subject to settlement or entry."

[For other cases, see Public Lands, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 589.]

Argued December 3, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Colorado to review a judgment which sustained a demurrer to an indictment charging an attempt to prevent entry upon public land. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

The grand jury for the district of Colorado indicted Buchanan for a violation of the act "to prevent unlawful occupancy of the public land." The indictment charged that in February, 1907, one Edward Scott made a homestead entry, at the proper office, of a quarter section of land in Colorado, and died, March 28, 1910, leaving the homestead entry in full force and effect; that thereafter "his heirs were in lawful possession of and were engaged in cultivating the said homestead land for the purpose of protecting their right as heirs to the same, until May 9, 1911, when the defendant, Buchanan, wilfully, wickedly, unlawfully, and feloniously did prevent and obstruct said heirs from peaceably entering upon and establishing a settlement and residence on the said homesteaded land of the United States subject to settlement and entry under the public land laws." The defendant demurred on the ground that the facts charged did not constitute an offense punishable under § 3 of the act of February 25, 1885 (23 Stat. at L. 322, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1525), which provides:

[73] "Sec. 3. That no person, by force, threats, intimidation, or by any fencing or inclosing, or any other unlawful means, shall prevent or obstruct, . . . any person from peaceably entering upon or establishing a settlement or residence on any tract of public land subject to settlement or entry under the public land laws of the United States."

Digitized by Google

The defendant's demurrer was sustained and the government brought the case here under the criminal appeals act.

Assistant Attorney General Knaebel argued the cause, and, with Mr. S. W. Williams, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The principal evil which was immediately aimed at by the act of Feb. 25, 1885, was the unlawful inclosures of the public domain, which were erected and maintained upon an enormous scale by cattle raisers in the West. But the underlying purpose struck deeper than the mere vindication of the technical proprietary rights of the government. The inclosures were deemed gravely obnoxious, not so much because they were unauthorized, as because of their results. One of these was interference with the right of pasturage common to all citizens (Buford v. Houtz, 133 U. S. 320, 33 L. ed. 618, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305); another, and by far the most serious, was obstruction of the homestead policy. It is not too much to affirm that, beyond all else, it was to protect and effectuate that policy that this law was enacted. This fact was recognized by the court in Cameron v. United States, 148 U. S. 301, 305, 37 L. ed. 459, 460, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595, where it is said that the act was passed to prevent the practice of inclosing lands by which persons desiring to become settlers upon such lands were driven or frightened away, in some cases by threats of violence.

See also Camfield v. United States, 167 U. S. 518, 524, 42 L. ed. 260, 262, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 864; Golconda Cattle Co. v. United States, 119 C. C. A. 519, 201 Fed. 281.

Judging by the opinion, the trial court must have read the word "establishing" in the 3d section as though its only meaning were "initiating." This is an erroneous assumption; but, even if it were correct, it would not justify the narrow construction of the section which the court adopted, since the evident spirit and purpose of a statute, penal or otherwise, is not to be strangled to satisfy the bare letter of a single word.

United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 629, 33 L. ed. 1080, 1083, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625.

The ordinary meaning of "establish," as indicated by the derivation and defined by all lexicographers, is "to make stable and firm;" "to settle unalterably."

Black's Law Dict. p. 438; Dickey v. Maysville, W. P. & L. Turnp. Road Co. 7 Dana, 127; State ex rel. Bragg v. Rogers, 107 Ala. 444, 32 L.R.A. 520, 19 So. 909.

The word "made" where it occurs the fourth time in § 1 of the act in interpreted to mean "maintained." In the sense of the statute one who maintains an inclosure makes an inclosure, and as long as he maintains it he makes it.

The obligation of the government is to protect the right of the homesteader to remain on the land while he is earning it.

United States v. Waddell, 112 U. S. 76, 80, 28 L. ed. 673, 674, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; United States v. Brighton Ranch Co. 25 Fed. 465—a fence case.

A broader meaning should be given to the words "public lands."

United States v. Brighton Ranch Co. supra; Kindred v. Union P. R. Co. 225 U. S. 582, 56 L. ed. 1216, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; Shiver v. United States, 159 U. S. 491, 494, 40 L. ed. 231, 232, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; United States v. Blendaur, 63 C. C. A. 636, 128 Fed. 913.

Mr. S. E. Naugle argued the cause, and, with Mr. C. W. Waterman, filed a brief for defendant in error:

An indictment, to be good under § 3 of 23 Stat. at L. 321, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1524, must state that the land upon which entry is prevented is public land of the United States, and subject to entry and settlement as such.

Haynes v. United States, 42 C. C. A. 34, 101 Fed. 819.

The policy of the United States government with respect to public lands has been a liberal one, toward keeping the public lands open for grazing or use of the public generally, and would not permit these lands to be controlled exclusively for the benefit of any person or corporation, as against the public at large.

Buford v. Houtz, 133 U. S. 320, 33 L. ed. 618, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305.

The purpose of the act is so clearly expressed in its title and contents that there can be no doubt that it refers to occupancy of public lands in some manner made unlawful by its provisions, and does not extend to the protection of settlers after they have made entry upon the land and established their residence or settlement thereon. Its provisions cannot be extended by construction beyond the grammatical and natural meaning of the terms employed on any plea of failure of justice.

Remmington v. State, 1 Or. 281.

There can be no constructive crimes.

State v. Lovell, 23 Iowa, 304.

The offense must be both within the spirit and the letter of the law.

Lair v. Killmer, 25 N. J. L. 522.

We are to look to the words in the first instance, and where they are plain we are to decide on them. If they be doubtful, we are them to have recourse to the subject-matter; but at all events it is only a secondary rule.

Digitized by Google

Sedgw. Stat. & Const. Law, 2d ed. p. 282.

The term "public lands," as used in this statute, means the unappropriated public domain of the United States subject to entry and settlement under the land laws of the United States, so that when the land is entered, residence established, possession maintained, and cultivation engaged in for a period of four years, with the entry still in full force and effect, as alleged in the indictment herein, it is severed from the public domain, appropriated to private purposes, no longer subject to entry or settlement, and no longer public land.

Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498–513, 10 L. ed. 264–271; McGuire v. Brown, 106 Cal. 660, 30 L.R.A. 384, 39 Pac. 1060; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 33 L. ed. 363, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112.

The courts and General Land Office have uniformly held that residence under the homestead act is established by the erection of a suitable dwelling house, and taking up residence on the land, and recognize a distinction between establishing a residence and maintaining it. If once established within the required time, it may then be maintained or abandoned, as the entryman may choose. To enter means to acquire an inceptive right to a portion of the unappropriated soil of the United States, by filing a claim with the register of the land office.

Lockwitz v. Larson, 16 Utah, 275, 52 Pac. 279.

The words "enter on" and "occupy" have no synonyms that convey meaning more clearly than they do themselves.

Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 490, 37 L. ed. 533, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634, 1 Okla. 117, 29 Pac. 85.

That the lands are public lands must appear upon the face of the indictment.

Haynes v. United States, 42 C. C. A. 34, 101 Fed. 819.

It is a sufficient defense to a proceeding under this act to show that land inclosed or occupied was not public land.

Cameron v. United States, 148 U. S. 301–305, 37 L. ed. 459–461, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595.

[74] Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The statute under which the defendant was indicted makes it unlawful to prevent "any person from peaceably entering upon or establishing a settlement or residence on public land, subject to settlement or entry." The indictment charges that the defendant prevented the heirs of the homesteader "from entering upon and establishing a settlement and residence on homesteaded lands of the United States subject to settlement and entry." This difference between the language of the statute—"public land of the United States"—and the charge in the indictment—"homesteaded land of the United States"—raises the question whether, after entry and before patent, land covered by a homestead claim is public land within the meaning of the act "to prevent unlawful occupancy of the public land."

In construing the statute it must be remembered that at the time of its passage in 1885, by tacit consent of the government, any person could graze sheep and cattle upon any part of the public domain. Buford v. Houtz, 133 U. S. 326, 33 L. ed. 620, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Light v. United States, 220 U. S. 535, 55 L. ed. 573, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485. Many availed themselves of this privilege, and the cattle of different owners fed together on the open prairie, no one claiming that thereby any exclusive right had been acquired. The first fences were built only around very small areas. But from this small beginning the practice rapidly grew, until in some cases vast tracts were fenced in by herdsmen who treated the land as though it was their own property. 5 H. R. 1325, 48th Cong. 1st Sess. These unlawful fences not only closed the roads and obstructed the mails, but there were occasions in which citizens were prevented from peaceably taking possession of these inclosed public lands, and by settlement thereon securing the right to enter the same at the register's office.

[75] Under these circumstances Congress passed the act intended to protect the rights of the United States as proprietor, by making unlawful "all inclosures of any public land;" to prevent obstruction of the roads; to create a method for summary removal of fences; and to provide a punishment for those who prevented others from entering upon or establishing a settlement on public land subject to settlement or entry. But all its provisions related to public lands—not to private lands; to land subject to entry—not to land which had been entered in the register's office; to land subject to settlement—not to land on which a settlement had already been established. For, as shown by the context, the word "established" did not mean "to fix unalterably" (Osborne v. San Diego Land & Town Co. 178 U. S. 32, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860; but to create or set up the settlement which had to be made prior to entry at the register's office in the case of a pre-emptor, and could be so made in the case of a homesteader. Rev. Stat. § 2289, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p.

Digitized by Google

1388, Rev. Stat. §§ 2259, 2263, 2264, act of May 14, 1880, 21 Stat. at L. 140, chap. 89, § 3, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1393. Stearns v. United States, 82 C. C. A. 48, 152 Fed. 902 (10); 4 Ops. Atty. Gen. 493. These provisions refer not to something to be done in the future, but to a settlement already completed, and require that within thirty days after this finished act, proof of such settlement shall be made. When, on that proof, or compliance with other statutory conditions, entry was made, the pre-emptor or homesteader was entitled to possession, and could protect himself by legal proceedings against intrusion by cattlemen or others.†

[76] The indictment here charges that, after having entered this quarter section at the register's office, Scott remained in possession for three years, and that when he died the homestead was in full force and was thereafter maintained by his heirs. This negatives any idea of abandonment. It implies that he not only entered the land at the proper office, but had established a settlement, erected a dwelling, and both acquired and maintained that "inceptive right" which "was the commencement of title." Chotard v. Pope, 12 Wheat. 588, 6 L. ed. 738; Hoofnagle v. Anderson, 7 Wheat. 212, 5 L. ed. 437.

The land covered by the homestead of Scott was therefore not public land of the United States, subject to entry or settlement. For, "in no just sense can land be said to be public lands after they have been entered at the land office and a certificate of entry obtained. If public land before the entry, after it they are private property." Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 506, 33 L. ed. 693, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Svor v. Morris, 227 U. S. 524-528, 57 L. ed. 623-625, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385. The entry by Scott withdrew the land from entry or settlement by any other, [77] and segregated the quarter section from the public domain. The legal title remained in the government until patent issued; but, as against all except the United States, he was the lawful possessor, clothed with an inceptive title (Sturr v. Beck, 133 U. S. 547, 549, 33 L. ed. 764, 765, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Bunker Hill & S. Min. & Concentrating Co. v. United States, 226 U. S. 550, 57 L. ed. 346, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 138), which entitled him to maintain suits in equity or actions at law to obtain redress for a violation of his possessory rights (Russian-American Packing Co. v. United States, 199 U. S. 577, 50 L. ed. 315, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157). The homesteader having thus acquired the right to "treat the land as his own" so far as was necessary to carry out the purposes of the statute (Shiver v. United States, 159 U. S. 497, 40 L. ed. 232, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54), it is apparent that this right was in the nature of private property, and entitled to protection as such. Interference with the possession of the homesteader or his heirs living on land thus withdrawn from entry was not punishable under a Federal statute applicable only to public lands subject to entry.

This view is sustained by the terms of the statute, and is in accord with the policy to leave the protection of such possessory claims to the laws of the several states. Congress could have legislated so as to make the statute applicable until patent issued. But instead of doing so, it left the homesteader who had acquired a possessory title to avail himself of the same rights that were open to others holding lands by title absolute or inchoate. In both cases there was right of possession, and in both cases wrongs against possession could be redressed. Such seems to have been the practical construction of the statute since its passage, twenty-eight years ago, for †Sec. 2289. Every person who is the head of a family . . . shall be entitled to enter one-quarter section . . . of unappropriated public lands . . . .

Sec. 2259. Every person being the head of a family . . . who has made or hereafter makes a settlement in person on the public lands subject to pre-emption, and who inhabits and improves the same, and who has erected or shall erect a dwelling thereon, is authorized to enter with the register of the land office . . . any number of acres not exceeding 160 . . . upon paying to the United States the minimum price of such land.

Sec. 2263. Prior to any entries being made under and by virtue of the provisions of § 2259, proof of the settlement and improvement thereby required shall be made to the satisfaction of the register . . . .

Sec. 2264. When any person settles or improves a tract of land subject at the time of settlement to private entry, and intends to purchase the same under the preceding provisions of this chapter, he shall, within thirty days after the date of such settlement, file with the register of the proper district a written statement, describing the land settled upon, and declaring his intention to claim the same under the pre-emption law; and he shall, moreover, within twelve months after the date of such settlement, make the proof, affidavit, and payment hereinbefore required. If he fails to file such written statement, or to make such affidavit, proof, and payment within the several periods named above, the tract of land so settled and improved shall be subject to the entry of any other purchaser.

Digitized by Google

we are cited to no case in which a prosecution has been instituted, in a Federal court, against one interfering with the possession of a homesteader after entry and before patent.

Judgment affirmed.

---

[78] ANNA LAPINA, Petitioner,
v.
WILLIAM WILLIAMS, Commissioner of Immigration.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 78–93.)

Statutes — construction — committee reports — debates.

1. The Federal Supreme Court ordinarily will not go beyond the reports of congressional committees to the debates in Congress as a source from which to determine the meaning of the language employed in a Federal statute.

[For other cases, see Statutes, II. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — construction — title of act.

2. It is only in a doubtful case that the title of an act can control the meaning of the enacting clauses.

[For other cases, see Statutes, II. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Aliens — deportation — effect of previous residence.

3. An alien woman found an inmate of a house of prostitution within three years after her return to the United States, following a temporary absence abroad, may, notwithstanding her previous residence in the United States for upwards of three years, be deported under the provisions of the immigration act of February 20, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 898, chap. 1134, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 499), which in enumerating in § 2 the classes of aliens which shall be excluded from admission into the United States, specifically mentions "prostitutes, or women or girls coming into the United States for the purpose of prostitution, or for any other immoral purpose," and in § 3 provides for the deportation of "any alien woman or girl who shall be found an inmate of a house of prostitution, or practising prostitution at any time within three years after she shall have entered the United States."

[For other cases, see Aliens, VI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 7.]

Submitted December 1, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

NOTE.—On the right to resort to the views of individual members of legislature as aid to construction of statute—see note to Blake v. National City Bank, 23 L. ed. U. S. 119.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Southern District of New York, dismissing a writ of habeas corpus to inquire into an order for the deportation of an alien. Affirmed.

See same case below, 103 C. C. A. 327, 179 Fed. 839.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William Hawkins submitted the cause for petitioner:

The majority of the circuit courts of appeal are in petitioner's favor.

Ex parte Hoffman, 103 C. C. A. 327, 179 Fed. 839; Taylor v. United States, 81 C. C. A. 197, 152 Fed. 1; United States v. Sprung, 110 C. C. A. 37, 187 Fed. 905; Rodgers v. United States, 81 C. C. A. 454, 152 Fed. 346; United States ex rel. Barlin v. Rodgers, 112 C. C. A. 382, 191 Fed. 979; Redfern v. Halpert, 108 C. C. A. 262, 186 Fed. 151; United States v. Aultman, 79 C. C. A. 457, 148 Fed. 1022; United States v. Nakashima, 87 C. C. A. 646, 160 Fed. 842. See also Re Panzara, 51 Fed. 275; Re Maiola, 67 Fed. 114; Moffitt v. United States, 63 C. C. A. 117, 128 Fed. 375; Re Buchsbaum, 141 Fed. 222.

The petitioner, Anna Lapina, in the eye of the law, was a domiciled alien resident, and therefore not within the scope of the immigration act of 1907.

The Venus, 8 Cranch, 280, 3 L. ed. 562; Cesna v. Meyers, H. R. 42d Congr. 2d Sess. Rep. No. 11; McCrary, Elections, 2d ed. 449, 561; Behrensmeyer v. Kreitz, 135 Ill. 591, 26 N. E. 704; Cobb v. Smith, 88 Ill. 201; Wilkins v. Marshall, 80 Ill. 78; State ex rel. Leche v. Fowler, 41 La. Ann. 380, 6 So. 602.

The words "aliens" and "alien," as used in the immigration statutes existing prior to 1903 and 1907, were both construed uniformly by the Federal courts as referring to "alien immigrants" exclusively.

Moffitt v. United States, 63 C. C. A. 117, 128 Fed. 375; United States ex rel. Anderson v. Burke, 99 Fed. 895; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Re Panzara, 51 Fed. 275; Re Martorelli, 63 Fed. 437; Re Maiola, 67 Fed. 114.

The use of the word "aliens" in acts of 1903 and 1907, instead of "alien immigrants," does not indicate any intention on the part of Congress to make the statutes of 1903 and 1907 apply to the case at bar.

United States v. Dauphin, 20 Fed. 628; Goodell v. Jackson, 20 Johns. 722, 11 Am. Dec. 351; Taylor v. Delancey, 2 Cai. Cas. 151; Dominick v. Michael, 4 Sandf. 409.

Where the language of a statute is ambiguous or otherwise doubtful; or, being plain, a literal construction would lead to such absurdity, hardship, or injustice as to render it irrational to impute to the law-making power a purpose to produce or permit such result, the title may be resorted to as tending to throw light upon the legislative intent as to its scope or operation.

Digitized by Google

United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 386, 2 L. ed. 313; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 462, 36 L. ed. 229, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Coosaw Min. Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 563, 36 L. ed. 542, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689.

It is proper for this court to look at the congressional history of the act.

Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 227, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Binns v. United States, 194 U. S. 486, 48 L. ed. 1087, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816.

Assistant Attorney General Denison submitted the cause for respondent. Mr. Francis H. McAdoo was on the brief:

The word "alien," as used in the later immigration statutes, does not mean "alien immigrant," but is intended to cover any "alien" entering the country, whether or not previously here.

United States v. Aultman, 79 C. C. A. 457, 148 Fed. 1022; United States ex rel. Barlin v. Rodgers, 112 C. C. A. 382, 191 Fed. 970; Ex parte Crawford, 165 Fed. 830; Frick v. Lewis, 115 C. C. A. 493, 195 Fed. 693; United States ex rel. Funaro v. Watchorn, 164 Fed. 152; Ex parte Hoffman, 103 C. C. A. 327, 179 Fed. 839; Re Kleibs, 128 Fed. 656; Lem Moon Sing v. United States, 158 U. S. 538, 39 L. ed. 1082, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 967; Low Wah Suey v. Backus, 225 U. S. 460, 56 L. ed. 1165, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734; Re Maiola, 67 Fed. 114; Re Martorelli, 63 Fed. 437; Moffitt v. United States, 63 C. C. A. 117, 128 Fed. 375; 23 Ops. Atty. Gen. p. 278; Re Ota, 96 Fed. 487; Re Panzara, 51 Fed. 275; Ex parte Petterson, 166 Fed. 536; Prentis v. Stathakos, 112 C. C. A. 607, 192 Fed. 469; Redfern v. Halpert, 108 C. C. A. 262, 186 Fed. 150; Rodgers v. United States, 81 C. C. A. 454, 152 Fed. 346; Sibray v. United States, 107 C. C. A. 483, 185 Fed. 401; Siniscalchi v. Thomas, 115 C. C. A. 501, 195 Fed. 701; Taylor v. United States, 207 U. S. 120, 52 L. ed. 130, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53, 81 C. C. A. 197, 152 Fed. 1; United States v. Aultman Co. 143 Fed. 922; United States v. Nakashima, 87 C. C. A. 646, 160 Fed. 842; United States v. Sprung, 110 C. C. A. 37, 187 Fed. 903; United States v. Villet, 173 Fed. 500; United States ex rel. White v. Hook, 166 Fed. 1007.

If a restriction on the word "alien" is to be implied, it should cover persons bona fide domiciled, and not this petitioner.

United States ex rel. Barlin v. Rodgers, 112 C. C. A. 382, 191 Fed. 971; Ex parte Petterson, 166 Fed. 536.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

The petitioner, an unmarried woman and a native of Russia, came to the United States in the year 1897 or 1898, at the age of about twelve years, accompanied by [83] a man who had promised to marry her, and during the four years immediately following she practised prostitution in the city of New York, and supported her companion with the proceeds of her prostitution; she then left that city, and thereafter continuously practised prostitution in various parts of the United States, including different towns and cities in the states of Washington, Arizona, and Texas. In the month of March, 1908, she returned to Russia for the purpose of visiting her mother, intending at the same time to return to this country; she re-entered the United States at the port of New York in June, 1908, accompanied by her mother, at which time petitioner falsely represented, for the purpose of facilitating her landing, that she was Mrs. Joseph Fiore, and the wife of an American citizen; at the time of this, her second entry, she intended to continue the practice of prostitution in the United States, and almost immediately upon being admitted she engaged in that practice, and was continually engaged in it until September 21, 1909, on which date she was arrested in a house of prostitution in Phœnix, Arizona, upon a warrant of arrest duly issued by the Acting Secretary of Commerce and Labor under the provisions of the immigration act of February 20, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 898, chap. 1134, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 499). Upon a hearing properly accorded to her, the foregoing facts were established, and an order of deportation was made upon the ground that she was a prostitute, and was such at the time of her entry into the United States; that she entered the United States for the purpose of prostitution; and that she had been found an inmate of a house of prostitution and practising the same within three years after her entry. She obtained a writ of habeas corpus, which, after a hearing, was dismissed by the district court for the southern district of New York. Upon appeal, the circuit court of appeals affirmed the order of dismissal (sub nom. Ex parte Hoffman, 103 C. C. A. 327, 179 Fed. 839) The present writ of certiorari [84] was then allowed because of the division of judicial opinion upon the question presented, which is whether the provisions of the immigration act of 1907 respecting admission and deportation apply to an alien such as the petitioner, who, having remained in this country for more than three years (in this instance for more than ten years), after first entry, and having gone abroad for a temporary purpose and with the intention of returning, again seeks and gains admittance into the United States.

Digitized by Google

The pertinent provisions of the act of 1907 are set forth in the margin.† So far as the present question is concerned, the act is not materially different from—certainly not less stringent than—the act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 1213, chap. 1012). The circuit court of appeals in the present case followed its own decision in Taylor v. United States, 81 C. C. A. 197, 152 Fed. 1, which was based upon the act of 1903, [85] and in which it was held that while the provisions of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1084, chap. 551, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1294), had been construed as restricted to "alien immigrants," the act of 1903 had been so framed as to cover aliens, whether immigrants or not. In behalf of the petitioner it is contended that the court erred in its judgment as to the purpose of Congress in modifying the language of previous acts on adopting the revision of 1903, and that this act and the act of 1907, as well as those that preceded them, when properly construed, refer to "alien immigrants" exclusively.

The Acts of 1903 and 1907 being revisions or compilations (with some modifications) of previous acts pertaining to the same general subject-matter, a reference list, in chronological order, is for convenience set forth in the margin.†

[86] In a number of cases in the Federal district and circuit courts, it was held that the provisions of the act of March 3, 1891, and the acts that preceded it, relating to the exclusion and deportation of persons arriving in the United States from foreign countries, were confined in their operation to "alien immigrants;" and that this term did not include aliens previously resident in this country, who had temporarily departed with the intention of returning. Re Panzara (1892) 51 Fed. 275; Re Martorelli (1894) 63 Fed. 437; Re Maiola (1895) 67 Fed. 114; Re Ota (1899) 96 Fed. 487. The same view was expressed by the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit in Moffit v. United States (1904) 63 C. C. A. 117, 128 Fed. 375.

Upon the reasoning and authority of these cases, a similar construction was given to the act of 1903 in United States v. Aultman Co. (1906) 143 Fed. 922 (af-

†Sec. 2. That the following classes of aliens shall be excluded from admission into the United States: . . . prostitutes, or women or girls coming into the United States for the purpose of prostitution, or for any other immoral purpose; . . .

Sec. 3. . . . any alien woman or girl who shall be found an inmate of a house of prostitution or practising prostitution, at any time within three years after she shall have entered the United States, shall be deemed to be unlawfully within the United States, and shall be deported as provided by sections twenty and twenty-one of this act.

Sec. 20. That any alien who shall enter the United States in violation of law, . . . shall, upon the warrant of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, be taken into custody and deported to the country whence he came at any time within three years after the date of his entry into the United States.

Sec. 21. That in case the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall be satisfied that an alien has been found in the United States in violation of this act, or that an alien is subject to deportation under the provisions of this act or of any law of the United States, he shall cause such alien, within the period of three years after landing or entry therein, to be taken into custody and returned to the country whence he came, as provided by section twenty of this act. . . .

†Immigration Acts.

Rev. Stat. title, "Immigration," §§ 2158–2164, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1280–1286.

"An Act Supplementary to the Acts in Relation to Immigration," approved March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 477, chap. 141, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1285).

"An Act to Regulate Immigration," approved August 3, 1882 (22 Stat. at L. 214, chap. 376, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1288).

"An Act to Prohibit the Importation and Migration of Foreigners and Aliens under Contract or Agreement to Perform Labor in the United States, its Territories, and the District of Columbia," approved February 26, 1885 (23 Stat. at L. 332, chap. 164, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1290).

"An Act to Amend an Act to Prohibit the Importation and Immigration of Foreigners and Aliens under Contract or Agreement to Perform Labor in the United States, its Territories, and the District of Columbia," approved February 23, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 414, chap. 220).

"An Act Making Appropriations to Supply Deficiencies," etc., approved October 19, 1888, containing clauses amending acts of February 26, 1885, and of February 23, 1887 (25 Stat. at L. 566, 567, chap. 1210, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1294).

"An Act in Amendment to the Various Acts Relative to Immigration and the Importation of Aliens under Contract or Agreement to Perform Labor," approved firmed by the circuit court of appeals, 79 C. C. A. 457, 148 Fed. 1022), the attention of the court apparently not having been directed to the question whether any significant change had been made in the law by the revision of 1903.

Digitized by Google

But in Taylor v. United States (1907) 81 C. C. A. 197, 152 Fed. 1, which was a review by the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit of a judgment of conviction upon an indictment for a misdemeanor for permitting an alien sailor to land in New York, contrary to § 18 of the act of 1903, [87] which made it the duty of the owners, officers, and agents of any vessel bringing an alien to the United States to adopt due precautions to prevent the landing of any such alien, etc., the court reviewed the changes made by Congress in the revision of 1903, "following decisions of the courts which tended to relax the provisions of earlier acts," and, finding that § 18 of the act of 1903 substantially re-enacted a part of § 8 of the act of 1891, employing the term "alien" in the place of the term "alien immigrant," and that similar changes were made in other parts of the act, came to the conclusion that the change evinced an intent of Congress to use the word "alien" in its ordinary and unqualified meaning. This decision was reviewed in this court, and the judgment was reversed, but upon the ground (207 U. S. 120, 124, 52 L. ed. 130, 132, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53) that § 18 did not apply to the ordinary case of a sailor deserting while on shore leave.

Shortly after the decision of the circuit court of appeals in the Taylor Case, the circuit court of appeals for the third circuit, in Rodgers v. United States (1907) 81 C. C. A. 454, 152 Fed. 346, held that the provision of § 2 of the act of 1903, enumerating the classes of aliens to be excluded from admission into the United States, and amongst them "persons afflicted with a loathsome or with a dangerous contagious disease," and the provision of § 19, for the deportation of "aliens brought into this country in violation of law," could not be construed so as to extend to aliens domiciled in this country; affirming Re Buchsbaum, 141 Fed. 221. In United States v. Nakashima (1908) 87 C. C. A. 646, 160 Fed. 842, the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit adopted the same view of the act of 1903 expressed in the Aultman and Rodgers Cases, rejecting that adopted by the court of appeals in Taylor v. United States.

On the other hand, the latter decision has been followed in a number of cases arising under the act of 1907, which in this respect does not materially differ from the act of 1903. [88] Ex parte Petterson (1908) 166 Fed. 536; United States ex rel. White v. Hook (1908) 166 Fed. 1007; United States v. Villet (1909) 173 Fed. 500; Ex parte Hoffman (1910) 103 C. C. A. 327, 179 Fed. 839 (being the case now under review); Sibray v. United States (1911) 107 C. C. A. 483, 185 Fed. 401; United States ex rel. Canfora v. Williams (1911) 186 Fed. 354; United States v. Sprung (1910) 110 C. C. A. 37, 187 Fed. 903; Frick v. Lewis (1912) 115 C. C. A. 493, 195 Fed. 693; Siniscalchi v Thomas (1912) 115 C. C. A. 501, 195 Fed. 701. Contra, Redfern v. Halpert (1911) 108 C. C. A. 262, 186 Fed. 150; and see United States ex rel. Barlin v. Rodgers (1911) 112 C. C. A. 382, 191 Fed. 970.

The authority of Congress over the general subject-matter is plenary; it may exclude aliens altogether, or prescribe the terms and conditions upon which they may come into or remain in this country. Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U. S. 581, 603, 32 L. ed. 1068, 1074, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 659, 35 L. ed. 1146, 1149, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 713, 37 L. ed. 905, 913, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; Lem Moon Sing v. United States, 158 U. S. 538, 547, 39 L. ed. 1082, 1085, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 967.

The question, therefore, is not the power of Congress, but its intent and purpose as expressed in legislation. The cases that have held the immigration acts not to apply to domiciled aliens returning after a temporary absence have been rested in part upon the use of the term "immigration" in the titles of the respective acts, and in part

March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1084, chap. 551, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1294).

"An Act to Facilitate the Enforcement of the Immigration and Contract-Labor Laws of the United States," approved March 3, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 569, chap. 206, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1300).

"An Act Making Appropriations for Sundry Civil Expenses," etc., approved August 18, 1894, containing clauses amending immigration laws (28 Stat. at L. 390, 391, chap. 301, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1303, 2459).

"An Act to Regulate the Immigration of Aliens into the United States," approved March 3, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 1213, chap. 1012).

"An Act to Regulate the Immigration of Aliens into the United States," approved February 20, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 898, chap. 1134, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 499).

"An Act to Amend an Act Entitled, 'An Act to Regulate the Immigration of Aliens into the United States,' Approved February Twentieth, Nineteen Hundred and Seven," approved March 26, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 263, chap. 128, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 501).

Digitized by Google

upon the employment of that or similar terms in the enacting clauses.

As authority for a liberal interpretation of the acts, two decisions of this court have at times been referred to, which have, however, little, if any, present pertinency. Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511, held that the contract-labor law of February 26, 1885 (23 Stat. at L. 332, chap. 164, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1290), did not forbid a contract for employing a clergyman. The act was construed according to its spirit rather than its letter, and, in view of its title, the evil intended to be remedied, the circumstances surrounding [89] the appeal to Congress for legislation, and the reports of committees in each House, it was held to be the legislative purpose simply to stay the influx of cheap unskilled labor. Since this decision, an express exception has been made of "ministers of any religious denomination." In Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 36 L. ed. 340, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517, this court held that the provision of the Chinese restriction act of May 6, 1882 (22 Stat. at L. 58, chap. 126, § 6), as amended by act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. at L. 115, chap. 220, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1305), requiring every Chinese merchant coming into this country to procure and produce a certificate from the Chinese government, did not apply to Chinese merchants already domiciled in the United States, who, having left this country for some temporary purpose, sought to re-enter it upon their return to their homes here. But this decision was based in part upon the language of the particular statute, and in part upon the fact that our treaty with China gave to Chinese merchants domiciled in the United States the right of egress and ingress, and the other rights, privileges, and immunities enjoyed in this country by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nation.

The legislative history of the act of 1903 demonstrates that the elimination of the word "immigrant" and other equivalent qualifying phrases was done deliberately. The bill originated in the House of Representatives, where the committee report declared that its general purpose was "to bring together in one act scattered legislation heretofore enacted in regard to the immigration of aliens into the United States; . . . to amend such portions thereof as have been found, either as the result of experience in administering the law or of judicial decision, to be inadequate to accomplish the purpose plainly intended thereby; and to add thereto such further provisions as seemed to be demanded by the consensus of enlightened public opinion." H. Rept. 982, 57th Cong. 1st Sess. The report of the Senate Committee likewise explained [90] the bill as being in the main a re-enactment of existing laws on the subject of immigration, stating: "The necessity for such re-enactment is due in part to the fact that, as a result of judicial decisions, as well as of administrative experience, the efficiency of such laws to accomplish the evident purpose of their enactment has been shown to be materially less than appeared to be at the case at the time of such enactment, and therefore a new expression of the legislative will upon the subject of immigration has become desirable." The Senate inserted the word "immigrant" in one place, but it was eliminated in conference. S. Rept. 2119, 57th Cong. 1st Sess.; S. Doc. 62, 57th Cong. 2d Sess. Cong. Record, vol. 36, p. 2949, 57th Cong. 2d Sess.

Counsel for petitioner cites the debates in Congress as indicating that the act was not understood to refer to any others than immigrants. But the unreliability of such debates as a source from which to discover the meaning of the language employed in an act of Congress has been frequently pointed out (United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 318, 41 L. ed. 1007, 1019, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540, and cases cited), and we are not disposed to go beyond the reports of the committees. (Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 463, 36 L. ed. 226, 229, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Binns v. United States, 194 U. S. 486, 495, 48 L. ed. 1087, 1090, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 19, 49 L. ed. 363, 370, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412).

It is earnestly insisted that the omission of the word "immigrant" is of little consequence, because it does not apply at all to the excluding section. It is said that the words "alien immigrant" did not occur in the Acts of 1875, 1882, 1885, or 1887, and did not occur in the excluding section of the act of 1891, but only in its 8th section,—that which related to manifesting. But in the act of 1893, "To Facilitate the Enforcement," etc., each section was made to apply to "alien immigrants." The force of the argument pretty well disappears when we recall that it was in spite of the absence of the word "immigrant" in the [91] excluding clause that courts had held that because the word occurred in the title and in other provisions of the pertinent acts, the excluding clauses likewise were confined to immigrants, in the sense of aliens who had no domicil in this country. Of course, there were other considerations,—the extreme hardship in individual cases where the aliens had long been resident in this country, and the practically uncontrolled authority of the executive officers of the government, being among them. But, whatever considerations may have combined to bring about the judicial interpretation of the acts that preceded the revision of 1903, the committee reports already cited sufficiently show that the language of the new act was chosen not for the purpose of adopting, but in order to avoid, that interpretation.

Digitized by Google

Upon a review of the whole matter, we are satisfied that Congress, in the act of 1903, sufficiently expressed, and in the act of 1907 reiterated, the purpose of applying its prohibition against the admission of aliens, and its mandate for their deportation, to all aliens whose history, condition, or characteristics brought them within the descriptive clauses, irrespective of any qualification arising out of a previous residence or domicil in this country.

The excluding section as found in the act of 1907 contains in its own language the clearest answer to the entire argument for the petitioner. It reads as follows (34 Stat. at L. 898, chap. 1134, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 500): "That the following classes of aliens shall be excluded from admission into the United States: All idiots, imbeciles, feeble-minded persons, epileptics, insane persons, and persons who have been insane within five years previous; persons who have had two or more attacks of insanity at any time previously; paupers; persons likely to become a public charge; professional beggars; persons afflicted with tuberculosis or with a loathsome or dangerous contagious disease; persons not comprehended within any of the foregoing excluded classes, who are found to be [92] and are certified by the examining surgeon as being mentally or physically defective, such mental or physical defect being of a nature which may affect the ability of such alien to earn a living; persons who have been convicted of or admit having committed a felony or other crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude; polygamists, or persons who admit their belief in the practice of polygamy; anarchists, or persons who believe in or advocate the overthrow by force or violence of the government of the United States, or of all government, or of all forms of law, or the assassination of public officials; prostitutes, or women or girls coming into the United States for the purpose of prostitution, or for any other immoral purpose; persons who procure or attempt to bring in prostitutes, or women or girls for the purpose of prostitution, or for any other immoral purpose; persons hereinafter called contract laborers, who have been induced or solicited to migrate to this country by offers or promises of employment, or in consequence of agreements, oral, written, or printed, express or implied, to perform labor in this country of any kind, skilled or unskilled;" etc., etc. None of these excluded classes (with the possible exception of contract laborers, whose exclusion depends upon somewhat different considerations) would be any less undesirable if previously domiciled in the United States. And besides, the section contains its own specific provisos and limitations, and these, on familiar principles, strongly tend to negative any other and implied exception.

There remains, therefore, only the use of the word "immigration" in the title of the act to furnish support for petitioner's contention. But it is only in a doubtful case that the title of an act can control the meaning of the enacting clauses, and there is no such doubt here. United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 358 386, 2 L. ed. 304, 314; Church of The Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 462, 36 L. ed. 226, 229, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Coosaw Min. Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 550, 563, 36 L. ed. 537, 542, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689; Patterson v. The [93] Eudora, 190 U. S. 169, 173, 47 L. ed. 1002, 1005, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821; Cornell v. Coyne, 192 U S. 418, 430, 48 L. ed. 504, 509, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

It was not intended, in the opinion of this court in the Taylor Case, 207 U. S. 120, 126, 52 L. ed. 130, 133, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53, to intimate an opinion with respect to the construction of § 18 of the act of 1903 that is inconsistent with the result now reached. There the circuit court of appeals (one judge dissenting) had construed that section as excluding even the ordinary sailor, if an alien; basing this construction upon the changes wrought by Congress in the revision of 1903. This court, speaking by Mr. Justice Holmes, said: "A reason for the construction adopted below was found in the omission of the word 'immigrant' which had followed 'alien' in the earlier acts. No doubt that may have been intended to widen the reach of the statute, but we see no reason to suppose that the omission meant to do more than to avoid the suggestion that no one was within the act who did not come here with intent to remain. It is not necessary to regard the change as a mere abbreviation, although the title of the statute is 'An Act to Regulate the Immigration of Aliens into the United States.'" Of course, this language was employed with reference to the facts of that case, and was not intended to negative a purpose on the part of Congress to bring within the reach of the statute aliens who had previously resided in this country. In that case there was no element of previous residence.

Digitized by Google

Judgment affirmed.

---

[94] GILA VALLEY, GLOBE, & NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, M. P. Freeman and Frank H. Hereford, Executors of H. B. Tenney, Deceased, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

JOHN HALL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 94–105.)

Appeal — scope of review — questions not raised in intermediate appellate court.

1. The Federal Supreme Court cannot consider on writ of error to a territorial supreme court errors not fundamental in their character which might have been, but, so far as the record discloses, were not, brought under review in that court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — directing verdict — question for jury — cause of accident.

2. The question whether a defect in the flange of the "pony wheel" on the left side of a three-wheeled railway gasolene car could have caused a derailment throwing the car towards the left cannot be taken from the jury by directing a verdict in favor of the railway company in an action for personal injuries, brought by an employee who was riding on the car, because such car, which had interior flanges on its right-hand wheels, was, at the time of the accident, traveling on a curve to the left at a speed of from 8 to 12 miles an hour,—especially where there is evidence from which the jury may infer that at the point where the car left the track it was just leaving the curve and going upon a tangent.

[For other cases, see Trial, VI. c, 1; VI. d, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Master and servant — assumption of risk — defective appliance — knowledge of defect or danger.

3. A railway employee who has been employed for not more than three or four days in work that requires him to ride on a three-wheeled gasolene car cannot be said as a matter of law to have assumed the risk of accident from a defective flange on the "pony wheel" of such car, where there is no direct evidence that he knew of the defect, and it does not appear to have been a part of his duty to inspect the machine or the wheel, or to look after their condition, and where the question whether the defect was such as to render the use of the car dangerous is in dispute at the trial.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, II. b, 3; II. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Master and servant — assumption of risk — defective appliance — knowledge of defect or danger.

4. An employee is not chargeable with the assumption of a risk arising out of a defect in an appliance attributable to his employer's negligence unless he not only knew (or is presumed from its obviousness to have known) of the defect, but also knew (or else the danger must have been so obvious that an ordinarily prudent person under the circumstances would have appreciated it) that it endangered his safety.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, II. b, 3; II. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — province of court and jury — admissibility of evidence — preliminary question of fact.

5. The court, not the jury, is to determine whether a remark made within hearing distance of an employee with reference to the condition of an appliance was actually heard by him so as to render it admissible on the issue of his knowledge of such condition.

[For other cases, see Trial, VI. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — review of finding — evidence — preliminary question of fact.

6. The finding of a trial judge upon a preliminary question of fact upon the decision of which depends the admissibility of certain proffered testimony is not subject to reversal on appeal or error if it be fairly supported by the evidence.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. l, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to territorial supreme court — following decision below — remitting part of excessive verdict.

7. The Federal Supreme Court will not revise the refusal of a territorial supreme court to control the discretion of the trial court in remitting a part of an excessive verdict in a negligence suit instead of granting a new trial on the ground that the verdict is tainted with prejudice or passion.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1; Courts, VII. d; New Trial, V. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 68.]

NOTE.—Generally, as to servant's assumption of risk—see note to Southern P. Co. v. Seley, 38 L. ed. U. S. 391.

On volenti non fit injuria as a defense to actions by injured servants—see note to O'Maley v. South Boston Gaslight Co. 47 L.R.A. 161.

As to whether a servant may assume the risk of dangers created by the master's negligence, generally—see note to Scheurer v. Banner Rubber Co. 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1215.

On servant's assumption of dangers created by master's negligence which might have been avoided by the exercise of ordinary care on the part of the servant—see note to St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Birch, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1250.

On the power of the trial court to cure an excessive verdict by requiring or permitting a reduction where the true measure of damages is not ascertainable by mere computation—see note to Tunnel Min. & Leasing Co. v. Cooper, 39 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1064.

Digitized by Google

Submitted November 13, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Gila County in that territory in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages for personal injuries. Affirmed.

See same case below, 13 Ariz. 270, 112 Pac. 845, 1 N. C. C. A. 362.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Eugene S. Ives submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error:

In order to justify the court in sending the case to the jury a scintilla of evidence is insufficient. The evidence must clearly tend to sustain a verdict for the plaintiff.

Root v. Fay, 5 Ariz. 19, 43 Pac. 527; Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478, 27 L. ed. 1003, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322; Richardson v. Powers, 11 Ariz. 31, 89 Pac. 542.

Where the facts proved are equally as consistent with the absence of negligence as with its existence, the question should not be submitted to the jury.

McFadden v. Campbell, 13 Misc. 158, 34 N. Y. Supp. 136; Baulec v. New York & H. R. Co. 59 N. Y. 366, 17 Am. Rep. 325.

If the injury may have resulted from one of two causes for only one of which the defendant is liable, the plaintiff must show with reasonable certainty that the cause for which the defendant is liable produced the result.

Warner v. St. Louis & M. River R. Co. 178 Mo. 134, 77 S. W. 67; Peirce v. Kile, 26 C. C. A. 201, 53 U. S. App. 291, 80 Fed. 865; Ellison v. Truesdale, 49 Minn. 240, 51 N. W. 918.

A verdict based on conjecture will not be permitted.

Wheelan v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 85 Iowa, 167, 52 N. W. 119; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 71 Md. 599, 18 Atl. 969; Cumberland & P. R. Co. v. State, 73 Md. 74, 25 Am. St. Rep. 571, 20 Atl. 785.

Evidence offered by the defendant as to a conversation which the plaintiff might have heard is admissible, and it is for the jury to determine whether the plaintiff actually overheard such conversation.

Bush v. McCarty Co. 127 Ga. 308, 56 S. E. 430, 9 Ann. Cas. 240; Berry v. House, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 562, 21 S. W. 711; Wright v. Stewart, 130 Fed. 905; 1 Wigmore, Ev. § 261.

Where the servant had the opportunity to know, or, in the exercise of reasonable or ordinary care, should have known, the risks to which he is exposed in the course of his employment, he will be held to have assumed them.

26 Cyc. p. 1196, note 99, p. 1204, note 17; Thomas v. Missouri P. R. Co. 109 Mo. 187, 18 S. W. 980; Thomp. Neg. 1008; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Fowler, 56 Tex. 452; Larson v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 43 Minn. 423, 45 N. W. 722; Ragon v. Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. 97 Mich. 265, 37 Am. St. Rep. 336, 56 N. W. 612; Perigo v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 52 Iowa, 276, 3 N. W. 43; Evansville & R. R. Co. v. Henderson, 134 Ind. 636, 33 N. E. 1021; Linton Coal & Min. Co. v. Persons, 15 Ind. App. 69, 43 N. E. 651.

Mr. Edward H. Thomas submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The evidence was sufficient to sustain the verdict, and therefore the judgment should be affirmed.

Texas & P. R. Co. Harvey, 228 U. S. 325, 57 L. ed. 856, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Powers, 149 U. S. 43, 45, 37 L. ed. 642, 643, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748, 7 Am. Neg. Cas. 369.

The situation and condition of the car at the time of accident shows that the proximate cause of injury was the defective wheel, as no other intervening cause is shown.

Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 24 L. ed. 256; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Holloway, 191 U. S. 334, 339, 48 L. ed. 207, 210, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102, 15 Am. Neg. Rep. 235.

The servant has the right to assume that the master has used diligence to provide suitable appliances in the operations of his business, and does not assume the risk of the employer's negligence in performing such duties. Besides, in view of the ignorance of the employee, in the case at bar, it was the duty of the master to instruct the servant as to any dangers that were not plainly observable or obvious.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Harvey, 228 U. S. 319, 321, 57 L. ed. 852, 855, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Archibald, 170 U. S. 665, 42 L. ed. 1188, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777, 4 Am. Neg. Rep. 746; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 220 U. S. 596, 55 L. ed. 600, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 191 U. S. 64, 48 L. ed. 96, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24, 15 Am. Neg. Rep. 230.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a review of a judgment of the supreme court of Arizona, rendered prior to statehood, affirming the judgment of one of the territorial district courts, in an action brought by Hall against the railway company, to recover damages for personal injuries. Hall was in the employ of the company as chainman, and on April 23, 1907, was engaged, with another employee named Ryan, in measuring distances for locating mileposts along the line of its railway. For purposes of transportation they used a three-wheeled gasolene car or "velocipede" furnished by the company. This car had two wheels on the right-hand side, over which were the engine, a seat for the use of the operator, and a seat in front for another person; the third wheel —or "pony wheel," as it was called—was a small wheel on the left-hand side nearly opposite the front wheel on the right-hand side, and fastened to the machine by a bar extending across. The wheels, like the ordinary car wheel, had inside flanges designed to keep the treads of the wheels upon the tracks. On the day mentioned, Hall and Ryan were upon this car, traveling upon the line of railway, Ryan operating the machine and Hall sitting in front. While running at a speed of from 8 to 12 miles an hour, the car suddenly left the track, going to the left, the side on which the "pony wheel" was located. Hall was thrown in front and run over, sustaining severe injuries. The ground relied upon to support a recovery of damages from the employer was that the flange upon the third wheel was worn and cracked in a manner that rendered its use dangerous; that the defect was of such a [98] character that it would have been discovered in the course of reasonable inspection; and that by reason of this defect the machine left the track. The company denied negligence on its part, set up contributory negligence, and averred that Hall knew or had opportunity to know the condition of the car, and that he assumed the risk of injury resulting from the alleged defect. Upon the trial the jury returned a verdict in his favor for $10,000. The company moved for a new trial, and, pending this motion, Hall voluntarily remitted $5,000 from the amount of the verdict. Thereafter the trial court denied the motion, and entered judgment in Hall's favor for $5,000 and costs. From this judgment and from the order denying the motion for a new trial the company appealed to the territorial supreme court which affirmed the judgment, as already stated. 13 Ariz. 270, 112 Pac. 845, 1 N. C. C. A. 362.

Digitized by Google

This writ of error is sued out by the railway company and the sureties upon the supersedeas bond that was given for the purposes of the appeal to the territorial supreme court. A reversal of the judgment is sought because of alleged trial errors.

At the outset we lay aside certain assignments of error filed in this court that are designed to raise various questions which do not appear, from anything in the record before us, to have been presented to the territorial supreme court for its consideration. It is inadmissible for this court to consider errors, not fundamental in their character, which might have been, but were not, brought under review in the appellate court below; for it is that court's judgment which is alone subject to our review. The impropriety of allowing a party, conceiving himself to have suffered from an erroneous ruling of a trial court in a matter not jurisdictional, nor essential to the foundation of the action, but involving a mere matter of procedure, to invoke the judgment of this court thereon, without availing himself of the opportunity for a review [99] thereof in the appropriate appellate court of the territory, has been repeatedly pointed out. Montana R. Co. v. Warren, 137 U. S. 348, 351, 34 L. ed. 681, 682, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; San Pedro & C. del A. Co. v. United States, 146 U. S. 120, 136, 36 L. ed. 912, 916, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; Old Jordan Min. & Mill Co. v. Société Anonyme des Mines, 164 U. S. 261, 264, 41 L. ed. 427, 428, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113.

The local practice required specific assignments of error, and treated errors not thus assigned as being waived. Arizona Rev. Stat. 1901, ¶¶ 1523 and 1586; Supreme Court Rules 3 and 6; 4 Ariz. ix. and xi., 35 Pac. vi. and vii.; Daggs v. Phœnix Nat. Bank, 5 Ariz. 409, 415, 53 Pac. 201; Santa Cruz County v. Barnes, 9 Ariz. 42, 49, 76 Pac. 621; Bail v. Hartman, 9 Ariz. 321, 327, 83 Pac. 358. The transcript filed here does not contain the assignments of error below, so that there is nothing to show what errors were assigned or relied upon in the territorial supreme court, except as they receive particular mention in its opinion. Confining our attention to these, the questions presented are the following:

First, it is contended that the trial court ought to have instructed the jury to return a verdict in favor of the defendant, and this upon the ground that there was no evidence to sustain a recovery, unless it could be found in the proof of the defective condition of the flange of the "pony wheel;" it being at the same time contended to be a physical impossibility that this defect in the flange could have caused the accident. The wheel itself was in evidence as an exhibit, and it was testified that the inside of the flange, where it came next to the rail, was irregularly worn; or, as a witness put it,—"cut in different places so that it is very rough, and it would have a tendency (for a person to look at it) to show hard and soft places in the wheel.' This witness declared that this condition of the wheel would cause it to "bounce and leave the track." Another witness testified that there were "three gouged-out places" in the flange, and (in effect) that if one of these should strike a protruding joint between rails [100] "the sharp edge of the flange would mount that rail and go off." It is insisted, however, that by the uncontroverted testimony the car, at the time of the accident, was traveling upon a curve towards the left, and was therefore necessarily impelled by centrifugal force towards the right, so that the defective flange was drawn away from the rail and was performing no function. The theory is that the centrifugal force must have kept the right-hand wheels constantly bearing upon the inside of the outer or right-hand rail, and that therefore, in the absence of some extraneous cause, it was impossible for the car to be thrown toward the left. We are unable to say as a conclusion of law, that such a car, while running upon a curve towards the left, at a speed of from 8 to 12 miles an hour, and with interior flanges upon the right-hand wheels preventing it from leaving the track on that side, would not be occasionally thrown with a lurch away from the right-hand rail and against the opposite rail, even were the car at the time traveling upon a constant curve. But however this may be, there was evidence from which the jury might reasonably infer that at the point where the car left the track it was just leaving the curve and going upon a tangent. At this point it might naturally be subjected to a lurch that would throw its weight with momentum against the left-hand rail, and thus bring into operation the tendency of the "pony wheel" to mount the rail because of the worn condition of the inside of the flange. And, as already mentioned, the car in fact went off the track towards the left. Therefore, upon this question, the case was properly submitted to the jury.

Digitized by Google

The motion for direction of a verdict seems to have been rested upon the additional ground that the alleged defect was so obvious that its existence must have been known to the plaintiff, and that he therefore assumed the risk. There was no direct evidence that he knew of the defect, [101] and it does not appear to have been a part of his duties to inspect the machine or the wheel, or to look after their condition. He had been employed for only three or four days in work that required him to ride upon the car, and at the utmost it was a question for the jury whether the defective condition of the wheel was so patent that he should be presumed to have known of it. And then, the question whether the defect was such as to render the use of the car dangerous was in dispute at the trial; hence, it could not be properly held that the risk was indisputably obvious, even to one who knew of the defect. It is quite clear, therefore, that a verdict could not properly have been directed in favor of the defendant upon the ground that the plaintiff, in using the car, had assumed an obvious risk.

There was a request for instructions to the effect that the plaintiff assumed the risk of injury from defects which he knew, or by the exercise of ordinary care in the discharge of his duties might have known, or which he had opportunity to know. These instructions the court refused to give, but charged the jury upon this question:

"The true test is not in the exercise of ordinary care to discover dangers, by the employee, but whether the defect is known or plainly observable by him. An employee is not charged by law with the assumption of a risk arising out of defective appliances provided by his employer, unless his employment was of such a nature as to bring to his attention and cause him to realize and comprehend the dangers incident to the use of such appliances." This, we think, was a correct instruction under the circumstances of the case. An employee assumes the risk of dangers normally incident to the occupation in which he voluntarily engages, so far as these are not attributable to the employer's negligence. But the employee has a right to assume that his employer has exercised proper care with respect to providing a safe [102] place of work, and suitable and safe appliances for the work, and is not to be treated as assuming the risk arising from a defect that is attributable to the employer's negligence, until the employee becomes aware of such defect, or unless it is so plainly observable that he may be presumed to have known of it. Moreover, in order to charge an employee with the assumption of a risk attributable to a defect due to the employer's negligence it must appear not only that he knew (or is presumed to have known) of the defect, but that he knew it endangered his safety; or else such danger must have been so obvious that an ordinarily prudent person, under the circumstances, would have appreciated it. Union P. R. Co. v. O'Brien, 161 U. S. 451, 457, 40 L. ed. 766, 770, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 618; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Archibald, 170 U. S. 665, 671, 42 L. ed. 1188, 1191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 191 U. S. 64, 68, 48 L. ed. 96, 100, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Swearingen, 196 U. S. 51, 62, 49 L. ed. 382, 387, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 422; Burns v.

Digitized by Google

Delaware & A. Teleg. & Teleph. Co. 70 N. J. L. 745, 752, 67 L.R.A. 956, 59 Atl. 220, 592, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 673.

The next error alleged is the refusal of the trial court to permit Ryan, the operator of the car, to testify to a remark made, concerning the condition of the wheel, on the day before the accident. Ryan had testified that he noticed the alleged defect at the time referred to; that he, and Hall, and one Regna, and somebody else, were present; that a conversation was had in which Regna made a remark with respect to the crack in the wheel; and that this remark was made in his natural tone of voice while Hall was less than 20 yards away and within hearing distance, and so that he could have heard it if he had been listening. It was not shown that Hall made any comment upon the car or the wheel, or made any answer to Regna's remark, or took any part in the conversation. Plaintiff's counsel objected to the admission of the conversation on the ground that it had not been established that Hall heard it, and this objection was sustained.

It is insisted that the conversation was admissible as [103] proving notice to Hall of the condition of the wheel; and so it was, provided it appeared that he heard it. Whether he did hear it was, of course, a question of fact. Plaintiff in error contends that this should have been submitted to the jury, with an instruction that if they believed Hall heard the conversation, they might take that into consideration in determining whether he knew the condition of the wheel and the effect of using it in that condition.

We agree that the testimony was such as to render it a matter of doubtful inference whether Hall heard the conversation; but we think this question of fact was one to be determined by the trial court, and not by the jury. Questions of the admissibility of evidence are for the determination of the court; and this is so whether its admission depend upon matter of law or upon matter of fact. And the finding of the trial judge upon such a preliminary question of fact is not subject to be reversed on appeal or error if it be fairly supported by the evidence, as it is in the case before us. Bartlett v. Smith, 11 Mees. & W. 483, 485, 12 L. J. Exch. N. S. 287, 7 Jur. 448, 11 Eng. Rul. Cas. 177; Doe ex dem. Jenkins v. Davies, 10 Q. B. 314, 323, 16 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 218, 11 Jur. 607; Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Edgar, 99 U. S. 648, 658, 25 L. ed. 487, 490; Stillwell & B. Mfg. Co. v. Phelps, 130 U. S. 520, 527, 32 L. ed. 1035, 1037, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601; Inland & Seaboard Coasting Co. v. Tolson, 139 U. S. 551, 559, 35 L. ed. 270, 273, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653; State v. Monich, 74 N. J. L. 522, 526, 64 Atl. 1016; State v. Tomassi, 75 N. J. L. 739, 743, 69 Atl. 214; Gorton v. Hadsell, 9 Cush. 508, 511. And see Tayloe v. Riggs, 1 Pet. 591, 597, 7 L. ed. 275, 277.

Finally, it is insisted that there was error in entering judgment in favor of the plaintiff for $5,000, after the residue of the verdict of $10,000 was remitted pending the motion for new trial. The argument is that the voluntary remission of so large an amount by the plaintiff was an admission that the verdict was excessive; that an excessive verdict may not be cured by a remitter where the amount of the damages cannot be measured by any fixed standard or determined with certainty; that a verdict so excessive [104] is conclusive evidence that it was the product of prejudice on the part of the jury, and that this vice goes to the entire verdict, and not merely to the excess. The practice, however, is recognized by the Civil Code (Ariz. Rev. Stat. 1901, ¶¶ 1450 and 1451), which permit any party in whose favor a verdict or judgment has been rendered to remit any part thereof, after which execution shall issue for the balance only of such judgment. In Northern P. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642, 646, 29 L. ed. 755, 758, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590, an action in a territorial court to recover damages for personal injuries that necessitated the amputation of a leg, there was a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $25,000, a motion for a new trial on various grounds, among others that the damages were excessive, and the court ordered that a new trial be granted unless plaintiff remitted $15,000 of the verdict, and, in case he did so, that the motion should be denied. He remitted the amount, and judgment was entered in his favor for the balance, which the supreme court of the territory affirmed. This court held that the matter was within the discretion of the court; and this even without the sanction of a statute. The constitutional question involved was re-examined in Arkansas Valley Land & Cattle Co. v. Mann, 130 U. S. 69, 73, 32 L. ed. 854, 855, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458, and the decision in the Herbert Case was adhered to, it being held that the practice under criticism did not in any just sense impair the right of trial by jury.

In Southern P. Co. v. Tomlinson, 4 Ariz. 126, 132, 33 Pac. 710, and in Southern P. Co. v. Fitchett, 9 Ariz. 128, 134, 80 Pac. 359, the general practice was sustained by the territorial supreme court. In the former case, however, it was said (4 Ariz. 132) that "if it is apparent to the trial court that the verdict was the result of passion or prejudice, a remittitur should not be allowed, but the verdict should be set aside. In passing upon this question the court should not look alone to the amount of the damages awarded, but to the whole case." In the Fitchett [105] Case, it appearing that the trial court was of the opinion that more than half of the damages awarded for the appellee's injured feelings were excessive, the supreme court held that evidently the verdict was not the result of cool and dispassionate consideration, and that the question of the proper sum to be awarded ought not to have been determined by the trial court, but should have been submitted to the determination of another jury. In the present case (13 Ariz. 276, 112 Pac. 845, 1 N. C. C. A. 362) the majority of the court declared they were not prepared to adhere to the views expressed in the Fitchett Case; that while there is authority for the position that in no case of unliquidated damages should the court permit a remission where the verdict is excessive, without the consent of the defendant, the great weight of authority supports the practice; citing the decisions of this court already referred to; and declaring that while, if it appears that the verdict is tainted with prejudice or passion, and does not represent the dispassionate judgment of the jury upon the question of the right of the plaintiff to recover, a new trial should be granted, yet the trial court is in a better position to determine this than the appellate court, so that its determination should ordinarily be accepted. We see no ground for disturbing this decision.

Digitized by Google

Judgment affirmed.

---

[106] BANK OF ARIZONA, Hugo Richards, and Moses D. Hazeltine, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

THOMAS HAVERTY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 106–110.)

Assignment — of mechanics' lien — construction.

1. Neither the exact amount of the judgment which should be recovered nor the precise status of the lien was guaranteed by an agreement between a mechanic's lienor and a mortgagee under which, if the former would prosecute its suit to judgment, the latter was to buy the claim and pay therefor, upon receiving an assignment of the judgment, a specified sum which was the amount of the claim, less the value of certain tools and heating apparatus which the lienor was at liberty to remove if the removal could be accomplished without injury to the building.

Appeal — scope of review — question not raised in intermediate appellate court.

2. A defense founded on the statute of frauds is not available in the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a territorial supreme court, even though it may have been brought to the attention of the trial court, if there is nothing in the record to show that the question was raised in the territorial supreme court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 87.]

Submitted December 4, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Maricopa County in that territory in favor of plaintiff in an action on a contract. Affirmed.

See same case below, 13 Ariz. 418, 115 Pac. 73.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Walter Bennett submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Aldis B. Browne, Alexander Britton, Evans Browne, J. L. B. Alexander, and George D. Christy submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

The Thomas Haverty Company, defendant in error, sued the Bank of Arizona in a district court of the territory of Arizona to recover $9,313.90 upon a special agreement set out in the complaint substantially as follows: That in February, 1908, the company had a claim against one John Noble for $14,306, for materials furnished and work done in the construction of the Noble Building, in Phœnix, Arizona; that the company had taken the necessary steps, under the provisions of the mechanics' lien statutes, to fix a lien upon the building and the lands on which it stood; that in March, 1908, the company instituted a suit to enforce the lien and the payment of the claim; that Noble, one Hugo Richards, and others, were joined as defendants in that action; that Richards at the time held a mortgage upon the premises, which had been given to him for the use and benefit of the Bank of Arizona, the bank being the real party in interest; that while the action was pending, and on or about November 30, 1908, it was agreed between the bank and the Haverty Company that if the NOTE.—As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

Digitized by Google

company would prosecute its suit to judgment, the bank would buy its demand and claim of [108] lien and pay the company for it the sum of $9,313.90 upon assignment of the judgment to the bank; the sum just mentioned being the amount claimed by the company ($14,306) less the sum of $4,992.10, which was the value of two boilers and a certain heating apparatus and certain tools, furnished by the Haverty Company and used in the construction of the building, and for which the company claimed a lien; which boilers, heating apparatus, and tools the company was to be at liberty to remove from the building if this could be done without injury thereto; that thereupon the company agreed to sell to the bank its demand against Noble and its claim for a lien upon the premises, and agreed to prosecute the action thereon to judgment, and to assign the judgment to the bank; that the company proceeded with its action, and recovered therein a judgment for $12,429.22, with a foreclosure of its lien; and that thereafter the company was ready and offered to assign the judgment to the bank, but the bank refused to receive it or to pay the agreed sum of $9,313.90 for it.

The bank, by demurrer to the complaint, and afterwards by answer, interposed the defense that the company had failed to perform the agreement, in that it had recovered a judgment for only $12,429.22, and that although the claim for lien set up by the company in its suit against Noble was one alleged to be prior and superior to the lien of the mortgage held by Richards for the benefit of the bank, it was by the judgment in that suit determined to be inferior and subordinate to the bank's lien.

There was a trial by jury, in the course of which it appeared that the alleged agreement, if made at all, was made between attorneys representing the Haverty Company, and attorneys representing the bank. The principal questions of fact were whether the agreement was made substantially as alleged, and, if so, then whether the bank's attorneys were specially authorized to make it, [109] or whether the bank afterwards ratified their action with knowledge of the facts. There was a verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount claimed, and, on appeal, the resulting judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory (13 Ariz. 418, 115 Pac. 73); whereupon the present writ of error was sued out.

It is insisted that the evidence fails to show that the attorneys who acted for the bank were authorized by it to enter into the alleged agreement to purchase the Haverty claim. But we think there was sufficient evidence to support the verdict of the jury in favor of plaintiff upon this question.

It is also insisted that the parties never in fact came to an agreement, because an item of about $100 for certain freight charges was left open for further consideration. But the jury was warranted by the evidence in finding that an agreement had in fact been reached before the question respecting freight was raised.

The principal contention here, as in the court below, is that the agreement alleged and proved was not performed, in that the Haverty Company did not prosecute its claim to judgment; the claim having been for $14,306, with a prior lien upon the building and lots, but subject to a deduction of $4,992.10, provided the boilers and tools could be removed without injury to the building; while the judgment recovered was for $12,429.22, with a lien subordinate to the bank's mortgage. We agree with the court below that neither the averments of the complaint nor the evidence at the trial imported a guaranty on the part of the Haverty Company as to the exact amount of the judgment or the precise status of the lien. The evidence tended to show that the agreement was made as a compromise between the bank and the Haverty Company, in view of doubts that had arisen whether in law the lien of the Haverty Company was entitled to priority over the bank's mortgage.

[110] Error is assigned respecting certain remarks made by counsel for plaintiff in addressing the jury; but if there was any impropriety it was cured by the instructions of the trial judge.

The only other point deserving notice is the contention that the motion of plaintiff in error (defendant below) for a direction of a verdict in its favor ought to have been granted because of § 4, chap. 99, p. 230, Session Laws 1907 of Arizona, which is in effect that a contract for sale of any chose in action of the value of $500 or upwards shall not be enforceable unless some note or memorandum in writing be signed by the party to be charged, or his agent. Assuming—what is not clear—that the point was brought to the attention of the trial court, it is sufficient for present purposes to say that there is nothing in the record to show that the question was raised upon the appeal to the territorial supreme court. Gila Valley Globe & N. R. Co. v. Hall, 232 U. S. 94, ante, 521, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229, and cases cited.

Judgment affirmed.

Digitized by Google

ROBERT B. ROSS and Fannie D. Ross, Plffs. in Err.,
v.
JAMES DAY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 110-117.)

Courts — conclusiveness of decisions of Land Department — question of mixed law and fact.

Whether the contestants in a Cherokee allotment contest had improved the lands in such sense as to give them a preferential right of selection under the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 716, chap. 1375), § 11, is a question of mixed law and fact the decision of which by the Secretary of the Interior is conclusive upon the courts in the absence of fraud or clear mistake of law.

[For other cases, see Courts, I. e, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 122.]

Argued December 11, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court of Washington County, in that state, in favor of defendant in a suit to have him declared to be a trustee for the plaintiffs with respect to lands in the Cherokee Nation. Affirmed.

See same case below, 29 Okla. 186, 116 Pac. 949.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Kenneth S. Murchison argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Jerre P. O'Meara argued the cause, and Mr. James A. Veasey filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought by the present plaintiffs in error for the purpose of obtaining a decree declaring the defendant in error to be a trustee for the plaintiffs with respect to the title to certain lands in the Cherokee Nation (a tract of 20 acres, and a separate tract of 10 acres within the same quarter section) that were allotted to defendant in error under the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 716, chap. 1375). The decision of the Oklahoma supreme court in favor of the latter is reported in 29 Okla. 186, 116 Pac. 949.

Plaintiffs are citizens by blood of the Cherokee Nation, and entitled to allotments under § 11 of the act; defendant is a registered Delaware, entitled to allotment under § 23. Defendant filed applications in the Cherokee Land Office for the lands in controversy on May 5, 1904, and they were set apart to him as portions of his allotment selection. Later, and on July 1 in the same year, the plaintiff, Robert B. Ross, appeared at the Land Office and made application for the same lands, a portion to be set apart to himself and a portion for his wife. These applications being refused because the lands had already been selected by defendant, plaintiffs immediately brought contests, which were consolidated and heard together by [113] the Commissioner of the Five Civilized Tribes, and he decided in favor of contestants. Upon appeal to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs this decision was affirmed. But upon a further appeal to the Secretary of the Interior there was a decision against the plaintiffs and in favor of defendant. The contests were based upon the same alleged equity upon which the present action is founded: that is, contestants, admitting the prior allotments to contestee, insisted that his application was subject to their prior right of selection upon the ground that they were the owners of improvements that were upon the property at the time contestee entered upon it. The question turns upon the effect of § 11 of the act of July 1, 1902, already referred to, which reads as follows: "There shall be allotted by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes and to each citizen of the Cherokee tribe, as soon as practicable after the approval by the Secretary of the Interior of his enrolment as herein provided, land equal in value to one hundred and ten acres of the average allottable lands of the Cherokee Nation, to conform as nearly as may be to the areas and boundaries established by the government survey, which land may be selected by each allottee so as to include his improvements."

The findings of the Secretary were as follows: That the lands in question were claimed prior to 1902 by a firm of Johnstone & Keeler, Cherokee citizens, and constituted portions of a large tract which was at one time wholly or partially inclosed by wire fence; that the members of the firm divided their holdings between them, and Keeler took that part which included the lands in contest; that on November 1, 1902, Keeler transferred his possessory interest in this land, with the improvements thereon, to the contestants by bill of sale; but at this time the fencing was pretty well down, and the land contained no improvements of material value, except that about 1½ [114] acres were under cultivation by one Bixler, a noncitizen who farmed adjacent lands, but whose improvement was not to be credited to contestants; that contestants did nothing in the way of placing improvements upon the property until March 1, 1904, when their son, Dr. Ross, visited the land, and with the assistance of a surveyor and two other persons, located the lines, and indicated them by setting posts or stakes; that these posts were cut and set by two men in about five hours; that some of the posts were about the size of a man's arm, and others were mere stakes or poles; that they were placed from 50 to 100 feet apart, except at the corners, where five posts were set in comparative proximity; the posts bounding the tracts were not joined, by wire or otherwise, so as to make a connected fence; and no further act of improvement or occupation was done in behalf of the contestants. That, on the other hand, the contestee, who had lived in the neighborhood of the land for about thirty years, and claimed to have cut timber, posts, and fuel upon it for twenty-five years past, when he learned on March 1, 1904, of the efforts made by Dr. Ross and his party to survey and inclose it, immediately purchased the necessary wire and proceeded to fence the property, cutting a part of the posts and buying part; that, he being assisted by his son, the work required about two and a half days; that in constructing this fence two wires were used for the greater part of its length, and the controverted tracts were substantially inclosed; that after thus fencing the land, and before filing thereon, he erected a three-room house at a cost of about $250 upon one of the tracts, and immediately took up his residence therein.

Digitized by Google

The Secretary of the Interior concluded that the fences upon the tracts in question at the time of the alleged purchase by the plaintiffs from Keeler were not of sufficient consequence or value in connection with the land to be entitled to be classed as improvements; that the [115] posts established by Dr. Ross, March 1, 1904, did not constitute a lawful improvement, but were merely set for the purpose of marking or defining a prospective allotment; and further, that the improvements erected by contestee, while built possibly later than the former, were of material value to the land, and also that contestee actually entered into possession.

The contention of the plaintiffs in error here, as in the court below, is that under the laws of the Cherokee Nation and the act of Congress they acquired the right of possession of the lands in controversy by virtue of the bill of sale from Keeler, dated November 1, 1902, and thereby succeeded to the same right to allot these lands that Keeler had before; that this right was made exclusive by what was done on March 1, 1904, looking to the placing of improvements upon the tracts; that this was sufficient to give notice to other citizens of the Cherokee Nation of the intention of plaintiffs to locate the lands, and that defendant was present at the time and had actual notice of the work done by Dr. Ross. Reference is made to the Constitution of the Cherokee Nation, art. I., § 2, and to its Laws (1892) §§ 706, 761, and 762. It will not be necessary to recite them at length, because all that is claimed with respect to their effect upon the present controversy was conceded or assumed in the decision of the Secretary of the Interior; that is, that citizens of the Cherokee Nation might improve portions of the public domain within the Nation, and thereby establish a prior right to the possession of the improved lands, which right might be transferred to another citizen by a sale of the improvements. The Secretary evidently construed § 11 of the act of Congress of July 1, 1902, as recognizing and confirming this right. But he held that no valuable interest was acquired by plaintiffs under the purchase from Keeler, because Keeler owned no improvements of material value. He found plaintiffs were not entitled to credit for the [116] small improvement of the noncitizen Bixler, and there is nothing before us to show that the Keeler bill of sale included the Bixler improvements, or that Bixler held as tenant either of Keeler or of plaintiffs. And he held in effect that the question of the sufficiency of what was done by contestants on March 1, 1904, depended not upon whether it was sufficient to give notice to contestee, but whether it was sufficient to constitute an improvement within the meaning of the act of Congress. And so the whole controversy in effect depended upon whether the allotment to defendant was in accord with the ownership of the actual improvements upon the land, and the fact respecting the improvements was the principal matter to be determined in the contest proceedings, wherein the final appeal was to the Secretary of the Interior.

In order to obviate the established rule that the decisions of the Executive Departments in matters confided to them by the acts of Congress are not to be disturbed by the courts unless there be allegations of fraud raised in the pleadings and established at the trial, it is contended that this rule extends only to findings upon mere questions of fact, and that the decision of the Secretary of the Interior upon the contest here in question was based solely upon an erroneous conclusion of law.

But, in our opinion, whether plaintiffs had improved the lands in such sense as to give them a preferential right under the statute was not a mere question of law, but rather a mixed question of law and fact. So far as it involved an appreciation of the term "improvements," as employed in the statute, it was a question of law; so far as it involved the drawing of correct inferences from the evidence, it was a question of fact. At best, it was a close question, about which reasonablee men might well differ.

Digitized by Google

In Whitcomb v. White, 214 U. S. 15, 16, 53 L. ed. 889, 890, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599, this court, speaking by Mr. Justice Brewer, said: "The decision of the [117] Land Department was not rested solely upon the fact that White's formal application was filed a few hours before that of the trustee for the occupants of the town site, but rather chiefly upon the priority of the former's equitable rights. So far as such decision involves questions of fact, it is conclusive upon the courts [citing cases]. And this rule is applied in cases where there is a mixed question of law and fact, unless the court is able to so separate the question as to see clearly what and where the mistake of law is. As said by Mr. Justice Miller in Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. p. 476, 25 L. ed. 800: 'This means, and it is a sound principle, that where there is a mixed question of law and of fact, and the court cannot so separate it as to see clearly where the mistake of law is, the decision of the tribunal to which the law has confided the matter is conclusive.'" And see Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 535, 24 L. ed. 848, 850; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 426, 26 L. ed. 800, 802; Gonzales v. French, 164 U. S. 338, 41 L. ed. 458, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102.

There being no fraud, and no clear mistake of law in the decision of the Secretary of the Interior, his findings are conclusive upon the parties in the present controversy.

Judgment affirmed.

BELLE J. BARNES, L. H. Manning, and Epes Randolph, Appellants,
v.
J. L. B. ALEXANDER and Mary E. Street, Executrix of Webster Street, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 117–123.)

Attorneys — lien for compensation.

An agreement by a lawyer who was prosecuting a case for a contingent fee, which was to be one fourth of the amount recovered by his clients, to give certain other lawyers one third of such fee, if and when he should receive it, if they would do certain work for him, creates a lien upon the fund as soon as received by him, in favor of such attorneys, where they had performed the agreed services.

[For other cases, see Attorneys, III. c; Liens, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 109.]

Submitted December 1, 1913. Decided January 12, 1914.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court of Cochise County, in that territory, enforcing an attorneys' lien. Affirmed.

See same case below, 13 Ariz. 338, 114 Pac. 952.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Eugene S. Ives submitted the cause for appellants:

Unless the facts alleged amounted to an equitable assignment, the interveners cannot recover.

Horn v. Volcano Water Co. 13 Cal. 62, 73 Am. Dec. 569; Yetzer v. Young, 3 S. D. 263, 52 N. W. 1054; Lewis v. Harwood, 28 Minn. 428, 10 N. W. 586; McClurg v. State Bindery Co. 3 S. D. 362, 44 Am. St. Rep. 799, 53 N. W. 428; Chapman v. Forbes, 123 N. Y. 532, 26 N. E. 3.

The test of an assignment, legal or equitable, is the right of the assignee to bring a direct action against the primary debtor to recover the interest claimed by him to have been assigned.

Christmas v. Russell (Christmas v. Gaines) 14 Wall. 69, 84, 20 L. ed. 762, 764; Dillon v. Barnard, 21 Wall. 430, 22 L. ed. 673; Trist v. Child (Burke v. Child) 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. ed. 623; Smedley v. Speckman, 85 C. C. A. 179, 157 Fed. 815; Canty v. Latterner, 31 Minn. 239, 17 N. W. 385; Silent Friend Min. Co. v. Abbot, 7 Colo. App. 76, 42 Pac. 318; Kelley v. Newman, 79 Ill. App. 285; 3 Pom. Eq. Jur. pp. 2567, 2568, note 1; Ingersoll v. Coram, 211 U. S. 365, 53 L. ed. 228, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Walker v. Brown, 165 U. S. 654, 41 L. ed. 865, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453.

The claim of the interveners is a personal one against the firm of Barnes & Martin, and their failure to present it against the estate of Barnes bars them from asserting it against his legatee, the plaintiff, the estate being closed.

Nagle v. Ball, 71 Miss. 330, 13 So. 929; Hill v. Nichols, 47 Minn. 382, 50 N. W. 367.

It was error to allow proof of payments made to plaintiff subsequent to the filing of the complaint in intervention.

Todd v. Meding, 56 N. J. Eq. 83, 38 Atl. 349; Tone Bros. v. Shankland, 110 Iowa, 525, 81 N. W. 789; 21 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 9; Wisner v. Ocumpaugh, 71 N. Y. 113; Styles v. Fuller, 101 N. Y. 622, 4 N. E. 348; Mellor v. Smither, 52 C. C. A. 64, 114 Fed. 116.

NOTE.—On attorneys' liens—see note to Texas v. White, 19 L. ed. U. S. 992.

Digitized by Google

The ordinary rule is that where an attorney employs another to assist him, the client is under no obligation to compensate the latter, in the absence of an agreement, express or implied, to that effect. And no inference can be drawn that there is such an agreement from the mere fact that the attorney so employed appears in court and assists in the conduct of litigation, with the knowledge of the client, and without objection.

Porter v. Elizalde, 125 Cal. 204, 57 Pac. 899; Price v. Hay, 132 Ill. 543, 24 N. E. 620.

The familiar agreement between real estate brokers to act together in making a sale, and to divide the commissions, furnishes an analogy. In such cases the principal is liable only to the broker originally employed, and the other must look to his fellow broker for his compensation.

J. B. Watkins Land Mortg. Co. v. Thetford, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 536, 93 S. W. 72; Morse v. Traynor, 26 Neb. 594, 42 N. W. 719; Carroll v. Tucker, 2 Misc. 397, 21 N. Y. Supp. 952.

Messrs. J. L. B. Alexander, William M. Seabury, Aldis B. Browne, Alexander Britton, and Evans Browne submitted the cause for appellees:

The granting of the right to intervene is purely discretionary with the trial court.

London, P. & A. Bank v. Abrams, 6 Ariz. 90, 53 Pac. 588.

The construction placed upon a local statute by a territorial supreme court will be adopted by this court and will not be disturbed in the absence of manifest error in such construction.

Sweeney v. Lomme, 22 Wall. 208, 213, 22 L. ed. 727, 728; Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v. Territorial Bd. of Equalization, 206 U. S. 474, 51 L. ed. 1143, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695; Kealoha v. Castle, 210 U. S. 149, 153, 154, 52 L. ed. 998, 1001, 1002, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 684; Treat v. Grand Canyon R. Co. 222 U. S. 448, 452, 56 L. ed. 265, 266, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125; English v. Arizona, 214 U. S. 359, 361, 363, 53 L. ed. 1030, 1032, 1033, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Fox v. Haarstick, 156 U. S. 674, 39 L. ed. 576, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457; Clason v. Matko, 223 U. S. 646, 653, 56 L. ed. 588, 593, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392; Armijo v. Armijo, 181 U. S. 558, 561, 45 L. ed. 1000, 1002, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707; Santa Fe County v. New Mexico, 215 U. S. 296, 305, 54 L. ed. 202, 207, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Albright v. Sandoval, 216 U. S. 331, 339, 54 L. ed. 502, 508, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Sandoval v. Randolph, 222 U. S. 161, 164, 56 L. ed. 143, 144, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48.

Jurisdiction upon appeals taken under the act of April 7, 1874, is confined and limited to an inspection of findings of fact to see if the findings support the judgment, and to a review of the exceptions which were duly taken to the rulings of the trial court upon the admission and exclusion of evidence.

Young v. Amy, 171 U. S. 179, 183, 43 L. ed. 127, 128, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Harrison v. Perea, 168 U. S. 311, 323, 42 L. ed. 478, 482, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129; Mammoth Min. Co. v. Salt Lake Foundry & Mach. Co. 151 U. S. 447, 450, 38 L. ed. 229, 230, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384; San Pedro & C. del A. Co. v. United States, 146 U. S. 120, 131, 36 L. ed. 911, 914, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; Apache County v. Barth, 177 U. S. 538, 542, 44 L. ed. 878, 879, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Bear Lake & River Waterworks & Irrig. Co. v. Garland, 164 U. S. 1, 18, 41 L. ed. 327, 334, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7; Grayson v. Lynch, 163 U. S. 468, 473, 41 L. ed. 230, 232, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Haws v. Victoria Copper Min. Co. 160 U. S. 303, 312, 313, 40 L. ed. 436, 439, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Stringfellow v. Cain, 99 U. S. 610, 25 L. ed. 421; Neslin v. Wells, F. & Co. 104 U. S. 428, 429, 26 L. ed. 802, 803; Idaho & O. Land Improv. Co. v. Bradbury, 132 U. S. 509, 514, 515, 33 L. ed. 433, 436, 437, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; Eagle Min. & Improv. Co. v. Hamilton, 218 U. S. 513, 515, 54 L. ed. 1131, 1132, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27.

The interveners had an interest in the subject-matter of the suit, and such interest consisted in an ownership of a part of the subject-matter of the litigation. Under such circumstances it is well settled that, irrespective of statute, the interveners had a right to intervene in this cause.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Eldredge, 35 Tex. Civ. App. 467, 80 S. W. 556; Lewis v. Harwood, 28 Minn. 428, 10 N. W. 586; Yetzer v. Young, 3 S. D. 263, 52 N. W. 1054; McClurg v. State Bindery Co. 3 S. D. 362, 44 Am. St. Rep. 799, 53 N. W. 428.

There was no agreement to pay personally in the future, no agreement to pay a sum equal to one third, but an offer to give (presently, of course, although to be enjoyed in the future) one third of the fee itself if the interveners would agree to do certain things. They accepted the offer and fully performed its terms, and thereupon and thereby there was a completed, finished, and executed agreement which made the interveners the equitable owners of one third of the fee.

Fairbanks v. Sargent, 104 N. Y. 108, 58 Am. Rep. 490, 9 N. E. 870, 117 N. Y. 320, 6 L.R.A. 475, 22 N. E. 1039; Williams v.

Digitized by Google

Ingersoll, 89 N. Y. 508; Boyle v. Boyle, 106 N. Y. 654, 12 N. E. 709; Thomas v. New York & G. L. R. Co. 139 N. Y. 179, 34 N. E. 880; Chester v. Jumel, 125 N. Y. 237, 26 N. E. 297; Holmes v. Evans, 129 N. Y. 140, 29 N. E. 233; Wright v. Wright, 70 N. Y. 98; Ingersoll v. Coram, 211 U. S. 365, 53 L. ed. 228, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Wylie v. Coxe, 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753. See Seymour v. Freer, 8 Wall. 214, 19 L. ed. 310; Louisville ex rel. Cary, E. & St. L. R. Co. v. Wilson, 138 U. S. 501, 506, 507, 34 L. ed. 1023, 1025, 1026, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 405; Walker v. Brown, 165 U. S. 654, 664, 41 L. ed. 865, 870, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453; Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Yardley, 165 U. S. 634, 644, 41 L. ed. 855, 861, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439; Ketchum v. St. Louis, 101 U. S. 306, 25 L. ed. 999; Cowdrey v. Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. 93 U. S. 352, 355, 23 L. ed. 950, 952; Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Pettus, 113 U. S. 116, 127, 128, 28 L. ed. 915, 919, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; Semmes v. Whitney, 50 Fed. 666; Mahone v. Southern Teleg. Co. 33 Fed. 702; Louisville ex rel. Carey, E. & St. L. R. Co. v. Wilson, 138 U. S. 507, 34 L. ed. 1025, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 405; Frink v. McComb, 60 Fed. 486; Smith v. Young, 62 Ill. 210; Cooke v. Thresher, 51 Conn. 105; Hoffman v. Vallejo, 45 Cal. 564; Blakey v. New York L. Ins. Co. 28 Ind. App. 428, 63 N E. 47; Bogert v. Adams, 8 Colo. App. 185, 45 Pac. 235; Patten v. Wilson, 34 Pa. 299; Wilson v. Seeber, 72 N. J. Eq. 523, 66 Atl. 909; Bank of New Hanover v. Williams, 79 N. C. 136; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Eldredge, 35 Tex. Civ. App. 467, 80 S. W. 556; Harwood v. La Grange, 137 N. Y. 538, 32 N. E. 1000.

Attorneys, being equitable assignees of a fund or the proceeds of litigation charged with their lien, may pursue the subject of the lien wherever it may be found. The right to pursue the fund is elementary when it is found to be in the hands of a person who, like the plaintiff here, took the subject thereof with full notice and knowledge of the existence of the lien.

Hoffman v. Vallejo, 45 Cal. 564; Templeman v. Gresham, 61 Tex. 53; Peticolas v. Carpenter, 53 Tex. 23.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

The proceeding out of which this case arises was brought by the appellant, Mrs. Barnes, for an account of the property [119] received in settlement of certain mining suits and for a recovery of one fourth of the same. The defendants, Shattuck, Hanninger, and Marks, were parties to these suits, and employed as their attorneys the firm of Barnes & Martin and one O'Connell under an agreement that the lawyers should have as their compensation one fourth of all that was received by the said defendants. It may be assumed that Mrs. Barnes represented this claim. While the present suit was pending another firm, whose claim now is represented by the appellees, intervened and claimed one third of this contingent fee of one fourth. At the trial it appeared that the original defendants had paid to O'Connell the amount due; $18,750. Pending the suit O'Connell paid over $10,625 of this to Mrs. Barnes, retaining $6,250, and paying Martin, the junior member of the firm of Barnes & Martin, $1,875. The court entered no decree against the original defendants, but did decree that Mrs. Barnes was liable to the appellees for $6,250, being one third of the contingent fee. She appealed to the supreme court of the territory, but it affirmed the judgment below. 13 Ariz. 338, 114 Pac. 952. The other two appellants in this court are the sureties on her supersedeas bond.

The main question is whether the facts set forth in the findings certified justify the conclusion of the courts below. The whole matter rests on conversations, in one of which Barnes said to Street and Alexander: "If you will attend to this case I will give you one third of the fee which I have coming to me on a contingent fee from Shattuck, Hanninger, and Marks. Mr. O'Connell, who is associated with me, is entitled to the other third." In others also he explained what his firm was to have, and told Street and Alexander that they should get one third of that if they would do certain work that he had not time to attend to. Street and Alexander did the work required, it does not matter whether it was more or less;—there [120] was some attempt to raise a question about the fact, but we regard it as beyond dispute. The only serious argument is that, whatever they did, their compensation depended upon a personal promise that gave them no specific claim against the fund. For this proposition reliance is placed upon Trist v. Child (Burke v. Child) 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. ed. 623. In that case Child had an agreement with Trist that Child should take charge of a claim of Trist before Congress, and should receive 25 per cent of whatever sum Congress might allow. The suit alleged a lien on the sum allowed, and prayed that Trist might be enjoined from withdrawing the money from the Treasury, and might be decreed to pay the amount due. The bill was dismissed on the ground that the contract was illegal, but it was added that Child had no lien because it was forbidden by act of Congress, and also, it was said, because there was no sufficient appropriation of the fund, so that the only remedy, if there had been one, would have been at law. Wright v. Ellison, 1 Wall. 16, 17 L. ed. 555; Christmas v. Russell, 14 Wall. 69, 20 L. ed. 762. This decision, so far as it concerns us here, seems to have overlooked Wylie v. Coxe, 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753, which decided that a contract for a contingent fee out of a fund awarded constituted a lien upon the fund. The remarks in Trist v. Child were not necessary to the decision, which was placed mainly on other grounds, so that at least we are warranted in treating the question as it large.

Digitized by Google

It would be a strong thing to decide that there was nothing to warrant the conclusion, whether of law or fact, sanctioned by the highest court of a territory that since has become a state, upon a matter no longer subject to review by us. See Phœnix R. Co. v. Landis (Dec. 22, 1913 [231 U. S. 578, ante, 377, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179]), But it might be our duty, and we pass that consideration by. We start, however, with the principle that an informal business transaction should be construed as adopting whatever form consistent with the facts is most fitted to reach the result seemingly desired. Sexton v. [121] Kessler & Co. 225 U. S. 90, 96, 97, 56 L. ed. 995, 999, 1000, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657. Obviously the only thing intended or desired was to give the appellees a claim to one third of the fund received by Barnes if and when he should receive it. It is true that there was in a sense a res as to which present words of transfer might have been used. There was a right vested in Barnes, unless discharged, to try to earn a fee contingent upon success. But in a speculation of this sort the parties naturally turned their eyes toward the future and aimed at the fruits when they should be gained. They therefore used words of contract rather than of conveyance; but the important thing is not whether they used the present or the future tense, but the scope of the contract. In this case it aimed only at the fund. Barnes gave no general promise of reward; he did not even give a promise qualified and measured by success to pay anything out of his own property, referring to the fund simply as the means that would enable him to do it. See National City Bank v. Hotchkiss, 231 U. S. 50, 57, ante, 115, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20. He promised only that if, when, and as soon as he should receive an identified fund, one third of it should go to the appellees. But he promised that. At the latest, the moment the fund was received the contract attached to it as if made at that moment. It is an ancient principle even of the common law that words of covenant may be construed as a grant when they concern a present right. Sharington v. Strotton, 1 Plowd. 298, 308; Hogan v. Barry, 143 Mass. 538, 10 N. E. 253; Ladd v. Boston, 151 Mass. 585, 588, 21 Am. St. Rep. 481, 24 N. E. 858. And it is one of the familiar rules of equity that a contract to convey a specific object even before it is acquired will make the contractor a trustee as soon as he gets a title to the thing. Mornington v. Keane, 2 DeG. & J. 292, 313, 27 L. J. Ch. N. S. 791 4 Jur. N. S. 981, 6 Week. Rep. 434; Holroyd v. Marshall, 10 H. L. Cas. 191, 211, 33 L. J. Ch. N. S. 193, 9 Jur. N. S. 213, 7 L. T. N. S. 172, 11 Week. Rep. 171, 10 Eng. Rul. Cas. 420.

The obligation of Barnes was as definitely limited to payment out of the fund as if the limitation had been stated in words, and therefore creates a lien upon the [122] principle not only of Wylie v. Coxe, supra, but of Ingersoll v. Coram, 211 U. S. 335, 365–368, 53 L. ed. 208, 229, 230, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, which cites it and later cases. See further to the same point, Burn v. Carvalho, 4 Myl. & C. 690, 702, 703, 3 Jur. 1141; Rodick v. Gandell, 1 DeG. M. & G. 763, 777, 778, 12 Beav. 325, 19 L. J. Ch. N. S. 113, 13 Jur. 1087; Harwood v. La Grange, 137 N. Y. 538, 540, 32 N. E. 1000. It is suggested that there is an American doctrine opposed to that which is established in England. We know of no such opposition. There is or ought to be but one rule,—that suggested by plain good sense.

After making their contracts the parties seem to have construed them as we have done. Barnes wrote to his partner, when they had succeeded in the cases concerned, in terms showing that he regarded their own claim as specific, "to have one fourth of the ground," the principle on which this suit was brought; and when a settlement was to be made he went to Phœnix and notified Street and Alexander. For the same reason the latter firm filed no claim against the estate of Barnes, thinking that it owed them nothing, but that they had one third of the contingent fee. It is not necessary to consider whether the lien attached to what we have called the res, before the fund was received, as a covenant to set apart rents and profits creates a lien upon the land. Legard v. Hodges, 1 Ves. Jr. 477, 4 Bro. Ch. 421. It is enough that it attached not later than that moment. We have considered the case upon the merits. The argument upon them for the appellants is mixed with others as to the sufficiency of the complaint in intervention. Upon the point of pleading we see no occasion to go behind the decision below. Phœnix R. Co. v. Landis, No. 61. Dec. 22, 1913 [231 U. S. 578, ante, 377, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179].

Another matter argued is that the appellees should not have been allowed to prove the payment made after the suit was begun. But the appellees properly were allowed to intervene in a suit to recover the fund. Rev. Stat. (Ariz.) 1901, § 1278; London, P. & A. Bank v. Abrams, 6 Ariz. 87, 90, 53 Pac. 588; Louisville, E. & St. [123] L. R. Co. v. Wilson, 138 U. S. 501, 34 L. ed. 1023, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 405. Even if their lien was only inchoate when the suit was begun (which we do not intimate), they had a right to protect their interest, and of course were not deprived of it by the plaintiff's reaching the result that they also desired. Having a lien upon the fund, as soon as it was identified they could follow it into the hands of the appellant Barnes. On this point also we shall go into no question of pleading or procedure, but shall accept the decision of the territorial supreme court.

Digitized by Google

The only remaining objection that seems to us to need a word of answer is that, as Mrs. Barnes only received $10,625, she should not have been charged with the whole third, $6,250. As the lien of the appellees attached to the whole two thirds of the quarter remaining to Barnes and Martin after taking out O'Connell's third, we do not see on what ground she could complain, if the objection is open. It seems probable that it is only an after-thought of counsel, and that the sum retained by Martin was what would come to him after deducting the share of Street and Alexander's fee that properly fell upon him as between him and his former partner's estate.

Judgment affirmed.

---

[124] JOHN W. CAIN, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMERCIAL PUBLISHING COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 124-134.)

Removal of causes — question open in Federal court — service of process.

1. The validity of the service of process upon a foreign corporate defendant may be raised in a Federal district court by a special plea to the jurisdiction after the cause has been removed to that court from a state court on the petition of such defendant, since the requirement of the Judicial Code (36 Stat. at L. 1095, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 142), § 29, that the party removing the cause shall, within thirty days, "plead, answer, or demur to the declaration or complaint," must be deemed to include a plea to the jurisdiction,—especially in view of the provision of § 38 of the Code, that in all suits removed the district court shall proceed therein as if the suit had been originally commenced in that court, "and the same proceedings had been taken in such suit in said district court as shall have been had therein in said state court prior to its removal."

[For other cases, see Removal of Causes, IX., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appearance — waiver of illegal service — case removed from state court to Federal court.

2. The filing by defendant of a petition for a removal of the cause from a Mississippi court to a Federal district court, and a special appearance in the Federal court by a plea to the jurisdiction over the person of the defendant, raising the question of the validity of the service of process, do not, because of the conformity act (U. S. Rev. Stat. § 914, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 684), amount to a general appearance which shall be considered a waiver of any objection to the jurisdiction, although, by Miss. Code 1906, § 3946, all appearances are general, even though process be invalidly served.

[For other cases, see Appearance, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 797.]

Submitted January 6, 1914. Decided January 19, 1914.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Mississippi to review a judgment quashing service of process in an action for libel which had been removed to that court from the Circuit Court of Hinds County, in the State of Mississippi. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Marcellus Green submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. Garner Wynn Green and Marcellus Green, Jr., were on the brief:

The words, "plead, answer, or demur to the declaration or complaint," cover both common-law, code, and equity proceedings, and mean a plea or demurrer to the declaration, and cannot mean a plea in abatement to the service of the writ.

A plea in abatement to the jurisdiction of the court for want of service upon the defendant is a plea in abatement to the writ, and is not a plea to the declaration.

Thornton v. Fitzhugh, 10 Smedes & M. 438; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 29 Fed. 17; Chamberlain v. Lake, 36 Me. 388.

If the defect appears upon the face of the record, a motion to dismiss the suit for want of service of the writ is a proper remedy.

Wabash Western R. Co. v. Brow, 164 U. S. 271.

NOTE.—On appearance to give jurisdiction over foreign corporation—see notes to [illegible] v. Southern R. Co. 70 L.R.A. 536, [illegible]thern P. R. Co. 70 L.R.A.

Digitized by Google

S. 280, 41 L. ed. 435, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126; Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559.

The evils of delay and expense in the proceedings in removed causes under the former removal acts had grown up, and the amendment by the Judicial Code, §§ 29 and 38, was to expedite and compel a speedy hearing on the merits, and to abolish delay in removal proceedings under the practice theretofore prevailing, whereby a party could appear, either generally or specially, in his petition to remove (Wabash Western R. Co. v. Brow and Goldey v. Morning News, supra), in answer to the service of the summons, and apparently be in court, and file his petition for removal on the ground of diverse citizenship, and thus defeat a speedy trial in the state court, and then, after much delay, upon removal, defeat a trial in the United States court on the ground that while he had appeared before the state court and had consumed its time and expense and the exercise of its jurisdiction in his behalf, he was really not in court because not properly served with process, and then consume the time and expense and exercise of jurisdiction of the Federal court by invoking, by motion, the court's jurisdiction to dismiss the cause, and thus compel plaintiff to go upon a fool's errand.

The statutes of pleading, practice, and procedure of the state of Mississippi constitute a part of the jurisprudence of the United States courts when not in conflict therewith, and under Miss. Code 1906, § 3946, the filing of the petition for removal in the state court, even though a special entry of appearance, constituted a general entry of appearance, and upon removal, under §§ 29 and 38 of the Judicial Code, the defendant was compelled to plead to the declaration within thirty days after the filing of the record.

Boston & M. R. Co. v. Gokey, 210 U. S. 155, 162, 163, 52 L. ed. 1002, 1004, 1005, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657.

And with the same construction as is given by the state court.

Iowa C. R. Co. v. Hampton Electric Light & P. Co. 123 C. C. A. 283, 204 Fed. 966.

A special is a general entry of appearance under Miss. Code 1906, § 3946.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Swanson, 92 Miss. 492, 46 So. 83.

A Texas statute of similar import as § 3946 was held to be constitutional and its application given effect in York v. Texas, 137 U. S. 15, 34 L. ed. 604, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9.

This Texas statute conflicted with the express provisions of the Federal statutes, especially as to the venue of the jurisdiction in the Federal court, and the Federal statutes were held to prevail, but only to the extent of the conflict.

Southern P. Co. v. Denton, 146 U. S. 202, 36 L. ed. 943, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Gonzales, 151 U. S. 496, 38 L. ed. 248, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401.

The rule followed in Wabash Western R. Co. v. Brow, 164 U. S. 271, 41 L. ed. 431, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126, and Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559, obtained in states other than states in which a statute like § 3946 of the Code of 1906 prevailed, and these cases are distinguishable because of this fact, as well as because they arose before the amendment by the Judicial Code.

Mr. Lovick P. Miles submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. Luke E. Wright, Roane Waring, and Sam P. Walker were on the brief:

The construction of the Judicial Code insisted upon by plaintiff in error would be not only in conflict with the express language of § 38 of that Code, but would overrule a long-established practice and destroy a great right which, by repeated decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, has become fixed in our people.

Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, 215 U. S. 439, 54 L. ed. 274, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125; Wabash Western R. Co. v. Brow, 164 U. S. 271, 278, 41 L. ed. 431, 434, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126; Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559.

It has been expressly recognized that just such plea to the jurisdiction as was filed in the instant case raised a question of jurisdiction reviewable by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Remington v. Central P. R. Co. 198 U. S. 95, 49 L. ed. 959, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, 215 U. S. 440, 54 L. ed. 275, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125.

The statutes of Mississippi and the decisions of its courts are not conclusive upon Federal courts in determining whether the defendant was suable in the state of Mississippi, or whether Earl K. Williams or A. C. Walthall were persons upon whom service of summons could be had, so as to give jurisdiction of the defendant. Nor would any statute of the state of Mississippi give jurisdiction where facts necessary to give a Federal court jurisdiction did not exist.

Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, 215 U. S. 440, 54 L. ed. 275, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125; Peterson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 841, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Green v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 205 U. S. 530, 51 L. ed. 916, 27 Sup.

Digitized by Google

Ct. Rep. 595; Wold v. J. B. Colt Co. 102 Minn. 518, 114 N. W. 244.

[128] Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action for libel brought in the circuit court of Hinds county, first district, state of Mississippi. Plaintiff in error (as he was plaintiff in the action, we will so refer to him), alleged himself to be a citizen of the state of Mississippi; that defendant in error, Commercial Publishing Company (referred to herein as defendant), published a libel against him in its "newspaper called the Commercial Appeal, in the city of Memphis, state of Tennessee, but that the said Commercial Appeal has a large circulation throughout the state of Mississippi and of adjoining states and among foreign cities, and also in foreign countries." $10,000 actual damages were prayed and $10,000 punitive damages.

Summons was issued and returned, served by the sheriff of the county, as: "Executed personally on the Commercial Publishing Company" by delivering a copy to E. K. Williams, described as "its agent, at Jackson, Mississippi," and to A. C. Walthall, described as "its correspondent, at Jackson, Mississippi."

Defendant filed a petition for removal of the action to the district court of the United States, which petition stated the nature of the action, that plaintiff was a resident and citizen of Mississippi, that defendant was a corporation chartered under and by virtue of the laws of Tennessee, that the time for answering or pleading to the declaration had not expired, that defendant had not appeared therein, and that defendant appeared only specially, and for the sole purpose of requesting the removal of the cause to the district court of the United States, and that it did not waive any objections or exceptions to the jurisdiction. A bond, as required by law, was duly given, which was approved, and an order of removal was duly made. The copy of the record was duly filed in the [129] district court of the United States. The defendant then filed in the latter court a plea to the jurisdiction over the person of defendant, appearing specially for that purpose. The plea alleged that the state court had not acquired jurisdiction of the defendant, because (a) it was a corporation of the state of Tennessee, and that it had never taken out a license to do business in Mississippi, nor, at the time of the service of the summons, did it have an agent, office, or place of business in Hinds county, state of Mississippi; (b) the persons upon whom service was made were neither agents nor officers of, nor in any relation to, defendant, for the reason that defendant was not doing business in the state of Mississippi.

Plaintiff demurred to the plea, stating as grounds (1) that it was directed to the service of process, and not to the declaration, as required under § 29 of the Judicial Code [36 Stat. at L. 1095, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 142]; (2) no right exists to enter a special appearance in the Hinds county circuit court under the laws of the state of Mississippi, all appearances being general, even though process be invalidly served.

The demurrer was overruled and issue joined on the plea to the jurisdiction, and the court, having heard the evidence, decided that neither of the persons upon whom summons was served was such an agent of defendant that service upon him would give jurisdiction over the person of defendant, and thereupon found the issue for defendant.

Before judgment was entered, plaintiff called up his motion for judgment for default because defendant had not pleaded or demurred to the declaration within thirty days after the filing of the copy of the record of removal, as required by § 29 of the Judicial Code. The motion was overruled, the court reciting in its order that it was of "opinion that defendant was not required to plead or demur to the declaration unless the process of summons in the state court was duly served upon an agent of defendant [130] upon whom service of process was authorized to be made."

Judgment was then entered, quashing the service of process and dismissing the action "without prejudice to the right of plaintiff to sue upon the causes of action set up in the declaration."

Plaintiff prayed a writ of error to this court upon the question of jurisdiction. It was allowed in open court, the court reciting that it was allowed on the question of jurisdiction only, the court having dismissed the action "on the sole question that the court had no jurisdiction of the action."

The question in the case is the simple one of what is the effect of §§ 29 and 38 of the Judicial Code. Section 29 provides for the filing of a petition for the removal of a suit from a state court to the district court of the United States at any time before the defendant is required by the laws of the state to answer or plead, and the filing therewith of a bond for "entering in such district court, within thirty days from the date of filing said petition, a certified copy of the record in such suit." It provides that, this being done, the state court shall accept the petition and bond and "proceed no further in such suit." It provides further that notice of the petition and bond shall be given to the adverse party, and that "the said copy being entered within said thirty days, as aforesaid, in said district court of the United States, the parties so removing the said cause shall, within thirty days thereafter, plead, answer, or demur to the declaration or complaint in said cause, and the cause shall then proceed in the same manner as if it had been originally commenced in the said district court."

Digitized by Google

Section 38 provides that the district court, in suits so removed, shall "proceed therein as if the suit had been originally commenced in said district court and the same proceedings had been taken in such suit in said [131] district court as shall have been had therein in said state court prior to its removal."

The argument is that these sections abolish the practice declared in Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559, and Wabash Western R. Co. v. Brow, 164 U. S. 271, 41 L. ed. 431, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126. In the former case the following propositions were laid down: (1) The right and procedure of removal of actions from a state court are to be determined by the Federal law. (2) The legislature or the judiciary of a state can neither defeat the right nor limit its effect. (3) The act of Congress by which the practice, pleadings, and forms and modes of proceeding in actions at law in the courts of the United States are required to conform as near as may be to those existing in the state courts applies only to cases of which the court has jurisdiction according to the Constitution and laws of the United States. (4) A suit must be actually pending in a state court before it can be removed, but its removal to the court of the United States does not admit that it was rightfully pending in the state court, or that the defendant could have been compelled to answer therein; but enables the defendant to avail himself in the United States court of any and every defense duly and seasonably reserved and pleaded to the action "'in the same manner as if it had been originally commenced in said circuit court.'" The words quoted, it will be observed, are repeated in § 29, "district court" being substituted for "circuit court."

In Wabash Western R. Co. v. Brow, 164 U. S. 271, 279, 41 L. ed. 431, 434, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126, it is said: "By the exercise of the right of removal, the petitioner refuses to permit the state court to deal with the case in any way, because he prefers another forum to which the law gives him the right to resort. This may be said to challenge the jurisdiction of the state court, in the sense of declining to submit to it, and not necessarily otherwise.

"We are of opinion that the filing of a petition for [132] removal does not amount to a general appearance, but to a special appearance only."

Subsequent cases have applied this ruling. Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, 215 U. S. 437, 54 L. ed. 272, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125, and cases cited therein.

It is contended, however, as we have seen, that §§ 29 and 38 of the Judicial Code have instituted a new and more expeditious practice. This is deduced from that part of § 29 which provides that the party desiring to remove a case shall make and file with his petition a bond for entering in the district court, within thirty days from the date of filing his petition, a certified copy of the record, written notice thereof to be given the adverse party, and the copy of the record being so entered, "the parties so removing the said cause shall, within thirty days thereafter, plead, answer, or demur to the declaration or complaint in said cause. . . ."

The purpose of these provisions, which are an amendment to the prior law, it is contended, is to expedite trials and preclude a defendant from preventing a speedy trial in the state court by removal proceedings and "then consume the time and expense and exercise of jurisdiction of the Federal court by invoking, by motion, the court's jurisdiction to dismiss the cause, and thus compel plaintiff to go upon a fool's errand." To prevent this consequence, it is further insisted, the record was required to be filed within thirty days from the date of filing the petition for removal, which, necessarily, it is said, would be in vacation, and that therefore the requirement that within thirty days after it is filed the defendant "shall plead, answer, or demur to the declaration or complaint in said cause" necessarily means "a plea or demurrer to the declaration, and cannot mean a plea in abatement to the service of the writ."

It may be conceded that the purpose of the amendment was to secure expedition in the disposition of the [133] case, but a revolution in the practice and efficacy of the right of removal is not lightly to be inferred. And a revolution it would be. It would take from the Federal courts the power they have possessed under the cases cited,—a power not only to pass upon the merits of the case, but upon the validity of the service of process; that is, upon the question of jurisdiction over the person of the defendant. How essential this power is to the right of removal is obvious. Without it a state could prescribe any process or notice, or a plaintiff, as in the pending case, serve process on a person having no relation with a defendant, and compel him to submit to it and to a jurisdiction not of his residence, or give up his right to take the case to what, in contemplation of law, may be a more impartial tribunal for the determination of the action instituted against him, and which it is the purpose of the removal proceedings to secure to him; and, it must be assumed, completely, not by surrender of any of his rights, but in protection and security of all of them.

Digitized by Google

The weakness of plaintiff's contention is demonstrated not only when we consider all of the language of § 29, but the language of § 38, which provides that in all suits removed the district court shall proceed therein as if the suit had been originally commenced in the district court, "and the same proceedings had been taken in such suit in said district court as shall have been had therein in said state court prior to its removal." In other words, the cause is transferred to the district court as it stands in the state court and the defendant is enabled to avail himself in the latter court of any defenses, and, within the time designated, plead to the action "in the same manner as if it had been originally commenced in said district court." And these words, we have seen, were explicitly given such effect in the cited cases.

It is clear, therefore, that plaintiff gives too restrictive a meaning to the word "plead" in § 29. It must be construed [134] to include a plea to the jurisdiction, and, so construing it, all of the provisions for removal of causes become accordant and their purposes fulfilled,—the right of a speedy disposition of the suit to the plaintiff, and the right of the defendant to have all questions determined by the Federal tribunal.

Plaintiff further contends that, under the Mississippi Code, the filing of the petition for removal constitutes a general entry of appearance; that therefore, if § 29 does not compel the removing party to plead to the declaration within thirty days, "then, under § 914, U. S. Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 684, the 'practice, pleadings, forms, and modes of proceeding' in the state court, adopted in the Federal Court, would make the plea to the jurisdiction here in the district court a general entry of appearance, and would require a plea to the merits at the next term of the district court under the Code of the state," because "a special is a general entry of appearance under § 3946, Code of 1906."

The contention is untenable. Goldey v. Morning News, and Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, supra.

Judgment affirmed.

ROBERT C. BACON, William R. Warner, Park H. Pollard, Public Service Commission of the State of Vermont, Appts.,

v.

RUTLAND RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 134–138.)

Federal courts — enjoining order of public service commission — exhausting remedy in state court.

A Federal district court may entertain a suit by a railway company to restrain the Vermont public service commission from enforcing its order concerning a passenger station as violative of the Federal Constitution, although the company has not taken the appeal from the order to the supreme court of the state that is provided for by Vt. Pub. Stat. 1906, §§ 4599, 4600, since it is apparent on the face of these sections that they do not attempt to confer legislative powers upon the court, but only provide an alternative and more expeditious way of doing what might be done by a bill in equity.

[For other cases, see Courts, VI. d, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 760.]

Argued January 9, 1914. Decided January 19, 1914.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the District of Vermont to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of an order of the state public service commission. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John Spalding Flannery, William Hitz, and Robert C. Bacon, filed a brief for appellants.

Mr. Edwin W. Lawrence argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill in equity, brought by the appellee, the railroad company, to restrain the Public Service Commission of Vermont from enforcing an order concerning a passenger station of the company at Vergennes. The order is alleged to violate the 14th Amendment. The commission moved to dismiss the bill on the ground that until the appellee had taken the appeal from the order to the supreme court of the state that is provided [137] for by Pub. Stat. (Vt.) 1906, §§ 4599, 4600, it ought not to be heard to complain elsewhere. The motion was overruled, and the defendants not desiring to plead, an injunction was issued as prayed.

The defendants rely upon Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 210, 229, 230, 53 L. ed. 150, 160, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

Digitized by Google

The ground of that decision was that by the state Constitution an appeal to the supreme court of appeals from an order of the state corporation commission, fixing rates, was granted, with power to the court to substitute such order as, in its opinion, the commission should have made. The court was given legislative powers, and it was held that in the circumstances it was proper, before resorting to the circuit court of the United States, to make sure that the officials of the state would try to establish an unconstitutional rule. But it was laid down expressly that at the judicial stage the railroads had a right to resort to the courts of the United States at once. p. 228. Therefore before that case can apply it must be established at least that legislative powers are conferred upon the supreme court of the state of Vermont.

The appeal in Vermont is given by statute, not by the Constitution, which separates legislative, executive, and judicial powers. Chap. 2, § 6. The material provisions are as follows: § 4599. "Any party to a cause who feels himself aggrieved by the final order, judgment, or decree of said . . . [commission] shall have the right to take the cause to the supreme court by appeal, for the correction of any errors excepted to in its proceedings, or in the form or substance of its orders, judgments, and decrees, on the facts found and reported by said . . . [commission]." By § 4600 appeals are to be taken in the manner and under the laws and rules of procedure that govern appeals from the court of chancery. "The supreme court shall have the same power therein as it has over appeals from such court. It may reverse or affirm the judgments, orders, or decrees of said . . . [commission] [138] and may remand a cause to said . . . [commission] with such mandates as law or equity shall require; and said . . . [commission] shall enter judgment, order, or decree in accordance with such mandates." Pub. Stat. 1906. It is apparent on the face of these sections that they do not attempt to confer legislative powers upon the court. They only provide an alternative and more expeditious way of doing what might be done by a bill in equity. Whether the alternative is exclusive or concurrent, whether it opens matters that would not be open upon a bill or not, if exceptions are taken (which does not appear in this case), is immaterial; the remedy in any event is purely judicial: to exonerate the appellant from an order that exceeds the law. This, we understand, is the view taken by the supreme court of the state (Bacon v. Boston & M. R. Co. 83 Vt. 421, 457, 76 Atl. 128; Sabre v. Rutland R. Co. 86 Vt. 347, 368, 369, 85 Atl. 693; and this being so, by the rule laid down in Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co., the railroad company was free to assert its rights in the district court of the United States.

Decree affirmed.

JOSEPH PATSONE, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 138–146.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — possession of firearms by alien.

1. Unnaturalized foreign-born residents are not deprived of property without due process of law, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., by Pa. Laws 1909, No. 261, p. 466, prohibiting the killing of any wild bird or animal by any such foreign-born person except in defense of person or property, and "to that end" making it unlawful for any such person to own or be possessed of a shotgun or rifle.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 4; IV. b, 5, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — protecting wild life — possession of firearms by alien.

2. The legislative assumption that unnaturalized foreign-born residents are peculiarly a source of danger to wild life cannot be said to be so unwarranted as to invalidate, as denying the equal protection of the laws, the provisions of Pa. Laws 1909, No. 261, p. 466, prohibiting the killing of any wild bird or animal by any such foreign-born person except in defense of person or property, and "to that end" making it unlawful for any such person to own or be possessed of a shotgun or rifle.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — who may assail validity.

3. A resident unnaturalized Italian not trading in firearms cannot claim that his right under the treaty with Italy of February 26, 1871 (17 Stat. at L. 845), art. 2, to carry on trade and to do anything incident to it upon the same terms as the natives of this country, is infringed by Pa. Laws 1909, No. 261, p. 466, prohibiting the killing of any wild bird or animal by any such foreign-born person except in defense of person or property, and "to that end" making it unlawful for any such person to own or be possessed of a shotgun or rifle.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On the constitutional right to bear arms—see notes to Salina v. Blaksley, 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 168; Ex parte Thomas, 20 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1007; and Strickland v. State, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 115.

As to construction and operation of treaties—see note to United States v. The Amistad, 10 L. ed. U. S. 826.

On treaty guaranties to aliens—see note to Gandolfo v. Hartman, 16 L.R.A. 277.

Digitized by Google

Aliens — treaty rights — state regulations.

4. The equality of rights and privileges with natives of the United States with respect to security for persons and property which citizens of Italy are assured by the Italian treaty of February 26, 1871, art. 3, is not infringed by the provisions of Pa. Laws 1909, No. 261, p. 466, prohibiting the killing of any wild bird or animal by any such foreign-born person except in defense of person or property, and "to that end" making it unlawful for any such person to own or be possessed of a shotgun or rifle. [For other cases, see Treaties, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 38.]

Argued November 4, 1913. Decided January 19, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court, affirming a conviction of an alien in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Allegheny County, for owning or having in his possession a shotgun. Affirmed.

See same case below, 231 Pa. 46, 79 Atl. 928.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Marcel A. Viti argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The Pennsylvania act of May 8, 1909, deprives persons of liberty and property without due process of law.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

It is freely admitted that the preservation of game and fish falls within the proper limits of the police power, and that their capture is a privilege that may be limited by legislation to the citizens of any state, provided the power is exercised in a reasonable manner and by proper means.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Geer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 519, 40 L. ed. 793, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600; People v. Buffalo Fish Co. 164 N. Y. 93, 52 L.R.A. 803, 79 Am. St. Rep. 622, 58 N. E. 34; People v. West, 106 N. Y. 297, 60 Am. Rep. 452, 12 N. E. 610; Osborn v. Charlevoix Circuit Judge, 114 Mich. 655, 72 N. W. 982; Mon Luck v. Sears, 29 Or. 421, 32 L.R.A. 738, 54 Am. St. Rep. 804, 44 Pac. 693; State v. Lewis, 134 Ind. 250, 20 L.R.A. 52, 33 N. E. 1024; McConnell v. McKillip, 71 Neb. 717, 65 L.R.A. 610, 115 Am. St. Rep. 614, 99 N. W. 505, 8 Ann. Cas. 898.

None of the cases holds that the possession of property harmless in itself, and which is necessary for lawful purposes, may be prohibited and the property itself confiscated merely because it is also capable of being put to an illegal use.

The act deprives persons of the equal protection of the law.

Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 382, 38 L. ed. 485, 487, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 31, 25 L. ed. 989, 992; Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 41 L. ed. 256, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1138; State v. Montgomery, 94 Me. 192, 80 Am. St. Rep. 386, 47 Atl. 165, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 117; Templar v. State Examiners, 131 Mich. 254, 100 Am. St. Rep. 610, 90 N. W. 1058; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 155, 41 L. ed. 666, 668, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 369, 30 L. ed. 220, 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

An alien merchant or manufacturer who may have spent most of his lifetime in Pennsylvania, adding to its wealth as well as his own, not only may not shoot game upon his own land, which has been held a right of property in State v. Mallory, 73 Ark. 236, 67 L.R.A. 773, 83 S. W. 955, 3 Ann. Cas. 852, but he is not allowed the possession of a shotgun or rifle upon such property for the protection thereof, or for use in hunting game in other states where he might lawfully shoot under regulations applying to nonresident aliens.

The act in question goes further than the subject of game, and prevents resident aliens as a class from collecting and exhibiting rare specimens of such arms, whether for pleasure or for sale; or from using them for the innocent diversion of shooting clay pigeons, or the instructive occupation of marksmanship. In fact, in the case of Com. v. Maloof, 49 Pa. Super. Ct. 581, it was held that the defendant (nationality not stated), who was agent of a licensee of a shooting gallery, in the management of that business, was guilty under the act, and the confiscation of a Winchester and a Remington rifle that were used at the time of seizure for target practice in the gallery was permitted.

In a case like the one at bar, where there is no question of the public safety, public health, or public morals, and where the prohibited act is in no respect malum in se, the absolute prohibition of the use of one's own property on his own land cannot be held to be a reasonable exercise of the police power, when regulation will plainly attain the end desired by the legislation in question.

Re Marshall, 102 Fed. 323.

It does not necessarily follow that because the states and the people have certain reserved rights in respect to subjects which have been delegated to Congress that the power of the Federal government is restricted or qualified in the same manner in respect to treaties.

Digitized by Google

Kansas v. Colorado, 206 U. S. 46, 80, 51 L. ed. 956, 967, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655; Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S. 484, 25 L. ed. 628.

It is absolutely immaterial under what guise of authority interference with a national treaty may be attempted, as all state power must yield pro tanto when it comes in contact with any treaty provision.

Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 24, 49 L. ed. 643, 649, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 Ann. Cas. 765; Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 505, 49 L. ed. 848, 855, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

Protection and security of persons and property and the liberty to carry on commerce have been the subjects of international treaties from the earliest times.

Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S. 484, 25 L. ed. 628; Re Wyman, 191 Mass. 276, 77 N. E. 379; Re Scutella, 69 Misc. 514, 127 N. Y. Supp. 874; Carpigiani v. Hall, 172 Ala. 287, 55 So. 248, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 651; Re Ghio, 157 Cal. 552, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 549, 137 Am. St. Rep. 145, 108 Pac. 516; Rocca v. Thompson, 223 U. S. 317, 56 L. ed. 453, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207.

Mr. John C. Bell, Attorney General of Pennsylvania, and Mr. William M. Hargest, argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. H. Lemon, filed a brief for defendant in error:

If a statute purporting to be passed to protect public health, public morals, public safety, and public welfare has real and substantial relation to those objects, it is a proper exercise of the police power, and the courts have been liberal in sustaining such statutes.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 660, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 223, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394.

The preservation of game is within the police power of the state, and any law which tends to that preservation is a valid exercise of the police power, if it has reasonable relation to that subject.

Geer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 519, 40 L. ed. 793, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 136, 138, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 389, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; New York ex rel. Silz v. Hesterberg, 211 U. S. 31, 53 L. ed. 75, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Kyle v. People, 226 Ill. 619, 80 N. E. 1081; Com. v. Vincent, 108 Mass. 441; People v. Martin, 123 App. Div. 335, 107 N. Y. Supp. 1076; State v. Nergaard, 124 Wis. 420, 102 N. W. 899; Dieterich v. Fargo, 194 N. Y. 359, 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 696, 87 N. E. 518; People v. Setunsky, 161 Mich. 624, 126 N. W. 844; Rupert v. United States, 104 C. C. A. 255, 181 Fed. 87; Smith v. State, 155 Ind. 611, 51 L.R.A. 404, 58 N. E. 1044; State v. Snowman, 94 Me. 99, 50 L.R.A. 544, 80 Am. St. Rep. 380, 46 Atl. 815; State v. Heger, 194 Mo. 707, 93 S. W. 252; State v. Roberts, 59 N. H. 256, 47 Am. Rep. 199.

The state not only has the right to prohibit the killing of game, but also the right to prohibit the possession of the instruments of killing, even though harmless in themselves.

5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 729; English v. State, 35 Tex. 473, 14 Am. Rep. 374; Ex parte Cheney, 90 Cal. 617, 27 Pac. 436; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 999, 1257; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 38 L. ed. 269, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 663, 31 L. ed. 211, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; New York ex rel. Silz v. Hesterberg, 211 U. S. 31, 53 L. ed. 75, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Purity Extract & Tonic Co. v. Lynch, 226 U. S. 192, 57 L. ed. 184, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Fisher v. McGirr, 1 Gray, 1, 61 Am. Dec. 381.

This Pennsylvania statute is preventive as well as remedial. It has one general purpose,— to preserve game; and two modes of effecting the purpose,—one to forbid the killing, and one to forbid, in that class of persons who have no respect for the game laws, the possession of the means of killing.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; People v. West, 106 N. Y. 295, 60 Am. Rep. 452, 12 N. E. 610; Frost v. People, 193 Ill. 635, 86 Am. St. Rep. 352, 61 N. E. 1054, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 689; Train v. Boston Disinfecting Co. 144 Mass. 530, 59 Am. Rep. 113, 11 N. E. 929; Gentile v. State, 29 Ind. 409; Mon Luck v. Sears, 29 Or. 421, 32 L.R.A. 738, 54 Am. St. Rep. 804, 44 Pac. 693; Smith v. Maryland, 18 How. 71, 15 L. ed. 269; State v. Lewis, 134 Ind. 250, 20 L.R.A. 52, 33 N. E. 1024.

If the legislature can limit the purpose for which harmless property can be owned, it may certainly prohibit the owning of a kind of property by a certain class, the ownership of which tends and tempts to violations of law.

State v. Robbins, 124 Ind. 308, 8 L.R.A. 438, 24 N. E. 978; McConnell v. McKillip, 71 Neb. 712, 65 L.R.A. 610, 115 Am. St. Rep. 614, 99 N. W. 505, 8 Ann. Cas. 898; Woods v. Cottrell, 55 W. Va. 476, 65 L.R.A.

Digitized by Google

616, 104 Am. St. Rep. 1004, 47 S. E. 275, 2 Ann. Cas. 933.

An act of assembly passed in the exercise of the police power is not invalid, even though it lessens or destroys the value of property upon which it operates.

Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659, 24 L. ed. 1036; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 50 L. ed. 204, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100.

A state has the right to classify its subjects for the purpose of exercising the police power, and if the classification is based upon some difference which bears a just and proper relation to the attempted classification, and is not an arbitrary selection, it does not deny the equal protection of the law.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 36, 54 L. ed. 921, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 84, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; Mager v. Grima, 8 How. 490, 12 L. ed. 1168; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 25 L. ed. 989; Owen County Burley Tobacco Soc. v. Brumback, 128 Ky. 141, 107 S. W. 710; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. State, 86 Ark. 518, 112 S. W. 150; Badenoch v. Chicago, 222 Ill. 71, 78 N. E. 31; Com. use of Titusville v. Clark, 195 Pa. 634, 57 L.R.A. 348, 86 Am. St. Rep. 694, 46 Atl. 286; Trageser v. Gray, 73 Md. 250, 9 L.R.A. 780, 25 Am. St. Rep. 587, 20 Atl. 905; Com. v. Hana, 195 Mass. 262, 11 L.R.A.(N.S.) 799, 122 Am. St. Rep. 251, 81 N. E. 149, 11 Ann. Cas. 514; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; McCready v. Virginia, 94 U. S. 391, 24 L. ed. 248.

Classification may be properly based upon the "degree of evil" designed to be remedied.

Heath & M. Mfg. Co. v. Worst, 207 U. S. 338, 52 L. ed. 236, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Engel v. O'Malley, 219 U. S. 128, 55 L. ed. 128, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; New York ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon, 204 U. S. 152, 51 L. ed. 415, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188, 9 Ann. Cas. 736; Chicago Dock & Canal Co. v. Fraley, 228 U. S. 680, 686, 57 L. ed. 1022, 1024, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715.

As to the time of residence, the legislature fixed ten days as necessary to bring the alien within the class made subject to the provisions of this act. This is a reasonable period, and hence, a reasonable classification in this regard.

State v. Niles, 78 Vt. 266, 112 Am. St. Rep. 917, 62 Atl. 795; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 25 L. ed. 989; Corfield v. Coryell, 4 Wash. C. C. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 3,230; Allen v. Wyckoff, 48 N. J. L. 90, 57 Am. Rep. 548, 2 Atl. 659.

That the statute might cover cases which would make it violative of the treaty is no defense to a person who is not affected by those cases.

Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Jackson Vinegar Co. 226 U. S. 217, 57 L. ed. 193, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

The right of a subject of the King of Italy to possess shotguns and rifles in the states of the United States is not intended to be secured by the stipulations of the treaty with Italy, any more than the right to have and sell intoxicating liquor would be secured to such subject by the provisions of that treaty; and plaintiff in error concedes that the right to sell liquor is not guaranteed by the treaty.

Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 91, 34 L. ed. 620, 623, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. 129, 21 L. ed. 929.

Even if a distinction could properly be made between the right to sell liquor and the right to sell or possess firearms (i. e., shotguns and rifles), yet the United States has no power to contract away by a treaty the reserved police power of the several states, essential to their self-preservation as sovereign states, to regulate their own internal affairs, since a state without police power cannot exist.

License Cases, 5 How. 504, 12 L. ed. 255; New York v. Miln, 11 Pet. 102, 9 L. ed. 648; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989.

Neither the due process of law clause nor the equal protection of the laws clause of the 14th Amendment to the National Constitution in any wise affects a valid exercise of this police power by the several states. As a measure for protecting the food supply of a state, the latter has the full police power to regulate the hunting of its game, of which it is the owner in trust for the whole people of such state. In the exercise of this power the state of Pennsylvania has, by the statute in question, determined, upon reasonable grounds and from experience, that the prohibition of the possession of shotguns and rifles by aliens is necessary for the adequate protection of said food supply. The prohibition of possession of such shotguns and rifles by aliens is, therefore, due process of law, within the meaning of the 14th Amendment.

Digitized by Google

Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; New York ex rel. Silz v. Hesterberg, 211 U. S. 31, 53 L. ed. 75, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Purity Extract & Tonic Co. v. Lynch, 226 U. S. 192, 57 L. ed. 184, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Chicago Dock & Canal Co. v. Fraley, 228 U. S. 680, 57 L. ed. 1022, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Com. v. Hana, 195 Mass. 262, 11 L.R.A. (N.S.) 799, 122 Am. St. Rep. 251, 81 N. E. 149, 11 Ann. Cas. 514.

Laws of the United States, in order to be binding, must be within the legitimate powers vested by the Constitution. Treaties, to be valid, must be made within the scope of the same powers; for there can be no "authority of the United States" save what is derived mediately or immediately, and regularly and legitimately, from the Constitution. A treaty, no more than an ordinary statute, can arbitrarily cede away any one right of a state or of any citizen of a state.

License Cases, 5 How. 540, 613, 12 L. ed. 272, 305.

The treaty power of the Federal government is not unlimited.

Geofroy v. Riggs, 133 U. S. 258, 33 L. ed. 642, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295.

Even if it were within the treaty-making power of the Federal government to guarantee to subjects of the Kingdom of Italy personal rights and rights of property and rights to carry on trade superior to the right of a sovereign state to exercise its inalienable police power, and superior to the right of a citizen of the state, under the 14th Amendment, the treaty between the United States and Italy invoked by the plaintiff in error was not intended to have any such effect.

Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 Ann. s. 765; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. kansas, 219 U. S. 453, 55 L. ed. 290, 31 p. Ct. Rep. 275; Purity Extract & Tonic . v. Lynch, 226 U. S. 192, 57 L. ed. 184, Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Re Ghio, 157 Cal. 552, L.R.A.(N.S.) 549, 137 Am. St. Rep. 145, Pac. 516; Compagnie Française de avigation à Vapeur v. State Bd. of Health, 6 U. S. 380, 46 L. ed. 1209, 22 Sup. Ct. ep. 811; Trageser v. Gray, 73 Md. 250, L.R.A. 780, 25 Am. St. Rep. 587, 20 tl. 905.

[143] Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error was an unnaturalized foreign-born resident of Pennsylvania, and was complained of for owning or having in his possession a shotgun, contrary to an act of May 8, 1909. Laws 1909, No. 261, p. 466. This statute makes it unlawful for any unnaturalized foreign-born resident to kill any wild bird or animal except in defense of person or property, and "to that end" makes it unlawful for such foreign-born person to own or be possessed of a shotgun or rifle; with a penalty of $25 and a forfeiture of the gun or guns. The plaintiff in error was found guilty and was sentenced to pay the above-mentioned fine. The judgment was affirmed on successive appeals. 231 Pa. 46, 79 Atl. 928. He brings the case to this court on the ground that the statute is contrary to the 14th Amendment and also is in contravention of the treaty between the United States and Italy, to which latter country the plaintiff in error belongs.

Under the 14th Amendment the objection is two fold; unjustifiably depriving the alien of property, and discrimination against such aliens as a class. But the former really depends upon the latter, since it hardly can be disputed that if the lawful object. the protection of wild life (Geer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 519, 40 L. ed. 793, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600), warrants the discrimination, the means adopted for making it effective also might be adopted. The possession of rifles and shotguns is not necessary for other purposes not within the statute. It is so peculiarly appropriated to the forbidden use that if such a use may be denied to this class, the possession of the instruments desired chiefly for that end also may be. The prohibition does not extend to weapons such as pistols that may be supposed to be needed occasionally for self-defense. So far, the case is within the principle of Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499. [144] See further, New York ex rel. Silz v. Hesterberg, 211 U. S. 31, 53 L. ed. 75, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Purity Extract & Tonic Co. v. Lynch, 226 U. S. 192, 57 L. ed. 184, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44.

The discrimination undoubtedly presents a more difficult question. But we start with the general consideration that a state may classify with reference to the evil to be prevented, and that if the class discriminated against is or reasonably might be considered to define those from whom the evil mainly is to be feared, it properly may be picked out. A lack of abstract symmetry does not matter. The question is a practical one, dependent upon experience. The demand for symmetry ignores the specific difference that experience is supposed to have shown to mark the class. It is not enough to invalidate the law that others may do the same thing and go unpunished, if, as a matter of fact, it is found that the danger is characteristic of the class named. Lindsley v. National Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 80, 81,

Digitized by Google

55 L. ed. 369, 378, 379, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912 C, 160. The state "may direct its law against what it deems the evil as it actually exists without covering the whole field of possible abuses." Central Lumber Co. v. South Dakota, 226 U. S. 157, 160, 57 L. ed. 164, 169, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Rosenthal v. New York, 226 U. S. 260, 270, 57 L. ed. 212, 216, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; L'Hote v. New Orleans, 177 U. S. 587, 44 L. ed. 899, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788. See further Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 36, 54 L. ed. 921, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 84, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676. The question therefore narrows itself to whether this court can say that the legislature of Pennsylvania was not warranted in assuming as its premise for the law that resident unnaturalized aliens were the peculiar source of the evil that it desired to prevent. Barrett v. Indiana, 229 U. S. 26, 29, 57 L. ed. 1050, 1052, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692.

Obviously the question, so stated, is one of local experience, on which this court ought to be very slow to declare that the state legislature was wrong in its facts. Adams v. Milwaukee, 228 U. S. 572, 583, 57 L. ed. 971, 977, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 610. If we might trust popular speech in some states it was right; but it is enough that this court has no such knowledge of local conditions as to be able to say that it was manifestly [145] wrong. See Trageser v. Gray, 73 Md. 250, 9 L.R.A. 780, 25 Am. St. Rep. 587, 20 Atl. 905; Com. v. Hana, 195 Mass. 262, 11 L.R.A.(N.S.) 799, 122 Am. St. Rep. 251, 81 N. E. 149, 11 Ann. Cas. 514.

The defense under the treaty with Italy of February 26, 1871 (17 Stat. at L. 845), appears to us to present less difficulty. The provisions relied upon are those in article 2, giving to citizens of Italy the right to carry on trade and to do anything incident to it upon the same terms as the natives of this country; in article 3, assuring them security for persons and property, and that they "shall enjoy in this respect the same rights and privileges as are or shall be granted to the natives, on their submitting themselves to the conditions imposed upon the natives;" and in article 24, promising to the Kingdom of Italy the same favors in respect to commerce and navigation that may be granted to other nations. We will say a word about each.

The last article is supposed to make applicable a convention with Switzerland providing against more burdensome conditions being imposed upon the residence of Swiss than upon that of citizens. But article 24 refers only to commerce and navigation, and the case must stand wholly upon articles 2 and 3. As to article 2, it will be time enough to consider whether the statute can be construed or upheld as precluding Italians from possessing a stock of guns for purposes of trade when such a case is presented. The act was passed for an object with which possession in the way of trade has nothing to do, and well might be interpreted as not extending to it. There remains, then, only article 3. With regard to that it was pointed out below that the equality of rights that it assures is equality only in respect of protection and security for persons and property. The prohibition of a particular kind of destruction and of acquiring property in instruments intended for that purpose establishes no inequality in either respect. It is to be remembered that the subject of this whole discussion is wild game, which the state may preserve for [146] its own citizens if it pleases. Geer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 519, 529, 40 L. ed. 793, 797, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600. We see nothing in the treaty that purports or attempts to cut off the exercise of their powers over the matter by the states to the full extent. Compagnie Française de Navigation à Vapeur v. State Bd. of Health, 186 U. S. 380, 394, 395, 46 L. ed. 1209, 1216, 1217, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811.

Judgment affirmed.

The Chief Justice dissents.

CHESAPEAKE & OHIO RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
L. B. COCKRELL, as Administrator, etc.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 146-155.)

Removal of causes — fraudulent joinder — sufficiency of petition.

1. Allegations in the removal petition that the charges of negligence against the resident railway employees in charge of the movement of the train doing the injuries complained of, who were joined as defendants with the nonresident railway company, were false and untrue, and were made solely for the fraudulent purpose of preventing the railway company from removing the cause

Note.—On fraud in joining a resident as codefendant with a nonresident defendant for the purpose of preventing a removal to the Federal courts on the ground of diverse citizenship—see Boatmen's Bank v. Fritzlen, 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1235.

As to removal of causes in cases of separable controversy—see notes to Miller v. Clifford, 5 L.R.A.(N.S.) 50; Sloane v. Anderson, 29 L. ed. U. S. 899; Butler v. National Home, 36 L. ed. U. S. 346; Torrence v. Shedd, 36 L. ed. U. S. 528; and Merchants Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 38 L. ed. U. S. 346.

Digitized by Google

to a Federal court for diverse citizenship, and that none of these charges could be proved at the trial, are not sufficient to entitle the petitioner to remove the cause, where no negligent act or omission personal to the railway company was charged in the complaint, which, tested by the local law, stated a case of joint liability, the company's liability, like that of the employees, being in effect based upon their alleged negligence.

[For other cases, see Removal of Causes, IV. b; VI. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Removal of causes — determining issues — state or Federal court.

2. Issues of fact arising upon a petition for removal of a cause from a state to a Federal court are to be determined in the Federal court, and the state court, for the purpose of determining for itself whether it will surrender jurisdiction, must accept as true the allegations of fact in such petition.

[For other cases, see Removal of Causes, VI. d, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 100.]

Argued December 5, 1913. Decided January 19, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Clark County, in that state, in an action for death, which defendant had attempted to remove to a Federal court. Affirmed.

See same case below, 144 Ky. 137, 137 S. W. 1066.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John T. Shelby argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry T. Wickham, Henry Taylor, Jr., and D. L. Pendleton, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

While a plaintiff, if he in good faith and reasonably believing to be true the facts upon which the joint liability depends, may unite joint tort feasors as defendants, without regard to his motive in so doing, he will yet not be allowed to deprive a defendant of a right secured to him by the Constitution and laws of the United States by the averment of a palpably false statement of fact, made for the purpose of working such deprivation.

Wecker v. National Enameling & Stamping Co. 204 U. S. 176, 51 L. ed. 430, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184, 9 Ann. Cas. 757.

Where a nonresident defendant in a petition for removal appropriately attacks as false and fraudulent the averments of fact upon which, in the plaintiff's petition, the charge of joint liability is based, the allegations of the removal petition must, for the purpose of determining the right of removal, be taken as true by the state court, and if the plaintiff desires to make an issue as to their truth, he must do this, not in the state court, but in the Federal court, which latter alone has jurisdiction to try such issue. And it follows as a necessary corollary from this proposition that where, admitting the averments of fact made in the removal petition to be true, they make a proper case for removal, the application ipso facto works the transfer to the Federal court, and deprives the state court of its jurisdiction to proceed further.

Stone v. South Carolina, 117 U. S. 430, 29 L. ed. 962, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; Carson v. Hyatt, 118 U. S. 279, 30 L. ed. 167, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1050; Carson v. Dunham, 121 U. S. 421, 30 L. ed. 992, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dunn, 122 U. S. 513, 30 L. ed. 1159, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1262; Crehore v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 131 U. S. 240, 33 L. ed. 144, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Daughtry, 138 U. S. 298, 34 L. ed. 963, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Eastin, 214 U. S. 153, 53 L. ed. 946, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Sheegog, 215 U. S. 308, 316, 54 L. ed. 208, 211, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101.

Mr. Edward S. Jouett argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Beverley R. Jouett and A. F. Byrd, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The state court is not bound to surrender its jurisdiction unless the face of the record shows the defendant entitled to remove.

Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Thompson, 200 U. S. 206, 50 L. ed. 441, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161, 4 Ann. Cas. 1147; Carson v. Hyatt, 118 U. S. 279, 30 L. ed. 167, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1054; Crehore v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 131 U. S. 240, 33 L. ed. 144, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wangelin, 132 U. S. 599, 33 L. ed. 474, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; Stone v. South Carolina, 117 U. S. 430, 29 L. ed. 962, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799.

A joint action is maintainable against the corporation and its employee.

Central Pass. R. Co. v. Kuhn, 86 Ky. 578, 9 Am. St. Rep. 309, 6 S. W. 441; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Bohon, 200 U. S. 221, 50 L. ed. 448, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166, 4 Ann. Cas. 1152; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Dixon, 179 U. S. 131, 45 L. ed. 121, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Coley, 121 Ky. 385, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 370, 89 S. W. 234; Pugh v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 101 Ky. 77, 72 Am. St. Rep. 392, 39 S. W. 895, 2 Am. Neg. Rep. 159; Rutherford v. Illinois C. R. Co. 120 Ky. 15, 85 S. W. 199; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Jones, 118 Ky. 158, 80 S. W. 484.

The mere allegation that the joinder is fraudulent is not sufficient to authorize removal. Facts showing actual fraud in connection with the joinder must be alleged.

Digitized by Google

Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Thompson, 200 U. S. 206, 50 L. ed. 441, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161, 4 Ann. Cas. 1147; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. McCabe, 213 U. S. 215, 53 L. ed. 768, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Bohon, 200 U. S. 221, 50 L. ed. 448, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166, 4 Ann. Cas. 1152; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Willard, 220 U. S. 413, 55 L. ed. 521, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Schwyhart, 227 U. S. 184, 57 L. ed. 473, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Sheegog, 215 U. S. 308, 54 L. ed. 208, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Dixon, 179 U. S. 131, 45 L. ed. 121, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

A removal petition which, as in this case, alleges no extraneous facts in connection with the joinder, but merely enumerates the plaintiff's charges of negligence against the resident defendant, and declares that each such allegation is false, was known so to be by plaintiff, and was made for the fraudulent purpose of defeating removal, is insufficient.

Enos v. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. 111 C. C. A. 74, 189 Fed. 342; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Sheegog, 215 U. S. 308, 54 L. ed. 208, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101.

Long before this suit was filed the Kentucky court of appeals had decided that the fact, admitted here, of the fireman not looking ahead upon approaching a crossing, constituted negligence; and also that, notwithstanding a traveler's negligence in going upon the track, he could recover if, after his peril was discovered, or by ordinary care should have been discovered, by those in charge of the train, the injury might have been avoided by ordinary care.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Gilmore, — Ky. —, 114 S. W. 752; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Taylor, 31 Ky. L. Rep. 1142, 104 S. W. 776.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action begun in the circuit court of Clark county, Kentucky, by an administrator, to recover [150] damages for the death of his intestate, the defendants being a railway company and the engineer and fireman of one of its trains which struck and fatally injured the intestate at or near a public crossing in Winchester, Kentucky. The administrator, engineer, and fireman were citizens of Kentucky, and the railway company was a Virginia corporation. The latter in due time presented to the court a verified petition and proper bond for the removal of the cause into the circuit court of the United States, but the court declined to surrender its jurisdiction, and, over the company's protest, proceeded to a trial which resulted in a judgment against the company, and the court of appeals of the state affirmed the judgment, including the ruling upon the petition for removal. 144 Ky. 137, 137 S. W. 1066.

The sole question for decision here is, whether it was error thus to proceed to an adjudication of the cause notwithstanding the company's effort to remove it into the Federal court.

Rightly understood and much abbreviated, the plaintiff's petition, after stating that the train was being operated by the engineer and fireman as employees of the railway company, charged that the injury and death of the intestate were caused by the negligence of the defendants (a) in failing to maintain an adequate lookout ahead of the engine, (b) in failing to maintain any lookout upon the left or fireman's side, from which the intestate went upon the track, (c) in failing to give any warning of the approach of the train, and (d) in continuing to run the train forward after it struck the intestate, and was pushing her along, until it eventually ran over and fatally injured her, when it easily could have been stopped in time to avoid material injury. There was a prayer for a judgment against the three defendants for $25,000, the amount of damages alleged.

The railway company's petition for removal, while not [151] denying that the engineer and fireman were in the employ of the company, or that they were operating the train when it struck and injured the intestate, did allege that the charges of negligence (all being specifically repeated) against the defendants were each and all "false and untrue, and were known by the plaintiff, or could have been known by the exercise of ordinary diligence, to be false and untrue, and were made for the sole and fraudulent purpose of affording a basis, if possible, for the fraudulent joinder" of the engineer and fireman with the railway company, and of "thereby fraudulently depriving" the latter of its right to have the action removed into the Federal court; and that none of the charges of negligence on the part of the engineer or fireman could be sustained on the trial.

It will be perceived that but for the joinder of the two employees as codefendants with the railway company, the latter undoubtedly would have been entitled to remove the cause into the Federal court on the ground of diverse citizenship, there being the requisite amount in controversy; and that the railway company attempted in the petition for removal to overcome the apparent obstacle arising from the joinder. Whether the petition was sufficient in that regard is the subject of opposing contentions.

Digitized by Google

The right of removal from a state to a Federal court, as is well understood, exists only in certain enumerated classes of cases. To the exercise of the right, therefore, it is essential that the case be shown to be within one of those classes; and this must be done by a verified petition setting forth, agreeably to the ordinary rules of pleading, the particular facts, not already appearing, out of which the right arises. It is not enough to allege in terms that the case is removable or belongs to one of the enumerated classes, or otherwise to rest the right upon mere legal conclusions. As in other pleadings, there must be a statement of the facts relied upon, and not otherwise appearing, [152] in order that the court may draw the proper conclusion from all the facts, and that, in the event of a removal, the opposing party may take issue, by a motion to remand, with what is alleged in the petition. Little York Gold-Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 96 U. S. 199, 202, 24 L. ed. 656, 658; Carson v. Dunham, 121 U. S. 421, 426, 30 L. ed. 992, 993, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Crehore v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 131 U. S. 240, 244, 33 L. ed. 144, 145, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Powers v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 169 U. S. 92, 101, 42 L. ed. 673, 676, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264.

A civil case, at law or in equity, presenting a controversy between citizens of different states, and involving the requisite jurisdictional amount, is one which may be removed by the defendant, if not a resident of the state in which the case is brought; and this right of removal cannot be defeated by a fraudulent joinder of a resident defendant having no real connection with the controversy. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wangelin, 132 U. S. 599, 601, 33 L. ed. 474, 475, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Thompson, 200 U. S. 206, 218, 50 L. ed. 441, 447, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161, 4 Ann. Cas. 1147; Wecker v. National Enameling & Stamping Co. 204 U. S. 176, 51 L. ed. 430, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184, 9 Ann. Cas. 757; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Sheegog, 215 U. S. 308, 316, 54 L. ed. 208, 211, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101. So, when in such a case a resident defendant is joined with the nonresident, the joinder, even although fair upon its face, may be shown by a petition for removal to be only a fraudulent device to prevent a removal; but the showing must consist of a statement of facts rightly engendering that conclusion. Merely to traverse the allegations upon which the liability of the resident defendant is rested, or to apply the epithet "fraudulent" to the joinder, will not suffice: the showing must be such as compels the conclusion that the joinder is without right and made in bad faith, as was the case in Wecker v. National Enameling & Stamping Co. 204 U. S. 176, 51 L. ed. 430, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184, 9 Ann. Cas. 757. See Illinois C. R. Co. v. Sheegog, 215 U. S. 308, 316, 54 L. ed. 208, 211, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Dowell, 229 U. S. 102, 114, 57 L. ed. 1090, 1096, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 684.

Here the plaintiff's petition, as is expressly conceded, not only stated a good cause of action against the resident defendants, but, tested by the laws of Kentucky, as it [153] should be, stated a case of joint liability on the part of all the defendants. As thus stated the case was not removable, the joinder of the resident defendants being apparently the exercise of a lawful right. And while the plaintiff's statement was not conclusive upon the railway company, it did operate to lay upon the latter, as a condition to a removal, the duty of showing that the joinder of the engineer and fireman was merely a fraudulent device to prevent a removal. Of course, it was not such unless it was without any reasonable basis.

Putting out of view, as must be done, the epithets and mere legal conclusions in the petition for removal, it may have disclosed an absence of good faith on the part of the plaintiff in bringing the action at all, but it did not show a fraudulent joinder of the engineer and fireman. With the allegation that they were operating the train which did the injury standing unchallenged, the showing amounted to nothing more than a traverse of the charges of negligence, with an added statement that they were falsely or recklessly made and could not be proved to the engineer or fireman. As no negligent act or omission personal to the railway company was charged, and its liability, like that of the two employees, was, in effect, predicated upon the alleged negligence of the latter, the showing manifestly went to the merits of the action as an entirety, and not to the joinder; that is to say, it indicated that the plaintiff's case was ill founded as to all the defendants. Plainly, this was not such a showing as to engender or compel the conclusion that the two employees were wrongfully brought into a controversy which did not concern them. As they admittedly were in charge of the movement of the train, and their negligence was apparently the principal matter in dispute, the plaintiff had the same right, under the laws of Kentucky, to insist upon their presence as real defendants as upon that of the railway company. We conclude, therefore, that the petition for [154] removal was not such as to require the state court to surrender its jurisdiction.

Digitized by Google

While this conclusion requires an affirmance of the judgment, we would not be understood as approving the reasoning upon which the action of the trial court was sustained by the court of appeals of the state. That court, apparently assuming that the petition for removal contained a sufficient showing of a fraudulent joinder, held that the questions of fact arising upon the petition were open to examination and determination in the state court, and that no error was committed in refusing to surrender jurisdiction, because, upon the subsequent trial, the evidence indicated that the showing in the petition was not true as to the fireman. In so holding the court of appeals fell into manifest error, for it is thoroughly settled that issues of fact arising upon a petition for removal are to be determined in the Federal court, and that the state court, for the purpose of determining for itself whether it will surrender jurisdiction, must accept as true the allegations of fact in such petition. Stone v. South Carolina, 117 U. S. 430, 432, 29 L. ed. 962, 963, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; Crehore v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 131 U. S. 240, 244, 33 L. ed. 144, 145, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Sheegog, 215 U. S. 308, 316, 54 L. ed. 208, 211, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101. and Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Dowell, 229 U. S. 102, 114, 57 L. ed. 1090, 1096, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 684. In this case had the petition contained a sufficient showing of a fraudulent joinder, accompanied as it was by a proper bond, the state court would have been in duty bound to give effect to the petition and surrender jurisdiction, leaving any issue of fact arising upon the petition to the decision of the Federal court, as was done in Wecker v. National Enameling & Stamping Co. 204 U. S. 176, 51 L. ed. 430, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184, 9 Ann. Cas. 757. And had the state court refused to give effect to the petition, it and the bond being sufficient, the railway company might have obtained a certified transcript of the record, resorting, if necessary, to a writ of certiorari for that purpose, and, upon filing the transcript in the Federal court, might have invoked the authority of the latter to protect its jurisdiction by enjoining the plaintiff from taking [155] further proceedings in the state court, unless the cause should be remanded. Madisonville Traction Co. v. St. Bernard Min. Co. 196 U. S. 239, 245, 49 L. ed. 462, 464, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. McCabe, 213 U. S. 207, 217, 219, 53 L. ed. 765, 769, 770, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. McDonald, 214 U. S. 191, 195, 53 L. ed. 963, 965, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 546; French v. Hay (French v. Stewart) 22 Wall. 250, 22 L. ed. 857; Dietzsch v. Huidekoper (Kern v. Huidekoper) 103 U. S. 494, 26 L. ed. 497.

Judgment affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.
HARDAWAY YOUNG.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 155–162.)

Indictment — sufficiency — use of mails to defraud.

An indictment under the Criminal Code of March 4, 1909 (35 Stat. at L. 1130, chap. 321, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1653), § 215, providing for the punishment of anyone who, having devised, or intending to devise, any scheme or artifice to defraud, or for obtaining money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises, shall, for the purpose of executing such scheme or artifice, or attempting so to do, place any letter in any postoffice of the United States, to be sent or delivered by the postoffice establishment, need only aver the scheme and its attempted execution by placing a letter in the postoffice, and need not allege that the scheme was to be executed by the use of the mails. [For other cases, see Indictment, II. e, 3, d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 710.]

Submitted January 8, 1914. Decided January 26, 1914.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Alabama to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to an indictment charging the use of the mails to defraud. Reversed and remanded, with directions to overrule the demurrer.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Davis submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

Under the U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5480, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3696, it was necessary to charge not only that the defendants devised a scheme to defraud, but that they intended to effect this scheme by opening or intending to open correspondence with some other persons by means of the postoffice establishment, or by inciting such other persons to open communication with them, and that in carrying out such scheme they either deposited a letter or packet in the postoffice, or took or received one therefrom.

Stokes v. United States, 157 U. S. 187, 39 L. ed. 667, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617.

The later act is broader than the old law in that it is only necessary that the scheme to defraud should be devised or intended to be devised, and the letter placed in the postoffice for the purpose of effecting such scheme or artifice, or attempting so to do. The amendment was deliberate and the legislative intent quite clear.

Digitized by Google

Ex parte King, 200 Fed. 622; United States v. Maxey, 200 Fed. 997; Stockton v. United States, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 936, 123 C. C. A. 530, 205 Fed. 462; United States v. Goldman, 207 Fed. 1002.

No appearance for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Indictment under § 215 of the Criminal Code [35 Stat. at L. 1130, chap. 321, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1653], charging the use of the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud. [156] It consists of two counts to which demurrer was filed, which, in specific objections, challenged the sufficiency of the indictment. The demurrer was sustained and judgment entered, quashing the indictment. The charges of the indictment, condensed, are as follows:

On the 5th of May, 1911, within the county of Mobile and the jurisdiction of the court, defendant devised a scheme and artifice to defraud various banks, persons, and corporations, particularly such as could be induced, through the firm of Hollingshead & Campbell, of New York city, to purchase or lend money upon the notes of the Southern Hardware & Supply Company, engaged in the mercantile business at Mobile, Alabama, and of which defendant was the president.

Hollingshead & Campbell were money brokers engaged in the business of inducing banks, persons, and corporations to purchase and lend money upon commercial paper, and it was the intention and purpose of defendant in his negotiations with said firm to induce and cause it to sell and dispose of the notes of the Hardware & Supply Company, and to obtain money and credit for its notes and other evidences of indebtedness. The defendant was authorized to sign such notes and other evidences of indebtedness, and to prepare statements of the financial and business condition of the company.

It was a part of the scheme for defendant to induce Hollingshead & Campbell to sell and dispose of the notes of the Hardware & Supply Company, and to persuade and influence the various banks, etc., to lend money upon the notes of that company, to prepare and cause to be prepared and sent through the United States mails to Hollingshead & Campbell false and fraudulent statements of the business affairs and financial condition of the Hardware & Supply Company, and which defendant was to, and did, represent to be statements showing the correct and true condition of the business affairs and financial condition [157] of the Hardware & Supply Company. These statements did not show the true condition of the company's affairs, but were to show and did show its assets to be greatly in excess of those actually had and owned by it, and its liabilities to be much less than their true amount, and "falsely and fraudulently showed the company to be in a much better financial condition than it was in fact at the time such statements were made and were to be made."

Part of the scheme was to make Hollingshead & Campbell believe the statements were correct, and they did make that firm so believe, and to rely upon them; and, so relying upon their truth, to recommend the purchase of the Hardware & Supply Company's notes and the lending of money upon them, defendant knowing that that company "was not then and there in a strong financial condition."

Defendant caused the statements to be sent through the United States mails to Hollingshead and Campbell. Hollingshead & Campbell believed them, and, relying upon their truth, recommended various banks, persons, and corporations to purchase the notes and lend money upon the notes of the Hardware & Supply Company. The names of certain banks and the amounts they loaned are given.

For the purpose of executing the scheme and artifice, defendant deposited in the United States postoffice at Mobile, Alabama, a letter, dated June 27, 1911, addressed to Hollingshead & Campbell at New York. The letter contained a statement of the financial condition of the company, showing the assets, liabilities, and profits of the Hardware & Supply Company. It also contained comments upon the business of the company and its relations with Hollingshead & Campbell. It was sent through the mails and delivered to the latter at New York. The letter and the statements are charged to have shown the assets of the Hardware & Supply Company to be greater [158] and its liabilities to be less than they actually were. And it is charged that defendant, having devised a scheme and artifice to defraud, and for the purpose of their execution, placed and caused to be placed in the United States postoffice at Mobile, Alabama, the letter above stated, and that it was sent and delivered by the Postoffice Establishment of the United States.

The second count in the indictment charges defendant with having devised "a scheme and artifice for obtaining moneys, goods, and chattels by means of false and fraudulent representations and promises from various banks, persons, firms, and corporations." The manner and means are charged as in the first count.

Digitized by Google

The scheme, it will be observed, was to defraud certain banks and persons, and it was to be accomplished by deception practised on Hollingshead & Campbell, money brokers, through false statements sent to that company through the mails, whereby they would be induced to recommend the commercial value of the notes and other evidences of indebtedness of the Southern Hardware & Supply Company, of which defendant was the president. The first count charges a scheme to defraud various banks, etc., through the representations of Hollingshead & Campbell, "out of their's, the said banks', and persons', firms', and corporations' moneys, goods, and chattels." In the second count the scheme is alleged to be "for obtaining moneys, goods, and chattels by means of false and fraudulent representations and promises" from the various banks and persons.

Commenting on the indictment, the district court said: "The first count of the indictment does not clearly set out the scheme to defraud. It fails to allege that the scheme devised to defraud said banks, etc., was by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises. And it fails to allege how the scheme was to be executed. It does not allege that the scheme devised was to be executed [159] by the use of the Postoffice Establishment or mails of the United States." The conclusion of the court was that the "said first count of the indictment" was "defective and insufficient."

Further commenting, the court said: "The second count of the indictment is subject to the same defects and objections as are found in the first count, except that the second count does allege that the scheme to defraud was by means of false and fraudulent representations and promises. It does not directly allege that the scheme to defraud was to be executed by the use of the Postoffice Establishment or mails of the United States. In some part of the second count it is implied in an allegation in this way: That it was a part of the said scheme that the defendant was to and did prepare statements of the business affairs and financial condition of the Southern Hardware & Supply Company, and sent the same to Hollingshead & Campbell to induce them to do certain things, etc. The gist of the offense is the use of the United States mails in the execution of the scheme, or in attempting so to do. It is not an unlawful scheme unless the use of the mails was a part of the scheme, and the indictment must affirmatively allege every fact necessary to constitute the offense sought to be charged, that the court may see that an unlawful scheme has been devised. It is alleged that said statements were false and fraudulent, and that they were sent through the mails to Hollingshead & Campbell, from which it might be implied that such was a part and intention of the scheme." The court further said that implication of a material and essential fact could not supply the place of its direct averment; that there was no allegation that the banks and others to be defrauded had seen the statements sent Hollingshead & Campbell, or had knowledge of them or of their contents, or that they were intended to deceive the banks, and to induce them to lend their money, except as this might be implied from [160] sending the statements to Hollingshead & Campbell. The court expressed the opinion that while "the second count is better than the first, it is insufficient in the particulars mentioned."

We have made these quotations from the court's opinion as the case is here by direct appeal under the criminal appeals act as involving the construction of the statute, and not of the indictment. And this is the contention of the government, and that the court erred in failing to "note the essential differences between § 5480 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3696), and § 215 of the Criminal Code (act of March 4, 1909 [35 Stat. at L. 1130, chap. 321, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1653]) which succeeded it."

Section 5480 provided: "If any person having devised, or intending to devise, any scheme or artifice to defraud . . . to be effected by either opening or intending to open correspondence or communication with any person, whether resident within or outside the United States, by means of the Postoffice Establishment of the United States, or by inciting such other person or any person to open communication with the person so devising or intending, shall, in [effecting] and for executing such scheme . . . place or cause to be placed any letter . . . in any postoffice . . . to be sent or delivered by the said Postoffice Establishment, . . . such person so misusing the Postoffice Establishment shall, upon conviction, be punishable . . . ."

Section 215 of the Criminal Code is as follows: "Whoever having devised, or intending to devise, any scheme or artifice to defraud or for obtaining money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises, ...

Digitized by Google

shall, for the purpose of executing such scheme or artifice, or attempting so to do, place . . . any letter, . . . whether addressed to any person within or outside the United States, in any postoffice, . . . [161] to be sent or delivered by the Postoffice Establishment of the United States, . . . shall be fined. . . ."

It is contended by the government that these provisions are broader than those of § 5480 of the Revised Statutes; that under the latter it was necessary to charge not only a scheme to defraud was devised, but that it was intended to be effected by opening or intending to open correspondence with some other person by means of the Postoffice Establishment. Under § 215 of the Criminal Code it is only necessary that the scheme should be devised or intended to be devised, and a letter be placed in the postoffice for the purpose of executing the scheme or attempting to do so. And as declaring the elements of the offense under § 215, and its distinction from an offense under § 5480 of the Revised Statutes, the following cases are cited: Ex parte King, 200 Fed. 622; United States v. Maxey, 200 Fed. 997; Stockton v. United States (C. C. A. 7th C.) 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 936, 205 Fed. 462; United States v. Goldman, 207 Fed. 1002.

There is a distinction between the sections, and the elements of an offense under § 215 are (a) a scheme devised or intended to be devised to defraud, or for obtaining money or property by means of false pretenses, and (b) for the purpose of executing such scheme or attempting to do so, the placing of any letter in any postoffice of the United States, to be sent or delivered by the Postoffice Establishment. The district court apparently overlooked the distinction between the sections, and was of opinion that something more was necessary to an offense under § 215 than the averment of the scheme, and its attempted execution in the manner stated. The court expressed the view, we have seen, that the indictment did not clearly set out the scheme to defraud; that it did not allege the scheme devised or attempted was by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises, or that [162] the scheme was to be executed by the use of the Postoffice Establishment or mails of the United States. And the court said that it was a necessary element of the offense that the false statements sent to Hollingshead & Campbell by defendant were to be used by the latter company to induce the person intended to be defrauded to purchase the notes of the Southern Hardware & Supply Company, or to lend money upon them, or that such person had knowledge of the contents of the statements. It is manifest that the court considered these facts were necessary to be averred in order to constitute an offense under § 215. In this the court was in error.

Judgment reversed and cause remanded, with direction to overrule the demurrer.

ANNA M. BURBANK, Wife of James M. Woodson, and James M. Woodson, Executors of the Last Will of T. Scott Burbank, and Individually, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

MRS. JOSEPHINE ERNST, Legal Tutrix of the Minor, Mary Springer Burbank, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 162-165.)

Error to state court — record — headnotes by the court.

1. It is to the opinion, and not to the headnotes, that the Federal Supreme Court will turn upon writ of error to a state court

---

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

As to what is the record for the purpose of showing the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court—see note to Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L.R.A. 329.

On opinion of the court below as part of the record on appeal—see note to Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 45 L. ed. U. S. 281.

On the effect of probate of a will in another state—see note to Martin v. Stovall, 48 L.R.A. 131.

On conclusiveness of foreign judgment—see note to Dunstan v. Higgins, 20 L.R.A. 668.

On the conclusiveness of probate as res judicata—see note to Sly v. Hunt, 21 L.R.A. 680.

On conclusiveness of judgments generally—see notes to Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572; Bollong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank, 3 L.R.A. 142; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 577; Morrill v. Morrill, 11 L.R.A. 155; Shores v. Hooper, 11 L.R A. 308; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson Steel Street R. Co. v. Wharton, 38 L. ed. U. S. 429; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

Generally, as to full faith and credit to be given to state records and judicial proceedings—see notes to Lindley v. O'Reilly, 1 L.R.A. 79; Cummington v. Belchertown, 4 L.R.A. 131; Rand v. Hanson, 12 L.R.A. 574; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 578; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 13 L. ed. U. S. 648; Huntington v. Attrill, 36 L. ed. U. S. 1123.

Digitized by Google

for the original and authentic statement of the grounds of the decision under review, where such headnotes, though written by the court itself, are given no special force by statute or rule of court.

[Record on appeal, see Appeal and Error, V., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — full faith and credit — probate of will — domicil.

2. A decree of a Texas court admitting a will to probate is not denied full faith and credit by a judgment of a Louisiana court, annulling the will on the grounds that the testator died domiciled in Louisiana, and that, by the laws of that state, the will was void, although it may be that the conduct of the testator in Louisiana, as evidenced by his notarial declaration of a Louisiana domicil, and by his official acts as executor resident in that state, was given greater effect by reason of the Louisiana statutes to counterbalance the testator's declarations that Texas was his permanent home than others might give it.

[For other cases, see Judgment, VI. b, 2 in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 151.]

Argued January 15 and 16, 1914. Decided January 26, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana to review a judgment which, amending a judgment of the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans, in that state, ordered the dismissal as of nonsuit of an application for the registration of a foreign will. Affirmed.

See same case below, 129 La. 528, 56 So. 430.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Charles S. Rice and Sam Streetman argued the cause, and, with Mr. Richard B. Montgomery, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The judgment of a competent court of a sister state in probate of the will of a person domiciled within its jurisdiction, duly exemplified according to the laws of the United States, is entitled to the full faith and credit it would have where rendered.

Wedderburn's Succession, 1 Rob. (La.) 266; Dupre v. Reggio, 6 La. 653; Caperton v. Ballard, 14 Wall. 238, 20 L. ed. 885; Carpenter v. Strange, 141 U. S. 87, 35 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 960; Lynde v. Lynde, 181 U. S. 183, 45 L. ed. 810, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555; Crapo v. Kelly, 16 Wall. 610, 21 L. ed. 430; Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. 290, 18 L. ed. 475; Green v. Van Buskirk, 5 Wall. 307, 18 L. ed. 599; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Harris, 97 U. S. 331, 24 L. ed. 959; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor. 210 U. S. 281, 293, 52 L. ed. 1061, 1067, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464; American Exp. Co. v. Mullins, 212 U. S. 311, 53 L. ed. 525, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 381, 15 Ann. Cas. 536; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 47, 51 L. ed. 78, 84, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 89, 50 L. ed. 101, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; Gaines's Succession, 45 La. Ann. 1237, 14 So. 233; Willoughby, Const. § 95.

On producing an exemplified copy of such judgment to the judge of the Louisiana court, where property of the testator's succession is situated, it is the duty of such judge to order the registry and execution of the will by the executors named.

Wedderburn's Succession, 1 Rob. (La.) 266; State v. Probate Judge, 18 La. 570; Dixon v. D'Armond, 23 La. Ann. 200; State v. Probate Judge, 17 La. 486; Robert's Succession, 2 Rob. (La.) 427; State v. Bermudez, 13 La. 224; Re Newcomb, 192 N. Y. 242, 84 N. E. 950; Bonella v. Maduel, 26 La. Ann. 112; Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 430, 14 L. ed. 485; Gaines's Succession, 45 La. Ann. 1237, 14 So. 233.

The right to change domicil at will is a right unrestricted and unrestrictable as to every person sui generis; and to judicially deny such right is in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and of art. 4, § 2, thereof.

Re Newcomb, 192 N. Y. 252, 84 N. E. 950; Schouler, Exrs. pp. 29, 30; Bonvillain v. Verret, 33 La. Ann. 1306; Gravillon v. Richard, 13 La. 297, 33 Am. Dec. 563.

A person's domicil is where he has honestly established himself with intent to live; and the domicil is established instanter the intent and the actual living coincide; length of residence is not an essential element.

Gravillon v. Richard, 13 La. 293, 33 Am. Dec. 563; Schouler, Exrs. pp. 29, 30; Bonvillain v. Verret, 33 La. Ann. 1307.

Judgments of probate courts come within the meaning of those judgments entitled to full faith and credit in other states under the Federal Constitution.

Simmons v. Saul, 138 U. S. 439, 34 L. ed. 1054, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369.

This is subject, of course, to the rule that inquiry may be made into the jurisdiction of the court rendering the judgment.

Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897.

If Burbank was domiciled in Texas at the date of his death, the Texas court had jurisdiction to probate his will; and it is his domicil at the date of his death, not the date of the execution of his will, which determines the jurisdiction.

40 Cyc. 1245.

The right to acquire a domicil in a state

Digitized by Google

is guaranteed by the Federal Constitution, and is one of the privileges and immunities which may not be abridged by the states.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394.

The acquisition of such domicil depends solely upon residence in a state, accompanied with intent or "volition" to make such residence the domicil.

Ibid.; Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 400, 14 L. ed. 473; Sharon v. Hill, 26 Fed. 337; Harding v. Standard Oil Co. 182 Fed. 421; Wright v. Schneider, 32 Fed. 705; Mitchell v. United States, 21 Wall. 352, 22 L. ed. 587; Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Tompkins, 41 C. C. A. 488, 101 Fed. 539.

Mr. Henry P. Dart argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The Louisiana court did not fail to give full faith and credit to the judgment of the probate court of Bell county, Texas.

Andrews v. Andrews, 188 U. S. 14, 47 L. ed. 366, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237; Rose v. Himely, 4 Cranch, 241–269, 2 L. ed. 608–617.

The only appellate jurisdiction conferred by Congress upon the Supreme Court to review the judgments or decrees, at law or in equity, of the highest court of a state, is by writ of error; and on writ of error nothing is removed for re-examination but questions of law arising upon the record. The findings of fact made in the supreme court of the state will be the basis of the decision of the Supreme Court.

Quimby v. Boyd, 128 U. S. 489, 32 L. ed. 503, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Thayer v. Spratt, 189 U. S. 346, 47 L. ed. 845, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 48 L. ed. 769, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512; Clipper Min. Co. v. Eli Min. & Land Co. 194 U. S. 220, 48 L. ed. 944, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; Republican River Bridge Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 92 U. S. 315, 23 L. ed. 515; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case arises in the matter of the succession of T. Scott Burbank. He died in Texas on May 10, 1910, leaving a will dated March 22, 1910, which was admitted to probate there. The executors sought to have the will registered in Louisiana, but the tutrix of Burbank's minor daughter and sole heir filed in the succession record a direct action to annul the will on the ground that the testator died domiciled in Louisiana, and that, by the laws of that state, the will was void. The supreme court of Louisiana gave judgment against the will, and ordered the application for registry to be dismissed "as of nonsuit." 129 La. 528, 56 So. 430. The error assigned is that full faith and credit were not given to the Texas decree.

Of course, the jurisdiction of the Texas court depended upon the domicil of Burbank, which therefore was open to re-examination. Andrews v. Andrews, 188 U. S. 14, 47 L. ed. 366, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237. The objection urged is that the Louisiana court attributed conclusive effect to Burbank's conduct in Louisiana, taken [164] in connection with the laws there, instead of recognizing that no statute of that state could prevent his acquiring a domicil wherever he actually might be, elsewhere, and instead of treating the question as one of intent and fact. Burbank was one of the executors under his father's will, and as such, on April 8, 1909, at that time being a resident of New Orleans, declared before a notary that then being about to absent himself temporarily from Louisiana, and in order to comply with the law, especially article 1154 of the Revised Civil Code, he constituted one Billings his attorney. If he left the state permanently, his duty, we are told by the supreme court, was to surrender his trust, render an account, and pay over any balance due. It is true that in his Texas will he declared that Texas was his permanent home, and that he made similar declarations orally and in writing; but, on the other hand, it is found that his agent continued to represent him, and it seems that he continued to act, as an executor temporarily absent. He had made a will in Louisiana just before leaving, but ten days before making the Texas will he had consulted a lawyer as to making a will that would be valid by the law of Texas, which law allowed dispositions not valid by the law of Louisiana, where most of his property was. The supreme court not unnaturally suspected, from the declaration of domicil in the will and the circumstances, that Burbank was making up a fictitious case in the hope of avoiding the restrictions of his real domicil before he killed himself, as it is said that he did, in May; and found that the Texas declarations were more than counterbalanced by his declaration of record and his official acts as executor resident in Louisiana. There can be no question that the evidence was conflicting and that the court was warranted in finding as it did.

It is not for us to retry the facts. The ground of the argument here is a statement in the opinion of the court that the recital in the notarial act was conclusive evidence [165] that Burbank left the state intention of returning; but that import a failure to recognize, as the early did recognize, that he might his mind. Reliance also is placed he headnote of the decision, which that the intent to leave only tempo-is conclusively presumed to continue the notarial procuration is recalled, that the executors are concluded from rting a change of domicil. But the dnote is given no special force by stator rule of court, as in some states.

Digitized by Google

inaccurately represents the reasoning of e judgment. In 129 La. it is said to ave been made by the court. However hat may be, we look to the opinion for the original and authentic statement of the grounds of decision. It may be that in fact the conduct of the testator in Louisiana was given greater weight, because of the statutes of the state, than others might give it, but no error of law appears that would warrant a reversal of the judgment below. German Sav. & L. Soc. v. Dormitzer, 192 U. S. 125, 128, 48 L. ed. 373, 376,
24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221.

Judgment affirmed.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE, & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

J. F. POLT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 165–168.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — penalizing refusal to pay claim.

The exaction of a double liability from a railway company failing to pay, within sixty days, a claim for the damage caused by fire set by a locomotive, as is done by S. D. Laws 1907, chap. 215, except where the owner recovers a less sum as damages than the amount of any tender by the railway company, in which case the latter is to recover its costs, is a taking of the company's property without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 161.]

Argued January 16, 1914. Decided January 26, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of South Dakota to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court awarding double damages for a railway company for the loss caused by a fire set by a locomotive. Reversed.

See same case below, 26 S. D. 378, 128 N. W. 472.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William G. Porter argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Burton Hanson, Ed. L. Grantham, and Harrison C. Preston, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The law is unconstitutional. It imposes a penalty for delinquency in payment of debt.

San Mateo County v. Southern P. R. Co. 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 782; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 535, 537, 28 L. ed. 238, 239, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Wynne, 224 U. S. 358, 56 L. ed. 800, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 42 L.R.A. (N.S.) 102; Stupeck v. Union P. R. Co. 200 Fed. 192; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Seegers, 207 U. S. 73, 52 L. ed. 108, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Black v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 122 Iowa, 32, 96 N. W. 984; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Jolliffe v. Brown, 14 Wash. 155, 53 Am. St. Rep. 868, 44 Pac. 149; Grand Island & W. C. R. Co. v. Swinbank, 51 Neb. 521, 71 N. W. 48; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Outcalt, 2 Colo. App. 395, 31 Pac. 177.

It discriminates against one class of litigants in favor of another, denying to plaintiff in error the equal protection of the laws.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Williamson v. Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co. 105 Fed. 31; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Jolliffe v. Brown, 14 Wash. 155, 53 Am. St. Rep. 868, 44 Pac. 149; Wilder v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 70 Mich. 382, 38 N. W. 289; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Moss, Miss. 641; Hocking Valley Coal Co. v. Rosser, 53 Ohio St. 12, 29 L.R.A. 386, 53 Am. St. Rep. 622, 41 N. E. 263; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 387, 388, 1 L. ed. 648, Builders' Supply Depot v. O'Connor, 150 265, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 909, 119 Am. St. 193, 88 Pac. 982, 11 Ann. Cas. 712; & North Ala. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Al Hocking Valley Coal Co. v. Rosser, St. 22, 29 L.R.A. 386, 53 Am. St. R 41 N. E. 263.

The law in its operation is pernic works a rank injustice.

No appearance for defendant i

NOTE.—On constitutionality of statute ...ing penalty or added liability for ...way company to pay claim—
... M. & S. R. Co. v.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a suit against the plaintiff in error for loss of property destroyed by fire communicated from its locomotive engine. A statute of South Dakota, after making the railroad company absolutely responsible in such cases, goes on to make it liable for double the amount of damage actually sustained unless it pays the full amount within sixty days from notice. If, within sixty days, it shall "offer in writing to pay a fixed sum, being the full amount of the damages sustained, and the owner shall refuse to accept the same, then in any action thereafter brought for such damages, when such owner recovers a less sum as damages than the amount so offered, then such owner shall recover only his damages, and the railway company shall recover its costs." S. D. Laws 1907, chap. 215. The plaintiff got a verdict for $780. The railroad had offered $500; less, that is, than the amount of the verdict, while the plaintiff, on the other hand, demanded more. In his demand, his declaration, and his testimony, he set the damage at $838.20. A judgment for double damages was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. 26 S. D. 378, 128 N. W. 472.

The defendant in error presented no argument, probably because he realized that under the recent decisions [168] of this court the judgment could not be sustained. No doubt the states have a large latitude in the policy that they will pursue and enforce, but the rudiments of fair play required by the 14th Amendment are wanting when a defendant is required to guess rightly what a jury will find, or pay double if that body sees fit to add 1 cent to the amount that was tendered, although the tender was obviously futile because of an excessive demand. The case is covered by St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Wynne, 224 U. S. 354, 56 L. ed. 799, 42 L.R.A.(N.S.) 102, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493. It is not like those in which a moderate penalty is imposed for failure to satisfy a demand found to be just. Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Jackson Vinegar Co. 226 U. S. 217, 57 L. ed. 193, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

Judgment reversed.

STATE OF ALABAMA, Plff. in Err.,
v.
SUDIE SCHMIDT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 168–174.)

Adverse possession — public lands — school sections.

The title of the state of Alabama to the 16th section school lands, given to such state by the act of March 2, 1819 (3 Stat. at L. 489, 491, chap. 47), § 6, may be extinguished by adverse possession for the length of time prescribed by the state statute of limitations.

[For other cases, see Adverse Possession, I. h, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 595.]

Argued January 12, 1914. Decided January 26, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Alabama to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Talladega City Court in favor of defendant in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

See same case below, — Ala. —, 61 So. 293.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Robert C. Brickell, Attorney General of Alabama, argued the cause, and, with Mr. R. B. Evins, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

By the grant of these lands for the particular use, the United States retained title for all other purposes or uses.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671.

The state of Alabama, in accepting the proposals upon which its admission into the Union was made contingent, disclaimed all right and title to waste or unappropriated lands lying within said territory. All other uses or purposes to which 16th section lands might be put, except the use for schools, being unappropriated by the United States, came within the above disclaimer.

Ibid.

A state statute of limitations, whereby lands granted by the United States to a specific use are diverted from that use into private ownership, is in conflict with the act of Congress making the grant, and void.

Ibid.

The state has no power to divert 16th section lands from the specific use for schools to which they were dedicated by the act of Congress.

Ibid.; Vincennes University v. Indiana, 14 How. 269, 14 L. ed. 416; State v. Springfield Twp. 6 Ind. 83, 22 How. 56, 16 L. ed. 256; Davis v. Indiana, 94 U. S. 792, 24 L. ed. 320; Morton v. Grenada Male & Female Academies, 16 Miss. 773.

The acceptance of the proposals of the act of Congress of March 2; 1819, created a contract between the United States and the state of Alabama, and the attempted diversion of these lands from the use to which granted, by a state statute of limitations, violates the obligation of this contract, and is void.

Digitized by Google

Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 162; Fenn v. Kinsey, 45 Mich. 446, 8 N. W. 64; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1089; United States use of Washington Acqueduct v. Great Falls Mfg. Co. 21 Md. 119; Lowry v. Francis, 2 Yerg. 534.

The acts of Congress making the grant are construed most strongly against the grantee, and in favor of the United States.

United States v. Michigan, 190 U. S. 379, 47 L. ed. 1103, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742.

The acts of Congress approved March 2, 1819, and March 2, 1827, are in pari materia, and must be construed as if passed at the same time.

Plummer v. Murray, 51 Barb. 201; People v. Aitchinson, 7 How. Pr. 241.

The grant of 16th sections for the use of schools is a part of the land system of the United States.

2 Kent, Com. 13th ed. 196, note e.

Mr. J. K. Dixon argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The grant of 16th sections by the act of Congress of March 2, 1819, is in perpetuity to the inhabitants of the several townships, but the legal title to the land is in the state, in trust for the inhabitants of the respective townships in which the lands lie, and a sale of a 16th section, pursuant to the act of the legislature, is valid and binding on the inhabitants of the township.

Long v. Brown, 4 Ala. 622.

This grant by Congress cannot properly be called a donation; it was the performance merely of a solemn obligation created by the compact with Georgia.

Ibid.

Congress, after the enactment of such law, did not have any right whatever to interfere in regard to the manner in which these lands were disposed of by the state, and therefore the petition of the state for authority to sell, and the act approved March 2, 1827, were unnecessary and unauthorized.

36 Cyc. 874–876; Long v. Brown, supra. Cooper v. Roberts, 18 How. 173, 182, 15 L. ed. 338, 341; Beecher v. Wetherby, 95 U. S. 517, 24 L. ed. 440.

The trusts created by these compacts (referring to this grant of 16th section land) relate to a subject certainly of universal interest, but of municipal concern, over which the power of the state is plenary and exclusive.

Cooper v. Roberts, 18 How. 173, 182, 15 [illegible] 341; Van Santvoord v. Roethler, [illegible] Ran. 472, 57 Pac. [illegible] 75 Miss. 822, 23 So. 773; Daggett v. Bonewitz, 107 Ind. 276, 7 N. E. 900.

When by act of Congress 16th sections of public lands were dedicated to the states for the support of schools, and the same were selected, the title thereto vested in the state and inhabitants of the township, and a claimant entering into possession of any portion of such land while the title was in the United States did not prevent his holding from being adverse to the township as soon as the title vested in it.

Hargis v. Congressional Twp. 29 Ind. 70; Schneider v. Hutchinson, 35 Or. 253, 76 Am. St. Rep. 486, 57 Pac. 324.

A purchaser of school lands derives his title from the state, and not from the United States, and the laws of the state authorizing the acquiring of title by adverse possession would be valid.

32 Cyc. 895; 1 Cyc. 1113.

The statute of limitations runs against the title to the land as far as the inhabitants of the township are concerned even if it did not run against the state, the title vesting in them as trustees upon the organization of such township.

Miller v. State, 38 Ala. 600.

The authority of the legislature to make the statute of limitations apply to suits by the state, or for the recovery of 16th section lands, is not doubted, and there is no reason why a different construction should be given the statute by a different principle applied when the suit is by the state, or one claming through the state, than that applied to private persons.

Wyatt v. Tisdale, 97 Ala. 594, 12 So. 233; Prestwood v. Watson, 111 Ala. 604, 20 So. 600; Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. Co. v. Linn, 123 Ala. 112, 82 Am. St. Rep. 108, 26 So. 245; Gaston v. State, 88 Ala. 459, 7 So. 340; State v. Schmidt, — Ala. —, 61 So. 293; Schneider v. Hutchinson, 76 Am. St. Rep. 486, note.

Adverse possession which is sufficient to bar the legal title of the trustee also bars the equitable estate of the cestui que trust. And this is so even though the cestui que trust is under some disability, such as infancy or coverture.

1 Cyc. 1121; Cox v. University of Alabama, 161 Ala. 639, 49 So. 814; Meeks v. Olpherts, 100 U. S. 564, 25 L. ed. 735.

Where a suit is prosecuted in the name of the United States only, on behalf of private persons, it is barred by laches and by the statute of limitations, if such are so barred.

Curtner v. United States, 149 U. S. 664, 37 L. ed. 890, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985, 1041.

If, through erroneous action of its officers, the bounty of the government in the particular instance has not reached those for whom it was intended, but has reached beneficiaries who were not intended to have these particular lands, the government may be relied on to effectuate its own designs, and to make good any moral obligation that rests upon it; but it had not such pecuniary or other interest in this litigation as entitled it to ask the suspension of the beneficent rules applied by the courts in the administration of justice between individuals.

Digitized by Google

Curtner v. United States, 149 U. S. 664, 37 L. ed. 890, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985, 1041; Shaffer v. Scudday, 19 How. 18, 15 L. ed. 593.

Messrs. John P. Tillman and William B. White also filed a brief for defendant in error:

The grant of the sections numbered 16 to the inhabitants of the townships for the use of schools in the state of Alabama, and the acceptance of the proposal contained in § 6 of the act for the admission of Alabama by the convention, operated as a present grant, and immediately devested the title of the United States to the 16th sections.

Cooper v. Roberts, 18 How. 173, 15 L. ed. 338; Hedrick v. Hughes, 15 Wall. 123, 21 L. ed. 52; Kissell v. St. Louis Public Schools, 18 How. 19, 15 L. ed. 324; Campbell v. Doe, 13 How. 244, 14 L. ed. 130; McNee v. Donahue, 142 U. S. 587, 35 L. ed. 1122, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Johanson v. Washington, 190 U. S. 179, 47 L. ed. 1008, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Beecher v. Wetherby, 95 U. S. 517, 24 L. ed. 440; United States v. Tully, 140 Fed. 899.

The Alabama grant of sections numbered 16 in the various townships being a grant of the entire title thereto, without reservation, vests in the grantee or grantees an indefeasible fee-simple title, and is not governed by the rules of law laid down with reference to grants of rights of way to railroads.

Cooper v. Roberts, 18 How. 173, 15 L. ed. 338; Hedrick v. Hughes, 15 Wall. 123, 21 L. ed. 52; Kissell v. St. Louis Public Schools, 18 How. 19, 15 L. ed. 324; Campbell v. Doe, 13 How. 244, 14 L. ed. 130; McNee v. Donahue, 142 U. S. 587, 35 L. ed. 1122, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Johanson v. Washington, 190 U. S. 179, 47 L. ed. 1008, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Beecher v. Wetherby, 95 U. S. 517, 24 L. ed. 440; United States v. Tully, 140 Fed. 899; Deseret Salt Co. v. Tarpey, 142 U. S. 241, 35 L. ed. 999, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Rutherford v. Greene, 2 Wheat. 196, 4 L. ed. 218; Toltec Ranch Co. v. Cook, 191 U. S. 532, 48 L. ed. 291, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Iowa R. Land Co. v. Blumer, 206 U. S. 482, 51 L. ed. 1148, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; Missouri Valley Land Co. v. Wiese, 208 U. S. 234, 52 L. ed. 466, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 294; Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 197 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 639, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302.

No one can take advantage of the nonperformance of a condition subsequent annexed to an estate in fee except the grantor or its successors. The same rule applies to a grant upon condition proceeding from the government.

Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 44, 22 L. ed. 551; Spokane & B. C. R. Co. v. Washington & G. N. R. Co. 219 U. S. 166, 55 L. ed. 159, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182; United States v. Northern P. R. Co. 152 U. S. 284, 38 L. ed. 443, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598.

Nothing in the Alabama grant of the 16th section school lands imports a limitation of the fee.

Stuart v. Easton, 170 U. S. 383, 42 L. ed. 1078, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650.

Adverse possession as against a trustee operates as well against the beneficiaries of the trust.

Meeks v. Olpherts, 100 U. S. 564, 25 L. ed. 735.

Adverse possession against any party in which title is so vested that such party may grant an indefeasible estate in fee simple ripens into a fee-simple title by the operation of the statute of limitations.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 197 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 639, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302; Cox v. University of Alabama, 161 Ala. 639, 49 So. 814.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit brought by the state of Alabama to recover possession of a specified part of section 16, township 17, range 5, Talladega county. It was agreed that the land was a part of the 16th section school lands given to the state by the act of March 2, 1819, chap. 47, § 6, 3 Stat. at L. 489, 491, and still belonged to the state if the defendant had not got a title by adverse possession, which it was agreed the defendant had if the statutes of Alabama, limiting suits like the present to twenty years, were valid. The trial court ruled that the statutes were valid, and ordered judgment for the defendant, and this judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. — Ala. —, 61 So. 293.

We are of opinion that the judgment must be affirmed. The above-mentioned act of Congress, under which Alabama became a state, provided that section 16 in every township "shall be granted to the inhabitants of such township for the use of schools." Of course the state must admit, as it expressly agreed, that these words vested the legal title in it, since it relies upon them for recovery in the present case. Any other interpretation hardly would be reasonable. In some cases the grant has been to the state in terms; but in whichever way expressed, probably it means the same thing, so far as the legal title is concerned. Certainly it has the same effect with regard to the scope of the state's legal control.

Digitized by Google

The argument for the plaintiff in error relies mainly upon Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671, which held that a right of way over public land [173] granted by the United States for railway purposes could not be extinguished by adverse possession under the statute of limitations of the state in which the land lay. The ground of that decision was that the grant to the railroad was not a conveyance of the land in fee simple absolute, but a limited grant "on an implied condition of reverter in the event that the company ceased to use or retain the land for the purpose for which it was granted." This decision has been met for some similar cases elsewhere by the act of June 24, 1912, chap. 181, 37 Stat. at L. 138. Union P. R. Co. v. Laramie Stock Yards Co. 231 U. S. 190, ante, 179, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101; Union P. R. Co. v. Snow, 231 U. S. 204, ante, 184, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104. But it does not apply to a gift to a state for a public purpose of which that state is the sole guardian and minister. As long ago as 1856 it was decided "the trusts created by these compacts relate to a subject certainly of universal interest, but of municipal concern, over which the power of the state is plenary and exclusive;" and it was held that the state of Michigan could sell its school lands without the consent of Congress. Cooper v. Roberts, 18 How. 173, 15 L. ed. 338. This decision adverted to the fact that it had been usual for Congress to authorize the sale of lands if the state should desire it, but suggested that it was unnecessary (which, indeed, followed from what was decided) and thus met the further argument here pressed that a qualified permission to sell was given to Alabama by a much later act of March 2, 1827, chap. 59, 4 Stat. at L. 237. It also disposes of other forms of the same contention, that the state law impairs the obligation of its contract, or involves a breach of trust, supposing that such positions are open to the state to take. American Emigrant Co. v. Adams County, 100 U. S. 61, 25 L. ed. 563; Spokane & B. C. R. Co. v. Washington & G. N. R. Co. 219 U. S. 166, 55 L. ed. 159, 31 Sup Ct. Rep. 182. The gift to the state is absolute, although, no doubt, as said in Cooper v. Roberts, "there is a sacred obligation imposed on its public faith." But that [174] obligation is honorary, like the one discussed in Conley v. Ballinger, 216 U. S. 84, 54 L. ed. 393, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224, and even in honor would not be broken by a sale and substitution of a fund, as in that case; a course, we believe, that has not been uncommon among the states. See further Stuart v. Easton, 170 U. S. 383, 394, 42 L. ed. 1078, 1082, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650.

Some reliance was placed upon Vincennes University v. Indiana, 14 How. 268, 14 L. ed. 416, but the decision of the majority in that case rested upon the grant having been made to a private corporation, of which the rights could not be impaired by the state.

The result of Cooper v. Roberts and of what we have said is that the state has authority to subject this land in its hands to the ordinary incidents of other titles in the state, and that the judgment must be affirmed. Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 197 U. S. 1, 8, 49 L. ed. 639, 642, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302.

Judgment affirmed.

JOSEPH A. TANEY, Trustee of the Estate of Miller Pure Rye Distilling Company, Appt.,

v.

PENN NATIONAL BANK OF READING.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 174–186.)

Fraudulent conveyances — retention of physical possession.

1. The rule that the retention of a physical possession by the vendor is fraud per se, and not merely evidence of fraud, even though there be nothing inconsistent with the most perfect honesty, is not applicable, in Pennsylvania, where the inherent nature of the transaction and the attendant circum-

---

NOTE.—As to presumption of fraud arising out of retention of possession by vendor of chattel—see note to Wilson v. Walrath, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1131.

As to whether mere inconvenience as to delivery is a satisfactory explanation of the retention of possession by the vendors—see note to W. P. Chamberlain Co. v. Tuttle, 25 L.R.A.(N.S.) 604.

On issuance and delivery by warehouseman of receipt for his own property as a constructive transfer of possession essential to a valid pledge—see notes to State v. Robb-Lawrence Co. 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 227; Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Taylor, 30 L.R.A. (N.S.) 552.

Generally, as to delivery and possession of property pledged—see note to Yeatman v. New Orleans Sav. Inst. 24 L. ed. U. S. 589.

Digitized by Google

stances are such as to preclude the possibility of a delivery by the vendor that would be consistent with the avowed and fair purpose of the sale, or where the absence of a physical delivery is excused by the usages of the trade or business in which the sale is made.

[For other cases, see Fraudulent Conveyances, V., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Pledge — of distillery warehouse receipts — change of possession.

2. Physical delivery to the pledgee is not essential, in Pennsylvania, to validate, as against the creditors of the pledgeor, a pledge by a distilling company of a specified number of barrels of whisky stored in its own bonded distillery warehouse, accompanied by the issuance and transfer to the pledgee, conformably to trade usage, of the distilling company's warehouse receipts representing such whisky, which, though stored in the company's own warehouse, is in the control of the Federal government, and cannot be removed without payment of the internal revenue tax.

[For other cases, see Pledge, 13–21, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 115.]

Argued December 9 and 10, 1913. Decided January 26, 1914.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania, sustaining a pledge as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the pledgeor's estate. Affirmed.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 437, 187 Fed. 689.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Joseph Hill Brinton argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

It is necessary not only that appearances should agree with the real state of things, but also that the real state of things should be honest and consistent with public policy, and that it afford no unnecessary facility for deception.

Clow v. Woods, 5 Serg. & R. 277; 9 Am. Dec. 346.

A man may not be his own warehouseman.

Tradesmen's Nat. Bank v. Thomas Kent Mfg. Co. 186 Pa. 556, 65 Am. St. Rep. 876, 40 Atl. 1018; Moors v. Jagode, 195 Pa. 163, 45 Atl. 723; Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 1117, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 11 Ann. Cas. 789; Re Millbourne Mills Co. 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 552, 96 C. C. A. 629, 172 Fed. 177.

Possession of the subject of the pledge is an almost universal requirement of the law of pledge to perfect the pledgee's title.

Collins's Appeal, 107 Pa. 590, 52 Am. Rep. 479.

The convenience of the parties is not of moment.

Jenkins v. Eichelberger, 4 Watts, 121, 28 Am. Dec. 691.

Delivery must be actual, and not merely symbolical, where actual delivery is practicable, and if it is not practicable, the party should leave nothing undone to secure the public from deception.

Barlow v. Fox, 203 Pa. 114, 52 Atl. 57.

If a purchaser pays the price for the goods purchased by him, without taking possession of them, he takes the risk of the integrity and solvency of his vendor when the rights of a subsequent bona fide purchaser or an execution creditor arise.

White v. Gunn, 205 Pa. 229, 54 Atl. 901; Clow v. Woods, 5 Serg. & R. 275, 9 Am. Dec. 346.

A distiller cannot pass title to whisky in his own warehouse by delivery of receipts merely.

Union Trust Co. v. Trumbull, 137 Ill. 146, 27 N. E. 24.

In Pennsylvania, at least, the question as to the validity of such warehouse receipts is open.

Keil v. Harris, 4 Sadler (Pa.) 201, 6 Atl. 750; Miller v. Browarsky, 130 Pa. 372, 18 Atl. 643; Rosenbaum v. Batjer, 154 Pa. 544, 25 Atl. 754; Sloan v. Johnson, 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 643.

Messrs. A. Leo Weil, Lawrence Maxwell, and Philip S. Zieber argued the cause, and, with Mr. Thomas Iaeger Snyder, filed a brief for appellee:

The validity of a pledge or contract of sale, or what constitutes delivery under the laws of any state, must be determined by the local law of the state in which the transaction took place.

First Nat. Bank v. Guarantee Title & T. Co. 101 C. C. A. 507, 178 Fed. 189; Bryant v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co. 214 U. S. 279, 53 L. ed. 997, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Dooley v. Pease, 180 U. S. 126, 45 L. ed. 457, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 329; Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 1117, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 11 Ann. Cas. 789.

No unbending test of the sufficiency of delivery and retention of possession can be applied to all cases; in passing upon the sufficiency of possession taken by the purchaser in any particular case there must be taken into consideration: (a) the character of the property; (b) the use to be made of it; (c) the nature and object of the transaction; (d) the position of the parties; and (e) the usages of trade or business.

Digitized by Google

Clow v. Woods, 5 Serg. & R. 275, 9 Am. Dec. 346; McKibbin v. Martin, 64 Pa. 352, 3 Am. Rep. 588; Twyne's Case, 3 Coke, 80, 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. 8th ed. 1, 5 Eng. Rul. Cas. 2; Hugus v. Robinson, 24 Pa. 9; Barr v. Reitz, 53 Pa. 256; Crawford v. Davis, 99 Pa. 576; Cessna v. Nimick, 113 Pa. 70, 4 Atl. 193; Stephens v. Gifford, 137 Pa. 219, 21 Am. St. Rep. 868, 20 Atl. 542; Pressel v. Bice, 142 Pa. 263, 21 Atl. 813; Garretson v. Hackenberg, 144 Pa. 107, 22 Atl. 875; Bell v. McCloskey, 155 Pa. 319, 26 Atl. 547; Goddard v. Weil, 165 Pa. 419, 30 Atl. 1000; Keystone Watch Case Co. v. Fourth Street Nat. Bank, 194 Pa. 535, 45 Atl. 328; Barlow v. Fox, 203 Pa. 114, 52 Atl. 57; White v. Gunn, 205 Pa. 229, 54 Atl. 901; Babb v. Clemson, 10 Serg. & R. 419, 13 Am. Dec. 684; Martin v. Mathiot, 14 Serg. & R. 214, 16 Am. Dec. 491; Hower v. Geesaman, 17 Serg. & R. 251; Shaw v. Levy, 17 Serg. & R. 99; Wilbur v. Strickland, 1 Rawle, 458; Herron v. Fry, 2 Penr. & W. 263; Carpenter v. Mayer, 5 Watts, 483; Trovillo v. Shingles, 10 Watts, 438; Hoofsmith v. Cope, 6 Whart. 53; Young v. M'Clure, 2 Watts & S. 147; Cadbury v. Nolen, 5 Pa. 320; Haynes v. Hunsicker, 26 Pa. 58; Born v. Shaw, 29 Pa. 288, 72 Am. Dec. 633; Milne v. Henry, 40 Pa. 352; Graham v. McCreary, 40 Pa. 515, 80 Am. Dec. 591; Brawn v. Keller, 43 Pa. 104, 82 Am. Dec. 554; Steelwagon v. Jeffries, 44 Pa. 407; Fry v. Miller, 45 Pa. 441; Dewart v. Clement, 48 Pa. 413; Long v. Knapp, 54 Pa. 514; Smith v. Crisman, 91 Pa. 428; Stadtfeld v. Huntsman, 92 Pa. 53, 37 Am. Rep. 661; Parks v. Smith, 94 Pa. 46; Pearson v. Carter, 94 Pa. 156; Brunswick & B. County v. Hoover, 95 Pa. 508, 40 Am. Rep. 674; Ziegler v. Handrick, 106 Pa. 87; Buckley v. Duff, 114 Pa. 596, 8 Atl. 188; Ditman v. Raule, 124 Pa. 225, 16 Atl. 819; Peek v. Heim, 127 Pa. 500, 14 Am. St. Rep. 865, 17 Atl. 984; Renninger v. Spatz, 128 Pa. 524, 15 Am. St. Rep. 692, 18 Atl. 405; Ayers v. McCandless, 147 Pa. 49, 23 Atl. 344; Caulfield v. Van Brunt, 173 Pa. 428, 34 Atl. 230; Lehr v. Brodbeck, 192 Pa. 535, 73 Am. St. Rep. 828, 43 Atl. 1006; Riggs v. Bair, 213 Pa. 402, 62 Atl. 1086; Hill v. Leibig Mfg. Co. 3 Pa. Super. Ct. 398; Gattle Bros. v. Kremp, 6 Pa. Super. Ct. 514; Jones v. Harvey, 9 Pa. Super. Ct. 326; Kendig v. Binkley, 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 463.

For some purpose, the government had the control and a joint possession of the whisky stored in the warehouse.

United States v. 36 Barrels of High Wines, 7 Blatchf. 459, Fed. Cas. No. 16,468; United States v. Witten, 143 U. S. 76, 36 L. ed. 81, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372; McCullough v. Large, 20 Fed. 309.

A transfer of property in the hands of a bailee is good against the creditors of the owner without actual delivery.

Linton v. Butz, 7 Pa. 89, 47 Am. Dec. 501; Worman v. Kramer, 73 Pa. 385; Woods v. Hull, 81 *Pa. 453; Caulfield v. Van Brunt, 173 Pa. 433, 34 Atl. 230.

Possession may be held by a third person for the pledgee, when such person will be considered as the pledgee's agent.

Brown v. Warren, 43 N. H. 430; Tibbetts v. Flanders, 18 N. H. 285; McCready v. Haslock, 3 Tenn. Ch. 13; Johnson v. Smith, 11 Humph. 396; Weems v. Delta Moss Co. 33 La. Ann. 973; First Nat. Bank v. Harkness, 42 W. Va. 156, 32 L.R.A. 408, 24 S. E. 548; Lewis v. Dillard, 22 C. C. A. 488, 40 U. S. App. 404, 76 Fed. 688.

As between the parties themselves, an actual delivery may not be necessary, and the possession may be regarded as constructive where the contract places it.

Huntington v. Sherman, 60 Conn. 467, 22 Atl. 769; Tuttle v. Robinson, 78 Ill. 332; Martin v. Reid, 11 C. B. N. S. 730, 31 L. J. C. P. N. S. 126, 5 L. T. N. S. 727.

Where personal property is pledged, the pledgee acquires the legal title and the possession. If it remain in the apparent possession of the pledgeor, he holds as agent of the pledgee.

Easton v. German-American Bank, 127 U. S. 532, 32 L. ed. 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1297.

Established trade customs, when long continued and unbroken, bring with them strong presumptions of their legality and validity.

12 Cyc. 1053, 1061, 1084; Priestley v. Pratt, L. R. 2 Exch. 102, 36 L. J. Exch. N. S. 89, 16 L. T. N. S. 64, 15 Week. Rep. 639; Ghen v. Rich, 8 Fed. 159; Tyson v. Smith, 9 Ad. & El. 406, 8 Eng. Rul. Cas. 316; Cox v. Charleston F. & M. Ins. Co. 3 Rich. L. 333, 45 Am. Dec. 771; Horton v. Beckman, 6 T. R. 760; Miller v. Browarsky, 130 Pa. 372, 18 Atl. 643; Guillon v. Earnshaw, 169 Pa. 463, 34 Atl. 545; White v. Gunn, 205 Pa. 229, 54 Atl. 901.

The property could not have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against the bankrupt, because whisky in a distillery bonded warehouse is not subject to levy.

Fischer v. Dandistal, 9 Fed. 145; McCullough v. Large, 20 Fed. 309.

There was no constructive fraud.

White v. Gunn, 205 Pa. 229, 54 Atl. 901; McCullough v. Willey, 200 Pa. 172, 49 Atl. 944; Williams v. Bristol Rolling Mill Co. 174 Pa. 299, 34 Atl. 442; Goddard v.

Digitized by Google

Weil, 165 Pa. 419, 30 Atl. 1000; Davies v. Oxenreider, 43 Pa. Super. Ct. 506; Gibson v. Stevens, 8 How. 384, 12 L. ed. 1123; Whittle v. Phelps, 181 Mass. 317, 63 N. E. 907; Northern Mercantile Co. v. Schultz, 56 Wash. 393, 105 Pac. 850; Kingsley v. White, 57 Vt. 565.

The bank, being a bona fide pledgee for value in due course of business, by the delivery of the warehouse receipts for the whisky in controversy for a loan obtained from it before the adjudication in bankruptcy, is entitled to the whisky as against the bankrupt, his trustee, and his creditors.

Pattison v. Dale, 115 C. C. A. 639, 196 Fed. 5; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Roxbury Distilling Co. 196 Fed. 76.

[179] Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

On February 3, 1908, a petition in bankruptcy was filed against the Miller Pure Rye Distilling Company; it was adjudicated a bankrupt on February 19, 1908, and the appellant was appointed trustee. The Penn National Bank of Reading, Pennsylvania, the appellee, intervened in the bankruptcy proceeding with a petition asking for the delivery to it of 200 barrels of whisky stored in the bonded warehouse of the distilling company, upon the ground that the property had been lawfully pledged by the company to the bank. The district court sustained the lien and accordingly held the claimant entitled to the delivery sought (176 Fed. 606); and, on appeal, this decree was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals (109 C. C. A. 437, 187 Fed. 689).

The pertinent facts are these: On August 27, 1907, the bank lent to the distilling company $2,500, for which the company gave its four months' note, reciting the deposit with the bank, as collateral security, of "200 bbls. whisky in bonded warehouse at Womelsdorf, Pa., as per Warehouse Rects. gauger's ctf. etc. accompanying." The form of the receipts is shown by the following copy of one of them:

No. 5454. 25 Bbls.

First District of Pennsylvania.

United States Internal Revenue Distillery Bonded Warehouse of Miller Pure Rye Distilling Company.

Ryeland, Berks Co., Pa., August 26th, 1907.

Received on Storage from Ourselves Twenty-five (25) Barrels of Miller Pure Rye Whiskey Distilled, Marked and Numbered as per Record Attached, Subject to our Order and Risk of Loss or Damage by Fire, The Elements, Leakage, Evaporation or Accident, Deliverable only upon Surrender of this Certificate, Payment of Tax and other [180] Charges due Thereon, and Storage at the Rate of Five Cents per Barrel per month, from August 26th, 1907.

Inspection Spring 1907.

Stored in Warehouse No. 2.

Serial Nos. of Packages 7964/7988.

Miller Pure Rye Distilling Co.,
S. V. Nagle, President.

Address all Communications to Miller Pure Rye Distilling Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

Special Notice—Particular care should be taken of this Certificate as the whisky cannot be delivered without its surrender.

These receipts were indorsed by the company, and, with the gauger's certificates, were delivered to the bank. The whisky itself was not actually delivered, and remained in the bonded warehouse. The note not being paid at maturity, the bank, upon notice, sold the warehouse receipts at public sale on February 5, 1908, and became the purchaser. This sale, however, is not material to the present question, which turns upon the validity of the lien.

There is no doubt as to the intention and actual good faith of the parties. The loan was made in reliance upon the designated security, and the ground of attack is that the lien failed for want of delivery of possession.

The legal effect of the transaction depends upon the local law. Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 49 L. ed. 956, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Hiscock v. Varick Bank, 206 U. S. 28, 51 L. ed. 945, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 425, 51 L. ed. 1117, 1123, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 11 Ann. Cas. 789; Bryant v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co. 214 U. S. 279, 53 L. ed. 997, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614. Reviewing the decisions of the supreme court of Pennsylvania with respect to sales,—the principles of which were deemed to be applicable,—the circuit court of appeals reached the following conclusion: "It suffices to say that the law of [181] Pennsylvania, in respect of the question we are now considering, is settled by a line of cases extending through nearly a century. Starting with the policy of the statute of Elizabeth, for the circumvention of fraud and deceit in sales of personal property (which nowhere in terms refers to retention of possession by a vendor, it has wisely developed the spirit of that statute and evolved the salutary rule, that where there is nothing in the case but the retention of a physical possession by the vendor, which he is capable of delivering to the vendee, such retention is fraud per se, and not merely evidence of fraud, even though there be nothing inconsistent with the most perfect honesty. But this rule is not applied by the courts of Pennsylvania to cases where the inherent nature of the transaction and the attendant circumstances are such as to preclude the possibility of a delivery by the vendor, that would be consistent with the avowed and fair purpose of the sale, or where the absence of a physical delivery is excused by the usages of the trade or business in which the sale was made." 109 C. C. A. 437, 444, 187 Fed. 689, 696.

Digitized by Google

We entertain no doubt as to the correctness of this statement (Clow v. Woods, 5 Serg. & R. 277, 9 Am. Dec. 346; Barr v. Reitz, 53 Pa. 256; McKibbin v. Martin, 64 Pa. 352, 3 Am. Rep. 588; Crawford v. Davis, 99 Pa. 576; Stephens v. Gifford, 137 Pa. 219, 21 Am. St. Rep. 286, 20 Atl. 542; Pressel v. Bice, 142 Pa. 263, 21 Atl. 813; Garretson v. Hackenberg, 144 Pa. 107, 22 Atl. 875; Barlow v. Fox, 203 Pa. 114, 52 Atl. 57; White v. Gunn, 205 Pa. 229, 54 Atl. 901), and it was in the light of these principles that the court below held that, considering the situation of the property and the usages of the business, the transaction in question was valid.

To insure collection of the heavy tax that is laid upon distilled spirits, the production is carefully supervised and the product is impounded. Rev. Stat. §§ 3247-3334, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2107-2183, as amended; act of May 28, 1880, chap. 108, 21 Stat. at L. 145; act of August 27, 1894, chap. 349, §§ 48-67, 28 Stat. at L. 509, 563-568, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2109, 2141-2146, 2102, 2052, 2166, 2117. Every distiller [182] is required to provide, at his own expense, "a warehouse, to be situated on and to constitute a part of his distillery premises, and to be used only for the storage of distilled spirits of his own manufacture until the tax thereon shall have been paid." This warehouse, when approved, by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, is declared by the statute to be "a bonded warehouse of the United States, to be known as a distillery warehouse," and is "under the direction and control of the collector of the district, and in charge of an internal-revenue storekeeper, assigned thereto by the Commissioner" (§ 3271). While the statute provides that "every distillery warehouse shall be in the joint custody of the storekeeper and the proprietor thereof," the control of the government's representative is made dominant, as in the nature of the case it must be in order to fulfil the purposes of the act. The warehouse, the statute continues, "shall be kept securely locked, and shall at no time be unlocked, or opened, or remain open, unless in the presence of such storekeeper, or other person who may be designated to act for him, as provided by law; and no articles shall be received in or delivered from such warehouse except on an order or permit addressed to the storekeeper and signed by the collector having control of the warehouse" (§ 3274). Under the departmental regulations "the only lock to the warehouse door must be the government lock, the key of which must at all times be in charge of the storekeeper." There must be an immediate removal of the distilled spirits to the distillery warehouse as soon as they are drawn into casks or packages and gauged, proved, and marked, as required, and thereupon the internal revenue gauger "shall, in the presence of the storekeeper of the warehouse, place upon the head of the cask or package an engraved stamp, which shall be signed by the collector of the district and storekeeper and gauger; and shall have written thereon the number of proof-gallons contained [183] therein, the name of the distiller, the date of the receipt in the warehouse, and the serial number of each cask or package, in progressive order, as the same are received from the distillery" (§ 3287; act of May 28, 1880, 21 Stat. at L. 147, chap. 108, § 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2130). The spirits must be entered for deposit in the warehouse under the regulations prescribed by the commissioner, and bond must be given for the payment of the tax. The statute gives the form of the entry which, made in triplicate and duly verified, must set forth the name of the person making it, the designation of the warehouse, the specification of the spirits deposited, with the marks and serial numbers of the packages, etc., and a statement of the amount of tax. Withdrawal may be made on payment of the tax—which is payable within eight years—by application to the collector in charge of the warehouse, and the making of a withdrawal entry (§§ 3293, 3294 act of May 28, 1880, 21 Stat. at L. 145, 146, chap. 108, §§ 4, 5, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2133, 2135; act of August 27, 1894, 28 Stat. at L. 563, chap. 349, § 49, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2141). Provision is made for regauging and for an allowance for loss from leakage or evaporation (id. § 50; act of March 3, 1899, chap. 435, 30 Stat. at L. 1349, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2147; act of Jan. 13, 1903, chap. 134, 32 Stat. at L. 770, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 955); and after four years the spirits may be bottled in bond, in a separate portion of the warehouse, set apart for that purpose, under the supervision of the government official (act of March 3, 1897, chap. 379, 29 Stat. at L. 626, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2150). The storekeeper is to keep "a warehouse-book" in which all deposits and deliveries are to be entered with appropriate description, including marks and serial numbers (§ 3301). And the removal "of any distilled spirits from a distillery warehouse . . . in any manner other than is provided by law" is punishable by fine and imprisonment (§ 3296).

Digitized by Google

The minute regulations of the statute, and the provision for prolonged governmental control, proceed upon a recognition of the exigencies of the business. It is a [184] matter of common knowledge that the product is not ready to be marketed for consumption when it is drawn from the still. It must undergo an aging process, and for this purpose it is kept in store for several years. In laying the tax, Congress has taken this necessity into consideration, permitting a long postponement of the required payment, the spirits meanwhile being held in charge of the government's representative. It is, however, a matter of obvious business importance that the distiller should be able to release the capital represented in the cost of production of the spirits in store, and to make it available for further production; and hence the practice is well established to deal with the product in the bonded warehouse by sale or pledge, storage certificate suitably identifying the property being delivered in lieu of the actual transfer of possession. The district court found as a fact that it is "the unbroken custom of the trade to treat storage receipts for spirits as completely equivalent to the spirits themselves, and to sell or pledge them freely without question." This finding is approved by the circuit court of appeals, and the fact that this custom exists we understand to be undisputed.

It is argued for the appellant that one cannot make himself a warehouseman of his own goods, and isues so-called receipts to take the place of the delivery which the law requires to give effect to his sale or pledge (Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 422, 51 L. ed. 1117, 1122, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 11 Ann. Cas. 789; Trademen's Nat. Bank v. Thomas Kent Mfg. Co. 186 Pa. 556, 65 Am. St. Rep. 876, 40 Atl. 1018). The argument ignores the special circumstances of the case and the restrictions imposed by law upon the distiller. The building is his, but the government is in complete control. The spirits are his, but he is subject to fine and imprisonment if he attempts to remove them. It is undoubtedly true that the government is not strictly a bailee. It assumes no responsibility to the distiller for the safekeeping of the goods (United States v. Witten, 143 U. S. 76, 78, 36 L. ed. 81, 82, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372). But the immunity [185] which is incident to the exercise of governmental power in no way limits its effect upon the distiller's relation to the goods. They are effectually taken out of his power, so that he is absolutely unable to make a physical delivery of them until the tax is paid. On the other hand, to pay the tax and remove the property before the aging process is completed would defeat the object of the deposit for which the statute provides, and would frustrate the purpose of a transfer of spirits in bond, which is an entirely lawful transaction. In these circumstances, the certificates—such as were here used—appropriately represent the property.

It is said that the distiller need not use his own warehouse, but may place the goods in one of he general bonded warehouses established under the act of 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 564, 565, chap. 349). The appellee asserts that this would be impracticable; that no general bonded warehouse had been established in the collection district in question; that there are only twelve in the entire country, with a capacity that is extremely small in comparison with the output of the distilleries. But, aside from this, the distillery warehouse is equally recognized by law; it is "a bonded warehouse of the United States." If it is a fit place for storage, the distiller is not obliged to remove the spirits elsewhere. And while they are thus deposited in conformity with law, he is not debarred from passing title or creating a special interest by way of pledge.

The fundamental objection is that the custom, to which the entire trade is adjusted, is opposed to public policy. But we know of no ground for thus condemning honest transactions which grow out of the recognized necessities of a lawful business. The case is not one where credit may be assumed to be given upon the faith of the ostensible ownership of goods in the debtor's possession. Everyone dealing with distillers is familiar with the established practice in accordance with which spirits are held in store, [186] under governmental control, and are transferred by the delivery of such documents as we have here. There is no warrant for saying that creditors are misled by delusive appearance. The usage serves a fair purpose and there is no public policy which requires that the trade should be thrown into disorder by a refusal to uphold it. It is urged that frauds may be perpetrated by the duplication of such documents; but the present dispute does not call for the determination of the equities as between two innocent purchasers. We are concerned here simply with the rights of creditors represented by a trustee in bankruptcy, and we agree with the court below in its conclusion that, in the circumstances disclosed, his right is inferior to that of the appellee.

Digitized by Google

The decree is affirmed.

Affirmed.

CHAPMAN & DEWEY LUMBER COMPANY and Chapman & Dewey Land Company, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

ST. FRANCIS LEVEE DISTRICT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 186–198.)

Public lands — swamp and overflowed lands — unsurveyed areas — sunk lands.

1. The unsurveyed area within the exterior lines of a township, designated upon the official plat as a meandered body of water called "Sunk Lands," was not conveyed to the state of Arkansas by a patent from the United States, issued under the swamp land act of September 28, 1850 (9 Stat. at L. 519, chap. 84), which described the land conveyed as the whole of the township, containing a specified number of acres (which corresponded to the total acreage of the surveyed areas), according to the official survey, although at the time of the survey and the date of the swamp land act such unsurveyed area was in fact not a lake or permanent body of water, but was only temporarily overflowed, and was not distinctly lower or materially different from the adjoining lands.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, I. c, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — swamp and overflowed lands — passing of title.

2. The states acquired only an inchoate title under the swamp land act of September 28, 1850, to lands which were never listed as swamp lands, although they may have been such in fact.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, I. c, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — swamp and overflowed lands — extinguishing inchoate title.

3. The inchoate title of the state of Arkansas to unidentified swamp and overflowed lands under the swamp land act of September 28, 1850, was extinguished by a compromise and settlement between the state and the United States, approved by the state legislature in Ark. Laws 1897, p. 88, and by Congress in the act of April 29, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 367, chap. 229), by which the state accepted the lands theretofore patented, approved, or confirmed to it under the swamp land act as the full measure of lands due to it thereunder, and relinquished to the United States all other claims or demands, adjusted or unadjusted, growing out of that act.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, I. c, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — swamp and overflowed lands — relinquishment — effect on levee district.

4. A levee district to which had passed, under Ark. Laws 1893, p. 172, the state's inchoate title to listed lands under the swamp land act of September 28, 1850, is bound, as a subordinate agency of the state, by the subsequent action of the state in relinquishing its inchoate title to the United States as part of a compromise and settlement.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, I. c, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 82.]

Argued December 12, 1913. Decided January 26, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Chancery Court of Poinsett County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in a suit by a levee district to recover for timber alleged to have been wrongfully cut from unsurveyed lands. Reversed.[1]

See same case below, 100 Ark. 94, 139 S. W. 625.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry D. Ashley argued the cause, and, with Mr. William S. Gilbert, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The whole township theory is the only one which would put the title in the plaintiff levee board. This theory is against numerous decisions of this court and against the rulings of the Land Department of the United States and the entire system for the survey and disposition of the public lands.

Re Arkansas Sunk Lands, 37 Land Dec. 345, 462; Cragin v. Powell, 128 U. S. 691, 32 L. ed. 566, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; Little v. Williams, 88 Ark. 37, 113 S. W. 340; Gazzam v. Phillips, 20 How. 372, 15 L. ed. 958.

When, in the extension of lines of public surveys, a lake is meandered, its area is segregated from the public domain, and beds of inland non-navigable meandered lakes or lands uncovered by the rescission of the waters of such lakes from natural or

---

NOTE.—On the effect of meander line upon boundary of Federal grant—see note to Security Land & Exploration Co. v. Burns, 48 L. ed. U. S. 662.

On effect of bounding grant on river or tide water—see note to Hanlon v. Hobson, 42 L.R.A. 510.

[1] Rehearing denied June 22, 1914. See post, —.

Digitized by Google

artificial causes, since the survey and disposition of the adjacent shore lands, do not belong to the United States, but to the riparian owners.

Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 35 L. ed. 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840; Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. 190 U. S. 466, 47 L. ed. 1139, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Whitaker v. McBride, 197 U. S. 510, 49 L. ed. 857, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530; Harrison v. Fite, 78 C. C. A. 447, 148 Fed. 781.

The doctrine above announced is the lex naturæ and common law applied to grants by the United States of public lands bounded and meandered on inland streams, lakes, and ponds, without reservation or restriction of terms; and such grants are to be construed, as to their effect, according to the laws of the state where the land lies.

Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Butler, 159 U. S. 87, 40 L. ed. 85, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 991.

The common-law doctrine of riparian rights is fully recognized in Arkansas.

Harrison v. Fite, 78 C. C. A. 447, 148 Fed. 781; Warren v. Chambers, 25 Ark. 120, 4 Am. Rep. 23, 91 Am. Dec. 538; Rhodes v. Cissel, 82 Ark. 367, 101 S. W. 758; Little v. Williams, 88 Ark. 37, 113 S. W. 340.

While we believe the courts have generally held the doctrine of estoppel as not applicable to the United States, we certainly think that where private rights have accrued and parties have changed their condition on the faith of the ruling of the Land Department, there should be some consistent continuity to such rulings.

Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 176, 37 L. ed. 127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; United States v. Stone, 2 Wall. 525, 535, 17 L. ed. 765, 767; Re G. A. Burns, 23 Land Dec. 430; Re Denody, 11 Land Dec. 504; United States v. Bank of Metropolis, 15 Pet. 377, 10 L. ed. 774; United States v. Stone, 2 Wall. 525, 17 L. ed. 765.

The mistake in the surveys which prevented the doctrine of Hardin v. Jordan and cases following from being applied in cases of Horne v. Smith, 159 U. S. 40, 40 L. ed. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988, and Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 175 U. S. 300, 44 L. ed. 171, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124, would equally apply to mistake in a metes and bounds description which was based on a private survey or on no survey at all, but called for ancient monuments, such as trees and so forth, and failed in its courses and distances to go to the water-covered area for which the description called.

Mr. Samuel Adams argued the cause, and, with Messrs. H. F. Roleson, J. C. Hawthorne, and N. F. Lamb, filed a brief for defendant in error:

In spite of the fact that these lands had not been surveyed even into townships, the Land Department repeatedly held that a description identifying the lands would be sufficient for patenting.

Re Florida, 8 Land Dec. 65, 18 Land Dec. 26, 19 Land Dec. 251, 24 Land Dec. 147.

Where the description of lands in a conveyance is clear, the entire area within the description will pass, and no exception exists unless that exception is clearly stated.

2 Devlin, Deeds, § 979; Wendall v. Fisher, 187 Mass. 81, 72 N. E. 322.

The government was without authority by express exception to exclude these sunk lands and non-navigable rivers or lakes, because they were included in the grant.

Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 35 L. ed. 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840.

No exception of such nature could possibly be implied.

Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. 190 U. S. 452, 459, 47 L. ed. 1134, 1137, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

The statement of area in the approved list and patent is immaterial.

Warvelle, Abstracts, § 207; Bishop v. Morgan, 82 Ill. 352, 25 Am. Rep. 327; Ufford v. Wilkins, 33 Iowa, 110; Fuller v. Carr, 33 N. J. L. 157; Veve y Diaz v. Sanchez, 226 U. S. 234, 240, 57 L. ed. 201, 203, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36; Powell v. Clark, 5 Mass. 355, 4 Am. Dec. 67; 3 Washb. Real Prop. 6th ed. § 2322, p. 386; 2 Devlin, Deeds, § 1044; Vowles v. Craig, 8 Cranch, 371, 3 L. ed. 593; Spreckels v. Brown, 212 U. S. 208, 53 L. ed. 476, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; Hyde v. Phillips, 61 Wash. 314, 112 Pac. 257; Wright v. Wright, 34 Ala. 194; Dalton v. Rust, 22 Tex. 133; Hall v. Mayhew, 15 Md. 551; Pierce v. Faunce, 37 Me. 63; Reddick v. Leggat, 7 N. C. 539; Hunter v. Morse, 49 Tex. 219; Jackson ex dem. Livingston v. Barringer, 15 Johns. 471; Kruse v. Scripps, 11 Ill. 98; Petts v. Gaw, 15 Pa. 218; Doe ex dem. Phillips v. Porter, 3 Ark. 60, 36 Am. Dec. 448; Towell v. Etter, 69 Ark. 34, 59 S. W. 1096, 63 S. W. 53.

It has been repeatedly decided by this and other courts, that inasmuch as the areas shown on plats of surveys made before the swamp land acts were passed were made primarily for the purpose of ascertaining the quantity of upland for which a purchaser from the government should pay, they had no effect in restricting patents under either the swamp land act of 1849, applying to Louisiana alone, or the swamp land act of 1850, which is concerned in this case.

Digitized by Google

Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. 190 U. S. 452, 47 L. ed. 1134, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; McDade v. Bossier Levee Board, 109 La. 626, 33 So. 628; Tolleston Club v. State, 141 Ind. 197, 38 N. E. 214, 40 N. E. 690; Kean v. Roby, 145 Ind. 221, 42 N. E. 1011; Stoner v. Rice, 121 Ind. 51, 6 L.R.A. 387, 22 N. E. 968; People v. Warner, 116 Mich. 228, 74 N. W. 705.

Meander lines in government surveys and plats are principally intended not as boundary lines, but to assist in fixing the acreage of uplands for which a purchaser is expected to pay.

McDade v. Bossier Levee Board, 109 La. 626, 33 So. 628; Tolleston Club v. State, 141 Ind. 197, 38 N. E. 214, 40 N. E. 690; Kean v. Roby, 145 Ind. 221, 42 N. E. 1011; Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. 190 U. S. 459, 47 L. ed. 1137, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 380, 35 L. ed. 428, 432, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 175 U. S. 300, 44 L. ed. 171, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124.

Yet where lands are sold by the acre, and an outside meander line, taken with the other boundaries of the tract conveyed, in fact incloses the acreage bought, paid for, and intended to be conveyed, and, as found to be the fact in this case, the meander line does not mark the shore of a permanent body of water, in such cases the courts have held the meander line to be part of the boundary, and the acreage sold and recited to be material.

Security Land & Exploration Co. v. Burns, 193 U. S. 167, 48 L. ed. 662, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; French-Glenn Live Stock Co. v. Springer, 185 U. S. 47, 46 L. ed. 800, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 175 U. S. 300, 44 L. ed. 171, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Horne v. Smith, 159 U. S. 40, 40 L. ed. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988; Western Invest. Co. v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 35 Or. 298, 57 Pac. 912.

The distinction which we think exists between the effect of meander lines and a statement of acreage in a patent where the right is grounded upon the character of the land, and one where the right is grounded on a purchase at an acre price, is clearly recognized in McDade v. Bossier Levee Board, 109 La. 635, 33 So. 628.

Even if the notation "sunk lands" were to be taken as proving the existence of a permanent body of water in 1850, this would only result in an additional reason why title to the sunk lands passed to the state of Arkansas under its approved list and patents.

Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 35 L. ed. 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840; Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. 190 U. S. 452, 47 L ed. 1134, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

The swamp and overflow land act of September 28, 1850, was a grant in præsenti, and passed equitable title to the state. This title the state conveyed to the levee district. The levee district, having at least equitable title, and there being nothing further to be done by the government, even on the supposition that the legal title had not passed to the state, and so to the district, except the ministerial duty of issuing a patent, was entitled to assert its ownership as against all third persons.

Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 30 L. ed. 1039, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; Tubbs v. Wilhoit, 138 U. S. 134, 34 L. ed. 887, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; Iowa R. Land Co. v. Blumer, 206 U. S. 482, 51 L. ed. 1148, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769.

The property rights of municipal corporations cannot be taken away by legislative action, without compensation.

Grogan v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 590; Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 62 Vt. 467, 10 L.R.A. 405, 20 Atl. 820; Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158 Mass. 509, 35 Am. St. Rep. 515, 33 N. E. 695; Jackson v. Dilworth, 39 Miss. 772; Higginson v. The Treasurer (Higginson v. Slattery) 212 Mass. 583, 42 L.R.A.(N.S.) 215, 99 N. E. 523; Webb v. New York, 64 How. Pr. 10; Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed. p. 91; Board of Education v. Blodgett, 155 Ill. 450, 31 L.R.A. 70, 46 Am. St. Rep. 348, 40 N. E. 1025.

This court has been obliged repeatedly, in guarding the rights of owners of real estate under early patents from the government, to overrule the Land Department when it has misconstrued government surveys and patents, and has acted on the assumption that a meander line was intended primarily as a boundary line.

Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 35 L. ed. 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840; Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. 190 U. S. 452, 47 L. ed. 1134, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

Solicitor General Davis filed a suggestion on behalf of the United States.

[194] Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

The chief controversy in this case is over the title to about 1,500 acres of unsurveyed lands in Poinsett county, Arkansas, which were part of the public domain at the date of the swamp-land act of September 28, 1850 (9 Stat. at L. 519, chap. 84), and the Federal question to be considered is whether, under the operation and administration of that act, these lands have passed from the United States, or are still its property.

Digitized by Google

Although within the exterior lines of a township surveyed in 1840 and 1841, they, with other lands, were excluded from the survey, were meandered as if they were a lake, and were designated upon the official plat as a meandered body of water called "Sunk Lands,"—a name frequently applied in that region to areas which subsided during the New Madrid earthquake, a little more than a century ago, and subsequently became submerged. Other unsurveyed areas, designated as meandered bodies of water, were also shown upon the plat. The township was approximately 6 miles square, and the plat bore an inscription to the effect that the total of the surveyed areas was 14,329.97 acres, so the unsurveyed areas represented as water must have amounted to 8,000 acres or more.

After the enactment of the swamp-land act, the state requested that the township be listed as swamp lands, and patented to it under that act, both of which were done, the former in 1853 and the latter in 1858. In requesting the listing, the state described the township as containing 14,329.97 acres, the total of the surveyed areas as inscribed upon the plat, and in making the list, the Secretary of the Interior took the same total and deducted 514.30 acres in fractional section 16, which already had passed to the state under the school-land grant, [195] thereby making the listed area 13,815.67 acres. The patent embraced lands in several townships, the portion of the description material here being: "Township 12 north of range 7 east. The whole of the township (except section 16), containing thirteen thousand, eight hundred and fifteen acres and sixty-seven hundredths of an acre . . . according to the official plats of survey of said lands returned to the General Land Office by the Surveyor General."

In the state courts the levee district, the plaintiff, claimed title to the lands in controversy under the swamp-land act and an act of the state legislature in 1893 (Laws [Ark.] 1893, p. 172), granting to the levee district "all the lands of this state" lying within the boundaries of the district; and the defendants opposed this claim upon two grounds: One, that if these lands had passed to the state, the defendants had succeeded to the title by riparian right in virtue of their ownership, under conveyances from the state in 1871, of the fractional sections and subdivisions abutting on the meandered area called "Sunk Lands;" and the other, that the lands in controversy had not passed to the state, but were still the property of the United States. The trial court sustained the plaintiff's claim and entered a decree accordingly, which was affirmed by the supreme court of the state, the chief justice dissenting. 100 Ark. 94, 139 S. W. 625.

Both courts found as matter of fact from the evidence produced at the trial that at the time of the survey and at the date of the swamp-land act the unsurveyed area designated upon the plat as "Sunk Lands" was not a lake or permanent body of water, but only temporarily overflowed, and was not distinctly lower or materially different from the adjoining lands; and with this as a premise it was held that the lands in controversy did not pass to the state or to the defendants with the adjoining lands as an incident of riparian ownership, but were conveyed [196] to the state by the patent issued in 1858, and thence to the levee district by the state act of 1893.

If the patent conveyed these lands to the state, we are not concerned with their subsequent disposal, for that is a question of local law. But did the patent include them? This, of course, is a Federal question. In answering it in the affirmative, the state courts regarded the words "Sunk Lands," shown upon the plat, as meaning that unsurveyed area to which they were applied was land, and not water, and also regarded the words, "The whole of the township (except section 16)," as used in the patent, as embracing all that was within the exterior lines of the township, except section 16, whether surveyed or unsurveyed, and even although meandered and excluded from the survey. We are unable to accede to this view of either the plat or the patent.

Had the plat shown that all the lands were surveyed, it doubtless is true that the words "Sunk Lands" would not have indicated the presence of a body of water, but would have been taken in much the same way as would such words as "valley," "broken hills," or "level plateau." But the plat showed, as did also the field notes, that the area to which the words were applied was not included in the survey, but was excluded therefrom, and meandered as a body of water, and also that the adjoining sections and subdivisions were surveyed as fractional, as is usual with lands abutting on a lake or similar body of water. Thus, what appeared upon the plat had the same meaning as if this area had been called "Sunk Lands Lake." And that the officers of the state and of the United States so understood is shown by the fact that in the proceedings preliminary to the issuance of the patent, as also in the patent, this and similar areas were excluded in specifying the amount of land in the township.

Digitized by Google

Of course, the words in the patent, "The whole of the township (except section 16)," are comprehensive, [197] but they are only one element in the description, and must be read in the light of the others. The explanatory words, "according to the official plats of survey of said lands, returned to the General Land Office by the Surveyor General," constitute another element, and a very important one; for it is a familiar rule that where lands are patented according to such a plat, the notes, lines, landmarks, and other particulars appearing thereon become as much a part of the patent, and are as much to be considered in determining what it is intended to include, as if they were set forth in the patent. Cragin v. Powell, 128 U. S. 691, 696, 32 L. ed. 566, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; Jefferis v. East Omaha Land Co. 134 U. S. 178, 194, 33 L. ed. 872, 878, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518. The specification of the acreage is still another element; and, while of less influence than either of the others, it is yet an aid in ascertaining what was intended; for a purpose to convey upwards of 22,000 acres is hardly consistent with a specification of 13,815.67 acres. Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 208, 229, 40 L. ed. 673, 680, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; Security Land & Exploration Co. v. Burns, 193 U. S. 167, 180, 48 L. ed. 662, 671, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; 3 Washb. Real Prop. 5th ed. 427. Giving to each of these elements its appropriate influence, and bearing in mind that the terms of description are all such as are usually employed in designating surveyed lands, we are of opinion that the purpose was to patent the whole of the lands surveyed, except fractional section 16, and not the areas meandered and returned, as shown upon the plat, as bodies of water. That it is now found, as shown by the decisions below, that these areas ought not to have been so meandered and returned, but should have been surveyed and returned as land, does not detract from the effect which must be given to the plat in determining what was intended to pass under the patent. Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 175 U. S. 300, 306, 44 L. ed. 171, 173, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Hardin v. Shedd, 190 U. S. 508, 520, 47 L. ed. 1156, 1158, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 685.

As, then, the lands in controversy were not included in the patent, and, under the findings below, did not pass to the state or to the defendants by riparian right with the [198] adjoining fractional sections and subdivisions, it follows that they remain the property of the United States. Niles v. Cedar Point Club, supra; French-Glenn Live Stock Co. v. Springer, 185 U. S. 47, 46 L. ed. 800, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Security Land & Exploration Co. v. Burns, supra.

But it is said on behalf of the levee district that, even though the lands were not included in the patent, they passed to the state under the swamp-land act independently of any patent, and passed thence to the district under the state act of 1893. The contention is not tenable. The lands were never listed as swamp lands, and their listing does not appear to have been even requested; doubtless because they were not surveyed. Assuming that in fact they were swamp lands, the state's title under the swamp-land act was at most inchoate, and never was perfected. Not only so, but the state relinquished its inchoate title to the United States as part of a compromise and settlement negotiated in 1895, and the relinquishment is binding upon the levee district as a subordinate agency of the state. Little v. Williams, 231 U. S. 335, ante, 256, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68. See Carson v. St. Francis Levee Dist. 59 Ark. 513, 533–535, 27 S. W. 590.

The levee district was therefore not entitled to prevail in respect of the unsurveyed lands.

Decree reversed.

---

[199] ATCHISON, TOPEKA, & SANTA FE RAILWAY COMPANY, Southern Pacific Company, and San Pedro, Los Angeles, & Salt Lake Railroad Company, Appts.,

v.

UNITED STATES, Interstate Commerce Commission, and Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 199–221.)

Interstate Commerce Commission — regulation of carrier — pre-icing of fruit by consignor.

1. Carriers transporting citrus fruits from California to Eastern points may be compelled by the Interstate Commerce Commission to permit the consignors of pre-cooled shipments to ice the car bunkers at their warehouses so as to fit the freight for proper transportation,—at least, until the carriers shall offer under tariffs regularly filed to furnish the ice at the time and place needed in pre-cooled shipments, or to substitute a service of equal value at practically the same cost.

[Matters as to Interstate Commerce Commission, see Interstate Commerce Commission, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — powers — rate regulation.

2. The withdrawal by carriers' tariffs of shippers' pre-cooling privileges formerly recognized by the carriers themselves and approved by an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, fixing a charge for the service rendered by the carriers in connection with pre-cooled shipments, affects a practice and a rate within the meaning of the act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 384, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3165), § 15, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 589, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1297), § 4, authorizing the Commission, after a hearing, to determine whether rates and practices affecting rates are unreasonable, and what practice in respect to transportation is just, and to require the carrier to conform to the regulations or practice which the Commission may prescribe, and the Commission is therefore acting within its powers in ordering the cancelation of such tariffs and requiring the carriers to conform to its prior order.

Digitized by Google

[Matters as to Interstate Commerce Commission, see Interstate Commerce Commission, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — rate regulation — judicial review.

3. An order of the Interstate Commerce Commission fixing at $7.50 per car the charge which carriers may make for services rendered in connection with shipments of citrus fruit from California to the East, which, being pre-cooled and pre-iced by the consignors, require no re-icing en route, will not be disturbed by the courts on the theory that the carriers were thereby required to haul the ice without reasonable compensation, where the Commission evidently considered that the hauling of the ice was so much a part of the haul of the pre-cooled freight that the expense could properly be treated as included or absorbed in the rate on the fruit itself, and the revenue received by the carriers is more than that derived from a car of standard refrigeration, without corresponding increase in cost.

[Matters as to Interstate Commerce Commission, see Interstate Commerce Commission, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 590.]

Argued December 1 and 2, 1913. Decided January 26, 1914.

APPEAL from the United States Commerce Court to review a decree dismissing the petition in a suit attacking an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission with reference to the transportation of pre-cooled citrus fruits. Affirmed.

See same case below, 204 Fed. 647.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

In 1909, associations, representing California fruit growers, filed with the Commerce Commission complaints against numerous railroad companies, attacking the freight and refrigeration charges on citrus fruit shipped from California to Eastern points. Much testimony was taken, from which it appeared that the orange crop amounted to about 50,000 cars per annum, of which the 20,000 shipped in warm weather required some form of refrigeration in order to keep the fruit in condition for use at the end of the journey. At the close of the first hearing, June 11, 1910, the Commission held (19 Inters. Com. Rep. 148) that $1.15 per cwt. was a reasonable freight rate on oranges. Other questions in the case were postponed until January 14, 1911, when the Commission made a report (20 Inters. Com. Rep. 106) as to the reasonableness of the carriers' charges of $62.50 per car for refrigeration and $30 for services in shipments pre-cooled by the consignor.

The Commission found that in refrigeration by the carriers they furnished all the ice and performed all of the services, including re-icing en route. It found that there was a total of about 11 tons of ice furnished, but, owing to the melting, the average weight of the ice hauled was 8,000 lbs., the freight on which to Chicago was $.25 per 100. It cost something to repair the bunkers, and the Commission recognized the right to include an additional sum to cover risk and profit.

[201] The total revenue of $345.30 from such shipments was made up of the following items:

Freight on 27,200 lbs. of oranges @ $1.15		$312.80
Cost of 11 tons of ice	$30
Freight on 8,000 lbs. average weight of ice hauled @ $ .25	20
Damage to bunkers	5
Sum to cover risk and profit	7.50
		62.50
Gross receipts		$375.30
Less cost of ice		30.00
Freight and refrigeration charges		$345.30

The Commission found that the charge of $62.50 for refrigeration services was reasonable.

It further appeared that the government had conducted certain experiments with a view of determining whether an advantage would not de derived from pre-cooling the fruit before the bunkers were filled with ice. There was testimony that the carriers had reached the conclusion that if the fruit was pre-cooled before the movement of the car began, there would be a corresponding saving in the amount of ice needed in the bunkers. They accordingly had erected plants at which the fruit could be pre-cooled, and included such pre-cooling service in the regular refrigeration charge of $62.50.

Certain shippers claimed that better results were obtained where the fruit was pre-cooled immediately after it was taken from the grove and before it was placed in the car. They therefore adopted a method in which the shipper chills the fruit, cools the car, furnishes the ice, and fills the bunkers at a cost to himself of $32.50. The carrier, for its services in connection with hauling such pre-cooled shipment, charged $30, intending thereby to make the rates on pre-cooled fruits the same, whether the [202] pre-cooling was by the shipper or the carrier. In determining whether this $30 was a reasonable charge for service rendered by the carrier in hauling fruit pre-cooled by the shipper, the Commission said (20 Inters. Com. Rep. 120) that no re-icing was necessary en route, and that "it would be a liberal estimate to put the average weight of ice during the entire journey at 5,000 lbs. For the hauling of this ice the carriers are entitled to fair compensation, as they are in the case of standard refrigeration." There is also an "expense in providing and keeping in repair the ice bunkers. . . . The carrier is, therefore, entitled to this additional cost, which is about $5 per car per trip one way." (Ibid.)

Digitized by Google

Where the fruit is pre-cooled by the shipper, the boxes are packed so much closer together that the load is one sixth greater than in case of shipments pre-cooled and refrigerated by the carrier. The result is that the revenue from a car of fruit pre-cooled by the shipper would be—

Freight on 33,000 lbs. of oranges at $1.15	$379.50
Freight on 5,000 lbs. of ice at 25 cents per hundred	12.50
Damages to bunkers (and profit allowed?)	7.50 or, $54 more than the revenue of $345.30 from a car pre-cooled and refrigerated by the carrier.
	$399.50

The Commission further said: "As bearing upon the reasonableness of the rate, the carriers showed the cost of the movement of these oranges per gross ton,—that is, per ton of combined weight of car and of contents, as compared with other articles,—claiming that this was the true basis upon which to fix rates. So treating these pre-cooled shipments, it will be found that the carrier receives more per gross ton for handling the pre-cooled car than for either the ventilated or the refrigerated shipment. By every canon of ratemaking which has been applied by carriers in the past, or which is relied upon by them now, [203] these pre-cooled shipments, at the standard rate, without additional compensation, are better business than either the ventilated or the refrigerated movement. Clearly, these growers who have devised and perfected this system of shipment should not be compelled to pay for the privilege of using it more than the fair cost to the carrier of providing the additional facilities which are not included in the ventilated rate, with a fair profit."

The report concluded as follows: "We are of the opinion that the pre-cooling charge of $30 per car is unreasonable, and that this charge should not exceed $7.50 per car, . . . but the defendants may, as a condition of making this charge, require that pre-cooled cars be loaded seven tiers wide and two tiers high, and may provide by their tariffs a proper minimum to accomplish this result, the amount of which would depend upon the length of the car." 20 Inters. Com. Rep. 121, 123.

The carriers, in obedience to this order, put in a tariff of $7.50 for pre-cooling services, but at once filed another tariff, effective July, 1911, reciting that "the privilege heretofore permitted to shippers of citrus fruit to pre-ice carload shipments is withdrawn, the carriers retaining and exercising the exclusive right and control of furnishing and doing all icing and refrigeration of citrus fruit in all cases where shipper does not specifically request or direct shipments to move solely under ventilation."

Immediately thereafter the orange-growers associations filed proceeedings to cancel this withdrawal tariff, and to compel the carriers to continue to extend to shippers the old privilege of pre-cooling at the new rate of $7.50 At the hearing the evidence and report of the Commission in the former case were stipulated into the record, and, on April 8, 1912 (23 Inters. Com. Rep. 267, 271), the Commission held that the shippers had the right to the pre-cooling [204] privilege, and again ruled that $7.50 was a reasonable charge for the service rendered by the carriers.

The railroad companies then filed a petition in the commerce court attacking the original order of January 14, 1911 (fixing $7.50 as a reasonable charge on pre-cooled shipments), and the last order of April 8, 1912 (requiring the roads to permit pre-cooled shipments at that sum), contending that shippers had no right to ice the bunkers. They also insisted that the $7.50 rate was confiscatory, and did not equal the $17.50, which the Commission itself had found to be the actual cost of services rendered in connection with pre-cooled shipments. The carriers thereupon prayed that both orders should be annulled and set aside.

The commerce court (204 Fed. 647) adopted the finding of the Commission that in pre-cooled shipments the revenue was $54 greater than in the railroad's method of refrigeration, and concluded by saying that, in view of that fact, "we do not think that the petitioners have any valid complaint to make of the charge of $7.50 per car, established by the Commission." It further held that under the facts appearing in the record, the shipper had the right to furnish the ice in pre-cooled shipments, and thereupon it dismissed the petition. The case was then brought here by appeal.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Gardiner Lathrop argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. F. Herrin, Robert Dunlap, T. J. Norton, A. S. Halsted, and C. W. Durbrow, filed a brief for appellants:

Icing of the carrier's equipment for the purpose of furnishing refrigerated cars is a part of the transportation service.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 227 U. S. 88, 57 L. ed. 431, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Re Charges for Transportation of Fruit, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 129; Truck Farmers' Asso v. Northeastern R. Co. 6 I. C. C. Rep. 295; Florida Fruit & Vegetable Shippers' Protective Asso. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 476; Albree v. Boston & M. R. Co. 22 Inters. Com. Rep. 303; Waxelbaum & Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 178; Johnson v. Toledo, S. & M. R. Co. 133 Mich. 596, 103 Am. St. Rep. 464, 95 N. W. 724; 4 Elliott, Railroads, § 1474, p. 162; 2 Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. § 505, pp. 549 et seq.; C. C. Taft Co. v. American Exp. Co. 133 Iowa, 522, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 614, 119 Am. St. Rep. 642, 110 N. W. 897; New York, P. & N. R. Co. v. Cromwell, 98 Va. 227, 49 L.R.A. 462, 81 Am. St. Rep. 722, 35 S. E. 444, 7 Am. Neg. Rep. 508; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Renfroe, 82 Ark. 143, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 317, 118 Am. St. Rep. 58, 100 S. W. 889; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. A. A. Jackson & Co. 55 Tex. Civ. App. 407, 118 S. W. 853; McLean v. Gulf & I. R. Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 118 S. W. 578; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. McLean, 55 Tex. Civ. App. 130, 118 S. W. 161.

The shipper is not legally entitled to perform any part of refrigeration without the carrier's consent.

Re Charges for Transportation of Fruit, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 140; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. West Coast Naval Stores Co. 198 U. S. 483, 497, 498, 49 L. ed. 1135, 1140, 1141, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745; Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Arlington Heights Fruit Exch. v. Southern P. Co. 20 Inters. Com. Rep. 106.

Carriers, in undertaking to transport perishable commodities such as citrus fruit, have, under the law, imposed upon them the duty to provide suitable equipment and to provide proper appliances, and to actually discharge the duty of refrigerating these shipments in a proper manner. If they are lacking in any of these respects, or have at any time failed to discharge these obligations, the shipper's right to relief is found in the courts, because the Commission has not been vested with judicial power to determine these questions, or to enforce the shipper's rights in these respects.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Northern P. R. Co. 216 U. S. 538, 54 L. ed. 608, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417.

The Commission is not given the power to make unduly discriminating orders or regulations, or such as would require the carrier to violate the spirit of the law. Such an order would be invalid and therefore not binding, and such invalidity might be set up by the carrier, as its business would be injuriously affected.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 698, 699, 43 L. ed. 858, 864, 865, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

Pre-icing the car is a part of "transportation."

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 47, 56 L. ed. 83, 87, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; Consolidated Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co. 9 Inters. Com. Rep. 182; Re Charges for Transportation of Fruit, 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 360, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 129.

Would a shipper have the right to force his own car or equipment upon the carrier without the carrier's consent, and demand an allowance therefor? Clearly not.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 63 L.R.A. 213, 55 C. C. A. 63, 118 Fed. 113, 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339.

The law enjoins upon the carrier the obligation of furnishing services necessary in the refrigeration of the car, and imposes upon the carrier the obligation of answering to the shipper in the event the services are not properly performed. Therefore, it cannot be held that the shippers must assume this responsibility, because the law says they do not assume the same, and the carriers cannot shirk the responsibility, but must accept it, and therefore must necessarily perform these services themselves in order to insure that they will be properly performed, and the risk of liability where the services are performed by another thus eliminated.

1 Wyman, Pub. Service Corp. § 796, p. 669, note 1, and cases cited; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Geraty, 20 L.R.A.(N.S.) 310, 91 C. C. A. 602, 166 Fed. 10; Calender-Vanderhoof Co. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 99 Minn. 295, 109 N. W. 402; Udell v. Illinois C. R. Co. 13 Mo. App. 254; Mathis v. Southern R. Co. 65 S. C. 271, 61 L.R.A.

Digitized by Google

824, 43 S. E. 684; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Davis, 159 Ill. 53, 50 Am. St. Rep. 143, 42 N. E. 382; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Welbourne, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 113 S. W. 780; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Cumbie, 101 Ark. 172, 141 S. W. 939; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Orem Fruit & Produce Co. 111 Md. 356, 73 Atl. 571; McConnell Bros. v. Southern R. Co. 144 N. C. 87, 56 S. E. 559; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Renfroe, 82 Ark. 143, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 317, 118 Am. St. Rep. 58, 100 S. W. 889.

Common carriers have the right to make reasonable rules and regulations for the conduct of their business, governing the use of their cars, and the manner of receipt, transportation, delivery, and care of freight while in their custody.

Harp v. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. 61 C. C. A. 405, 125 Fed. 445; Robinson v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 64 C. C. A. 281, 129 Fed. 753; Platt v. Lecocq, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 558, 85 C. C. A. 621, 158 Fed. 724; 2 Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. §§ 1033, 1077.

There is always a presumption in favor of the reasonableness of such rules and regulations, and that they are for the public advantage, and do not conduce to the prejudice of particular individuals.

2 Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. § 943; Platt v. Lecocq, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 558, 85 C. C. A. 621, 158 Fed. 730.

The reasonableness of any rule or regulation of a carrier is a question of law, to be determined by the court.

Pullman Car. Co. v. Krauss, 145 Ala. 395, 4 L.R.A.(N.S.) 103, 40 So. 399, 8 Ann. Cas. 218; Gregory v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 100 Iowa, 345, 69 N. W. 532; Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Motes, 117 Ga. 923, 62 L.R.A. 507, 97 Am. St. Rep. 223, 43 S. E. 990, 14 Am. Neg. Rep. 13; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Whittemore, 43 Ill. 423, 92 Am. Dec. 138, 8 Am. Neg. Cas. 157; Vedder v. Fellows, 20 N. Y. 130; Louisville, N. & G. S. R. Co. v. Fleming, 14 Lea, 145.

In order that there might be uniformity and certainty, the interstate commerce law was so amended in 1910 as to enable shippers and others to secure a ruling from the Commission and a final judicial determination, through the commerce court and this court, if necessary, of the justness and reasonableness of any rule, regulation, or practice of the carrier which might be drawn in question. But such legislation was for the purpose of insuring certainty and uniformity in respect to the rules and regulations of the carrier, and enforcement of the same.

Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 505, 57 L. ed. 314, 319, 44 L.R.A. (N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 649, 57 L. ed. 683, 687, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

Inasmuch as Congress could not vest the Commission with arbitrary power to proceed to make a new rule or regulation for the carriers except such as would be in accordance with principles of the common or statutory law, it is also obvious that when the rule or regulation prescribed by the Commission is challenged in a direct proceeding in court, the reasonableness or validity of such rule or regulation becomes also a question of law which the courts alone are competent ultimately and finally to decide. This would follow even if the statute had not provided therefor.

Sabre v. Rutland R. Co. 86 Vt. 347, 85 Atl. 693; Bessette v. Goddard, — Vt. —, 88 Atl. 1.

To say that the Commission is the final judge of the controversy, and that it has the power to determine for itself, according to its own notions, whether a regulation of a carrier, involving the use of its property or the performance of its duty, is reasonable or not, and in conformity to the standard fixed by the statute or not, and that the courts, which, under the Constitution, are specially vested and intrusted with the power of construing and applying the law, have no authority or power to review the action or determination of the Commission, is simply to say that the Commission is supreme when determining its own authority and functions. The court proceedings authorized by the statute to set aside or annul an order of the Commission would then be wholly useless and unnecessary, and the provision would be entirely illusory.

United States v. Dickson, 15 Pet. 162, 10 L. ed. 697.

If the Commission has misconceived or misapplied the law or any principle thereof, in condemning an existing rule or regulation of the carrier, or in substituting a new rule or regulation of its own therefor, its order would be clearly subject to challenge as being unauthorized and unlawful.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Northern P. R. Co. 216 U. S. 538, 544, 54 L. ed. 608, 609, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 227 U. S. 88, 57 L. ed. 431, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

The determination of an executive or administrative board or commission could not, under the Constitution, be made conclusive upon the courts on legal questions, at least, and operate as res judicata so as to prevent a Federal court, in an appropriate proceeding, from determining the matter itself when presented, and the rights of the parties before it.

Digitized by Google

Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 211 U. S. 211, 227, 230, 53 L. ed. 150, 159, 160, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

It is not the function or office of an executive or administrative board to ignore, amend, or replace the law, whether common or statutory.

Morrill v. Jones, 106 U. S. 466, 27 L. ed. 267, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

The question submitted resolves itself into one of law. The Commission has committed an error of law in rendering its decision, and has entered an order which transcends its power and authority. The court should have determined these questions of law as an original proposition, and not have felt constrained to accept the conclusions, findings, and order of the Commission as final.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. ed. 280, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Union P. R. Co. 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. ed. 308, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108.

Carriers are entitled to a reasonable profit for each particular service rendered.

Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. 214 U. S. 297, 53 L. ed. 1004, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Stickney, 215 U. S. 98, 54 L. ed. 112, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 93, 94, 46 L. ed. 92, 102, 103, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

Mr. F. H. Wood also argued the cause for appellants.

Mr. Blackburn Esterline argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Davis, filed a brief for the United States:

The commerce court promptly and rightly rejected appellants' argument to the effect that the Commission's order would result in gross discrimination against the small shipper.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. ed. 946, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

The action of the Commission is in favor of, rather than against, the carriers' interests.

Ibid.

Mr. Patrick J. Farrell argued the cause and filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. William E. Lamb argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George E. Farrand, Rush C. Butler, and Stephen A. Foster, filed a brief for the Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange:

If the services are in fact transportation services, the carrier cannot compel the shipper to permit the performance thereof by the carrier unless the shipper makes reasonable request therefor.

Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. Reyman, — Ind. —, 73 N. E. 587, 166 Ind. 278, 76 N. E. 970; Texas C. R. Co. v. Dorsey, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 377, 70 S. W. 575; Densmore Commission Co. v. Duluth, S. S. & A. R. Co. 101 Wis. 563, 77 N. W. 904; Davenport Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 173 Pa. 398, 34 Atl. 59; Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. § 505.

The orders of the Commission were fully supported by substantial evidence.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 227 U. S. 88, 57 L. ed. 431, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. ed. 448, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Union P. R. Co. 222 U. S. 547, 56 L. ed. 311, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. ed. 283, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 470, 54 L. ed. 287, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441–464, 51 L. ed. 1128–1137, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

There are many cases between shipper and carrier in which each insists that the other is bound to furnish service or facilities connected with the transportation of freight. The present record, however, presents an instance where both parties are contending for the privilege of supplying an article needed in the proper shipment of fruit,—the consignor claiming that icing is a necessary part of the loading, which he is authorized to supply; while the carriers insist that icing is a part of refrigeration, by statute made transportation, which they are bound to provide and for which they are entitled to collect reasonable compensation. The determination of these conflicting [213] claims necessitates an examination of the two methods under which, in warm weather, oranges are shipped from California to the East.

In what is called standard refrigeration, the boxes, of the aggregate weight of 27,200 pounds, are so placed as to leave spaces between them wide enough to admit of a free circulation of air chilled by ice in the bunkers. Subsequently the carriers put in a system of pre-cooling, under which, after the cars had been loaded, they were taken from the point of shipment to refrigerating plants owned by the carriers, where whole trainloads are pre-cooled at one time by means of blasts of very cold air driven into the car through and around the boxes. At the end of three or four hours the fruit is sufficiently chilled, the bunkers are then filled with about 10 tons of ice, furnished by the carrier, and the train is started on its journey to the East,—the bunkers being re-iced from time to time as needed at stations along the route. For this entire service the Commission held that the carrier's charge of $62.50 was reasonable.

Digitized by Google

A different method obtains where the icing of the car is done by the shipper at his own expense. In that class of cases the oranges are taken from the grove directly to a cold room having a temperature of about 33 F. There the boxes are allowed to remain for periods of from twenty-four to forty-eight hours, and until the fruit is chilled to the center. When thus pre-cooled, the boxes are ready for shipment. A refrigerator car is then placed on the track opposite the door of the cold room of the warehouse with which it is connected by a collapsible inclosed passageway, so arranged as to exclude the outside air, while at the same time allowing that from the cold room to enter and cool the interior of the car. Through this passageway the oranges are trucked from the warehouse to the car, and, as they have been chilled to the center, the boxes are packed close together, forming a solid mass weighing [214] 33,000 lbs., with a temperature of about 35 F. The doors and vents of the car are promptly and tightly closed, the bunkers are immediately filled with unusually large cakes of ice, in order to reduce the rate of melting, and the fruit is then forwarded under a filed tariff which provides that re-icing is unnecessary, and that the shipper will make no claim for damage occasioned by failure to re-ice in transit. For their services in connection with such pre-cooled shipments the carriers were allowed to charge $7.50, but the Commission refused to permit them to charge for the ice needed to keep the fruit cool between warehouse and destination.

1. This ruling is attacked by the appellants, who contend that icing is a part of refrigeration, which § 1 of the Hepburn bill† makes a part of the transportation they are bound to furnish upon reasonable request. They insist that in order to meet the duty thus imposed by statute, they have been compelled at great expense to erect immense plants where trainloads of fruit can be cooled, and where an enormous quantity of ice is manufactured for refrigeration purposes. They argue that, being bound to furnish all necessary icing and re-icing, and having at great cost prepared to furnish the supply, it is not only just, but a right given by statute, that they should be allowed to provide all needed icing or refrigeration at a rate to be approved by the Commission.

Whatever transportation service or facility the law requires the carrier to supply they have the right to furnish. They can therefore use their own cars, and cannot be compelled to accept those tendered by the shipper on [215] condition that a lower freight rate be charged. So, too, they can furnish all the ice needed in refrigeration; for this is not only a duty and a right, under § 1 of the Hepburn bill, but an economic necessity, due to the fact that the carriers cannot be expected to prepare to meet the demand, and then let the use of their plants depend upon haphazard calls, under which refrigeration can be demanded by all shippers at one time and by only a few at another.

This contention was sustained by the Commission, which recognized that "the shipper has no right to provide refrigeration himself to-day and call upon the railroad company for that service to-morrow. To permit such a course is to demoralize the service of the defendants, and to prevent them from discharging their duty with economy and efficiency. . . . It is the duty of the carrier to furnish refrigeration upon reasonable demand, and in so far as the furnishing of that refrigeration is a part of the service rendered by the carrier, the carrier may insist upon its right to furnish that service exclusively."

2. But of course this does not mean, that because the carriers have ice on hand, they can compel the shipper to have his fruit refrigerated, when, on account of the state of the weather, or for other cause, he prefers to have it forwarded under ventilation only. When, however, ice is actually needed and is actually used, the question arises as to whether icing is a part of preparation which can be done by the shipper, or a part of refrigeration (transportation) which, by statute, the carrier has the exclusive right to furnish.

To this question no answer can be given that will apply in all cases. For in the shipment of fruit, as in that of other articles, it is impossible to lay down a rule

†. . . The term "transportation" shall include . . . all services in connection with the receipt, delivery, . . . ventilation, refrigeration, or icing . . . of property transported; and it shall be the duty of every carrier . . . to provide and furnish such transportation upon reasonable request therefor. (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1285.)

Digitized by Google

which definitely fixes what loading includes and by whom it must be done. Nor is there any consistent practice on this subject, since from reported cases it appears that the [216] claims of the parties are based rather on interest than on some definite principle. Sometimes the shipper, as here, insists on the right to load and provide necessary appliances. At other times he demands that such service and appliances be furnished by the railroad company. Conversely, the carriers sometimes claim, as here, the right to furnish service and facilities, while in other cases insisting that one or both must be supplied by the consignor. Cf. National Wholesale Lumber Dealers' Asso. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 154; Schultz-Hanson Co. v. Southern P. Co. 18 Inters. Com. Rep. 234; Re Allowance for Stoves & Lining of Cars, 26 Inters. Com. Rep. 681; Re Western Classification, 25 Inters. Com. Rep. 497.

These inconsistent and conflicting demands serve to emphasize the fact that, before the haul actually begins, the right or duty of each party, where not absolutely fixed by statute, must be decided with reference to the special facts of each case.

As a general rule, the carrier loads all freight tendered in less than carload lots, while the consignor loads in all cases where, for his convenience, the car is placed at his warehouse or on public team tracks. This practice has grown up not only because the work can be more satisfactorily performed by the owner, but also because it is impossible for railroad companies economically to load cars at private warehouses or on those tracks where vehicles of the consignor or consignee come and go at the direction of the owner. 25 Inters. Com. Rep. 490.

3. But loading may involve more than the mere placing of the freight on the car, since the character of the shipment may be such as to require the furnishing and placing of stakes, racks, blocks, and binders needed to make the transportation safe; or, the freight may be such as to require special covering, packing, icing, or heating, in order to preserve the merchandise in condition fit for use at the end of the journey. Who is to furnish these needed facilities may be quite as uncertain as who is to place the [217] freight on the car; and can only be determined by considering the character of the shipment, the place where the loading begins, and who can most economically perform the service required.

Neither party has a right to insist upon a wasteful or expensive service for which the consumer must ultimately pay. The interest of the public is to be considered as well as that of shippers and carriers,—their rights in turn having been adjusted by a reduction in the rate, if the loading is done in whole or in part by the shipper; and by an increase in the rate where the loading is done in whole or in part by the carrier. But, by whomsoever done, the loading must be such as to fit the freight for shipment; and when—by statutory requirement, by valid order of the Commission, or by the carriers' voluntary act—the car is placed at the consignor's warehouse to be loaded by the shipper, he may not only put the freight on the car, but may do all other acts required to fit the freight for its proper shipment,—at least, until, under a tariff regularly filed, the carrier offers to do what is necessary to secure or preserve what has thus been placed on its car for transportation. The refrigeration and pre-cooling offered by the carrier to shippers of pre-cooled fruit were found not to be the equivalent of the method adopted by the shipper.

4. In the present case the carriers concede that in pre-cooling shipments the consignor had the right to take all of the steps for preparation except the last. They concede that he had the right to pre-cool the fruit, to pre-cool the car, to place the boxes on board the car, to stop the vents, and seal the doors. But they deny that he could ice the bunkers, even though that was necessary to the complete preparation, or loading, needed in that particular class of shipments, and without which the fruit would be damaged by the rise in temperature, occurring during the time the car is being hauled from the warehouse of the shipper to the icing station of the carrier. Such delay in [218] filling bunkers would nullify most of the advantage of the expensive chilling of fruit and car necessary in the pre-cooling shipments,—permitted, if not originally encouraged, by the carrier. The privilege was withdrawn,—not because the railroad companies were in position to furnish the ice at the proper time and place, but solely because the Commission had reduced the carriers' charge on pre-cooled oranges from $30 to $7.50 per car.

The icing may have been so related to refrigeration as to authorize the carriers to render that service. But manifestly they could not be expected to build refrigerating plants near each warehouse; and, the carrier not being in a position to do such icing, the consignor had the same right to provide the necessary supply that he would have had to ice a shipment of fish, to furnish and place standards to secure lumber on an open car, or to fasten to the floor articles which otherwise might be damaged by the jerks and jolts of a moving train. In the absence, therefore, of the carriers' offer, under a filed tariff, to furnish ice at the time and place needed in pre-cooled shipments, or to substitute a service of equal value at practically the same cost, they had no right to prevent the consignor from filling the bunkers so as to fit the freight for proper transportation.

Digitized by Google

5. The tariffs, withdrawing the pre-cooling privilege after July, 1911, would have changed the practice, recognized by the carriers themselves and actually approved by the Commission's order fixing $7.50 for the carrier's services in connection with such practice. As the withdrawal "affected a practice and a rate," the Commision had power to cancel that tariff and to require the carriers to conform to the order establishing the $7.50 charge in pre-cooled shipments. Such an order was justified by the provisions of § 15 [of 1887, 24 Stat. at L. 384, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3165 as amended by § 4] of the Hepburn act (34 Stat. at L. 589, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1297), which authorizes the Commission, after a hearing, to determine whether rates, or practices affecting rates, are unreasonable, to determine what practice in respect to transportation [219] is just, and to require the carrier to conform to those prescribed by the Commission.†

6. The appellants insist, however, that even if the shippers are entitled to furnish the ice, the carriers are entitled to pay for hauling it. They claim that the charge of $7.50 is confiscatory because it does not cover what the Commission found to be the actual cost of the carriers' pre-cooling service. They point to the fact that the rate of $1.15 per cwt. on oranges was found to be reasonable, without regard to the character of the shipment, and whether the fruit moved under ventilation, standard refrigeration, or pre-cooling shipment,—additional sums being allowed for furnishing or hauling ice needed in transportation of the fruit. They admit that more revenue is derived from a carload of pre-cooled fruit, weighing 33,000 lbs., than from a car where the load weighs 27,200, but insist that the greater revenue is because of a greater service rendered and a greater weight hauled. On the authority of Interstate Commerce Commission v. Stickney, 215 U. S. 98, 105, 54 L. ed. 112, 113 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66, they contend that the receipt of a fair return for carrying 33,000 lbs. of fruit affords no reason for compelling them to haul 5,000 lbs. of ice 2,000 miles for nothing, when, as found by the Commission, the actual cost of the haul is $12.50.

The order does not show the items going to make up the $7.50 charge. In the brief for the Commission it was [220] said to include $5 for damage to the bunkers and $2.50 for profit. And since the report shows that the carriers were also entitled to $12.50 for hauling the ice, a charge of only $7.50 for a $20 service would at first blush appear to be not only unreasonable, but confiscatory. But the order is to be read in connection with the report of which it forms a part. When so read, it is evident that the Commission did not intend to require the carriers to haul 5,000 lbs. of ice without reasonable compensation, but considered that the haul of the ice was so much a part of the haul of the pre-cooled freight, that the expense could properly be treated as included or absorbed in the rate on the fruit itself. Cf. Farrar Lumber Co. v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 25 Inters. Com. Rep. 25; Swift & Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 22 Inters. Com. Rep. 385.

The cost of such haul was $12.50,—equivalent to 3.8 on the 33,000 lbs. of oranges in a pre-cooled shipment, and as a mere matter of figures, it was immaterial to the carriers whether they were permitted to charge $1.11.2 on the fruit and $12.50 for the ice, or $1.15 on the fruit alone without any distinct charge for transporting the ice. In either event, the revenue received was more than that derived from a car of standard refrigeration, without corresponding increase of cost.

7. The claim that the order modifies the established rate of $1.15, and reduces it to $1.11.2 in pre-cooled shipments, thereby discriminating against the small fruit grower and those who forward under ventilation, or under the carriers' method of refrigeration, is not an issue presented by any assignment of error in this record, even if the carriers were in position to make such a contention. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 88, 109, 54 L. ed. 946, 957, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651. There is no claim in this case that such rate, thus distributed, is unreasonable.

8. What is a proper rate on fruit in pre-cooling shipments, or a fair charge for †Sec. 15. The Commission is authorized . . . whenever, after full hearing . . . it shall be of the opinion that any of the rates or charges . . . for the transportation of persons or property . . . or that any regulations or practices . . . affecting such rates are unjust or unreasonable . . . to determine and prescribe what will be the just and reasonable rate . . . and what regulation or practice in respect to such transportation is just, fair, and reasonable to be thereafter followed; and to make an order that the carrier shall cease and desist from such violation, . . . and shall conform to the regulation or practice so prescribed.

Digitized by Google

hauling necessary ice or rendering other transportation services, are all rate-making [221] matters committed to the Commission. It may determine what shall be the difference in rate between carload and less than carload lots; it may decide whether the difference in revenue, due to a difference in method of loading, warrants a difference in the rate on carload shipments of the same article. It may prescribe the form in which schedules shall be prepared and arranged (§ 6), and may approve tariffs stating that the single rate includes both the line haul and accessorial services absorbed in the rate. Conversely, it may prescribe a tariff fixing a through rate which includes not only the haul of the fruit, but the haul of the ice necessary to keep the fruit in condition. All these are matters committed to the decision of the administrative body, which, in each instance, is required to fix reasonable rates and establish reasonable practices. The courts have not been vested with any such power. They cannot make rates. They cannot interfere with rates fixed or practices established by the Commission unless it is made plainly to appear that those ordered are void. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Union P. R. Co. 222 U. S. 547, 56 L. ed. 311, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108. No such showing is made in this case. The decree must therefore be affirmed.

FRANK N. THOMAS, Petitioner,
v.
CONRAD H. MATTHIESSEN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 221–236.)

Foreign corporations — liability of nonresident stockholder.

1. A New York stockholder in an Arizona corporation formed to carry on business in both Arizona and California, who, before incorporation, signed a writing reciting the intent of the subscribers to form such corporation for the purpose of acquiring a site in California, and building a hotel thereon, must be deemed to have assented to be bound by the provisions of Cal. Civ. Code, § 322, making each stockholder in a corporation, domestic or foreign, doing business in the state, personally liable for such proportion of the corporate debts contracted while he is such stockholder as the amount of his stock bears to the whole subscribed, although at the time of subscribing he agreed with the company that he should be exempt from personal liability, and that neither the corporation nor its officers should have power to subject him or the other stockholders to it, and such exemption was expressed also in the certificate of incorporation.

[For other cases, see Corporations, XII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Foreign corporations — liability of nonresident stockholder — where enforceable.

2. The personal liability of a nonresident stockholder of a foreign corporation doing business in California, under Cal. Civ. Code, § 322, which makes him individually and personally liable for such proportion of the corporate debts contracted while he is such stockholder as the amount of his stock bears to the whole subscribed, and supposes the action against him to be brought "upon such debt," may be enforced outside of the California courts.

[For other cases, see Corporations, XII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Corporations — liability of stockholders — principal debtor or surety.

3. Liability as a principal debtor, and not as surety, is what is imposed upon stockholders of corporations doing business in California, by Cal. Civ. Code, § 322, making them individually and personally liable for such proportion of the corporate debts contracted while they are such stockholders as the amount of their stock bears to the whole subscribed.

[For other cases, see Corporations, IX. e, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bills and notes — payment — application of bank deposit.

4. Corporate notes are not discharged pro tanto by the fact that the corporation has deposits in the bank that holds the notes.

[For other cases, see Bills and Notes, VII. b, 2; Banks, I. d; Payment, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 171.]

Argued January 19, 1914. Decided February 2, 1914.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, dismissing the complaint in a suit to enforce the statutory liability of a stockholder in a foreign corporation. Reversed.

See same case below, 113 C. C. A. 101, 192 Fed. 495.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Alfred Adams Wheat argued the cause, and, with Mr. Philip Ashton Rollins, filed a brief for petitioner:

This case is controlled by the decision in

NOTE.—On the right to enforce stockholder's liability outside of state of incorporation—see notes to Cushing v. Perot, 34 L.R.A. 737, and Edwards v. Schillinger, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 895.

On the effect upon surety or indorser of bank's failure to apply principal's deposit account upon note, see note to Davenport v. State Bkg. Co. 8 L.R.A.(N.S.) 944.

Digitized by Google

Pinney v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 144, 46 L. ed. 125, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52, unless a valid ground for distinction be furnished by one of the following facts: (1) That the freedom of the stockholders from individual liability was in this case, pursuant to the provision of the Arizona law, declared in the articles of incorporation, whereas in Pinney v. Nelson it was established by the general law of the state where the corporation was organized; (2) that defendant is not a resident of California; (3) that it was defendant's purpose and intent that his liability as a stockholder be controlled by the law of Arizona.

See also State v. New Orleans Warehouse Co. 109 La. 72, 33 So. 81; Peck v. Noee, 154 Cal. 351, 97 Pac. 865; Thomas v. Wentworth Hotel Co. 158 Cal. 275, 139 Am. St. Rep. 120, 110 Pac. 942.

The fact that the articles of incorporation in this case contain a declaration, as authorized by the Arizona law, that the stockholders shall not be personally liable for the debts of the corporation, does not distinguish this case from Pinney v. Nelson.

Terry v. Little, 101 U. S. 216, 25 L. ed. 864; Thomas v. Wentworth Hotel Co. supra; Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 636, 644, 43 L. ed. 840, 843, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530, 571; Knights of Pythias v. Weller, 93 Va. 613, 25 S. E. 891; Danville v. Danville Water Co. 178 Ill. 306, 69 Am. St. Rep. 304, 53 N. E. 118.

The fact that in this case there is a finding that it was the purpose and intent of the stockholders that their obligations should be controlled by the articles of incorporation and by the laws of Arizona does not distinguish this case from Pinney v. Nelson.

Thomas v. Wentworth Hotel Co. 158 Cal. 275, 139 Am. St. Rep. 120, 110 Pac. 942.

The question is: Did defendant contract to assume the liabilities imposed by the California law for debts incurred by the corporation in that state? If so, the place of his residence is not material.

Ibid.

The stockholders' liability imposed by the law of California is contractual in nature.

Kennedy v. California Sav. Bank, 97 Cal. 93, 33 Am. St. Rep. 163, 31 Pac. 846; Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 966, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; 26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law 2d ed. 1020.

Plaintiff pursued the proper remedy in a court of adequate jurisdiction.

Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 529, 51 L. ed. 1163, 1174, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 563, 44 L. ed. 587, 590, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 966, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Cook, Corp. § 223, note 2; Ferguson v. Sherman, 116 Cal. 173, 37 L.R.A. 622, 47 Pac. 1023; Mills v. Scott, 99 U. S. 25, 25 L. ed. 294; National Park Bank v. Peavey, 64 Fed. 912; Aldrich v. Anchor Coal & Development Co. 24 Or. 32, 41 Am. St. Rep. 831, 32 Pac. 756.

The liability is primary, and not that of a surety.

Mokelumne Hill Canal & Min. Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 265, 12 Mor. Min. Rep. 6; Davidson v. Rankin, 34 Cal. 503, 13 Mor. Min. Rep. 472; Young v. Rosenbaum, 39 Cal. 646; Sonoma Valley Bank v. Hill, 59 Cal. 107; Faymonville v. McCollough, 59 Cal. 285; Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117, 28 Pac. 110; Morrow v. Superior Ct. 64 Cal. 383, 1 Pac. 354; Re California Mut. L. Ins. Co. 81 Cal. 364, 22 Pac. 869; Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 650, 16 Am. St. Rep. 178, 23 Pac. 62; Knowles v. Sandercock, 107 Cal. 629, 40 Pac. 1047; Herman v. Hecht, 116 Cal. 553, 48 Pac. 611; Sacramento Bank v. Pacific Bank, 124 Cal. 147, 45 L.R.A. 863, 71 Am. St. Rep. 36, 56 Pac. 787.

A bank, the payee or holder of a note, does not discharge a surety by failing to apply money of the maker which happens to be on deposit at or after the time the note matures.

Strong v. Foster, 17 C. B. 217, 25 L. J. C. P. N. S. 106, 4 Week. Rep. 151; Citizens' Bank v. Elliott, 9 Kan. App. 797, 59 Pac. 1102; Martin v. Mechanics' Bank, 6 Harr. & J. 235; McShane v. Howard Bank, 73 Md. 135, 10 L.R.A. 552, 20 Atl. 776; Citizens' Bank v. Booze, 75 Mo. App. 189; Houston v. Braden, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 37 S. W. 467; Bank of British Columbia v. Jeffs, 15 Wash. 230, 46 Pac. 247; National Mahaiwe Bank v. Peck, 127 Mass. 301, 34 Am. Rep. 368; Voss v. German American Bank, 83 Ill. 599, 25 Am. Rep. 415; National Bank v. Smith, 66 N. Y. 271, 23 Am. Rep. 48; Glazier v. Douglass, 32 Conn. 393.

Plaintiff's failure to prosecute diligently his action against the corporation did not release defendant, even though his liability was merely that of a surety.

Lowman v. Yates, 37 N. Y. 601; Douglass v. Ferris, 138 N. Y. 192, 34 Am. St. Rep. 435, 33 N. E. 1041; McKim v. Williams, 134 Mass. 136; Greenway v. William D. Orthwein Grain Co. 29 C. C. A. 330, 56 U. S. App. 523, 85 Fed. 536; Hunt v. Purdy, 82 N. Y. 486, 37 Am. Rep. 587; Jones v. Allen, 29 C. C. A. 318, 56 U. S. App. 529, 85 Fed. 523; Biggins v. Raisch, 107 Cal. 210, 40 Pac. 333; Monroe County v. Otis, 62 N. Y. 88; Clark v. Sickler, 64 N. Y. 231, 21 Am. Rep. 606.

The judgment should be reversed; and as all the material facts have been stipulated and the damages recoverable are a liquidated sum, no new trial should be awarded, and the court below should be directed to render the proper judgment against defendant.

Digitized by Google

Rathbone v. Kiowa County, 27 C. C. A. 477, 49 U. S. App. 577, 83 Fed. 125; Irvine v. Angus, 35 C. C. A. 501, 93 Fed. 629; Churchill v. Buck, 42 C. C. A. 148, 102 Fed. 38; Ft. Scott v. Hickman, 112 U. S. 150, 28 L. ed. 636, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Allen v. St. Louis Nat. Bank, 120 U. S. 20, 30 L. ed. 573, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460; Saltonstall v. Russell, 152 U. S. 628, 38 L. ed. 576, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733.

Mr. Arthur C. Rounds argued the cause, and, with Mr. Harold Otis, filed a brief for respondent:

The decision in Pinney v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 144, 46 L. ed. 125, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52, does not establish the right of the petitioner, the plaintiff below, to a recovery.

The sole question presented to the Supreme Court for its determination was the Federal question whether the state statute was in violation of any of the provisions of the United States Constitution which had been relied upon in the court below. The state court had decided no other question, and had it done so its decision in that respect would not have been open to review.

Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 210 U. S. 187, 204, 205, 52 L. ed. 1016, 1024, 1025, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Leonard v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 198 U. S. 416, 422, 423, 49 L. ed. 1108, 1111, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750.

General expressions in every opinion are to be taken in connection with the case in which those expressions are used. If they go beyond the case, they may be respected, but ought not to control the judgment in a subsequent suit, when the very point is presented for decision.

Carroll v. Carroll, 16 How. 275, 286, 287, 14 L. ed. 936, 941; Northern Nat. Bank v. Porter Twp. 110 U. S. 608, 615, 28 L. ed. 258, 260, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254; Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 1, 20, 33 L. ed. 842, 849, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 504; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 135, 34 L. ed. 128, 140, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 574, 575, 39 L. ed. 759, 816, 817, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 678, 679, 42 L. ed. 890, 901, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Harriman v. Northern Securities Co. 197 U. S. 244, 291, 49 L. ed. 739, 761, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

As we read the opinion in the Pinney Case, however, it is not inconsistent with, but rather supports, the decision of the court below upon the present record. As we understand it, the court in that case sought merely to apply to the particular facts there presented the principles relating to conflict of laws which had been elaborately discussed and expounded in the leading cases of Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124, 27 L. ed. 104, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102, and Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. (The Montana) 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. ed. 788, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469, upon which the court relied.

If the parties expressly stipulate that their contract is to be governed by the laws of the jurisdiction in which it is made, or if the contract contains a provision valid under those laws, but invalid under the laws of a neighboring jurisdiction, it cannot fairly be inferred or presumed that the parties intended their contract to be governed by the laws of the other jurisdiction.

Lloyd v. Guibert, L. R. 1 Q. B. 120, 6 Best. & S. 100, 35 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 74, 13 L. T. N. S. 602, 5 Eng. Rul. Cas. 870; Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124, 137, 27 L. ed. 104, 108, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102; Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. supra.

The court did not hold in Pinney v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 144, 46 L. ed. 125, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52; that the stockholders would have been liable in the absence of such an express charter provision; nor, we submit, did they hold that if such an inference or assumption were inconsistent with the other provisions of the charter, or if it clearly appeared, upon a fair construction of the charter, that the parties in fact contracted "with a view to" or "with reference to" the laws of the incorporating state, the court must nevertheless assume the contrary in order to impose upon the stockholders a liability which they never agreed to assume, and from which they were exempt by the laws of the incorporating state, and by the company's express charter provisions.

See Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Furness [1905] 1 K. B. 314, 74 L. J. K. B. N. S. 243, 21 Times L. R. 179, 10 Com. Cas. 53, 12 Manson, 109, [1906] 1 K. B. 57, 75 L. J. K. B. N. S. 83, 54 Week. Rep. 324, 93 L. T. N. S. 687, 22 Times L. R. 45, 11 Com. Cas. 35; Thomas v. Matthiessen, 113 C. C. A. 101, 192 Fed. 497.

If, upon the principles announced in Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124, 27 L. ed. 104, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102, and Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. (The Montana) 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. ed. 788, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469, the court was justified in the Pinney Case in assuming an intent on the part of the stockholders to contract with reference to the California law, upon the same principles, in view of the difference in the provisions of the charter in the present case, the court below (even had the parties not stipulated the fact), would have been bound to find, as it did, that the stockholders in Wentworth Hotel Company intended their obligations to be governed by the laws of Arizona, and by the provisions of the charter of the company, framed thereunder.

Digitized by Google

In a case like the present, the trial below having been by the court without a jury, these findings of fact, like a special verdict under the common-law practice, are findings of the ultimate facts, and no inferences of fact to the contrary, or which have not been expressly found, are permissible. If these findings support the conclusions of the court, its judgment must stand.

Norris v. Jackson, 9 Wall. 125, 127, 128, 19 L. ed. 608, 609; Miller v. Brooklyn L. Ins. Co. 12 Wall. 285, 297, 20 L. ed. 398, 400; Raimond v. Terrebonne Parish, 132 U. S. 192, 194, 33 L. ed. 309, 310, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Collins v. Riley, 104 U. S. 322, 327, 26 L. ed. 752, 754.

The court in New York was not entitled in this case, any more than in any other case involving the construction of a contract, to "read into the contract" an agreement which obviously the parties did not contemplate or make, and which would flatly contradict the express terms of the written charter.

Grover & B. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Radcliffe, 137 U. S. 287, 299, 34 L. ed. 670, 673, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92.

It does not help to refer to the obligation as quasi contractual. Obligations imposed by law are sometimes so described, but with the exception of the common-law duty of a defendant who has been unjustly enriched, to make amends, quasi contractual obligations are dependent on the mandate of a court as evidenced by its judgment, or upon a statutory duty which a sovereign imposes upon those who are subject to its command. (Keener, Quasi Contr. p. 16). Here there is no suggestion of unjust enrichment, and no judgment or statute could reach the defendant to impose a duty upon him unless he was subject to the jurisdiction of the court rendering the judgment, or of the state which enacted the statute.

Buchanan v. Rucker, 9 East, 192, 1 Campb. 65, 9 Revised Rep. 531; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 722, 24 L. ed. 565, 568; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 669, 36 L. ed. 1123, 1128, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Freeman v. Alderson, 119 U. S. 185, 188, 30 L. ed. 372, 373, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165.

The suggestion that the incorporators of the Wentworth Hotel Company may have proceeded with a view to "evading" the California law requires little consideration. Such a suggestion adds nothing to nor does it detract anything from the force of our argument.

United States v. Isham, 17 Wall. 496, 506, 21 L. ed. 728, 731.

No court outside of California has ever considered that the Pinney Case declared or was authority for any such rule of liability as that for which plaintiff contends.

Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Furness [1905] 1 K. B. 304, 74 L. J. K. B. N. S. 243, 21 Times L. R. 179, 10 Com. Cas. 53, 12 Manson, 109, [1906] 1 K. B. 49, 75 L. J. K. B. N. S. 83, 54 Week. Rep. 324, 93 L. T. N. S. 687, 22 Times L. R. 45, 11 Com. Cas. 35; Coulter Dry Goods Co. v. Rosenbaum, 74 Misc. 579, 134 N. Y. Supp. 487; Thomas v. Matthiessen, 170 Fed. 363, 113 C. C. A. 101, 192 Fed. 495; Thomas v. Wentworth Hotel Co. 158 Cal. 275, 139 Am. St. Rep. 120, 110 Pac. 942; Peck v. Noee, 154 Cal. 351, 97 Pac. 865.

If, under any such rule of liability as the plaintiff here contends for, innocent stockholders are chargeable not merely with the liabilities imposed by the law of the domicil of the corporation, but as well with the varying liabilities prescribed by the laws of the various states where the corporation, under its charter powers, may engage in business, then, as the court below well said: "Corporate stock is liable to become in this country an uncertain and even dangerous asset."

Thomas v. Matthiessen, 113 C. C. A. 101, 192 Fed. 495; Leyner Engineering Works v. Kempner, 163 Fed. 608.

The defendant, when he subscribed for his stock, contracted with reference to the laws of Arizona. He did not agree to assume any liabilities under the California law. And the debts which the Hotel Company subsequently contracted in California were not binding upon or enforceable against him as contractual obligations.

Christopher v. Norvell, 201 U. S. 216, 226–230, 50 L. ed. 732, 736–738, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, 5 Ann. Cas. 740; Relfe v. Rundle (Life Asso. of America v. Rundle) 103 U. S. 222, 226, 26 L. ed. 337, 339; Chicago City R. Co. v. Allerton, 18 Wall. 233, 235, 236, 21 L. ed. 902–904; Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 874; Nashua Sav. Bank v. Anglo-American Land, Mortg. & Agency Co. 189 U. S. 221, 230, 47 L. ed. 782, 786, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517; Canada Southern R. Co. v. Gebhard, 109 U. S. 527, 27 L. ed. 1020, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; Glenn v. Liggett, 135 U. S. 533, 548, 34 L. ed. 262, 268, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319, 322, 33 L. ed. 184, 187, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739;

Digitized by Google

Converse v. Hamilton, 224 U. S. 243, 253, 56 L. ed. 749, 752, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; O'Connor v. Witherby, 111 Cal. 527, 44 Pac. 227; Merrick v. Van Santvoord, 34 N. Y. 216; Converse v. Ætna Nat. Bank, 79 Conn. 169, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 64 Atl. 341, 7 Ann. Cas. 75; Leyner Engineering Works v. Kempner, 163 Fed. 605; Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Furness [1905] 1 K. B. 304, 74 L. J. K. B. N. S. 243, 21 Times L. R. 179, 10 Com. Cas. 53, 12 Manson, 109, affirmed in the Court of Appeal in [1906] 1 K. B. 49, 75 L. J. K. B. N. S. 83, 54 Week. Rep. 324, 93 L. T. N. S. 687, 22 Times L. R. 45, 11 Com. Cas. 35; Miles v. Woodward, 115 Cal. 311, 46 Pac. 1076.

It was competent for the creditors to waive their right of recourse against the stockholders.

Robinson v. Bidwell, 22 Cal. 388; French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 556; Wells v. Black, 117 Cal. 161, 37 L.R.A. 619, 59 Am. St. Rep. 162, 48 Pac. 1090; United States v. Stanford, 161 U. S. 412, 40 L. ed. 751, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576.

Moreover, the power of the company and its officers to bind the defendant for the debts of the company as defined and limited in the charter and by the agreement of the parties could not, as against him, a nonresident of California, be enlarged by the statutes of that state.

Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story, 480, Fed. Cas. No. 11,274; Liverpool & S. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. (The Montana) 129 U. S. 397, 449, 454, 32 L. ed. 788, 795, 796, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469; King v. Sarria, 69 N. Y. 33, 25 Am. Rep. 128; Grover & B. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Radcliffe, 137 U. S. 287, 299, 34 L. ed. 670, 673, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Furness [1906] 1 K. B. 59, 75 L. J. K. B. N. S. 83, 54 Week. Rep. 324, 93 L. T. N. S. 687, 22 Times L. R. 45, 11 Com. Cas. 35.

It is fundamental in the law of agency that when a third party deals with an agent with notice that he has no authority to make a contract imposing personal liability upon the principal, he is bound by the notice, and the principal comes under no liability to him upon the contract.

Johnson v. Haws, 47 App. Div. 597, 62 N. Y. Supp. 641, affirmed in 168 N. Y. 654, 61 N. E. 1130; Ensign v. Wands, 1 Johns. Cas. 171; King v. Sarria, 69 N. Y. 24, 25 Am. Rep. 128; Ward v. Joslin, 186 U. S. 142, 46 L. ed. 1093, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807; Boyd v. Heron, 125 Cal. 455, 58 Pac. 64; Thomas v. Wentworth Hotel Co. 16 Cal. App. 414, 117 Pac. 1041, 1046; Story, Partn. § 130.

A stockholder's statutory liability enforceable in foreign jurisdictions always sounds in contract. If the nonresident stockholder acquire stock in a corporation organized under laws which impose such a liability, he necessarily assumes the liability which is attached to his stock interest by the law which creates it, and may properly be held to have intended to do so.

Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 966, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Christopher v. Norvell, 201 U. S. 216, 229, 50 L. ed. 732, 737, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, 5 Ann. Cas. 740; Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27, 56, 30 L. ed. 864, 873, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 564, 44 L. ed. 587, 590, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 530, 51 L. ed. 1163, 1174, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Hawthorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. 10, 22, 17 L. ed. 776, 778; Howarth v. Lombard, 175 Mass. 575, 49 L.R.A. 301, 56 N. E. 888; Kennedy v. California Sav. Bank, 97 Cal. 93, 33 Am. St. Rep. 163, 31 Pac. 846; Howarth v. Angle, 162 N. Y. 187, 47 L.R.A. 725, 56 N. E. 489.

No state can by its law prescribe the terms and conditions upon which a nonresident may become a stockholder in a foreign corporation, or impose liabilities upon him as such; for neither the corporation when organized nor the nonresident stockholder then or thereafter is subject to the jurisdiction of the foreign state.

Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 874; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 722, 24 L. ed. 565, 568; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 669, 36 L. ed. 1123, 1128, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Freeman v. Anderson, 119 U. S. 185, 188, 30 L. ed. 372, 373, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Buchanan v. Rucker, 9 East, 192, 1 Campb. 65, 9 Revised Rep. 531; Story, Confl. L. 8th ed. §§ 7, 20; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 176.

Upon similar grounds a state cannot enlarge the authority of an agent for a nonresident principal beyond that actually conferred.

Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story, 480, Fed. Cas. No. 11,274; King v. Sarria, 69 N. Y. 33, 25 Am. Rep. 128; Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. (The Montana) 129 U. S. 397, 454, 32 L. ed. 788, 796, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469; Grover & B. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Radcliffe, 137 U. S. 287, 299, 34 L. ed. 670, 673, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Leyner Engineering Works v. Kempner, 163 Fed. 605.

The fact that the Wentworth Hotel Company owned property and did business and contracted debts in California is immaterial. The defendant was not and is not the Wentworth Hotel Company. That company is a distinct legal entity, having its own property, its own rights and powers, and subject to its own liabilities. When the company bought the property, Mr. Matthiessen took no title to it, and when it did business it acted in its own behalf, and its acts did not bring the defendant within the jurisdiction or subject him to the laws of the state.

Digitized by Google

Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 406, 409, 47 L. ed. 1113, 1115, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728; People v. American Bell Teleph Co. 117 N. Y. 255, 22 N. E. 1057; Peterson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 364, 391, 51 L. ed. 841, 852, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Furness [1906] 1 K. B. 59, 75 L. J. K. B. N. S. 83, 54 Week. Rep. 324, 93 L. T. N. S. 687, 22 Times L. R. 45, 11 Com. Cas. 35; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 29 Fed. 17; Richmond & I. Constr. Co. v. Richmond, N. I. & B. R. Co. 34 L.R.A. 625, 15 C. C. A. 289, 31 U. S. App. 704, 68 Fed. 108.

Of course, when the Wentworth Hotel Company did business in California, the company, in the conduct of that business, was subject to the California law. California could limit the exercise of its powers and impose upon the conduct of its business the same conditions which were in force with reference to domestic corporations. This was all that the constitutional provision in California did or purported to do. Its provision that no foreign corporation should be "allowed to transact business within this state on more favorable conditions than are prescribed to similar corporations organized under the laws of this state" applied only to the corporation. Properly construed it did not extend or purport to extend to the stockholders of the corporation.

National Park Bank v. Remsen, 158 U. S. 337, 344, 346, 39 L. ed. 1008, 1010, 1011, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 891; Young v. Moore, 162 Mich. 60, 127 N. W. 29, Williams v. Gaylord, 186 U. S. 157, 165, 46 L. ed. 1102, 1106, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 798; Miles v. Woodward, 115 Cal. 311, 46 Pac. 1076; London, P. & A. Bank v. Aronstein, 54 C. C. A. 663, 117 Fed. 609.

The adoption of the contrary rule would obviously lead to startling results.

Leyner Engineering Works v. Kempner, 163 Fed. 605.

Statutes imposing liability upon stockholders are in derogation of the common law and are to be strictly construed.

Brunswick Terminal Co. v. National Bank, 192 U. S. 386, 390, 48 L. ed. 491, 493, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 314; Davidson v. Rankin, 34 Cal. 503, 13 Mor. Min. Rep. 472; Buchanan v. Rucker, 9 East, 194, 1 Campb. 65, 9 Revised Rep. 531.

The notes here in question having been payable at the banking houses of the First National Bank and Union Savings Bank, respectively, the plaintiff's assignors, those banks were bound to apply to their payment at maturity the deposits then or thereafter on hand and applicable thereto. Having failed to do so, the plaintiff is not entitled to charge the defendant for the resulting loss.

Ætna Nat. Bank v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 46 N. Y. 88, 7 Am. Rep. 314; Indig v. National City Bank, 80 N. Y. 106; 5 Cyc. 554, 555; 2 Morse, Banks & Bkg. 4th ed. §§ 557, 563, pp. 949, 956; Fullerton v. Bank of United States, 1 Pet. 604, 617, 7 L. ed. 280, 286; Bank of United States v. Carneal, 2 Pet. 543, 548, 7 L. ed. 514, 516; Pursifull v. Pineville Bkg. Co. 97 Ky. 154, 53 Am. St. Rep. 409, 30 S. W. 203; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Henninger, 105 Pa. 496; German Nat. Bank v. Foreman, 138 Pa. 474, 21 Am. St. Rep. 908, 21 Atl. 20; First Nat. Bank v. Peltz, 176 Pa. 513, 36 L.R.A. 832, 53 Am. St. Rep. 686, 35 Atl. 218; Dawson v. Real Estate Bank, 5 Ark. 283; McDowell v. Bank of Wilmington & Brandywine, 1 Harr. (Del.) 369.

The plaintiff argues that this principle is not applicable here because, under the California law, a stockholder is primarily liable to the creditors. Of course the liability is primary in the sense that the stockholder can be sued in the first instance even though no effort has been made to enforce the claim against the company; but this does not mean that a stockholder in a solvent company, who has been sued by a creditor and compelled to pay his proportion of the debt, is not, as against the company and his fellow stockholders, entitled to be reimbursed from its assets. His equitable right to such reimbursement is clear and is recognized by the California courts.

Re California Mut. L. Ins. Co. 81 Cal. 365, 22 Pac. 869; Prince v. Lynch, 38 Cal. 538, 99 Am. Dec. 427.

Counsel argue that a bank holding a note does not discharge a surety by failing to apply money of the maker which it holds on deposit at or after the time the note matures. If, however, the note by its terms is payable at the bank which holds it, the better authorities are to the contrary.

Pursifull v. Pineville Bkg. Co. 97 Ky. 154, 53 Am. St. Rep. 409, 30 S. W. 203.

And the authorities counsel rely upon are distinguishable upon this or other grounds. Thus, in National Mahaiwe Bank v. Peck, 127 Mass. 298, 34 Am. Rep. 368, the note under consideration was given by the treasurer of the town and was regarded as a town obligation, while the deposit was to the credit of the individual. In Strong v. Foster, 17 C. B. 201, 25 L. J. C. P. N. S. 106, 4 Week. Rep. 151; National Bank v. Smith, 66 N. Y. 271, 23 Am. Rep. 48;

Digitized by Google

Citizens' Bank v. Booze, 75 Mo. App. 189; Bank of British Columbia v. Jeffs, 15 Wash. 230, 46 Pac. 247; Voss v. German American Bank, 83 Ill. 599, 25 Am. Rep. 415; Citizens' Bank v. Elliott, 9 Kan. App. 797, 59 Pac. 1102; Martin v. Mechanics' Bank, 6 Harr. & J. 235, the notes were not, or did not appear to have been, made payable at the bank. In Houston v. Braden, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 37 S. W. 467, no deposit was made until after the maturity of the note; and in Glazier v. Douglass, 32 Conn. 393, and McShane v. Howard Bank, 73 Md. 135, 10 L.R.A. 552, 20 Atl. 776, there was no question of bank deposits at all.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit by a citizen of California, the holder of two notes made in California by the Wentworth Hotel Company, to recover from a stockholder in that corporation, a citizen of New York, a proportionate share of the sums due upon the same. The facts as agreed and found are as follows: The corporation was formed under the laws of the territory of Arizona, among many other things, to buy and sell real estate, "to build, maintain, operate, and carry on, in all its branches, the business of hotel keeping," and to build or purchase gas or electric works in Arizona or California, "both for its use in the hotel business and for the purpose of selling and disposing of the same." The principal place of business in Arizona was Tucson, and that outside of it was Los Angeles, California, with power to change to Pasadena, in that state. Before the incorporation, the defendant, residing [233] in New York, signed a writing reciting the intent of the subscribers to form a corporation in Arizona for the purpose of acquiring a portion of the Oak Knoll, and building a first-class hotel thereon; and he thereby subscribed for a certain number of shares. Later he took and paid for one thousand shares. The Oak Knoll is near Pasadena, in California, and the defendant and his associates intended the corporation to have the power to build and manage a hotel in that neighborhood, and expected that it would do so, but intended their liability to be controlled by the laws of Arizona.

The corporation complied with the laws of California, bought the land, built the hotel, went into business, and finally was adjudged insolvent. The notes in question were given for loans to the company. At the time of subscribing the defendant agreed with the company that he should be exempt from personal liability, and that neither the corporation nor its officers should have power to subject him or the other stockholders to it. Such exemption was expressed also in the certificate of incorporation. But by the statutes of California each stockholder of a corporation is personally liable for such proportion of the debts contracted while he is such, as the amount of his stock bears to the whole subscribed, and the liability of each stockholder of a corporation formed under the laws of any other state or territory of the United States, but doing business in California, is the same. Civil Code, § 322. The courts below ruled that the defendant could not be held, the circuit court of appeals citing Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Furness [1906] 1 K. B. 49, 75 L. J. K. B. N. S. 83, 54 Week. Rep. 324, 93 L. T. N. S. 687, 22 Times L. R. 45, 11 Com. Cas. 35, in which it was held that the law of California could not impose liability upon an English shareholder in an English corporation, without his assent. 113 C. C. A. 101, 192 Fed. 495.

We agree that without authority from the stockholder a corporation cannot make him answerable in a way not [234] contemplated by the charter. We will assume for purposes of decision, although we express no opinion upon the point, that a provision for doing business in other states without any express reference to the possible difference in their laws would not be enough to change the rule. But a provision exempting the stockholder alongside of one authorizing the doing of business elsewhere cannot be taken to limit the latter authority to those states that grant a like exemption, or be deemed an attempt to override the law of the place where the business is to be done. That law may fail to operate for want of power over the person sought to be affected; but the charter leaves it open to that person to come in under it by assent. If the law of California forbade a foreign corporation to do business there unless all the stockholders filed a written assent to its conditions, the Arizona charter would not make such an agreement void. If this be true, then a particular stockholder may give such assent outside of the instrument of incorporation, and be bound by it.

In this case the defendant expressed in writing his wish that the corporation should set up a hotel in California. It is true that he also desired and stipulated that he should be free from personal charge. But that is merely the not infrequent occurrence of a party bringing about the facts and attempting to prohibit their legal consequence to which we lately had occasion to advert in National City Bank v. Hotchkiss, 231 U. S. 50, 56, ante, 20, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20. See also Butler v. Farnsworth, 4 Wash. C. C. 101, 103, 104, Fed. Cas. No. 2,240. This, of course, he cannot do. In such cases the only question is which of two inconsistent orders is the dominant command. Here the usual prevalence of the specific over the general is fortified by the consideration that the building and carrying on of the California hotel was the main object for which the parties came together. When the defendant authorized that, he could not avoid the consequences by saying that he did not foresee or intend, or that he forbade [235] them. He knew that California had laws, and he took his risk of what they might be, when, as we must hold, he gave his assent to doing business there. We cannot interpret his words as giving merely a conditional assent. We follow the language of Pinney v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 144, 46 L. ed. 125, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52, so far as it sanctions the views that we have expressed. See also Thomas v. Wentworth Hotel Co. 158 Cal. 275, 280, 139 Am. St. Rep. 120, 110 Pac. 942.

Digitized by Google

There remains only the question whether the liability is of a kind that will be enforced outside of the California courts. Analysis on this point often is blurred by the vague statement that the liability is "contractual." An obligation to pay money generally is enforced by an action of assumpsit, and to that extent is referred to a contract, even though it be one existing only by fiction of law. But such obligations when imposed upon the members of a corporation may vary very largely. The incorporation may create a chartered partnership the members of which are primary contractors, or it may go no farther than to impose a penalty; or again, it may create a secondary remedy for a debt treated as that of the corporation alone, like the right to attach the corporation's real estate; or the liability may be inseparable from the local procedure; or the law may be so ambiguous as to leave it doubtful whether the liability is matter of remedy, and local, or creates a contract on the part of the members that will go with them wherever they are found. McClaine v. Rankin, 197 U. S. 154, 161 49 L. ed. 702, 705, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410, 3 Ann. Cas. 500; Christopher v. Norvell, 201 U. S. 216, 225, 226, 50 L. ed. 732, 736, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, 5 Ann. Cas. 740. In the present case we think that there can be no doubt of the meaning of the California statute. It reads: "Each stockholder of a corporation is individually and personally liable for such proportion of its debts and liabilities," etc., as we have stated, and supposes the action against him to be brought "upon such debt." Civil Code, § 322. This means that by force of the statute, if the corporation incurs a debt within the jurisdiction, [236] the stockholder is a party to it, and joins in the contract in the proportion of his shares. And while the statutes of California cannot force an agent upon a foreign principal, still, if he has created such an agency in advance, he has come within the jurisdiction by his agent, as in other cases of contract made within a state from outside, and will be bound. Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed 966, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477.

The defendant was a principal debtor. Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 650, 16 Am. St. Rep. 178, 23 Pac. 62. The fact that the corporation had deposits in the banks that held the notes did not discharge the notes pro tanto. Strong v. Foster, 17 C. B. 201, 25 L. J. C. P. N. S. 106, 4 Week. Rep. 151; National Mahaiwe Bank v. Peck, 127 Mass. 298, 34 Am. Rep. 368. The judgment must be reversed, and judgment entered for the plaintiff on the agreed facts.

Judgment reversed.

The Chief Justice dissents.

Mr. Justice Hughes took no part in the decision.

FRANCES A. MIEDREICH, Plff. in Err.,
v.
CONSTANZE LAUENSTEIN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 236-247.)

Error to state court — Federal question — how raised.

1. A Federal question which the highest state court regards as duly before it for consideration, and which it proceeds to determine, will be regarded by the Federal Supreme Court, on writ of error to the state court, as duly made.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1168-1248, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — scope of review — facts.

2. The Federal Supreme Court will not revise the findings of the highest state court upon the issue of whether service of process was fraudulently procured, where evidence in support of the state court's conclusion is not entirely lacking.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1596-1600, 2175-2208, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — foreclosure proceedings — false return by sheriff.

3. Upholding a sale under a decree for

Note.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts

Digitized by Google

the foreclosure of a mortgage against an attack based on the ground that the owner was not served with process in the foreclosure proceedings does not deprive her of her property without due process of law, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., where the state had made provision for the service of process, and the original party in the foreclosure proceeding did all that the law required in the issue of and attempt to serve process, and the sheriff made a return to the court, contrary to fact, that the service had been duly made, although, under the circumstances, the recovery upon the sheriff's bond, authorized by the state law, may not be an adequate remedy.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 8, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 20.]

Argued and submitted October 31, 1913. Decided February 2, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Indiana to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Superior Court of Vanderburgh County, in that state, in favor of defendant in a suit to vacate a decree of foreclosure. Affirmed.

See same case below, 172 Ind. 140, 86 N. E. 963, 87 N. E. 1029.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George K. Denton submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

A Federal question was stated in the decision of the supreme court of the state of Indiana in deciding this cause.

Miedreich v. Lauenstein, 172 Ind. 140, 86 N. E. 963, 87 N. E. 1029.

The Federal questions were necessarily involved in this case, and, as the supreme court of the state of Indiana decided them, it is not material whether that court stated them as Federal questions or not.

Carpenter v. Strange, 141 U. S. 87, 103, 35 L. ed. 640, 646, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 960; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 683, 36 L. ed. 1123, 1133, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Atherton v. Atherton, 181 U. S. 155, 160, 45 L. ed. 794, 797, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; Jacobs v. Marks, 182 U. S. 583, 587, 45 L. ed. 1241, 1244, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Stearns v. Minnesota, 179 U. S. 223, 233, 45 L. ed. 162, 170, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73; Wilson v. Standefer, 184 U. S. 399, 411, 46 L. ed. 612, 617, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384.

No state shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.

Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 23 L. ed. 914; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897.

"Due process of law" implies a tribunal of competent jurisdiction, and a sufficient service on the defendant, or an appearance on his part, to render him amenable to that jurisdiction.

Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 731, 24 L. ed. 565, 572.

An opportunity to be heard is essential to due process of law.

Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 15 L. ed. 372.

By the general law of the land, no court is authorized to render a judgment or decree against anyone, or his estate, until after due notice by service of process to appear and defend.

Hollingsworth v. Barbour, 4 Pet. 466, 7 L. ed. 922; Knowles v. Logansport Gaslight & Coke Co. 19 Wall. 58, 22 L. ed. 70; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897.

In its restricted sense, jurisdiction means the power to decide. Without this any judgment is subject to direct or collateral attack as an absolute nullity. Jurisdiction of this kind is twofold: (1) Of the subject-matter, (2) of the person. If either is wanting, there is no jurisdiction.

Board of Trade v. Hammond Elevator Co. 198 U. S. 424, 49 L. ed. 1111, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 740; Shepard v. Adams, 168 U. S. 618, 42 L. ed. 602, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Remington v. Central P. R. Co. 198 U. S. 95, 49 L. ed. 959, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

It is an elementary principle of jurisprudence that a court of justice cannot acquire jurisdiction over the person of one who has no residence within its territorial jurisdiction, except by actual service of notice, within the jurisdiction, upon him, or upon someone authorized to accept service in his behalf, or by his waiver, by general appearance or otherwise, of the want of due service.

---

can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On review of questions of fact on writ of error to state court—see note to Smiley v. Kansas, 49 L. ed. U. S. 546.

As to what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

As to what service of process is sufficient to constitute due process of law—see note to Pinney v. Providence Loan & Invest. Co. 50 L.R.A. 577.

Digitized by Google

D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 13 L. ed. 648; Knowles v. Logansport Gaslight & Coke Co. 19 Wall. 58, 22 L. ed. 70; Hall v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160, 23 L. ed. 271; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; York v. Texas, 137 U. S. 15, 34 L. ed. 604, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; Wilson v. Seligman, 144 U. S. 41, 36 L. ed. 338, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 541; Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559.

Service of a mesne process from a court of a state, not made upon a defendant or his authorized agent within the state, although there made in some other manner recognized as valid by its legislative acts and judicial decisions, can be allowed no validity in the circuit court of the United States after the removal of the cause into that court, pursuant to the acts of Congress, unless the defendant can be held, by virtue of a general appearance or otherwise, to have waived the defect in the service, and to have submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the court.

Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559.

Process must be personally served on minors in order that jurisdiction may be acquired, and no guardian ad litem can be appointed by the court for an infant defendant who has not been personally served with process, if a resident, or, if a nonresident, with notice by publication.

Carver v. Carver, 64 Ind. 194; Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 364, 21 L. ed. 959, 962.

The Federal courts will not give effect to a judgment in a state court, unless the state court has lawfully acquired jurisdiction of the defendant, even despite recitals in the judgment of the state court of facts which, if true, would have given it jurisdiction.

Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed 897; Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, 215 U. S. 437, 54 L. ed. 272, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125.

Returns of officers of service of process may be impeached.

Hauswirth v. Sullivan, 6 Mont. 203, 9 Pac. 798; Smith v. Morrill, 11 Colo. App. 284, 52 Pac. 1110; McClung v. McWhorter, 47 W. Va. 150, 81 Am. St. Rep. 785, 34 S. E. 740; Campbell Printing Press & Mfg. Co. v. Marder, L. & Co. 50 Neb. 283, 61 Am. St. Rep. 573, 69 N. W. 774; Murrer v. Security Co. 131 Ind. 35, 30 N. E. 879; Johnson v. H. P. Gregory & Co. 4 Wash. 111, 31 Am. St. Rep. 907, 29 Pac. 831; Wabash Western R. Co. v. Brow, 164 U. S. 271, 41 L. ed. 431, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126; Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, 215 U. S. 437, 54 L. ed. 272, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125.

A domestic judgment is open to jurisdictional inquiries.

Needham v. Thayer, 147 Mass. 536, 18 N. E. 429; Nations v. Johnson, 24 How. 195, 203, 16 L. ed. 628, 631; Earle v. McVeigh, 91 U. S. 503, 507, 23 L. ed. 398, 400; Starbuck v. Murray, 5 Wend. 148, 21 Am. Dec. 172; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 23 L. ed. 914; Cooper v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. 308, 19 L. ed. 931; Wonderly v. Lafayette County, 150 Mo. 635, 45 L.R.A. 386, 73 Am. St. Rep. 474, 51 S. W. 745; Ferguson v. Crawford, 70 N. Y. 253, 26 Am. Rep. 601; Hauswirth v. Sullivan, 6 Mont. 203, 9 Pac. 798; Johnson v. H. P. Gregory & Co. 4 Wash. 111, 31 Am. St. Rep. 907, 29 Pac. 831.

A judgment rendered without jurisdiction can be reviewed on a writ of error sued out to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Board of Trade v. Hammond Elevator Co. 198 U. S. 424, 49 L. ed. 1111, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 740; Shepard v. Adams, 168 U. S. 618, 42 L. ed. 602, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Remington v. Central P. R. Co. 198 U. S. 95, 49 L. ed. 959, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Davis v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 84 C. C. A. 453, 156 Fed. 775; United States v. Jahn, 155 U. S. 109, 39 L. ed. 87, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; St. Louis Cotton Compress Co. v. American Cotton Co. 60 C. C. A. 80, 125 Fed. 196; Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, 215 U. S. 437, 54 L. ed. 272, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125.

Neither the finding nor the rulings of the state court should be permitted to prevent the determination of the right asserted under the Constitution and laws of the United States.

St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 136, 54 L. ed. 698, 29 L.R.A. (N.S.) 802, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. ed. 556, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316.

The United States Supreme Court may examine the entire record, including the evidence, if properly incorporated therein, to determine whether what purports to be a general finding of facts against one party necessarily involves the decision of questions of law bearing upon a Federal right claimed by such party in the state court.

Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. supra; Mackay v. Dillon, 4 How. 421, 447, 11 L. ed. 1038, 1050; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 667, 38 L. ed. 305, 308, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704; Stanley v. Schwalby, 162 U. S. 255, 274, 277-279, 40 L. ed. 960, 967, 968, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 115 U. S. 683, 697, 29 L. ed. 510, 515, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Huntington v.

Digitized by Google

Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 683, 36 L. ed. 1123, 1133, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

Parties interested in the premises, who were not served with process, are not bound by a decree of foreclosure of a mortgage thereon, and may redeem from sale thereunder, the same as if no decree had been made.

Noyes v. Hall, 97 U. S. 34, 24 L. ed. 909; Dawson v. Overmyer, 141 Ind. 438, 40 N. E. 1065; Johnson v. Hosford, 110 Ind. 572, 10 N. E. 407.

The right of redemption is a favored right.

Russell v. Southard, 12 How. 139, 13 L. ed. 927; Villa v. Rodriguez (Alexander v. Rodriguez) 12 Wall. 323, 20 L. ed. 406; Bigler v. Waller, 14 Wall. 297, 20 L. ed. 891; Noyes v. Hall, 97 U. S. 34, 24 L. ed. 909; Bryan v. Brasius, 162 U. S. 415, 40 L. ed. 1022, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803; Romig v. Gillett, 187 U. S. 111, 47 L. ed. 97, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

The appropriate remedy for relief against judgments at law wrongfully obtained is a bill in equity.

Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 7 Cranch, 332, 3 L. ed. 362; Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 17 How. 443, 15 L. ed. 123; Phillips v. Negley, 117 U. S. 665, 673, 29 L. ed. 1013, 1015, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 901; Butler v. Thornburgh, 153 Ind. 530, 55 N. E. 417.

Equity may vacate or enjoin a judgment in an action of which defendant had no legal notice, the trial court assuming jurisdiction on the strength of a false return of service of process by the sheriff or other officer.

Willman v. Willman, 57 Ind. 500; Martin v. Barney, 20 Ala. 369; Ryan v. Boyd, 33 Ark. 778; Lapham v. Campbell, 61 Cal. 296; Du Bois v. Clark, 12 Colo. App. 220, 55 Pac. 750; Cassidy v. Automatic Time Stamp Co. 185 Ill. 431, 56 N. E. 1116; Wolf v. Shenandoah Nat. Bank, 84 Iowa, 138, 50 N. W. 561; McNeill v. Edie, 24 Kan. 108; Bramlett v. McVey, 91 Ky. 151, 15 S. W. 49; Hernandez v. James, 23 La. Ann. 483; Jones v. Commercial Bank, 5 How. (Miss.) 43, 35 Am. Dec. 419; Hauswirth v. Sullivan, 6 Mont. 203, 9 Pac. 798; Mather v. Parsons, 32 Hun, 338; Huntington v. Crouter, 33 Or. 408, 72 Am. St. Rep. 726, 54 Pac. 208; Miller v. Gorman, 38 Pa. 309; Dowell v. Goodwin, 22 R. I. 287, 51 L.R.A. 873, 84 Am. St. Rep. 842, 47 Atl. 693; Ruff v. Elkin, 40 S. C. 69, 18 S. E. 220; Ingle v. McCurry, 1 Heisk. 26; State v. Dashiell, 32 Tex. Civ. App. 454, 74 S. W. 779; Wardsboro v. Whitingham, 45 Vt. 450; Johnson v. H. P. Gregory & Co. 4 Wash. 109, 31 Am. St. Rep. 907, 29 Pac. 831; Johnson v. Coleman, 23 Wis. 452, 99 Am. Dec. 193; Dobbins v. McNamara, 113 Ind. 54, 3 Am. St. Rep. 626, 14 N. E. 887.

Plaintiff in error has pursued her only remedy for relief under the facts of the case.

Bruce v. Osgood, 154 Ind. 375, 56 N. E. 25; Emerick v. Miller, 159 Ind. 328, 64 N. E. 28; Walker v. Robbins, 14 How. 584, 14 L. ed. 552.

Mr. Louis T. Michener argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Perry G. Michener and Peter Maier, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The Federal question was not specially set up or claimed in the pleadings, or in objections to evidence, or in exceptions, or request for findings; and the record does not show, either by the words used or by clear and necessary intendment therefrom, that the right was specifically claimed or put in issue in any manner.

Capital Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 172 U. S. 425, 430, 43 L. ed. 502, 503, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 222, 223, 50 L. ed. 157, 161, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 310, 47 L. ed. 480, 485, 63 L.R.A. 33, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Duvall, 225 U. S. 477, 487, 56 L. ed. 1171, 1176, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; Cosmopolitan Min. Co. v. Walsh, 193 U. S. 460, 465, 48 L. ed. 749, 751, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489.

The motion for a new trial does not raise or present a Federal question.

Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 495, 47 L. ed. 273, 274, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Capital Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 172 U. S. 425, 431, 43 L. ed. 502, 504, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202.

The Federal question was not raised by assignment of error in the supreme court of the state, as it might have been.

Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 495, 47 L. ed. 273, 274, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194.

It is not sufficient to present the Federal question by brief or by oral argument in the state court.

Zadig v. Baldwin, 166 U. S. 485, 41 L. ed. 1087, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Chapin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 45 L. ed. 119, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 308, 47 L. ed. 480, 484, 63 L.R.A. 33, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375.

Presenting the Federal question for the first time by petition for a rehearing to the supreme court of the state would not have availed the plaintiff in error.

Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, supra.

Nor is it sufficient to raise the Federal question for the first time in the petition for the writ of error.

Digitized by Google

Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 47 L. ed. 273, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Simmerman v. Nebraska, 116 U. S. 54, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 467, 35 L. ed. 225, 226, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Warfield v. Chaffe, 91 U. S. 690, 692, 23 L. ed. 383, 384; Clark v. Pennsylvania, 128 U. S. 395, 397, 32 L. ed. 487, 488, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; Manning v. French, 133 U. S. 186, 192, 193, 33 L. ed. 582, 585, 586, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; Butler v. Gage, 138 U. S. 52, 56, 34 L. ed. 869, 871, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235.

The statement of the court below in allowing the writ of error does not aid plaintiff in error in the attempt to present the Federal question.

Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Duvall, 225 U. S. 477, 481, 56 L. ed. 1171, 1173, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; Home for Incurables v. New York, 187 U. S. 155, 47 L. ed. 117, 63 L.R.A. 329, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Allen v. Arguimbau, 198 U. S. 149, 156, 49 L. ed. 990, 993, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 217, 223, 50 L. ed. 157, 159, 161, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31.

If any constitutional questions were involved in this litigation below, it would seem that they must have rested on the Constitution of the state of Indiana.

Endowment Benev. Asso. v. Kansas, 120 U. S. 103, 30 L. ed. 593, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Jacobi v. Alabama, 187 U. S. 133, 135, 47 L. ed. 106, 107, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Burt v. Smith, 203 U. S. 129, 135, 51 L. ed. 121, 126, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37; French v. Taylor, 199 U. S. 274, 277, 50 L. ed. 189, 191, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 467, 35 L. ed. 225, 226, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Rawlins v. Georgia, 201 U. S. 638, 639, 50 L. ed. 899, 900, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560; Cosmopolitan Min. Co. v. Walsh, 193 U. S. 460, 471, 472, 48 L. ed. 749, 753, 754, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489.

Only questions of fact and local or general law are involved here, and the decision of the court below is not reviewable on writ of error to this court.

Capital Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 172 U. S. 425, 430, 43 L. ed. 502, 503, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; McQuade v. Trenton, 172 U. S. 636, 43 L. ed. 581, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292; Iowa Central R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 393, 40 L. ed. 467, 469, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Kring v. Missouri, 107 U. S. 221, 231, 27 L. ed. 506, 509, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 27 L. ed. 468, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91: York v. Texas, 137 U. S. 15, 20, 34 L. ed. 604, 605, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; Wood v. Chesborough, 228 U. S. 672, 677, 57 L. ed. 1018, 1020, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; Consolidated Turnp. Co. v. Norfolk & O. V. R. Co. 228 U. S. 596, 599, 57 L. ed. 982, 983, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Cosmopolitan Min. Co. v. Walsh, 193 U. S. 460, 471, 472, 48 L. ed. 749, 753, 754, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489; Ludeling v. Chaffe, 143 U. S. 301, 36 L. ed. 313, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Vandalia R. Co. v. Indiana, 207 U. S. 359, 367, 52 L. ed. 246, 248, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; 4 Fed. Stat. Anno. 489.

The assignment of errors made for this court, but filed in the court below at the time the petition for the allowance of the writ of error was filed, cannot avail to import a Federal question, or any other, into the case, which the record does not show to have been raised and passed on in the court below.

Ansbro v. United States, 159 U. S. 695, 697, 698, 40 L. ed. 310, 311, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Cornell v. Green, 163 U. S. 75, 80, 41 L. ed. 76, 78, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 969.

The opinions show affirmatively that the court below decided the case against the plaintiff in error on the evidence and on questions of local or general law broad enough to sustain the judgment, and the effect was to deprive this court of jurisdiction.

Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 486, 48 L. ed. 268, 271, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; San Francisco v. Scott, 111 U. S. 768, 28 L. ed. 593, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688; Garr, S. & Co. v. Shannon, 223 U. S. 468, 470, 56 L. ed. 510, 512, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236; Brinkmeier v. Missouri P. R. Co. 224 U. S. 268, 270, 56 L. ed. 758, 760, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; Standard Oil Co. v. Missouri, 224 U. S. 270, 280, 281, 56 L. ed. 760, 767, 768, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 936; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 186, 39 L. ed. 941, 943, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777.

This court will not revise the concurrent judgments of the two courts below on the evidence.

First Nat. Bank v. Littlefield, 226 U. S. 110, 57 L. ed. 145, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Cosmopolitan Min. Co. v. Walsh, 193 U. S. 460, 465–467, 471, 472, 48 L. ed. 749, 751–754, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489; Capital Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 172 U. S. 425, 427, 432, 433, 43 L. ed. 502–505, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; McQuade v. Trenton, 172 U. S. 636, 637, 639, 43 L. ed. 581, 582, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292.

The decisions of the state courts as to what are the laws of the state are binding upon the courts of the United States.

Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 393, 40 L. ed. 467, 469, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 467, 468, 35 L. ed. 225–227, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

Law in its regular course of administration through courts of justice is due process, and when secured by the law of the state the constitutional requirement is satisfied. Due process is so secured by laws operating on all alike, and not subjecting the individual to the arbitrary exercise of the powers of government, unrestrained by the established principles of private right and distributive justice.

Digitized by Google

Ibid.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error, by complaint filed in the superior court of Vanderburgh county, state of Indiana, sought to vacate a judgment of foreclosure rendered by that court in a prior case, and to be permitted to redeem the property therein involved, and prays for other relief; and, judgment having been entered in favor of the defendant in error, which was affirmed by the supreme court of Indiana (172 Ind. 140, 86 N. E. 963, 87 N. E. 1029), this writ of error was sued out.

The facts, so far as pertinent to our review, are: The complaint, in the fourth paragraph, alleged that the plaintiff in error was the owner of certain property, subject to a mortgage foreclosed in a former suit; that she was a minor when the foreclosure proceedings were had; that she was not a resident of Vanderburgh county, where the action was brought, but was and had been for many years [242] a resident of Gibson county, and that she was not summoned in such action, had no knowledge of its pendency, and did not waive service or enter her appearance therein. It was further alleged that the plaintiff in error was not amenable to the jurisdiction of the sheriff of Vanderburgh county, but that, although she was not served with process, he made a false return of a pretended summons, by which the court was wrongfully imposed upon, and, being so advised, at the instance of attorneys for the predecessor of defendant in error, the court appointed a guardian ad litem for her, who answered in the suit, and that a decree was rendered, her property sold, and bid in by the predecessor of the defendant in error. The demurrer of the defendant in error to this paragraph, thus construed, was sustained by the lower court, and its decision affirmed by the supreme court. Other paragraphs of the complaint alleged fraud on the part of the predecessor of the defendant in error and her attorneys. The lower court found against this charge, and the supreme court, after stating that there was legal evidence to support the finding, refused to disturb it.

The record is meager of attempts to raise a Federal question by reason of alleged violations of rights secured by the Constitution of the United States, aptly set forth and referred to in some proper way, and it is contended by the defendant in error that the writ should be dismissed for that reason. We find in the opinion of the supreme court of Indiana a statement that "both parties have treated this suit as one arising under the provisions of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, and as presenting the questions of due process of law and rights guaranteed by article 1, § 21, of the state Constitution," and the court, after making this statement, takes up the various grounds of attack upon the original decree for alleged fraudulent service or want of service upon the minor defendant in the foreclosure proceedings, [243] and disposes of them against the contention of the plaintiff in error. There is no repudiation of the position of both parties that questions were raised under the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution, and we think the court may be fairly taken to have regarded such questions as duly before it for consideration. Where a state court holds that a Federal question is made before it, according to its practice, and proceeds to determine it, this court will regard the question as duly made. San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 177, 179-180, 47 L. ed. 765, 766, 768, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Montana ex rel. Haire v. Rice, 204 U. S. 291, 299, 51 L. ed. 490, 494, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Chambers v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 207 U. S. 142, 148, 52 L. ed. 143, 146, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Sowers, 213 U. S. 55, 62, 53 L. ed. 695, 697, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

In the opinion of the supreme court upon rehearing, the charge that the service of process was fraudulently procured by the predecessor in title of the defendant in error or her attorneys was held to be foreclosed by the findings of the court below, and the supreme court held that the findings were supported by testimony in the record showing competent evidence to that end. It is urged that upon this writ of error this court should re-examine the conclusions of fact just referred to and the rulings of the supreme court of Indiana in respect thereto. This court has repeatedly held that in cases coming to it from the supreme court of a state, it accepts as binding the findings upon issues of fact duly made in that court. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 107, 53 L. ed. 417, 428, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; Rankin v. Emigh, 218 U. S. 27, 34, 54 L. ed. 915, 920, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672; Kerfoot v. Farmers' & M. Bank, 218 U. S. 281, 288, 54 L. ed. 1042, 1043, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14. That principle is applicable here. The case does not come within the exceptional class of cases where what purports to be a finding of fact is not strictly such, but is so involved with and dependent upon questions of law bearing upon the alleged Federal right as to be a decision of those questions rather than of a pure question of fact, or where there is that entire lack of evidence to [244] support the conclusion upon the Federal question that gives this court the right of review. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. 223 U. S. 573, 591, 56 L. ed. 556, 565, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316; Creswill v. Grand Lodge K. P. 225 U. S. 246, 261, 56 L. ed. 1074, 1080, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Southern P. Co. v. Schuyler, 227 U. S. 601, 611, 57 L. ed. 662, 669, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 901, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Portland R. Light & P. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 229 U. S. 397, 411, 412, 57 L. ed. 1248, 1258, 1259, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820.

Digitized by Google

The supreme court of Indiana stated the question upon the decision of which the Federal question of due process arises as follows:

"The question is then presented whether the allegations that appellant was a minor, was not a resident of Vanderburgh county, was a resident of Gibson county, and had been for many years, that no summons was served on her, that she had no knowledge of the proceedings, did not waive service, nor did anyone for her, or in her behalf or with her consent, enter appearance for her, that she was not amenable to the jurisdiction of the sheriff of Vanderburgh county, that, notwithstanding that she was not served with process, the sheriff of Vanderburgh county made a false return of a summons, and the court was wrongfully imposed upon by such false return, and, being thus falsely advised, at the instance of appellant's attorneys [i. e., the attorneys for the predecessor of the defendant in error], appointed a guardian ad litem for her,—constitute a charge of fraud. The return was regular on its face. The court had jurisdiction of the subject-matter. and apparently jurisdiction of the person of appellant. The false return was not procured by the fraud, collusion, or imposition of the plaintiff or his [her] attorneys [in the foreclosure suit]. It is not alleged that either knew of the fact that there had been no service on appellant. The allegations practically present this question: If, without any fraud, or any act on the part of a party to an action or his attorney, a return is made by a sheriff showing service, regular on its face, without knowledge of the party that there was in fact no service, and no act is done [245] or thing said to mislead the sheriff, is it an imposition or fraud upon the court to present such summons and return and obtain a judgment upon it, and is it a charge of fraud or imposition upon the court to allege that the court was wrongfully imposed upon by such false return, and was thus falsely advised? The whole allegations must be taken together, and the scope and theory of the paragraph, as we construe it, is that the court was misled by a false return of the sheriff. The court had a right to rely and act upon the return. It imports verity to the court. The sheriff assumes the responsibility, in taking the office, of seeing to it that he does make the right service. Nichols v. Nichols (1884) 96 Ind. 433; State ex rel Robinson v. Leach (1858) 10 Ind. 308; State ex rel. Chapman v. Lines (1853) 4 Ind. 351.

"If this were not true, no litigant could ever know when his rights were adjudicated and set at rest; and, to the end that the party may be made whole, an action for a false return will lie. Splahn v. Gillespie (1874) 48 Ind. 397; Rowell v. Klein (1873) 44 Ind. 290, 15 Am. Rep. 235.

"If it be said that the amount of bond a sheriff is required to give might not cover the damage in any or every case, it is sufficient to say that that is a legislative matter, and not a judicial one."

The question then is, does the ruling predicated upon the principles thus stated, made in the state court wherein the party has been duly heard, amount to a denial of due process of law within the meaning of the Federal Constitution?

This court has recognized the difficulty of satisfactorily defining in general terms which shall apply to all cases what is meant by the term "due process of law," and the desirability of judicial determination upon each case as the question arises. Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616. If the exercise of judicial power be such "as the settled maxims of law permit and sanction, and under such [246] safeguards for the protection of individual rights as those maxims prescribe for the class of cases to which the one in question belongs," there has been no deprivation of due process of law. Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 506; Leigh v. Green, 193 U. S. 79, 87, 48 L. ed. 623, 626, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390. And this court, speaking by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, in Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 468, 35 L. ed. 225, 227, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577, said: "Law in its regular course of administration through courts of justice is due process, and when secured by the law of the state, the constitutional requirement is satisfied." This language was quoted with approval in Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S.

Digitized by Google

389, 393, 40 L. ed. 467, 469, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344.

In the present case the state has made provision for the service of process, and the original party in the foreclosure proceeding did all that the law required in the issue of and attempt to serve process; and, without fraud or collusion, the sheriff made a return to the court that service had been duly made. The duty of making such service and return by the law of the state is delegated to the sheriff, and, although contrary to the fact, in the absence of any attack upon it, the court was justified in acting upon such return as upon a true return. If the return is false, the law of the state, as set forth by its supreme court, permitted a recovery against the sheriff upon his bond. We are of the opinion that this system of jurisprudence, with its provisions for safeguarding the rights of litigants, is due process of law. It may result, unfortunately, as is said to be the fact in this case, that the recovery upon the sheriff's bond will not be an adequate remedy, but statutes must be framed and laws administered so as to protect as far as may be all litigants and other persons who derive rights from the judgments of courts. So far as this record discloses, the purchaser at the sheriff's sale had a right to rely upon the record, which imported verity as to the nature of the service upon the plaintiff in error. If this were not true, as the supreme court of [247] Indiana points out, there would be no protection to parties who have relied upon judicial proceedings importing verity, upon the faith of which rights have been adjudicated and value parted with. In a case of this character the law must have in view, not only the rights of the defendant who has been a victim of a false return on the part of the sheriff, but of persons who have relied upon the regularity of the return of officials necessarily trusted by law with the responsibility of advising the court as to the performance of such duties as are here involved. Were the law otherwise, titles might be attacked many years after they were acquired, where the party had been guilty of no fraud, and had acted upon the faith of judicial proceedings apparently perfect in every respect.

This has been the rule of law applied to a similar situation in the courts of other states. Gregory v. Ford, 14 Cal. 138, 73 Am. Dec. 639; Stites v. Knapp, Ga. Dec. pt. 2, p. 36; Taylor v. Lewis, 2 J. J. Marsh. 400, 19 Am. Dec. 135; Gardner v. Jenkins, 14 Md. 58; Smoot v. Judd, 184 Mo. 508, 83 S. W. 481; Johnson v. Jones, 2 Neb. 126; Wardsboro v. Whitingham, 45 Vt. 450; Preston v. Kindrick, 94 Va. 760, 64 Am. St. Rep. 777, 27 S. E. 588. And see in this connection Walker v. Robbins, 14 How. 584, 585, 14 L. ed. 552; Knox County v. Harshman, 133 U. S. 152, 156, 33 L. ed. 586, 588, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257.

Without the necessity of deciding more in the present case, it is enough to say that the decision of the supreme court of Indiana, made under the circumstances detailed, did not, in our opinion, deprive the plaintiff in error of due process of law within the meaning of the 14th Amendment.

It follows that the judgment of the Supreme Court of Indiana should be affirmed.

Judgment affirmed.

---

[248] NORTH CAROLINA RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JAMES A. ZACHARY, Administrator of Herbert H. Burgess.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 248-261.)

Error to state court — Federal question — how raised.

1. An immunity from liability under the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp.

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884, and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

As to when Federal question is raised in time to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court over state courts—see note to Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 49 L. ed. U. S. 414.

On liability of lessor of railroad for injuries caused by negligence of another company using the road under a lease—see note to Caruthers v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 44 L.R.A. 737.

On the constitutionality, application, and effect of the Federal employers' liability act —see note to Lamphere v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 38.

On review of questions of fact on writ of error to a state court—see note to Smiley v. Kansas, 49 L. ed. U. S. 546.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

Digitized by Google

Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322), must be regarded as sufficiently asserted for the purpose of sustaining a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to the highest court of a state, whether the question was properly raised in the trial court, according to the local practice, or not, where such immunity was expressly claimed, and the highest court of the state either decided or assumed that the record sufficiently presented a question of Federal right, and decided against the party asserting that right.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1168–1270, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Master and servant — employers' liability — interstate railway carrier — liability of lessor railway company.

2. The lessor of an intrastate railway to an interstate railway carrier is, through its lessee, a "common carrier by railroad engaging in commerce between the states" within the meaning of the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, where, under the local law, the lessor is responsible for all acts of negligence of its lessee occurring in the conduct of the business upon the lessor's road.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Master and servant — employers' liability — employment of firemen in interstate commerce — liability of lessor railway company.

3. A railway fireman killed while employed in interstate commerce by a lessee interstate railway carrier must be regarded as employed also by the lessor railway company in such commerce, within the meaning of the act of April 22, 1908, although the leased railway is an intrastate one, where, under the local law, the lessor is responsible for all acts of negligence of its lessee occurring in the conduct of the business upon the lessor's road.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — scope of review — facts.

4. The evidence will be analyzed by the Federal Supreme Court on a writ of error to a state court to the extent necessary to give the plaintiff in error the benefit of its asserted Federal right.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1436–1445, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Master and servant — employers' liability — interstate commerce — hauling empty cars.

5. The hauling of empty cars from one state to another is interstate commerce within the meaning of the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, giving a right of recovery against an interstate railway carrier for the death of an employee while engaged in interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — question for jury — employers' liability.

6. Evidence that a fireman in the employ of an interstate railway carrier after inspecting, oiling, firing, and preparing his engine for the intrastate haul of a train containing some cars that had come from another state was killed by a switching engine while he was attempting to cross the tracks intervening between the engine and his boarding house is at least sufficient to require the submission to the jury of the question of the carrier's liability under the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, giving a right of recovery against an interstate railway carrier for the death of an employee while engaged in interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Trial, VI. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 144.]

Argued December 17 and 18, 1913. Decided February 2, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Guilford County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages from a carrier for the negligent killing of an employee. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 156 N. C. 496, 72 S. E. 858.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John K. Graves argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The record discloses neither allegation nor proof of the existence of any beneficiary or beneficiaries designated in the Federal act.

Michigan C. R. Co. v. Vreeland, 227 U. S. 59, 57 L. ed. 417, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. McGinnis, 228 U. S. 173, 57 L. ed. 785, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426, 3 N. C. C. A. 806.

The question of the applicability of the Federal act narrows itself into the question whether the deceased at the time he was struck was employed in interstate commerce. If he was so employed at that time, the railroad company must have been engaged in interstate commerce through him.

Colasurdo v. Central R. Co. 180 Fed. 832.

The testimony clearly shows that the cars were in the course of a through interstate journey, and the natural inference from the testimony is that some, at least, of the cars were loaded with interstate freight, though that feature is immaterial, the cars being employed in interstate commerce, regardless of whether they were loaded or empty.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 21, 49 L. ed. 363, 371, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412; Northern P. R. Co. v. Maerkl, 117 C. C. A. 237, 198 Fed. 1; Pedersen v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 229

Digitized by Google

U. S. 146, 57 L. ed. 1125, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, 3 N. C. C. A. 779.

The defendant in error's intestate was employed in interstate commerce while on the engine preparing it for its interstate service, which was about to begin.

Pederson v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. supra; Lamphere v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1, 116 C. C. A. 156, 196 Fed. 336; St. Louis S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 57 L. ed. 1129, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Neil v. Idaho & W. N. R. Co. — Idaho, —, 125 Pac. 336; Horton v. Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co. 72 Wash. 503, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 8, 130 Pac. 897; Freeman v. Powell, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 144 S. W. 1033; Montgomery v. Southern P. Co. 64 Or. 597, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 13, 131 Pac. 507; Kansas City, M. & O. R. Co. v. Pope, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 152 S. W. 185.

Even if it be assumed that the deceased was going to his boarding house on a personal errand, it was a "trifling interruption" (United States v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 220 U. S. 44, 55 L. ed. 363, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 362), which could not change the status of the deceased as "on duty."

Lamphere v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1, 116 C. C. A. 156, 196 Fed. 336; Kitchenham v. The Johannesburg [1911] A. C. 417, 80 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 1102, 105 L. T. N. S. 118, 27 Times L. R. 504, 55 Sol. Jo. 599, 4 B. W. Comp. Cas. 311; Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. v. Tucker, 35 App. D. C. 123, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —; Ewald v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 70 Wis. 420, 5 Am. St. Rep. 178, 36 N. W. 12, 591; Boldt v. New York C. R. Co. 18 N. Y. 432; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 112, ante, 144, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; United States v. Chicago M. & P. S. R. Co. 197 Fed. 624; United States v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 220 U. S. 37, 55 L. ed. 361, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 362; United States v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 197 Fed. 629; United States v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 189 Fed. 471; United States v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. 189 Fed. 954.

Is the situation affected by the fact that the lessor, and not the lessee, operating the railroad, is sued?

Logan v. North Carolina R. Co. 116 N. C. 941, 21 S. E. 959.

It is as true to say that Congress intended to go to the limit of its constitutional power quoad everyone in fact occupying the position or relation of master with respect to injuries to servants employed in interstate commerce on railroads engaging in interstate commerce, as to say that Congress intended to include within the term "person employed in such commerce" all those persons who could be so included within the constitutional power of Congress.

Colasurdo v. Central R. Co. 180 Fed. 832.

Mr. Thomas H. Calvert argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John A. Barringer and George S. Bradshaw, filed a brief for defendant in error:

On the pleadings, if there had been any evidence tending to show that the deceased was engaged in interstate service, it would have been the province of the jury to determine that fact.

Marks v. Harriet Cotton Mills, 138 N. C. 401, 50 S. E. 769, 3 Ann. Cas. 812; Ramsbottom v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 138 N. C. 38, 50 S. E. 448; Stewart v. Raleigh & A. Air Line R. Co. 137 N. C. 687, 50 S. E. 312; Gwyn Harper Mfg. Co. v. Carolina C. R. Co. 128 N. C. 285, 83 Am. St. Rep. 675, 38 S. E. 894; Haltom v. Southern R. Co. 127 N. C. 255, 37 S. E. 262; Cox v. Norfolk & C. R. Co. 123 N. C. 604, 31 S. E. 848; Bolden v. Southern R. Co. 123 N. C. 614, 31 S. E. 851; Simonton v. Winter, 5 Pet. 141, 8 L. ed. 75.

The original act of 1906 was held to be invalid because the statute in terms declared that a common carrier engaged in interstate commerce should be liable "to any of its employees," the court holding that the liability under the statute must be limited to employees engaged in such commerce.

Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

The prayers for instructions, being predicated on a state of facts upon which there was not sufficient evidence to submit the question to the jury, were properly refused.

Stewart v. Van Deventer Carpet Co. 138 N. C. 60, 50 S. E. 562; Stewart v. North Carolina R. Co. 136 N. C. 385, 48 S. E. 793; Bryan v. Southern R. Co. 134 N. C. 538, 47 S. E. 15; Joines v. Johnson, 133 N. C. 487, 45 S. E. 828; Southern Loan & T. Co. v. Benbow, 131 N. C. 413, 42 S. E. 896; Burton v. Rosemary Mfg. Co. 132 N. C. 17, 43 S. E. 480; Carson v. Norfolk & C. R. Co. 128 N. C. 95, 38 S. E. 287.

If the plaintiff in error desired to insist on its further defense that the deceased was engaged in interstate commerce, it was its duty to tender an issue on which that fact could properly be inquired into.

Gwyn-Harper Mfg. Co. v. Cloer, 140 N. C. 128, 52 S. E. 305; Pollock v. Warwick, 104 N. C. 638, 10 S. E. 699; Silver Valley Min. Co. v. Baltimore Gold & Silver Min. & Smelting Co. 99 N. C. 445, 6 S. E. 735; Oakley v. Van Noppen, 95 N. C. 60; Simmons v. Mann, 92 N. C. 12; Piedmont Wagon Co. v. Byrd, 119 N. C. 460, 26 S. E. 144; Womble v. Merchants' Grocery Co.

Digitized by Google

135 N. C. 474, 47 S. E. 493; Walker v. Scott, 106 N. C. 56, 11 S. E. 364; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Darr, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 4, 124 C. C. A. 565, 204 Fed. 751.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought in the superior court of Guilford county, North Carolina, to recover damages for the negligent killing of Burgess a locomotive fireman in the employ of the Southern Railway Company, lessee of the defendant, which occurred at Selma, North Carolina, on April 29, 1909. Under the local law, as laid down in Logan v. North Carolina R. Co. 116 N. C. 940, 21 S. E. 959, the lessor is responsible for all acts of negligence of its lessee occurring in the conduct of business upon the lessor's road; and this upon the ground that a railroad corporation cannot evade its public duty and responsibility by leasing its road to another corporation, in the absence of a statute expressly exempting it. The responsibility is held to extend to employees of the lessee, injured through the negligence of the latter.

The complaint set forth in substance that plaintiff's intestate, being in the employ of defendant's lessee, and engaged at the Selma switchyards in the discharge of his duties as fireman upon engine No. 862, about 8 o'clock, P. M., on the date mentioned, after inspecting, oiling, firing, and preparing the engine for starting on a trip from Selma to Spencer, North Carolina, attempted to cross certain tracks that intervened between the engine and his [255] boarding house, which was located a short distance away; that another engine, No. 716, was standing upon a side track in such position as to shut off intestate's view of the main track; that No. 716 had its blower on, and was making a noise so loud that intestate could not hear a third engine,—No. 1551, the shifting engine used in the yards,—which at this time was running backward at a reckless and dangerous rate of speed, without headlight and without an adequate and competent crew; and that as intestate stepped from the track in the rear of engine No. 716, and was about to step upon the main line in the attempt to cross it, he was struck and killed by the shifting engine. Defendant's answer, besides denying the allegations of negligence, set up as a special defense that at the time plaintiff's intestate was killed, he was engaged in interstate commerce as an employee upon a train of defendant's lessee which was moving from Selma, North Carolina, to Spencer, in the same state, and carrying cars loaded with freight from the state of Virginia to the state of North Carolina and other states; that the liability of the defendant to him or to the plaintiff as his representative was fixed and regulated by the Federal employers' liability act of April 22, 1908 [35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322], and that under that act the plaintiff was not entitled to recover.

Upon the trial, at the close of plaintiff's evidence, which tended generally to support the averments of the complaint, defendant moved for a nonsuit, and among other grounds assigned the following:—that from the uncontradicted evidence it appeared that at the time of the occurrence in question defendant, through its lessee, was a common carrier by railroad, engaged in interstate commerce, and plaintiff's intestate was at that time a person employed by such carrier in such commerce; that the act of Congress already referred to exclusively regulated the liability of defendant to plaintiff's intestate, and that upon all the evidence plaintiff had failed to make out a [256] case of liability under that act. The court, in denying the motion, held that the action was brought under the statute of North Carolina, that the Federal act had no application, and that the cause was triable under the statutes of the state. To this ruling, defendant excepted. At the close of the case, defendant again undertook to invoke the protection of the Federal act by requested instructions to the jury, which were refused and exceptions allowed.

There was a verdict for plaintiff and judgment thereon, followed by an appeal to the supreme court of the state. That court overruled the contention of defendant that the Federal employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, applied, and held that the action was properly tried under the state law. The result was an affirmance (156 N. C. 496, 72 S. E. 858), and the case comes here under § 709, Rev. Stat. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575 (Judicial Code, § 237 [36 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227]).

In order to bring the case within the terms of the Federal act (35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322, printed in full in 223 U. S. p. 6, 56 L. ed. 329, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875), defendant must have been, at the time of the occurrence in question, engaged as a common carrier in interstate commerce, and plaintiff's intestate must have been employed by said carrier in such commerce. If these facts appeared, the Federal act governed, to the exclusion of the statutes of the state. Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 55, 56 L. ed. 327, 348, 38 L.R.A.

Digitized by Google

(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875; St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 158, 57 L. ed. 1129, 1133, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

It is not disputed that if the provisions of the Federal act had been applied, the result of the action might have been different. To mention only one matter: there was neither averment in the pleadings nor evidence at the trial that deceased left a widow, child, parent, or dependent next of kin. Persons thus related to deceased are the respective beneficiaries of the action prescribed by the act of Congress, and the damages are to be based upon the [257] pecuniary loss sustained by the beneficiary. Michigan C. R. Co. v. Vreeland, 227 U. S. 59, 68, 57 L. ed. 417, 420, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. McGinnis, 228 U. S. 173, 57 L. ed. 785, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426. The state law (Revisal 1908, § 2646) seems not to recognize this limitation upon the measure of recovery; certainly the damages in the present case were assessed without regard to it.

In support of the judgment, it is earnestly argued that the question whether deceased was employed in interstate commerce was not properly raised in the trial court, in accordance with the pertinent provisions of the local Code of Civil Procedure. But this is a question of state practice; and since it appears that defendant expressly claimed immunity by reason of the act of Congress, and the highest court of the state either decided or assumed that the record sufficiently presented a question of Federal right, and decided against the party asserting that right, the decisions of this court render it clear that it is our duty to pass upon the merits of the Federal question. Home for Incurables v. New York, 187 U. S. 155, 157, 47 L. ed. 117, 118, 63 L.R.A. 329, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 177, 179, 47 L. ed. 765, 766, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Montana ex rel. Haire v. Rice, 204 U. S. 291, 299, 51 L. ed. 490, 494, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Chambers v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 207 U. S. 142, 148, 52 L. ed. 143, 146, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Miedreich v. Lauenstein, No. 20, 232 U. S. 236, ante, 584, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309.

The court based its decision that the Federal act did not apply, in part upon the ground that the North Carolina Railroad is not an interstate railroad,—its tracks and property lying wholly within the state,—and that the corporation itself is not, although its lessee is, engaged in interstate commerce; the lessor's activities being confined to receiving annual rents and distributing them among its stockholders. The responsibility of the lessor for all acts of negligence of the lessee occurring in the conduct of business on the lessor's road, as established by the same court in Logan v. North Carolina R. Co. 116 N. C. 941, 21 S. E. 959, was recognized—indeed, reasserted. "But," it was said, "that is because a railroad corporation cannot escape its responsibility [258] by leasing its road. It is still liable for its lessee's acts of commission and omission, whether they occur in interstate or intrastate commerce, although the lessor is not actually engaged in either." [156 N. C. 500, 72 S. E. 858.]

It is plain enough, however, that the effect of the rule thus laid down, especially in view of the grounds upon which it is based, is, that although a railroad lease as between the parties may have the force and effect of an ordinary lease, yet with respect to the railroad operations conducted under it, and everything that relates to the performance of the public duties assumed by the lessor under its charter, such a lease—certainly so far as concerns the rights of third parties, including employees as well as patrons—constitutes the lessee the lessor's substitute or agent, so that for whatever the lessee does or fails to do, whether in interstate or in intrastate commerce, the lessor is responsible. This being the legal situation under the local law, it seems to us that it must and does result, in the the case before us, that the lessor is a "common carrier by railroad, engaging in commerce between the states," and that the deceased was "employed by such carrier in such commerce," within the meaning of the Federal act; provided, of course, he was employed by the lessee in such commerce at the time he was killed.

It was, however, further held by the supreme court of North Carolina that deceased, at the time he was killed, was not in fact employed by the Southern Railway, the lessee, in interstate commerce. There are several grounds upon which this decision was based, or upon which it is said to be supportable; and these will be separately noticed. Of course, if, upon the evidence, any essential matter of fact was in doubt, it should have been submitted to the jury under proper instructions. The rulings of the trial court deprived plaintiff in error of the opportunity to go to the jury upon the question. But it is now insisted that there was no evidence tending to show that [259] deceased was engaged in interstate commerce. This renders it incumbent upon us to analyze the evidence to the extent necessary to give to plaintiff in error the benefit of its asserted Federal right. Southern P. Co. v. Schuyler, 227 U. S. 601, 611, 57 L. ed. 662, 669, 43

Digitized by Google

L.R.A.(N.S.) 901, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, and cases cited.

The evidence tended to show that train No. 72 of the Southern Railway had come into Selma, North Carolina, from Pinners Point, Virginia and other places, and that a shifting crew was "working" this train so as to take two cars from it and put them into a train that was to include these and other cars to be hauled from Selma to Spencer, North Carolina by engine No. 862, and that deceased was employed on this engine as fireman for the trip that was about to begin, and had already prepared his engine for the purpose. It is contended that the evidence failed to show that the two cars thus taken from train No. 72 had come in from Virginia, rather than from the "other places," which it is said might be intermediate North Carolina points. We find, however, evidence that the train which was to be hauled from Selma to Spencer by engine No. 862 was being made up in part from cars that had come in from Pinners Point; and it was at least a reasonable inference that the two cars referred to were being put into the Spencer train in order to be carried forward as a part of a through movement of interstate commerce.

There seems to be no clear evidence as to the contents of these cars, and it is argued that, in the absence of evidence, it is as reasonable to infer that they were empty as that they were loaded; and that it was incumbent upon defendant to show that they contained interstate freight. We hardly deem it so probable that empty freight cars would be hauled from the Virginia point to Spencer. But were it so, the hauling of empty cars from one state to another is, in our opinion, interstate commerce within the meaning of the act. Such is the view that has obtained with respect to empty cars in action based upon the [260] safety appliance act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174). Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 21, 49 L. ed. 363, 371, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412; Voelker v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 116 Fed. 867, 873. And the like reason applies, as we think, to actions founded upon the employers' liability act, which, indeed, is in pari materia with the other

It is argued that because, so far as appears, deceased had not previously participated in any movement of interstate freight, and the through cars had not as yet been attached to his engine, his employment in interstate commerce was still in futuro. It seems to us, however, that his acts in inspecting, oiling, firing, and preparing his engine for the trip to Selma were acts performed as a part of interstate commerce and the circumstance that the interstate freight cars had not as yet been coupled up is legally insignificant. See Pedersen v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 229 U. S. 146, 151, 57 L. ed. 1125, 1127, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 161, 57 L. ed. 1129, 1134, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

Again, it is said that because deceased had left his enine and was going to his boarding house, he was engaged upon a personal errand, and not upon the carrier's business. Assuming (what is not clear) that the evidence fairly tended to indicate the boarding house as his destination, it nevertheless also appears that deceased was shortly to depart upon his run, having just prepared his engine for the purpose, and that he had not gone beyond the limits of the railroad yard when he was struck. There is nothing to indicate that this brief visit to the boarding house was at all out of the ordinary, or was inconsistent with his duty to his employer. It seems to us clear that the man was still "on duty," and employed in commerce, notwithstanding his temporary absence from the locomotive engine. See Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 112, 119, ante, 144, 147, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

We conclude that, with respect to the facts necessary to bring the case within the Federal act, there was evidence [261] that at least was sufficient to go to the jury. It is doubtful whether there was substantial contradiction respecting any of these facts; but this we need not consider.

From what has been said, it follows that the state courts erred in holding that the Federal act had no application. As the case stands, we are not called upon to determine the validity of the several contentions that were raised by defendant at the trial on the strength of that act, nor to pass upon the mode in which they were raised. Upon these matters, therefore, we express no opinion.

Judgment reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

CORNELIUS K. G. BILLINGS, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES. (No. 66.)

UNITED STATES
v.
CORNELIUS K. G. BILLINGS. (No. 625.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 261-288.)

Error to circuit court — effect of taking case to circuit court of appeals — certified question — cross writ of error.

1. A writ of error sued out of a Federal circuit court of appeals on behalf of the United States because of the disallowance of interest by the circuit court's decree in a suit for the recovery of a tax will be treated by the Federal Supreme Court, to which the circuit court of appeals has certified the question of interest, as in substance pending in the Supreme Court on a cross writ of error, where the defendant has brought the case up to the Supreme Court by a direct writ of error to the circuit court, sued out on constitutional grounds.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 944, 990-993, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Internal revenue — excise on foreign-built yacht — when due.

2. The excise tax based on gross tonnage, which, under the tariff act of August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. 112, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1197), § 37, shall be levied and collected annually on the 1st day of September upon the use of every foreign-built pleasure yacht now or hereafter owned or chartered for more than six months by any citizen of the United States, became due on the 1st day of September following the passage of the act.

[Federal taxation, see Internal Revenue, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Internal revenue — excise on foreign-built yacht — charterer or owner.

3. The six-months clause in the tariff act of August 5, 1909, § 37, imposing an annual excise tax to be levied and collected upon the use of every foreign-built pleasure yacht now or hereafter owned or chartered for more than six months by any citizen of the United States, applies only to charterers, not to owners.

[Federal taxation, see Internal Revenue, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Internal revenue — excise on foreign-built yacht — use or ownership.

4. Actual use for any time during the taxing year, as distinguished from potential use involved in ownership, is the test of liability for the excise tax based upon gross tonnage which, under the act of August 5, 1909, § 37, shall be levied and collected annually upon the use of every foreign-built pleasure yacht now or hereafter owned by any citizen of the United States.

[Federal taxation, see Internal Revenue, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — retrospective law — excise tax.

5. The retroactive effect given to the act of August 5, 1909, § 37, levying an annual excise tax upon the use of every foreign-built pleasure yacht now or hereafter owned by any citizen of the United States, by construing it as causing the tax for the first annual period to become due on September 1, 1909, does not cause the act to be one beyond the power of Congress, under the Constitution, to enact.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. f. 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Internal revenue — uniformity — excise tax.

6. The uniformity clause of U. S. Const. art. 1, § 8, is not violated by the excise tax based upon gross tonnage levied by the act of August 5, 1909, § 37, upon the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts owned by citizens of the United States, because a like tax is not imposed upon the use of a domestic yacht under similar circumstances.

[For other cases, see Internal Revenue, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — excise tax — discrimination.

7. The imposition of an excise tax based upon gross tonnage upon the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts owned by citizens of the United States without imposing a like tax upon the use of a domestic yacht under similar circumstances, as is done by the act of August 5, 1909, § 37, does not render that statute repugnant to the due process of law clause of the 5th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, as being so beyond the power of classification, abhorrent to the sense of justice, and so repugnant to the conceptions of free government, as to be void even in the absence of express constitutional limitation.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b. 6, a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interest — on delinquent taxes.

8. Delinquent taxes due to the Federal government bear interest, although no statute expressly so directs.

[Nos. 66 and 625.]

Argued January 6 and 7, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment enforcing, without interest, a claim of the United States for an excise tax upon a foreign-built pleasure yacht. Modified by awarding interest, and as modified affirmed. Also

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, presenting the question of the right of the United States to recover interest on the amount of the tax. Unanswered.

See same case below, No. 66, on demurrer, 190 Fed. 359.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William D. Guthrie argued the cause and filed a brief for Cornelius K. G. Billings:

The classification in § 37 of the tariff act violates the 5th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. pp. 4, 260; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 77, 44 L. ed. 969, 984, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; American Sugar

NOTE.—On implied right to interest on taxes or assessments—see note to Rochester v. Bloss, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 694.

Digitized by Google

Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 92, 45 L. ed. 102, 103, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; The Conqueror, 166 U. S. 110, 115, 41 L. ed. 937, 940, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 237, 33 L. ed. 892, 895, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 165, 41 L. ed. 666, 671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 301, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1045, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 594, 606, 607, 33 L. ed. 1025, 1031, 1032, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 662, 37 L. ed. 599, 601, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 599, 39 L. ed. 759, 825, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Southwestern Oil Co. v. Texas, 217 U. S. 114, 121, 54 L. ed. 688, 692, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. v. Fuller, 205 Fed. 89; Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 216 U. S. 400, 54 L. ed. 536, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, 11 Ann. Cas. 1247; People ex rel. Phillips v. Raynes, 136 App. Div. 417, 120 N. Y. Supp. 1053, affirmed in 198 N. Y. 539, 92 N. E. 1097; People ex rel. Farrington v. Mensching, 187 N. Y. 17, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 625, 79 N. E. 884, 10 Ann. Cas. 101; People v. Hawkins, 157 N. Y. 9, 42 L.R.A. 490, 68 Am. St. Rep. 736, 51 N. E. 257; Knowlton v. Rock County, 9 Wis. 422.

There is no substantial difference between the requirement of due process of law contained in the 5th Amendment and that in the 14th Amendment.

Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 199 U. S. 401, 410, 50 L. ed. 246, 250, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 101, 53 L. ed. 97, 107, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14.

They are alike in terms and alike in meaning. The provision for the equal protection of the law in the 14th Amendment no doubt emphasizes the necessity for proper classification in state taxation, but it does not create this requirement. The due process clause alone would be equally effective for this purpose.

McGehee, Due Process of Law, pp. 60–64, 311.

Tax statutes, especially when attempting to impose special, novel, and extraordinary taxes, should be strictly construed; and if any ambiguity be found to exist, it must be resolved in favor of the citizen.

Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, 583, 46 L. ed. 697, 701, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; United States v. Wigglesworth, 2 Story, 374, Fed. Cas. No. 16,690; Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Herold, 198 Fed. 201, affirmed in 120 C. C. A. 256, 201 Fed. 918; Parkview Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Herold, 203 Fed. 880; People ex rel. Mutual Trust Co. v. Miller, 177 N. Y. 57, 69 N. E. 124.

The language of the statute plainly indicates that it was the intention of Congress to levy a tax not upon yachts as property, but solely "upon the use of every foreign-built yacht." The test thus provided by the act itself is use, which means "to put to a purpose," "to employ," "to make use of."

The Anjer Head, 46 Fed. 664.

It would violate all the long-established and well-settled canons for the construction of tax statutes to strain the meaning of the common and well-understood term "use" to include mere ownership without any use whatever.

United States v. Wigglesworth, 2 Story, 373, Fed. Cas. No. 16,690; McCoach v. Minehill & S. H. R. Co. 228 U. S. 295, 57 L. ed. 842, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; United States v. Nipissing Mines Co. 124 C. C. A. 313, 206 Fed. 431; Abrast Realty Co. v. Maxwell, 206 Fed. 333.

It is well known, or at any rate highly probable, that the word "use" was advisedly employed in order to avoid creating what might be held to be a direct tax on the property, and as such necessary to be apportioned.

Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673, 158 U. S. 601, 39 L. ed. 1108, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912; McCoach v. Minehill & S. H. R. Co. 228 U. S. 295, 306, 57 L. ed. 842, 847, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419.

The court will not, therefore, now adopt a construction of the statute which would create grave doubts as to its constitutionality, when another construction which avoids all constitutional difficulties is not only equally consistent with the terms of the act, but more consonant with its plain intent.

United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 408, 53 L. ed. 836, 849, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; The Abby Dodge, 223 U. S. 166, 175, 56 L. ed. 390, 393, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 310.

The tax is not leviable in respect of foreign-built yachts not within the jurisdiction of the United States.

Buck v. Beach, 206 U. S. 392, 400, 51 L. ed. 1106, 1111, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712, 11 Ann. Cas. 732; United States v. Erie R. Co. 106 U. S. 327, 332, 27 L. ed. 151, 154, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; Northern C. R. Co. v. Jackson, 7 Wall. 262, 267, 19 L. ed. 88, 89; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, 319, 21 L. ed. 179, 186; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 22, 35 L. ed. 613, 616, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 398, 47 L. ed. 513, 519, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 307, 49 L. ed. 1059, 1062, 25 Sup.

Digitized by Google

Ct. Rep. 686, 3 Ann. Cas. 1100; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 353, 49 L. ed. 1077, 1081, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 209, 50 L. ed. 150, 156, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Babcock, 204 U. S. 585, 592, 51 L. ed. 636, 638, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326; Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. New Orleans, 205 U. S. 395, 399, 51 L. ed. 853, 855, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Selliger v. Kentucky, 213 U. S. 200, 203, 53 L. ed. 761, 763, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 38, 54 L. ed. 355, 370, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky, 222 U. S. 63, 73, 56 L. ed. 96, 100, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Gromer v. Standard Dredging Co. 224 U. S. 362, 372, 376, 377, 56 L. ed. 801, 806–808, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. v. Fuller, 205 Fed. 90.

The taxable situs of a vessel which has no permanent location is the domicil of the owner.

Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky, 222 U. S. 63, 69, 56 L. ed. 96, 98, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky, 202 U. S. 409, 421, 50 L. ed. 1082, 1086, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679, 6 Ann. Cas. 205; Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 17 How. 596, 15 L. ed. 254.

The action of the Treasury Department cannot make these yachts American vessels, or classify them otherwise than Congress has done.

White's Bank v. Smith (White's Bank v. The Robert) 7 Wall. 646, 655, 656, 19 L. ed. 211, 213.

If Congress intended to compass the imposition of such a novel tax burden, the duty devolved upon it to express the intent to do so in plain terms, free from doubt or ambiguity.

Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, 583, 46 L. ed. 697, 701, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Lynch v. Union Trust Co. 90 C. C. A. 147, 164 Fed. 163.

It is a principle of law, as it is of justice, in taxation, that one who has owned property, or exercised or enjoyed a right or privilege, or carried on a vocation, at a time and under circumstances when such ownership or acts were not taxable, ought not to be subjected to a special, novel, and extraordinary tax by a subsequent statute operating retroactively upon his past ownership or acts. A citizen ought not to have a demand thus created against him in respect of past transactions by mere legislative edict. Ownership of property may be taxed as of a certain date, or license fees may be required as of a certain date, and be measured by past transactions, but generally such taxes are payable in advance.

People ex rel. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Gaus, 200 N. Y. 330, 93 N. E. 988.

The general rule is that a tax should not be levied upon past ownership so as to cover a period when the property was not subject to taxation.

People v. Trust Co. of America, 205 N. Y. 77, 98 N. E. 207.

A fortiori, a statute imposing a tax upon use should not be construed retrospectively, unless the language imperatively requires it.

People ex rel. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Miller, 179 N. Y. 227, 71 N. E. 930, 180 N. Y. 526, 72 N. E. 931; Metz v. Hagerty, 51 Ohio St. 521, 38 N. E. 11; United States v. Burr, 159 U. S. 78, 82, 40 L. ed. 82, 83, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1002; United States v. American Sugar Ref. Co. 202 U. S. 563, 577, 50 L. ed. 1149, 1152, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717; Holliday v. Atlanta, 96 Ga. 377, 23 S. E. 406; Young v. Henderson, 76 N. C. 420; 2 Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. p. 640.

Words in a statute ought not to have a retrospective operation, unless they are so clear, strong, and imperative that no other meaning can be annexed to them, or unless the intention of the legislature cannot be otherwise satisfied.

United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 306, 314, 52 L. ed. 804, 807, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537; United States v. Heth, 3 Cranch, 399, 413, 2 L. ed. 479, 483.

However, if it be held that it must be presumed that Congress intended that the obligation to pay the tax should begin to accrue from the date when the act took effect, namely, from August 5, 1909, then this annual tax on use should be apportioned according to the period of actual use during the year ending September 1, 1909, while the tax law was in force and operation.

People ex rel. Mutual Trust Co. v. Miller, 177 N. Y. 54, 69 N. E. 124; People ex rel. Lincoln Trust Co. v. Glynn, 132 App. Div. 547, 116 N. Y. Supp. 1078, affirmed in 198 N. Y. 501, 92 N. E. 1097; People ex rel. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Gaus, 200 N. Y. 331, 93 N. E. 988.

The citizen is exempt from taxation, unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language; and where the construction of a tax is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid.

Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, 583, 46 L. ed. 697, 701, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Spreckels Sugar Ref. Co. v. McClain, 192 U. S. 397, 416, 48 L. ed. 496, 503, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Herold, 198 Fed. 201, affirmed in 120 C. C.

Digitized by Google

A. 256, 201 Fed. 918; Parkview Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Herold, 203 Fed. 880.

Courts may not find an intention to impose interest as a penalty for delay in payment of taxes, and cannot award interest on taxes unless there be some express statutory provision to that effect.

Hartford v. Hills, 72 Conn. 600, 45 Atl. 433; People v. Gold & Stock Teleg. Co. 98 N. Y. 80; Crabtree v. Madden, 4 C. C. A. 408, 12 U. S. App. 159, 54 Fed. 431; Rochester v. Bloss, 185 N. Y. 52, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 694, 77 N. E. 794, 7 Ann. Cas. 15; Camden v. Allen, 26 N. J. L. 399; Belvidere v. Warren R. Co. 34 N. J. L. 199; Paterson Ave. & S. Road Comrs. v. Hudson County, 44 N. J. L. 571, affirmed in 45 N. J. L. 173; State ex rel. Brennert v. Farrier, 47 N. J. L. 75; Shaw v. Peckett, 26 Vt. 486; Hughes v. Kelley, 69 Vt. 445, 38 Atl. 91; Perry v. Washburn, 20 Cal. 350; People v. Central P. R. Co. 105 Cal. 595, 38 Pac. 905, affirmed in 162 U. S. 91, 40 L. ed. 903, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766; Sargent v. Tuttle, 67 Conn. 167, 32 L.R.A. 822, 34 Atl. 1028; Cromwell v. Savage, 85 Conn. 377, 82 Atl. 972; Stitt v. Stringham, 55 Or. 94, 105 Pac. 252; State v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 175 Ind. 85, 42 L.R.A.(N.S.) 256, 93 N. E. 213; State v. Southwestern R. Co. 70 Ga. 32; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Wright, 124 Ga. 618, 53 S. E. 251, 125 Ga. 610, 54 S. E. 52, reversed on other grounds in 207 U. S. 127, 52 L. ed. 134, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47, 12 Ann. Cas. 463; McWilliams v. Jacobs, 128 Ga. 378, 57 S. E. 509; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 89 Ky. 538; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Adams, 78 Miss. 895, 29 So. 997; New Whatcom v. Roeder, 22 Wash. 575, 61 Pac. 767; State v. New England Furniture & Carpet Co. 107 Minn. 53, 119 N. W. 427, 16 Ann. Cas. 470; Perry County v. Selma, M. & M. R. Co. 65 Ala. 401; Edmonson v. Galveston, 53 Tex. 161; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. State, 55 Tex. 319, reversed in 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067; Cave v. Houston, 65 Tex. 622; Brooks v. State, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 58 S. W. 1035; Rockland v. Ulmer, 87 Me. 361, 32 Atl. 972; Danforth v. Williams, 9 Mass. 324; Greer v. Richards, 3 Ariz. 235, 32 Pac. 266; 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. pp. 19, 20; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 777; 37 Cyc. 1165.

Expressio unius est exclusio alterius.

People v. Central P. R. Co. 105 Cal. 595, 38 Pac. 905, affirmed in 162 U. S. 91, 40 L. ed. 903, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766.

The force of these authorities is not at all weakened by the fact that it has been held proper for the United States to sue for the recovery of taxes in an action in the nature of debt (Meredith v. United States, 13 Pet. 486, 10 L. ed. 258; United States v. Chamberlin, 219 U. S. 250, 55 L. ed. 204, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155). Such an action may be brought to recover sums which are not debts in any sense of the word.

The mere form of procedure cannot change the nature of the obligation, or create a penalty for delay in payment.

Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 513, 514, 26 L. ed. 197, 204, 205; Lane County v. Oregon, 7 Wall. 71, 19 L. ed. 101; Boston v. Turner, 201 Mass. 193, 87 N. E. 634; Gautier v. Ditmar, 204 N. Y. 27, 97 N. E. 464, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 960.

In nearly all of the tax cases cited by the government in the court below, the question of interest was not before the court.

Litchfield v. Webster County, 101 U. S. 773, 25 L. ed. 925; United States v. Erie R. Co. 106 U. S. 327, 27 L. ed. 151, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; Western Union R. Co. v. United States, 101 U. S. 543, 25 L. ed. 1068; Arnold v. United States, 9 Cranch, 104, 3 L. ed. 671; Sun Cheang-Kee v. United States, 3 Wall. 320, 18 L. ed. 72; United States v. Cobb, 11 Fed. 76; United States v. Phelps, 17 Blatchf. 312, Fed. Cas. No. 16,039; United States v. Dodge, Deady, 124, Fed. Cas. No. 14,973.

In some of these cases, there was no assignment of error which presented the point; in others the amount of the interest was too trifling to invite controversy; in none of them was there any consideration of the subject, either by the court or counsel, and in none was the court required to decide the point. The whole matter merely passed sub silentio. It is familiar law that cases in which a particular point is so passed are entitled to no weight whatever as authority upon that point.

Entick v. Carrington, 19 How. St. Tr. 1029, 1068; United States v. More, 3 Cranch, 159, 172, 2 L. ed. 397, 401; New v. Oklahoma, 195 U. S. 252, 256, 49 L. ed. 182, 183, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68.

If this rule applies to cases upon the question of jurisdiction,—a question which the court is bound to ask and answer for itself, even when not otherwise suggested (Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 382, 28 L. ed. 462, 463, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510),—how much more strongly must it govern cases upon such a minor and incidental matter as interest upon taxes.

No importance, of course, can be attached to the case of United States v. Washington Mills, 2 Cliff. 607, Fed. Cas. No. 16,647, where interest was allowed under the agreement of the parties; and the case of Dollar Sav. Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 227, 231, 22 L. ed. 80, cannot aid the government, because interest was there refused. Arnold v. United States, 9 Cranch, 104, 3 L. ed. 671, is pointless, since that decision proceeded upon the act of March 2, 1799, chap. 22, § 65 (now U. S. Rev. Stat. § 963, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 700), which expressly provided for the allowance of interest upon all bonds for duties.

Digitized by Google

In Litchfield v. Webster County, 101 U. S. 773, 25 L. ed. 925, the citizen tendered to the state treasurer the amount of the taxes, together with interest thereon, which the latter refused to receive because he claimed more. The court was not called upon to say whether Litchfield could or should have offered even less than he did. Litchfield was willing to pay interest, and there was, therefore, no controversy on that score. Under such a state of facts, it cannot be presumed that the court intended, unnecessarily and without consideration, to make a ruling wholly opposed to the weight of authority.

If People v. New York County, 5 Cow. 331, affords any support to the contention that interest can be imposed for delay in payment of taxes by a New York court in the absence of a statute to that effect, then it must be considered as having been overruled by the subsequent decisions of the court of appeals in People v. Gold & Stock Teleg. Co. 98 N. Y. 79, and Rochester v. Bloss, 185 N. Y. 52, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 694, 77 N. E. 794, 7 Ann. Cas. 15.

In some of the cases cited in the court below by the government in support of its claim for interest, the cause of action was based on an implied contract, or other common-law right, and interest was awarded as damages.

Redfield v. Ystalyfera Iron Co. 110 U. S. 174, 176, 28 L. ed. 109, 110, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Young v. Godbe, 15 Wall. 562, 21 L. ed. 250; New Dunderberg Min. Co. v. Old, 38 C. C. A. 89, 97 Fed. 150.

Use, and not merely potential use, must be shown before there can be any liability to pay the tax.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 108, 145, 150, 55 L. ed. 389, 411, 413, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; Zonne v. Minneapolis Syndicate, 220 U. S. 187, 55 L. ed. 428, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361; McCoach v. Minehill & S. H. R. Co. 228 U. S. 295, 305, 57 L. ed. 842, 846, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419.

A general act of Congress levying a tax upon property or the use of property should be presumed to relate only to property or use within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States.

Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, 46 L. ed. 697, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Thomson v. Advocate-General, 12 Clark & F. 1, 9 Jur. 217.

American nationality is denied to foreign-built yachts although owned by American citizens.

White's Bank v. Smith (White's Bank v. The Robert) 7 Wall. 646, 656, 19 L. ed. 211, 213; The Merritt (Murray v. United States) 17 Wall. 582, 585, 21 L. ed. 682, 683; The Alta, 78 C. C. A. 415, 148 Fed. 665.

There is serious doubt as to whether property or the use of property located in other countries and owned by persons there permanently domiciled can be taxed by Congress.

United States v. Erie R. Co. 106 U. S. 327, 332, 27 L. ed. 151, 154, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223, 9 Ben. 73, Fed. Cas. No. 15,056; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179.

The consent of the people to the adoption of the Constitution in the necessary number of states was secured only upon the pledge that amendments protecting the individual against the abuse of the powers granted to the Federal government would be forthwith submitted.

Barron v. Baltimore, 7 Pet. 243, 250, 8 L. ed. 672, 675.

The first ten articles of Amendment to the Constitution are to be regarded as of equal force and validity with the provisions of the Constitution itself.

Prout v. Starr, 188 U. S. 537, 543, 544, 47 L. ed. 584, 587, 588, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398.

The constitutional right against unjust taxation is given for the protection of private property.

Wight v. Davidson, 181 U. S. 371, 377, 45 L. ed. 900, 903, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

Even if it could be shown that the abuse of the taxing power was not in the minds of the people of the United States at the time the 5th Amendment was adopted, and that the framers perceived and apprehended no danger from the abuse of that power, this fact would not limit the scope of the Amendment, if the case now presented came fairly within its spirit and letter.

Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 644, 4 L. ed. 629, 661.

The cases in this court which have applied to taxation the constitutional requirement of "due process of law" all arose under the 14th Amendment and related to state laws; but no reason has been suggested why the very same provision in the Federal Constitution should have one meaning when applied to the state governments and to a state tax law, and a narrower meaning and more limited scope when applied to the Federal government.

Sinking-Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 718, 25 L. ed. 496, 501.

Logically, if there should be in reason any difference, it should exist against the Federal government, which is indisputably one of limited and enumerated powers.

Digitized by Google

Cooley, Taxn. p. 12.

The only sound principle must be that the provision is the same in both cases as applied to the taxing power.

French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 355, 45 L. ed. 879, 894, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 100, 101, 53 L. ed. 97, 106, 107, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14.

Assistant Attorney General Adkins argued the cause, and, with Mr. Karl W. Kirchwey, filed a brief for the United States:

A statute is not retrospective because a part of the requisites for its action is drawn from a time antecedent to its passing.

Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 280; Johnston v. United States, 17 Ct. Cl. 171; People v. Spring Valley Hydraulic Gold Co. 92 N. Y. 390; Frellsen v. Mahan, 21 La. Ann. 103; Locke v. New Orleans, 4 Wall. 172, 18 L. ed. 334.

In taxes upon real and personal property the annual tax is collected from the owner of the property at the time the tax is due, without regard to whether he has owned it for a year, or for only a day, preceding the levy.

McClellan v. Memphis & C. R. Co. 11 Lea, 336; State ex rel. Little River County v. Certain Lands, 40 Ark. 34; Litson v. Smith, 68 Mo. App. 402; Fennell v. Pauley, 112 Iowa, 94, 83 N. W. 799; Hudson v. Miller, 10 Kan. App. 532, 63 Pac. 21; Hardesty v. Fleming, 57 Tex. 395; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091.

Even if such construction does give the statute a retroactive effect, it is clear that Congress intended the tax to be paid September 1st, 1909.

1. It cannot be seriously questioned that Congress has the power to lay a retrospective tax.

Locke v. New Orleans, 4 Wall. 172, 18 L. ed. 334; Stockdale v. Atlantic Ins. Co. 20 Wall. 323, 331, 22 L. ed. 348, 351; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Rose, 95 U. S. 78, 80, 24 L. ed. 376, 377; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 108, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 492–494.

Nor can it be doubted that courts will construe a statute retrospectively when that is clearly the legislative intent.

Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Lamb v. Powder River Live Stock Co. 67 L.R.A. 558, 65 C. C. A. 570, 132 Fed. 434.

2. The language of this act shows a clear intention to make it immediately effective.

Pauley Jail Bldg. & Mfg. Co. v. Crawford County, 28 C. C. A. 579, 56 U. S. App. 53, 84 Fed. 942.

3. The length of ownership is immaterial; the phrase, "for more than six months," qualifies only charters, and not ownership.

Punctuation is to be given little weight in determining the legislative intent.

Hammock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 105 U. S. 77, 84, 26 L. ed. 1111, 1113; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 480, 43 L. ed. 1041, 1053, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722.

A construction which leads to absurd and unjust consequences is to be avoided if possible.

Pickett v. United States, 216 U. S. 456, 461, 54 L. ed. 566, 569, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265.

The tax cannot be apportioned.

McClellan v. Memphis & C. R. Co. 11 Lea, 336.

The tax is upon consumption, or upon the privilege of using, and is not avoided by failure to employ the yacht on cruises.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 166, 55 L. ed. 389, 419, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; United States v. Singer, 15 Wall. 111, 21 L. ed. 49; Hylton v. United States, 3 Dall. 171, 1 L. ed. 556; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 81–83, 44 L. ed. 985, 986, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 112, ante, —, 144, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

Every statute is to be construed sensibly, and to accomplish the legislative intent.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 17, 49 L. ed. 369, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412.

The present statute was undoubtedly drawn in view of the decision of this court in Eidman v. Martinez. The language here used, "district nearest the residence of the managing owner," applies even more appropriately to nonresidents than to persons residing in the United States. Every citizen of the United States comes within this description. There is a customs district nearest his residence, the ascertainment of which is a mere matter of geography. It is immaterial whether New York is the nearest district. That fact is admitted by the demurrer in two of the suits. And the assessment by the statute is sufficient.

United States v. Chamberlin, 219 U. S. 263, 55 L. ed. 210, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

Admittedly, the tax is an excise.

Hylton v. United States, 3 Dall. 171, 1 L. ed. 556.

An excise requires only geographical uniformity, and when this exists the tax is not a deprivation of property without due process of law, even though it apply unequally to different classes of taxpayers.

Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed.

Digitized by Google

969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Patton v. Brady, 184 U. S. 608, 46 L. ed. 713, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 49 L. ed. 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, 1 Ann. Cas. 561; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312.

The classification of the statute is reasonable within the "equal protection of the laws" clause of the 14th Amendment.

District of Columbia v. Brooke, 214 U. S. 138, 53 L. ed. 941, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560; Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 56 L. ed. 327, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875; Citizens' Teleph. Co. v. Fuller, 229 U. S. 322, 57 L. ed. 1206, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 833; Mutual Loan Co. v. Martell, 222 U. S. 225, 56 L. ed. 175, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 529; Metropolis Theatre Co. v. Chicago, 228 U. S. 61, 69, 57 L. ed. 730, 733, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Chicago Dock & Canal Co. v. Fraley, 228 U. S. 680, 686, 57 L. ed. 1022, 1024, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 78, 55 L. ed. 369, 377, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 160; Barrett v. Indiana, 229 U. S. 26, 30, 57 L. ed. 1050, 1052, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Quong Wing v. Kirkendall, 223 U. S. 59, 56 L. ed. 350, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Travellers' Ins. Co. v. Connecticut, 185 U. S. 364, 46 L. ed. 949, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; St. John v. New York, 201 U. S. 633, 50 L. ed. 896, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554, 5 Ann. Cas. 909; Adams v. Milwaukee, 228 U. S. 572, 57 L. ed. 971, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 610.

Treaties have been made with foreign nations, permitting the punishment by this country of certain offenses committed on vessels in foreign ports, belonging in whole or in part to the United States, "or any citizen thereof."

Wildenhus's Case (Mali v. Keeper of Common Jail) 120 U. S. 1, 12, 30 L. ed. 565, 567, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

Additional privileges within the waters of the United States are extended to these yachts.

The Miranda, 47 Fed. 815, affirmed in 2 C. C. A. 362, 1 U. S. App. 228, 51 Fed. 523; The Conqueror, 166 U. S. 119, 41 L. ed. 942, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; The Alta, 69 C. C. A. 289, 136 Fed. 513.

The right to tax may be supported by analogy to the right of a nation to punish its citizens for crimes committed abroad.

Clark & M. Crimes, p. 743; Beale, Crim. Pl. & Pr. p. 2; 2 Moore, Int. Law Dig. 255 et seq.

Section 37 is not unconstitutional because it originated in an amendment first proposed in the Senate.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 143, 55 L. ed. 410, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312.

A suit in personam lies to recover the duty.

United States v. Chamberlin, 219 U. S. 250, 258, 55 L. ed. 204, 208, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

The United States is entitled to interest on the several taxes from the time they became due.

Young v. Godbe, 15 Wall. 562, 565, 21 L. ed. 250, 251; People v. New York County, 5 Cow. 334; United States v. Lyman, 1 Mason, 482, Fed. Cas. No. 15,647; Meredith v. United States, 13 Pet. 486, 10 L. ed. 258; Sun Cheang-Kee v. United States, 3 Wall. 320, 18 L. ed. 72; United States v. Dodge, Deady, 124, Fed. Cas. No. 14,973; United States v. Cobb, 11 Fed. 76; United States v. Mexican International R. Co. 154 Fed. 519; Western Union R. Co. v. United States, 101 U. S. 550, 25 L. ed. 1070; Litchfield v. Webster County, 101 U. S. 773, 25 L. ed. 925; United States v. Erie R. Co. 106 U. S. 327, 27 L. ed. 151, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

It is necessary to determine whether these two cases from different courts are not virtually one and to be considered in that aspect.

The United States sued for the amount of a tax with interest. The alleged liability under the statute was challenged, and if it existed the statute was alleged to be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, and right to interest was denied. The court held the statute to be constitutional, and judgment was awarded for the sum claimed, but the prayer for interest was rejected. Error was prosecuted directly from this court by the defendant, and from the circuit court of appeals by the United States; the first because of the constitutional questions, and the second because of the disallowance of interest. The circuit court of appeals certified a question concerning the right to recover interest, and the two cases before us consist of the direct writ of error on the one hand and the certificate on the other. Both writs of error when taken were authorized. Railroad Commission v. Worthington, 225 U. S. 101, 56 L. ed. 1004, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653; Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 53 L. ed. 801, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490. Our jurisdiction, however, on the direct writ of error, is not confined to the constitutional questions, but embraces every issue in the case. Williamson v. United States, 207 U.

Digitized by Google

S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163. The circuit court of appeals, however, has no power to ask instructions upon an issue which it has no right to decide, and we have no authority to instruct on such a subject, or to refuse to decide issues which are properly before us for judgment.

Under these conditions, we think the better practice is [277] as regards the controversy as to interest, which was taken to the circuit court of appeals by writ of error, and in which cases the certificates now before us were drawn, to treat the writ of error from the circuit court of appeals as in substance pending here on a cross writ by the United States; and as without further orders the record is in such a condition as to enable us to decide the whole case, we proceed to do so.

Section 37 of the tariff act of August 5, 1909, chap. 6, 36 Stat. at L. 112, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1197, provided in part as follows:

"There shall be levied and collected annually on the first day of September by the collector of customs of the district nearest the residence of the managing owner, upon the use of every foreign-built yacht, pleasure boat, or vessel, not used or intended to be used for trade, now or hereafter owned or chartered for more than six months by any citizen or citizens of the United States, a sum equivalent to a tonnage tax of seven dollars per gross ton."

The second paragraph of the provision, which we need not quote, gives the right to the owner of any "foreign-built yacht, pleasure boat, or vessel above described" to pay a duty of 35 per cent ad valorem, and thus secure an exemption from the tax provided by the first paragraph.

The act went into effect on August 6, 1909, and the collector of the port of New York thereafter made a demand upon C. K. G. Billings, the plaintiff in error, for the payment of $7,644; that is, of the sum produced by calculating $7 per ton on 1,091.71 tons, the tonnage of the foreign-built yacht Vanadis, owned and controlled by him.

Failing to pay, in January, 1911, the United States sued in the court below to recover the tax. The defendant was alleged to be a citizen of the United States, and the suit was averred to have been brought in the district nearest his residence. The ownership and use by him of the pleasure yacht Vanadis, an English foreign-built vessel, [278] the levy based upon her tonnage according to the statute of the amount of $7,644, the demand for payment, the failure to pay on the 1st day of September, 1909, under the statute, were all alleged, and recovery of the tax as well as of interest was prayed. The answer admitted citizenship and the ownership of the yacht, and that she was a foreign-built pleasure craft, but set up three distinct defenses; the first, that the vessel was not enrolled, registered, or documented as a vessel of the United States, and enjoyed no privileges because she was of that character. It was expressly admitted that "during the year preceding the 1st day of September, 1909," the said yacht "has been used by the defendant outside of the waters and territorial limits or jurisdiction of the United States from time to time and at various times . . . and was not used for six months during such year within the waters and territorial limits or jurisdiction of the United States or elsewhere."

The second defense expressly averred that the tax imposed by the statute was intended by Congress to be "an annual tax, that it should be prospective, and operate only upon the future use of any such foreign-built yacht, pleasure boat, or vessel, and that said annual tax did not accrue and could not be duly levied and collected prior to the 1st day of September in the year 1910."

The third defense after fully averring that there were within the United States many pleasure yachts not foreign built which were in use, and whose use was identical with that of a foreign-built yacht like the one which the defendant used, charged that the law imposing the burden sought to be enforced was void because repugnant to the due process clause of the 5th Amendment. The case was submitted to the court on bill and answer; and as we at the outset said, there was a judgment holding that the sum claimed was due by the defendant as an excise or duty upon the use of his yacht, and that the act imposing [279] the tax was not repugnant to the Constitution, but that the government was not entitled to recover interest.

To avoid, if it may be, the necessity of determining the constitutional question, we shall first decide what, if any, burden the statute imposes, and then, if necessary, consider its asserted repugnancy to the Constitution. In view of the requirement that direct taxes be apportioned, and assuming, as we do assume, that the act before us was adopted by Congress in the light of the ruling in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673, 158 U. S. 601, 39 L. ed. 1108, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912, it is certain that the tax levied by the provision was intended to be an excise tax upon "the use of every foreign-built yacht, pleasure boat, or vessel . . . now or hereafter owned or chartered for more than six months by any citizen or citizens of the United States." This is not seriously, if at all, disputed in argument, the controversy turning first upon the period when the tax provided for is to take effect, and the nature and character of the use which is taxed. These subjects are so interwoven that we consider and dispose of them together.

Digitized by Google

Was the tax due on the 1st day of September, 1909, or was it only due on the same day in September, 1910? In view of the positive direction that the tax shall be levied and collected on the 1st day of September, we can see no escape from the conclusion that the court below was right in holding that it became due on the 1st day of September after the passage of the act. The word "annually," upon which so much reliance to the contrary is placed, is manifestly used not for the purpose of postponing the time of payment, but rather as provision for continuity; that is, the word but shows the purpose of fixing the annual duty of levying and collecting the tax on the designated day. This becomes quite apparent when it is observed that if the word "annually" be removed, there would be room for the implication that the tax was to be but sporadic, and would therefore cease to [280] be collectible after one payment. And it is equally clear that the six months clause is concerned not with the period when the tax imposed shall be levied and collected, but addresses itself to the subject-matter upon which the tax is placed; in other words, it qualifies the word "charter," and therefore only indicates when the use of a chartered vessel shall become subject to the duty imposed. The tax being leviable and collectible on the 1st of September in each year after the passage of the act, upon what was it assessed is the question. It seems difficult to answer it in clearer terms than does the text of the act when it provides that it shall be upon the use of the yachts with which the provision is concerned. But it is said to respond in the language of the act leaves the question virtually unanswered, since the extent of the use and its essential period are left wholly undetermined. But this is a misconception based upon a disregard of the fact that the word "use" in the text is unqualified, from which it results that the recurrence of the tax is annual and depends upon two elements,—ownership or charter rights, as specified in the act, and use for any time during the year. It is to be observed that the provision deals with ownership, and distinguishes between ownership and use, since it bases the tax not upon the former, but upon the latter. From this it follows that it is not ownership, but the election during the taxing period of the owner to take advantage of one of the elements which are involved in ownership,—the right to use which is the subject upon which the statute places the excise duty. In this view the fact of use, not its extent or its frequency, becomes the test, as distinguished from mere ownership, for that, in the statutory sense, could exist without use having taken place. The words of the statute under this construction were used in an every-day sense, and not in a technical one: in other words, but convey the distinction without reference to nice analysis of the nature of things which is [281] commonly conceived to exist between ownership and use. Let it be conceded that the ownership of property includes the right to use; plainly we think, as use and ownership are distinguished one from the other in the provision, the word "use," as there employed, means more than the mere privilege of using which the owner enjoys, and relates to its primary signification, as defined by Webster: "The act of employing anything or of applying it to one's service; the state of being so employed or applied." If the use which arises from the fact of ownership, without more, was what the statute proposed, then it is inconceivable why the difference between use and ownership was marked in the provision and made the basis of the tax which it imposed. While this construction in this case leads to the same conclusion as does that which the court below affixed to the statute, that is, that it taxed the privilege of use, or, in other words, the potentiality of using involved in ownership, inherently there is this fundamental difference between the interpretation we give and that which the lower court adopted, since the privilege of use is purely passive (or subjective),—a right which necessarily pertains to ownership and must exist where there is ownership, as one may not obtain ownership without acquiring the privileges of use which ownership gives. The other, on the contrary, that is, use in the statutory sense, although it arises from ownership, is active (objective); that is, it is the outward and distinct exercise of a right which ownership confers, but which would not necessarily be exerted by the mere fact of ownership. The contention that inequality must be the result from making the tax depend upon mere use without reference to the extent of its duration addresses itself not to the question of power, and is therefore beyond the scope of judicial cognizance. But it is to be observed that it may well have been that the character of the property with which the statute deals and the mere element of [282] caprice as to its use and the uncertainties of the subject led to the fact of making the use alone the criterion as the wiser and juster method of operating equally upon all. Again let it be conceded that the causing the tax for the annual period to become due in September, 1909, is to give it in some respects a retroactive effect, such concession does not cause the act to be beyond the power of Congress under the Constitution to adopt. Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312, and authorities there cited. While the rule is that statutes should be so construed as to prevent them from operating retroactively, that principle is one of construction, and not of reconstruction, and therefore does not authorize a judicial re-enactment by interpretation of a statute to save it from producing a retroactive effect.

Digitized by Google

As under the meaning which we thus give the statute the admitted use of the vessel was within its provision, and therefore the amount due for excise was rightfully imposed, and under our interpretation was due when demanded, we must consider whether the asserted repugnancy of the statute to the Constitution is well founded.

It has been conclusively determined that the requirement of uniformity which the Constitution imposes upon Congress in the levy of excise taxes is not an intrinsic uniformity, but merely a geographical one. Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. supra; McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 49 L. ed. 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, 1 Ann. Cas. 561; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747. It is also settled beyond dispute that the Constitution is not self-destructive. In other words, that the powers which it confers on the one hand it does not immediately take away on the other; that is to say, that the authority to tax which is given in express terms is not limited or restricted by the subsequent provisions of the Constitution or the Amendments thereto, especially by the due process clause of the 5th Amendment. McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 49 L. ed. 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, 1 Ann. Cas. 561, and authorities there cited. [283] Nor is there anything in Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 199 U. S. 401, 50 L. ed. 246, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66, or Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 53 L. ed. 97, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14, which in the remotest degree nullifies or restricts the principle thus stated. Indeed it is apparent, if the suggestion as to the meaning of those cases were assented to, it would result in rendering the Constitution unconstitutional. This certainly was the view entertained by the pleader when the answer in the case was prepared, since the sole attack on the constitutionality of the statute was based upon the assertion that it was repugnant to the due process clause of the 5th Amendment. And such also is the line of the argument at bar where the fundamental rights secured by the 5th Amendment are constantly referred to as the basis upon which the unconstitutionality of the statute is urged. Is there foundation for this claim under the 5th Amendment, is then the issue, and that, of course, requires a statement of the grievances which it is asserted result from upholding the tax. They all come to this,—that to impose a burden in the shape of a tax upon the use of a foreign-built yacht when a like tax is not imposed on the use of a domestic yacht under similar circumstances is so beyond the power of classification, so abhorrent to the sense of justice, and so repugnant to the conceptions of free government, as to be void even in the absence of express constitutional limitation. We do not stop to point out the obvious unsoundness of the contentions, nor, indeed, to direct attention to the self-evident demonstration of their want of merit even from the point of view of the power to classify, since the differences between things domestic and things foreign, and their use, are apparent on the face of things, and are expressly manifested by the text of the Constitution. We say we do not stop to do these things because in any event we are of opinion the conclusion cannot be escaped that the propositions, each and all of them, whatever may be their form of expression, are in substance and effect but an [284] assertion that the tax which the statute imposes is void because of a want of intrinsic uniformity; and therefore all the contentions are adversely disposed of by the previous decisions of this court on that subject. That which is settled beyond dispute may not be disregarded and be brought into the realm of that which is controvertible and questionable by the mere garb in which propositions are clothed.

Was the government entitled to interest? is then the remaining question which we must decide in view of the purpose which we at the outset expressed of treating the United States as here present, and urging its right to interest on a cross writ of error. The cyclopedias and textbooks state the doctrine to be that in the absence of a statute expressly so directing, taxes bear no interest. The principle is thus announced in 37 Cyc. p. 1165: "Delinquent taxes do not bear interest unless it is expressly so provided by statute. But it is competent for the legislature to prescribe the payment of interest as a penalty for delay in the payment of taxes, and to regulate its rate. This however, can be effected only by an act plainly manifesting the legislative intention as to the right to recover interest, its amount, and the date from which it shall begin, the latter being ordinarily the time when the assessment is complete and the taxes become payable." Cooley Taxn. p. 17; Sedgwick, Damages, 9th ed. § 332; Sutherland, Damages, 3d ed. § 337; Black, Tax Titles, 2d ed. § 236, and see note in 6 L.R.A. (N.S.) p. 694. And the statement of the text is borne out by the decided cases in nearly all of the state courts of last resort. On the other hand, the government relies upon four cases in this court where interest was allowed as a matter of course on taxes due the United States. Sun Cheang-Kee v. United States, 3 Wall. 320, 18 L. ed. 72; Western Union R. Co. v. United States, 101 U. S. 543, 25 L. ed. 1068; Litchfield v. Webster County, 101 U. S. 773, 25 L. ed. 925; United States v. Erie R. Co. 106 U. S. 327, 27 L. ed. 151, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223. [285] We say as a matter of course, because in the cases referred to, the subject was not discussed and the liability for interest was practically admitted. The government also relies on a careful and clear opinion by Maxey, Judge, in the circuit court for the western district of Texas, holding that interest was due to the United States on customs duties. United States v. Mexican International R. Co. 154 Fed. 519. Whether the practice applied in the previous decisions of this court should be now followed, or the theory established by the state cases adopted and made the rule as to taxes due the United States, is therefore the question. Its solution must depend not upon the mere authority of the state cases, but upon the conclusiveness of the principles upon which such cases rest, and their concurrence with the principles by which interest is allowed in the courts of the United States,—considerations which require us to determine the nature of the duty which arises from the liability for a tax imposed by the United States, not only inherently, but as well from the practice which has obtained in the past in the enforcement of the law of the United States, and the implication of legislative sanction, if any, to such practice which may have arisen. It would serve no purpose to refer to the abhorrence which obtained in early times concerning the payment of interest, and the evolution by which the legitimate character of interest was gradually understood, and it came to be recognized that its payment was, as a general principle, but the compensation due for the use of money, or that its allowance was merely for damages caused by delay in discharging a duty, and therefore in default on a contract to pay money, even without express legislation so directing, interest would be allowed. The subject was explained in National Bank v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 94 U. S. 437, 24 L. ed. 176, and was reviewed in Reid v. Rensselaer Glass Factory, 3 Cow. 393, 5 Cow. 587. To avoid prolixity we do not not review the [286] state cases as to nonliability for interest on default for taxes, but content ourselves with stating that we think it is apparent that the conclusion which they sustain, leaving aside minor differences, rests upon two fundamental propositions: First, the necessity for an express statute providing for interest except in cases of contract, and second, that even where there is a statute providing for interest on all debts, such statute is not applicable to taxes because they are not debts, and therefore must be enforced alone by virtue of express legislative penalties, except where a provision exists giving eo nomine interest on taxes. But both of these propositions are in conflict with the settled doctrine established by the decision of this court. Thus, as to the necessity for a statute, it was long ago here decided, in view of the true conception of interest, that a statute was not necessary to compel its payment where, in accordance with the principles of equity and justice in the enforcement of an obligation, interest should be allowed. Young v. Godbe, 15 Wall. 562, 565, 21 L. ed. 250, 251:

Digitized by Google

"It is said there is no law in the territory of Utah prescribing a rate of interest in transactions like the one in controversy in this suit, and that, therefore, no interest can be recovered. But this result does not follow. If there is no statute on the subject, interest will be allowed by way of damages for unreasonably withholding payment of an overdue account. The rate must be reasonable, and conform to the custom which obtains in the community in dealings of this character."

And the decisions of this court have often since exemplified the principle by considering the question of the responsibility for interest from the point of view of reason and justice, even though no express statute existed for compelling this payment. So, also, as to the nature and character of the obligation to pay taxes. As long ago as Meredith v. United States, 13 Pet. 486, 10 L. ed. 258, it was decided, the court speaking by Mr. Justice Story (p. 493):

[287] "It appears to us clear upon principle, as well as upon the obvious import of the provisions of the various acts of Congress on this subject, that the duties due upon all goods imported constitute a personal debt due to the United States from the importer."

Again, in United States v. Chamberlin, 219 U. S. 250, 55 L. ed. 204, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155, the nature and character of an obligation to pay a stamp duty was considered, and the right to collect it by action of debt was passed upon, and it was held that the obligation to pay was a debt, and that it could be enforced by suit in the absence of an exclusive remedy created by the statute by which the obligation was imposed. In the course of the opinion, various decisions of this court recognizing the right of the United States to enforce internal revenue duties by suit were referred to, and the statute to the same end was cited, and its application to the case in hand was pointed out upon grounds which in reason may well be said to cause the statute to be applicable to the case here before us. In addition, in repeated adjudications in this court it has been settled that in a suit to recover taxes which have been illegally assessed, interest would be allowed against the official, although the real responsibility was on the government. The concluded doctrine on this subject was thus stated in a recent case after referring to the exemption of the United States from liability for interest (National Home v. Parrish, 229 U. S. 494, 496, 57 L. ed. 1296, 1298, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 944):

Digitized by Google

"On the contrary, in suits against collectors to recover moneys illegally exacted as taxes and paid under protest, the settled rule is, that interest is recoverable without any statute to that effect, and this although the judgment is not to be paid by the collector, but directly from the Treasury. Erskine v. Van Arsdale, 15 Wall. 75, 21 L. ed. 63; Redfield v. Bartels, 139 U. S. 694, 35 L. ed. 310, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 683."

The conflict between the systems is pronounced and fundamental. In the one, the state rule, except as to [288] contract, no interest without statute; in the United States rule, interest in all cases where equitably due unless forbidden by statute. In one no suit for taxes as a debt without express statutory authority; in the other, the right to sue for taxes as for a debt in every case where not prohibited by statute.

From this review it results that the doctrine as to nonliability to pay interest for taxes which have become due which prevails in the state courts is absolutely in conflict with the doctrine applied to the same subject in this court, and cannot now be made the rule without repudiating settled principles which have been here applied for many years in various aspects, and without in effect disregarding the sanction either expressly or impliedly given by Congress to such rules. From this it follows that although in the cases in this court to which we at the outset made reference which enforced the liability for interest, and which are here controlling if they be not now overruled, there was no controversy as to the liability for interest, this was presumably because the matter was deemed not disputable as the direct result of the then-settled doctrine that interest could be recovered by the United States on a default in payment of import duties. Under this condition we can see no ground for departing from the rule which the cases enforced, and we are therefore constrained to the conclusion that the court below was wrong in rejecting the prayer of the government for interest, and its action in that respect must be reversed, while in others it must be affirmed.

Modified and affirmed.

---

[289] UNITED STATES
v.
CORNELIUS K. G. BILLINGS. (No. 626.)

CORNELIUS K. G. BILLINGS, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES. (No. 67.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 289, 290.)

This case is governed by the decision in Billings v. United States, ante, 596.

[Nos. 626 and 67.]

Argued January 6 and 7, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment enforcing, without interest, a claim of the United States for an excise tax upon a foreign-built pleasure yacht. Modified by awarding interest, and as modified affirmed. Also

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, presenting the question of the right of the United States to recover interest on the amount of the tax. Unanswered.

See 190 Fed. 372, for the decision below, in a consolidation of the present case, No. 67, with those of other parties named in that report.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Adkins argued the cause, and, with Mr. Karl W. Kirchwey, filed a brief for the United States.

Mr. William D. Guthrie argued the cause and filed a brief for Cornelius K. G. Billings.

For contentions of counsel, see their briefs as reported in Billings v. United States, ante, 596.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

These two cases are controlled by the two cases between the same parties, just decided. In the case which is here on error, the suit was brought by the United States to recover the amount of the tax which became due upon the yacht Vanadis, on the 1st day of September, 1910, under the act of August 5th, 1909 [36 Stat. at L. 11, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 741], which was under consideration in the previous cases. The complaint, leaving aside some additional averments which it is unnecessary to refer to, was the same as the one in the cases already passed upon, and this is true also of the answer. The case [290] by stipulation was submitted to the court without a jury, and the steps essential to save all the questions in the case were properly taken. The use of the vessel during the taxing period was shown. There was a judgment in favor of the United States for the amount of the tax, but against it for interest, and error was prosecuted from the circuit court of appeals to review that subject, and such case is here on certificate. Taking jurisdiction of both cases and treating them as one, as was done in the previous cases, and applying the conclusions in those cases expressed, to this, it results that the judgment below must be modified, so far as the interest is concerned, by allowing the claim of the United States in that respect, and in other respects it must be affirmed.

And it is so ordered.

H. CLAY PIERCE, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES. (No. 64.)

UNITED STATES
v.
H. CLAY PIERCE. (No. 623.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 290, 291.)

Internal revenue — excise on foreign-built yacht — nonuse.

The nonuse of a foreign-built pleasure yacht during the entire taxing year relieves the owner from liability for the annual excise imposed by the act of August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. 112, chap. 6), § 37, upon the use of every such yacht now or hereafter owned or chartered for more than six months by any citizen of the United States.

[Federal taxation, see Internal Revenue, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 64 and 623.]

Argued January 6 and 7, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment enforcing, without interest, a claim of the United States for an excise tax upon a foreign-built pleasure yacht. Reversed, with directions to dismiss the complaint. Also

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit presenting the question of the right of the United States to recover interest on the amount of the tax. Unanswered.

See same case below, No. 64, on demurrer, 190 Fed. 359.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William D. Guthrie argued the cause and filed a brief for H. Clay Pierce.

Assistant Attorney General Adkins argued the cause, and, with Mr. Karl W. Kirchwey, filed a brief for the United States.

For contentions of counsel, see their briefs as reported in Billings v. United States, ante, 596.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

These two cases involve the liability of the plaintiff in error in No. 64 for a tax on the foreign-built yacht Yacona, which became due on the 1st of September, 1909. The complaint in every substantial particular was identical with that filed in the Billings Case this day decided [232 U. S. 261, ante, 596, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 421], and this is true also of the defenses set up in the answer, except that the answer in this case contained this distinct averment which was not in the Billings Case: "That the said yacht Yacona was not in use by the defendant or by any other person at any time during the year next preceding the 1st day of September, 1909, but was out of commission and laid up unused at Brooklyn, in the state of New York, throughout the whole of such year." The case was submitted on bill and answer, and the liability for the tax, which was upheld by the court below, was rested upon the construction as to potential use,—that is, a tax on the privilege of using,—which we decided in the Billings Case to be unsound. In this case, as in that, the certificate is concerned with a writ of error prosecuted by the United States to the circuit court of appeals because of the rejection of a prayer for interest. Treating both the cases in this instance as one, as we did in the previous cases, and applying to this the construction which we have given the statute in those cases, it follows that the judgment below was wrong and must be reversed, with direction to dismiss the complaint.

And it is so ordered.

Digitized by Google

[292] H. CLAY PIERCE, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES. (No. 65.)

UNITED STATES
v.
H. CLAY PIERCE. (No. 624.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 292, 293.)

This case is governed by the decision in Pierce v. United States, ante, 609.

[Nos. 65 and 624.]

Argued January 6 and 7, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment enforcing, without interest, a claim of the United States for an excise tax upon a foreign-built pleasure yacht. Reversed, with directions to dismiss the complaint. Also

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, presenting the question of the right of the United States to recover interest on the amount of the tax. Unanswered.

See 190 Fed. 372, for the decision below, in a consolidation of the present case, No. 65, with those of other parties named in that report.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William D. Guthrie argued the cause and filed a brief for H. Clay Pierce.

Assistant Attorney General Adkins argued the cause, and, with Mr. Karl W. Kirchwey, filed a brief for the United States.

For contentions of counsel, see their briefs as reported in Billings v. United States, 596.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

These cases concern the right to recover a tax on the yacht Yacona, becoming due on the 1st of September, 1910. The complaint filed by the United States in No. 65 was in substance like that filed in the previous cases, and the answer in effect set up the same defenses, especially the defense relating to the nonuse of the yacht. The case, by stipulation, was submitted to the court without a jury, a finding of facts was made which distinctly established [293] the nonuse during the taxing year, and the court gave a judgment for the tax, although it rejected the interest, upon the same construction of the act which it applied in the previous cases. The certificate in this as in the other cases is here in consequence of error prosecuted by the United States to the circuit court of appeals, because of the rejection of the interest claimed. Treating this case as we treated the others, and applying the construction in those cases given, it follows that the judgment in this case must be reversed.

And it is so ordered.

UNITED STATES
v.
HARRIET GOELET.† (No. 631.)

UNITED STATES
v.
HARRIET GOELET.† (No. 632.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 293–298.)

Internal revenue — excise on foreign-built yacht — owner domiciled abroad.

A citizen of the United States who has a permanent residence and domicil abroad is not liable for the excise tax based upon gross tonnage which, under the tariff act of August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. 112, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1197), § 37, shall be levied and collected annually "by the collector of customs of the district nearest the residence of the managing owner" upon the use of every foreign-built pleasure yacht now or hereafter owned or chartered for more than six months by any citizen of the United States.

[Federal taxation, see Internal Revenue, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 631 and 632.]

Argued January 6 and 7, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

TWO CERTIFICATES from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit presenting, inter alia, the question whether the excise on the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts may be collected from an owner permanently domiciled in another country. Answered in the negative. Other questions unanswered.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Adkins argued the cause, and, with Mr. Karl W. Kirchwey, filed a brief for the United States.

Mr. William D. Guthrie argued the cause and filed a brief for Harriet Goelet.

For contentions of counsel see their briefs as reported in Billings v. United States, ante, 596.

†Death of Harriet Goelet suggested, and appearance of Robert Walton Goelet, as executor under the last will and testament of Harriet Goelet, filed and entered January 7, 1914, as a party herein.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The questions asked in both of these cases relate to § 37 of the tariff act of 1909 [36 Stat. at L. 112, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1197], which we have construed in several opinions just announced. They both concern the sum of excise duties levied on the foreign-built yacht Nahma, the one assessed for the year ending on the 1st of September, 1909, and the other on the 1st of September, 1910. The cases were decided by the trial court at the same time with other cases for a like period, the case relating to the tax for 1909 having been submitted on bill and answer as a result of the overruling a demurrer filed by the government to the answer of the defendant and the election to plead no further, and the case involving the levy for 1910 having been decided by the court along with other cases without the intervention of a jury, as the result of a stipulation between the parties. The certificate fully states the situation as to both periods of taxation, conforming to the conditions of fact which we have recapitulated in the opinions in the two Billings Cases [232 U. S. 261, 289, ante, 596, 608, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 421, 428,] [295] and the questions asked concerning the construction of the statute, its operation and its constitutionality, involve all the subject-matters which we have disposed of in the previous opinions. In both of these cases, however, differing from those which we have previously decided, in the pleadings concerning the 1909 tax it was expressly averred, and by the demurrer conceded, that the owner of the yacht, at least for a year prior to the levy of the tax, was domiciled in a foreign country, and that the yacht whose use was taxed had a permanent situs in such country, and, so far as the levy for 1910 is concerned, that state of things, as shown by the certificate, was expressly covered by the findings of fact; and if the opinion of the trial court be considered, it will appear that it was one of these peculiarities of fact, that is, the permanent domicil abroad, which led that court, instead of deciding in favor of the tax, to hold that as to both periods it was unauthorized by the statute. To make the situation perfectly clear we quote from the certificate in the case concerning the 1909 tax (No. 631) the exact language of the answer on the subjects just stated, the equivalent of which is embraced in the case involving the 1910 tax (No. 632), as follows:

"That the defendant was, on September 1, 1909, and for several years prior thereto had been, permanently a resident of and domiciled at Paris, in the Republic of France; and that since 1901 her said yacht had not been within the jurisdiction of the United States, but had had a permanent situs within the jurisdiction of Great Britain."

For the purpose of enabling it to determine the influence of the facts thus stated upon the decision of these two cases, the court, in its certificate, in addition to many questions involving the issues of construction and constitutionality which we have disposed of in the other cases, asks two questions whose order of statement we rearrange as follows:

[296] "II. Does the tax purporting to be imposed by said act of Congress apply to the use of a foreign-built yacht owned by a citizen of the United States who was permanently resident and domiciled in a foreign country for more than one year prior to September 1, 1909, and to the levy of such tax?

"I. Does the tax purporting to be imposed by § 37 of the act of Congress, approved August 5, 1909, apply to the use of a foreign-built yacht owned by a citizen of the United States, when such yacht, for a period of more than one year prior to September 1, 1909, and to the levy of such tax, was used wholly outside of the limits and territorial jurisdiction of the United States?"

It is manifest from what we have said that the response to these two questions will be substantially determinative of all the questions which the certificate propounds, since if we answer either of them in the negative, the case will be disposed of and there will be no occasion to reply to the others; and if, on the contrary, we answer both of them in the affirmative, there will be no need to do anything but state our reply to the other questions, since the reasons for such reply will be controlled by the opinions which we have previously announced. We come then to consider the questions in the order stated.

Not in the slightest degree questioning that there was power to impose the excise duty on the citizen owning a foreign-built yacht wholly irrespective of the fact that he was permanently domiciled in a foreign country, and putting out of view all questions concerning the nonapplication of the statute to the case in hand purely because of the situs of the yacht itself, the single matter for decision is, Do the terms of the statute provide for the payment by a citizen of the United States who has a permanent residence and domicil abroad of an excise duty because of the use by him as owner or charterer under the terms of the statute of a foreign-built yacht? It may not [297] be doubted, as observed by the trial court in these cases (omitting the consideration of taxes imposed on property having a situs within the jurisdiction of the taxing authority), speaking in a general sense, that the taxing power, when exerted, is not usually applied to those even albeit they are citizens, who have a permanent domicil or residence outside of the country levying the tax. Indeed, we think it must be conceded that the levy of such a tax is so beyond the normal and usual exercise of the taxing power as to cause it to be, when exerted, of rare occurrence and in the fullest sense exceptional. This being true, we must approach the statute for the purpose of ascertaining whether its provisions sanction such rare and exceptional taxation. Considering the text, we search in vain for the express declaration of such authority. True, it is argued by the United States, that as the tax is levied on any citizen using a foreign-built yacht, and as any includes all, therefore the statute expressly embraces a citizen permanently domiciled and residing abroad. But this argument in effect begs the question for decision, which is whether the use of the general words "any citizen," without more, should be considered as expressing more than the general rule of taxation; or, in other words, can be treated without the expression of more as embracing the exceptional exertion of the power to tax one permanently residing abroad. As illustrative and throwing light on the real question for decision, action taken by Congress in exerting its taxing power is at least worthy of note. For instance the provisions of the income tax law of June 30th, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 281, chap. 173), expressly extended that tax to those domiciled abroad, and a like purpose is beyond doubt expressed in the income tax of 1913 (subdivision 1 of the tariff act of October 3, 1913). But without resting this case upon the implication against the conferring of the authority here claimed from the mere want of express statement in the statute of the giving of such exceptional [298] power, and treating such implication as not, in and of itself, absolutely conclusive, we think when to the force of such inference, even though it be limited, there is added the weight arising from that which is expressly stated in the statute, the conclusion against want of power conferred to levy the tax here asserted is established. This arises from the command of the statute that the tax shall be levied "by the collector of customs of the district nearest the residence of the managing owner," etc., since the consequence of such command is to associate residence with citizenship, and establishes such a relationship between them as to bring about the result which we have just stated. Nor do we think there is anything as suggested by the argument of the United States in the case of Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 591, 46 L. ed. 704, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515, which militates against the views just stated; and this also is true of the suggestion made in argument concerning the circulation by those interested in the enactment of the provision of a list of yachts which would become subject to the tax if the provision was enacted, which list included the yacht taxed in this case. The expectations of those who sought the enactment of legislation may not be used for the purpose of affixing to legislation when enacted a meaning which it does not express.

Digitized by Google

For the reasons just stated we conclude to answer the second question in the negative, and not to reply to the others, as it becomes unnecessary to do so.

And it will be so certified.

---

[299] UNITED STATES v. JAMES GORDON BENNETT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 299-308.)

Internal revenue — excise on foreign-built yacht — use outside United States.

1. Use for the taxing period wholly outside the territorial limits of the United States is comprehended by the provision of the tariff act of August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. 112, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1197), § 37, imposing an annual excise tax based upon gross tonnage upon the use of every foreign-built pleasure yacht now or hereafter owned or chartered for more than six months by any citizen of the United States.

[Federal taxation, see Internal Revenue, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Internal revenue — excise on foreign-built yacht — when due.

2. The excise tax based on gross tonnage, which, under the tariff act of August 5, 1909, § 37, shall be levied and collected annually on the 1st day of September upon the use of every foreign-built pleasure yacht now or hereafter owned or chartered for more than six months by any citizen of the United States, became due on the 1st day of September following the passage of the act.

[Federal taxation, see Internal Revenue, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Note.—As to what constitutes due process of law, generally—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On implied right to interest on taxes or assessments—see note to Rochester v. Bloss, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 694.

Digitized by Google

Internal revenue — validity of excise tax — territorial limitations.

3. The rule that the power to tax depends upon jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the tax has no application to Federal taxation.

[For other cases, see Internal Revenue I. b; Taxes, I. c, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — excise tax — territorial limitations.

4. Construing as applicable to the use of a yacht wholly beyond the territorial limits of the United States the provisions of the tariff act of August 5, 1909, § 37, imposing an annual excise tax upon the use of a foreign-built pleasure yacht owned or chartered for more than six months by any citizen of the United States, does not render the statute repugnant to the due process of law clause of the 5th Amendment to the Federal Constitution as being in conflict with obvious principles of justice, and inconsistent with the conception of representative and free government.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 6, a; Internal Revenue, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Internal revenue — uniformity — excise tax.

5. The uniformity clause of U. S. Const. art. 1, § 8, is not violated by the excise tax based upon gross tonnage levied by the act of August 5, 1909, § 37, upon the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts owned by citizens of the United States because a like tax is not imposed upon the use of a domestic yacht under similar circumstances.

[For other cases, see Internal Revenue, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — excise tax — discrimination.

6. The imposition of an excise tax based upon gross tonnage upon the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts owned by citizens of the United States without imposing a like tax upon the use of a domestic yacht under similar circumstances, as is done by the act of August 5, 1909, § 37, does not render that statute repugnant to the due process of law clause of the 5th Amendment to the Federal Constitution as being so beyond the power of classification abhorrent to the sense of justice, and so repugnant to the conceptions of free government as to be void even in the absence of express constitutional limitation.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 6, a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interest — on delinquent taxes.

7. Delinquent taxes due to the Federal government bear interest, although no statute expressly so directs.

[No. 629.]

Argued January 6 and 7, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit presenting the following questions:

I. Does the tax purporting to be imposed by § 37 of the act of Congress, approved August 5, 1909, apply to the use of a foreign-built yacht owned by a citizen of the United States, when such yacht, for a period of more than one year prior to September 1, 1909, and to the levy of such tax, was used wholly outside of the limits and territorial jurisdiction of the United States. Answered in the affirmative.

II. Did the tax purporting to be imposed by said act of Congress operate retrospectively, so as to be payable on September 1, 1909, in respect of the year then ended, or only prospectively, so as to become first due and payable on September 1, 1910? Answered in the affirmative.

III. Did the whole amount of the tax purporting to be imposed by said act of Congress become due and payable on September 1, 1909, or only such proportion thereof as the time during which the act was in force at that date bears to the whole year? Answered in the affirmative; the whole tax.

IV. Has Congress the power to levy a tax upon the use by a citizen of the United States of a yacht which is not actually, and since the year 1904 was not at any time, used within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States, and which has its permanent situs in a foreign country? Answered in the affirmative.

V. Does said act of Congress, by purporting to impose a tax upon the use of foreign-built yachts alone, provide a valid tax, or a valid classification for purposes of taxation, within the power to lay and collect taxes delegated to Congress by the Constitution of the United States? Answered in the affirmative.

VI. Is the tax purporting to be imposed by said act of Congress in conflict with the requirement of due process of law contained in the 5th article of Amendment to the Constitution of the United States? Answered in the negative.

VII. Is the United States entitled to recover interest upon the tax imposed upon the use of foreign-built yachts in and by § 37 of the tariff act of August 5, 1909? Answered in the affirmative.

Assistant Attorney General Adkins argued the cause, and, with Mr. Karl W. Kirchwey, filed a brief for the United States.

Mr. William D. Guthrie argued the cause and filed a brief for James Gordon Bennett.

For contentions of counsel see their briefs as reported in Billings v. United States, ante, 596.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

So far as we deem it material to the question we are called upon to answer, the certificate in this case is as follows:

[301] "The United States, plaintiff below, sued out a writ of error to this court to review a judgment of the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York in the above-entitled cause, entered on July 6, 1911, dismissing the amended complaint of the United States in an action brought against the defendant below to recover the tax imposed by § 37 of the tariff act of August 5, 1909 (chap. 6, 36 Stat. at L. 112, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1197), for the year ended September 1, 1909, upon the use of the foreign-built yacht 'Lysistrata,' owned by the defendant."

After reciting the averment as to the assessment of the tax by the collector, amounting to $13,601, and the failure of the defendant to pay, his citizenship and ownership of the yacht, and the conformity of the assessment to the statute, the certificate states that there was a prayer for the recovery of the amount with interest. It then proceeds to state the answer of the defendant, setting up the nonregistry and nonenrolment of the yacht, that she enjoyed no protection or privileges of any kind under the laws of the United States, and that the yacht since 1904 "had not been within the jurisdiction of the United States, but had had a permanent situs within the jurisdiction of the Republic of France." The certificate then proceeds to state the facts as to ownership of other yachts in the United States in the exact words used in the answers in previous cases which we have this day decided, and upon which the want of due process of law was set up. Then the certificate declares the United States demurred to this answer, and that this demurrer was overruled, and the United States electing to plead no further, there was judgment rejecting its claim, and that error was then prosecuted to the circuit court of appeals by the United States. The seven questions propounded are the equivalent of the questions in the Goelet Cases, just decided [232 U. S. 293, ante, 610, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431], except there is no question asked concerning the power to tax under the statute in case of the permanent domicil of [302] the owner in a foreign country, which was the basis of the decision in the Goelet Cases because, as is shown by the certificate, there was no assertion or proof that there was a permanent foreign domicil of the owner in this case. So that the first question in this case concerns the liability of a citizen of the United States having a domicil therein, for a tax on a yacht owned and used during the taxing period outside of the United States, and is as follows: "I. Does the tax purporting to be imposed by § 37 of the act of Congress, approved August 5, 1909, apply to the use of a foreign-built yacht owned by a citizen of the United States, when such yacht, for a period of more than one year prior to September 1, 1909, and to the levy of such tax, was used wholly outside of the limits and territorial jurisdiction of the United States?" And if this question is answered in the affirmative, then the duty will arise of deciding whether, because of that aspect, the act is repugnant to the due process clause of the Constitution, since in determining the constitutionality of the act in the previous cases we were not called upon to decide whether the due process clause of the 5th Amendment operates to prevent the levy of such a tax.

The statute applies, since, under the construction we have given it, it clearly establishes three standards as the basis of the excise duty which it imposes; citizenship and domicil within the United States, control by ownership or charter of a foreign-built yacht within the terms of the statute, and its use by the owner during the taxing period. But it said that as in any event the use which the statute taxes is solely a use within the United States, therefore the statute does not embrace this case, since the finding establishes that the yacht whose use is here taxed was wholly used and located outside of the territorial limits of the United States. We fail, however, to find in the provisions of the statute any language which would justify our affixing to the word "use" the restricted sense upon which [303] the proposition is based. On the contrary, the use provided for in the statute is unqualified, is generic, and must be enforced in that sense if the statute is to be given its plain meaning. It is true that in deciding a previous case we held that the statute would not be construed without clear intendment manifested to that effect as including a tax on a citizen permanently domiciled outside of the geographical limits of the United States. But that ruling was based upon the proposition that as a taxing statute was usually confined to persons within the territorial jurisdiction of a taxing authority, and to do otherwise would be exceptional, unless such view was compelled by its terms, the statute here involved ought not to be construed as having been adopted to accomplish such unusual and strange result. The directly opposite is here applicable, since it is usual, where the taxing power is called into play as to an individual domiciled within the territorial limits of the taxing authority, to cause the manifestation of taxing power to be coterminous with the taxing authority of the government levying the tax. Therefore it follows that the principle of interpretation previously applied has no possible application to the construction of the word "use," which we are now considering. The difference between the two rules is that which must exist between not assuming in the one case that something exceptional has been done, and taking for granted in the other that a power expressed embraces that which is usual and incidental to its exertion. The argument that the statute should not be construed as applying to the use of a yacht wholly beyond the territorial limits of the United States, since if so interpreted it would be repugnant to the Constitution, rests upon what in effect is a misconception of the elementary rule of interpretation that where there are two possible constructions of a statute, one of which will give rise to grave doubt as to its constitutionality, and the other avoids such question, the latter will be adopted. [304] The foundation of this rule is the possibility of two constructions, and the existence of the grave doubt as to constitutionality. To apply the rule in a case like this, where neither of such conditions exists, would be to cause an imaginary doubt as to the constitutionality of a statute to render it necessary to give to the statute a wholly fictitious and unauthorized meaning; that is to say, the effect of adopting the contention would be but to declare that in every case where the construction of a statute was in issue its misconstruction would become necessary if only it was asserted that, if rightly construed, repugnancy to the Constitution would result. We come, then, to consider the contention that when the statute is correctly interpreted there will arise a conflict between its provisions and the safeguards of the Constitution, not only for the purpose of demonstrating the unsoundness of the assertion of constitutional right, but also with the object of making it clear that even if the statute were susceptible of a different construction by resort to subtlety of reasoning or refinement of distinction, there is nothing of such gravity in the asserted constitutional question as to lead us to resort to such means in order to avoid giving to the statute the meaning which we have affixed to it, resulting from its unambiguous text.

Digitized by Google

As not even an intimation is made in the argument that any limitation on the taxing power of Congress in this regard can be deduced from the provisions of the Constitution concerning the taxing authority, and as the only limiting provision relied upon is the due process clause of the 5th Amendment, it follows in this case, as it did in the Billings Case [232 U. S. 261, ante, 596, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 421], that, after all, the assertion of want of power must rest upon the assumption that an attempt by the United States to tax the property of a citizen residing within its jurisdiction, where such property is beyond the territorial limits of the United States, is so in conflict with obvious principles of justice, and so inconsistent with [305] every conception of representative and free government, as to cause the exertion of power to come within the limitations of the due process clause of the 5th Amendment. We might well leave the answer to the contention when it is thus rightly understood to result from its mere statement, from the obvious misconceptions as to the nature and extent of the authority of a sovereign although it be a representative government, and from a true appreciation of the privileges as well as the duties arising from citizenship, and the past and recent exertions by Congress of the very taxing authority which is now challenged. (See act of June 30, 1864, 13 Stat. at L. 281, chap. 173.) We do not, however, leave the contentions to be destroyed by their own weakness, but come briefly to consider the authorities which it is insisted maintain their correctness, and to point out the error of the reasoning upon which their asserted applicability is based. We do not cite or review the cases relied on because we concede that the doctrine which it is asserted they decided is elementary, and in fact is the settled rule in this court. The principle of the cases is thus stated in the argument: "It is a settled rule of constitutional law that the power to tax depends upon jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the tax. A long line of unbroken authority illustrates this firmly established doctrine in its various aspects, and although the cases have all arisen under state tax laws, their reasoning is applicable to and controlling in the case of a Federal tax act." But the misapprehension consists not in a misconception as to what the cases relied on decided, but in taking for granted that because the doctrine stated has been applied and enforced in many decisions with respect to the taxing power of the states, that the same principle is applicable to and controlling as to the United States in the exercise of its powers. The confusion results from not observing that the rule applied in the cases relied upon to many forms of exertion of state taxing power is based on [306] the limitations on state authority to tax resulting from the distribution of powers ordained by the Constitution. In other words, the whole argument proceeds upon the mistaken supposition, which is sometimes indulged in, that the calling into being of the government under the Constitution had the effect of destroying obvious powers of government instead of preserving and distributing such powers. The application to the states of the rule of due process relied upon comes from the fact that their spheres of activity are enforced and protected by the Constitution, and therefore it is impossible for one state to reach out and tax property in another without violating the Constitution, for where the power of the one ends the authority of the other begins. But this has no application to the government of the United States so far as its admitted taxing power is concerned. It is coextensive with the limits of the United States; it knows no restriction except where one is expressed in or arises from the Constitution, and therefore embraces all the attributes which appertain to sovereignty in the fullest sense. Indeed, the existence of such a wide power is the essential resultant of the limitation restricting the states within their allotted spheres, for if it were not so, then government in the plenary and usual acceptation of that word would have no existence. Because the limitations of the Constitution are barriers bordering the states and preventing them from transcending the limits of their authority, and thus destroying the rights of other states, and at the same time saving their rights from destruction by the other states, in other words, of maintaining and preserving the rights of all the states, affords no ground for constructing an imaginary constitutional barrier around the exterior confines of the United States for the purpose of shutting that government off from the exertion of powers which inherently belong to it by virtue of its sovereignty. But it is said in the decided cases relied upon, the principle which was announced [307] was that the power to tax was limited by the capacity of the taxing government to afford that benefit and protection which is the true basis of the right to tax, and which causes, therefore, taxation, where such capacity to confer benefit and afford protection does not exist, to be a mere arbitrary and unwarranted burden. But here again the confusion of thought consists in mistaking the scope and extent of the sovereign power of the United States as a nation, and its relation to its citizens, and their relations to it. It presumes that government does not, by its very nature, benefit the citizen and his property wherever found. Indeed, the argument, while holding on to citizenship, belittles and destroys its advantages and blessings by denying the possession by government of an essential power required to make cittizenship completely beneficial.

Digitized by Google

Concluding from what we have just said that the first question must be answered in the affirmative, it follows from the considerations just stated and the views which we have expressed in the previous cases as to the operation and constitutionality of the act in other respects, that the remaining questions must be answered as follows: The second, Yes; the third, Yes, the whole tax; the fourth, Yes; the fifth, Yes; the sixth, No; the seventh, relating to interest, Yes.

[308] As by these answers the right to impose and collect the tax under the facts stated will be established, in view of what we shall say in a case between the same parties which follows this we think it proper, to observe that nothing in our reply to these questions is to be so construed as to deprive the court below of the power to take such steps as it may deem necessary to avoid injustice if it should be deemed that by some mistake of fact such a result might occur. The answers to the questions will be certified in accordance with the directions above given.

And it is so ordered.

UNITED STATES
v.
JAMES GORDON BENNETT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 308-310.)

This case is governed by the decision in United States v. Goelet, ante, 610.

[No. 630.]

Argued January 6 and 7, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit presenting, inter alia, the question whether the excise on the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts may be collected from an owner permanently domiciled in another country. Answered in the negative. Other questions unanswered.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Digitized by Google

Assistant Attorney General Adkins argued the cause, and, with Mr. Karl W. Kirchwey, filed a brief for the United States.

Mr. William D. Guthrie argued the cause and filed a brief for James Gordon Bennett.

For contentions of counsel see their briefs as reported in Billings v. United States, ante, 596.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The certificate discloses that this case involves the right of the United States to recover an excise duty levied under § 37 of the tariff act of 1909 [36 Stat. at L. 112, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1197], which became due on the 1st of September, 1910, on the same yacht which was the subject of the duty becoming due in 1909, and which we have passed upon in the case just decided. All the statements as to the complaint and answer, the submission of the case by stipulation to the court without a jury, the judgment rejecting the claim of the United States, and the prosecution of error from the court below, are in substance like those stated in the case concerning the tax for 1910 between the United States and Goelet, this day decided [232 U. S. 293, ante, 610, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431]. As the result of this situation the certificate recites, differing in that respect from the Bennett Case just previously decided [232 U. S. 299, ante, 612, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433], the trial court made the following finding: "Defendant is a citizen of the United States, and for some years past has been domiciled in and resident of the Republic of France."

Conformably to this finding the second question propounded by the court below in this case asks whether the act applies where the owner of the yacht, although a citizen, was permanently domiciled and residing in a foreign country for more than two years prior to September 1, 1910, [310] and to the levy of such tax. As for the reasons stated in the Goelet Case, such question was answered in the negative, it follows that a like reply must be made here, and therefore there is no need of replying to any of the other questions. In deciding the previous case between the same parties, we made a reservation concerning the power of the court below to deal with the former case in the future, because of the fact that the findings in this case are absolutely in conflict with the state of things exhibited in the previous Bennett Case. Our order will be, second question answered in the negative, and the other questions not answered.

And it will be so certified.

ROY A. RAINEY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES. (No. 74.)

UNITED STATES
v.
ROY A. RAINEY. (No. 627.)

ROY A. RAINEY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES. (No. 73.)

UNITED STATES
v.
ROY A. RAINEY. (No. 628.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 310–317.)

Debt — action in personam for tax.

1. An action in personam will lie against the owner for the recovery of the excise tax imposed by the act of August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. 112, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1197), § 37, upon the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts.

[For other cases, see Debt, II.; Judgment, II. b. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Internal revenue — excise on foreign-built yacht — when due.

2. The excise tax based on gross tonnage, which, under the tariff act of August 5, 1909, § 37, shall be levied and collected annually on the 1st day of September upon the use of every foreign-built pleasure yacht now or hereafter owned or chartered for more than six months by any citizen of the United States, became due on the 1st day of September following the passage of the act.

[Federal taxation, see Internal Revenue, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Internal revenue — excise on foreign-built yacht — charterer or owner.

3. The six months clause in the tariff act of August 5, 1909, § 37, imposing an annual excise tax to be levied and collected upon the use of every foreign-built pleasure yacht now or hereafter owned or chartered for more than six months by any citizen of the United States, applies only to charterers, not to owners.

[Federal taxation, see Internal Revenue, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law, generally,—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

Generally, on statutes part valid and part invalid—see notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. 1 L.R.A. 363, and Fayette County v. People's & D. Bank, 10 L.R.A. 196.

As to what are acts for raising revenue which must originate in the lower branch of the legislature—see note to Northern Counties Invest. Trust v. Sears, 35 L.R.A. 188.

Digitized by Google

Internal revenue — uniformity — excise tax.

4. The uniformity clause of U. S. Const. art. 1, § 8, is not violated by the excise tax based upon gross tonnage levied by the act of August 5, 1909, § 37, upon the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts owned by citizens of the United States because a like tax is not imposed upon the use of a domestic yacht under similar circumstances.

[For other cases, see Internal Revenue, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law —excise tax — discrimination.

5. The imposition of an excise tax based upon gross tonnage upon the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts owned by citizens of the United States without imposing a like tax upon the use of a domestic yacht under similar circumstances, as is done by the act of August 5, 1909, § 37, does not render that statute repugnant to the due process of law clause of the 5th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, as being so beyond the power of classification, abhorrent to the sense of justice, and so repugnant to the conceptions of free government as to be void even in the absence of express constitutional limitation.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 6, a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — when validity may be assailed — invalid in part.

6. The question of the possible invalidity of the ad valorem duty of 35 per cent prescribed by the act of August 5, 1909, § 37, as an optional alternative to the annual excise tax based upon gross tonnage imposed by that section upon the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts, will not be considered in an action for the recovery of the annual tonnage tax, since the provisions concerning the ad valorem tax are separable from those concerning the annual tax.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d, 3; I. d. 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Treaties — conflict with subsequent statute — vested rights.

7. The enforcement of the annual excise tax based upon gross tonnage imposed by the tariff act of August 5, 1909, § 37, upon the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts owned by citizens of the United States, even if destructive of rights vested in the owner by the treaty of July 3, 1815 (8 Stat. at L. 228), with Great Britain, does not for that reason deprive the owner of his property without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Treaties, 20-25, 73, 74; Constitutional Law, IV. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — validity — revenue bill — amendment by Senate.

8. The requirement of U. S. Const. art. 1, § 7, that revenue bills must originate in the House of Representatives, does not invalidate the provision of the tariff act of August 5, 1909, § 37, imposing an excise tax based on gross tonnage upon the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts, which was proposed by the Senate as an amendment,—the bill itself originating in the House of Representatives.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 74, 627, 73, and 628.]

Argued January 6 and 7, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

TWO WRITS OF ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment enforcing without interest a claim of the United States for an excise tax upon a foreign-built pleasure yacht. Modified by awarding interest, and as modified affirmed. Also

TWO CERTIFICATES from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, presenting the question of the right of the United States to recover interest on the amount of the tax. Unanswered.

See same case below, No. 74, 190 Fed. 359; and see 190 Fed. 372, for the decision below, in a consolidation of the present case, No. 73, with those of other parties named in that report.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. C. Andrade, Jr., argued the cause and filed a brief for Roy A. Rainey:

Statutes levying taxes or duties on subjects or citizens are to be construed most strongly against the government.

United States v. Wigglesworth, 2 Story, 369, Fed. Cas. No. 16,690; American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468, 35 L. ed. 821, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Benziger v. United States, 192 U. S. 38, 48 L. ed. 331, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189.

An act of Congress will always be construed prospectively if possible, and not retroactively.

United States v. Heth, 3 Cranch, 399, 2 L. ed. 479; Murray v. Gibson, 15 How. 421, 14 L. ed. 755; McEwen v. Den, 24 How. 242, 16 L. ed. 672; Harvey v. Tyler, 2 Wall. 328, 17 L. ed. 871; Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 21 L. ed. 737; Twenty Per Cent Cases, 20 Wall. 179, 22 L. ed. 339.

The 35 per cent duty is a direct tax, and void because not apportioned.

Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 158 U. S. 601, 39 L. ed. 1108, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912.

An excise tax is an indirect tax.

Hylton v. United States, 3 Dall. 171, 1 L. ed. 556.

Indirect taxes are subject to the requirement of territorial uniformity.

Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

"The use and enjoyment of property"

Digitized by Google

is practically an interchangeable term with "property" itself. Property is of value only as it is used and enjoyed.

Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. supra.

A legal exemption from a demand made by another is a vested right, which the legislature may not interfere with. Even an expressed purpose that an act shall have such retroactive effect is without avail.

Lewis v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 220 Pa. 323, 18 L.R.A.(N.S.) 279, 69 Atl. 821, 13 Ann. Cas. 1142; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 528.

Congress has no power to retroactively annul a treaty, if in so doing it destroys vested rights.

United States v. Reese, 5 Dill. 405, Fed. Cas. No. 16,137; Chew Heong v. United States, 112 U. S. 536, 28 L. ed. 770, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Hamilton, Madison & Jay, Federalist, No. 64.

The interpolation of § 37 was not an "amendment" by the Senate.

Re Pennsylvania Teleph. Co. 2 Chester, Co. Rep. 131; Warren v. Crosby, 24 Or. 558, 34 Pac. 661; State ex rel. Rice v. Smith, 35 Minn. 257, 28 N. W. 241; Story, Const. 4th ed. p. 622, note.

Assistant Attorney General Adkins argued the cause, and, with Mr. Karl W. Kirchwey, filed a brief for the United States.

For their contentions, see their brief as reported in Billings v. United States, ante, 596.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The first two of the foregoing cases relate to a tax becoming due on the 1st of September, 1909, and the other two to a tax becoming due on the 1st of September, 1910, the taxes in all cases having been levied, pursuant to § 37 of the tariff act of 1909 [36 Stat. at L. 112, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1197], on the British built yacht Cassandra, owned by the plaintiff in error. In these cases, as in those arising under the same act, which we have just decided, the certificates of the circuit court of appeals are here because of writs of error from that court prosecuted by the United States for the purpose of reviewing the action of the trial court in rejecting a demand for interest, and the two other cases are here on direct writ of error to the court below, to review its action in upholding the tax. In both the cases brought directly here, the pleadings of the government asserted the citizenship of the defendant, the use of the yacht during the taxing period, and the other statutory [314] essentials to fix liability. The answers not traversing citizenship, ownership, or use, set up the same defenses as were urged in the cases we have just decided, somewhat however, reiterated and changed in form of statement, and other defenses not made in the previous cases. In the first direct case, judgment was rendered in favor of the government for the tax by submission on bill and answer. In the second a like judgment was rendered, the case having been submitted by stipulation to the court without a jury; and in that case the finding of fact made by the court as to the use of the yacht is as follows: "During the period from the said 25th day of June, 1908, the date when the defendant purchased the said yacht, to the 1st day of September, 1910, the yacht was used by the defendant both in the waters of the United States and in the waters of foreign countries, as well as on the high seas; and in the year immediately preceding the first day of September, 1910, the said yacht was used by the defendant continuously in the waters of the United States, except for the period from June 20, 1910, to July 30, 1910, when she was used by the defendant on a cruise to the Gulf of St. Lawrence."

Separate assignments of error were made in the two cases which are here on direct review, and are referred to and discussed in the arguments at bar. They are all, in both cases, however, embraced in the ten separate propositions stated in the argument, and both cases will therefore be disposed of by briefly considering and deciding them. In doing so we shall bring the several assignments under common headings, for the purpose of avoiding repetition. First, that the court erred in holding there was authority to bring an action in personam against the owner for the recovery of the tax. This is disposed of by the reasoning adopted in the Billings Case [232 U. S. 261, ante, 596, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 421], in passing on the question of liability for interest. Second, that error was committed in holding the first instalment of [315] the tax was due in September, 1909, and in deciding that the six months' clause, under the section in question, "applied only to the charterer, and did not apply to the owner of a foreign-built yacht." Third, that error was committed in deciding that the tax did not violate the due process clause of the 5th Amendment, and was not in conflict with the uniformity clause of article 1, § 8, of the Constitution. These grounds also are disposed of by the opinion in the Billings Case. Fourth, that error was committed in not deciding that § 37 of the act of 1909, "in so far as it lays a duty of 35 per cent ad valorem, is a direct tax and void because not apportioned, in contravention of article 1, § 2, and article 1, § 9, of the Constitution of the United States." This proposition is concerned with the second paragraph of the act in question, which gives a right to the owner of foreign-built yachts to commutation, as follows:

Digitized by Google

"In lieu of the annual tax above prescribed the owner of any foreign-built yacht, pleasure boat, or vessel above described may pay a duty of thirty-five per centum ad valorem thereon, and such yacht, pleasure boat or vessel shall thereupon be entitled to all the privileges and shall be subject to all the requirements prescribed by sections forty-two hundred and fourteen, forty-two hundred and fifteen, forty-two hundred and seventeen, and forty-two hundred and eighteen of the Revised Statutes U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2845-2847, and act amendatory thereto, in the same manner as if said yacht had been built in the United States, and shall be subject to tonnage duty and light money only in the same manner as if said yacht had been built in the United States."

We think the reasons given in the comprehensive opinion of the lower court in ruling adversely on this proposition are so conclusive that we adopt them and make them our own. The court said:

"The owner is not required to pay this duty. He is merely given the option to pay it. In its nature it would [316] seem to be a duty on imports, and such duties are not held to be direct taxes requiring apportionment. But it is unnecessary to pass upon this question. These actions are for the recovery of the annual tonnage tax, and the validity of the ad valorem tax is not involved. The provisions concerning that tax are separable from those concerning the annual tax. The one is not dependent upon the other, and there is no indication that Congress would not have adopted the one without the other. Under such conditions it is well settled that unconstitutional provisions may be separated from legal provisions, and effect be given to the latter." [190 Fed. 362.]

Fifth, that error was committed in not holding that enforcement of the tax "would destroy rights vested in the defendant under the British treaty of July 3d, 1815 [8 Stat. at L. 228]," and would for such reason "deprive the defendant of his property without due process of law." The court below adequately disposed of this contention upon reasons which we also approve and adopt.

The court said:

"The defendant does not claim to be a British subject, and it is by no means clear that he is entitled to invoke the protection of the treaty. But, however that may be, it is well settled that when a treaty is inconsistent with a subsequent act of Congress, the latter will prevail. Taylor v. Morton, 2 Curt. C. C. 454, Fed. Cas. No. 13,799; and see Whitney v. Robertson, 124 U. S. 190, 31 L. ed. 386, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Head Money Cases (Edye v. Robertson), 112 U. S. 580, 28 L. ed. 798, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Cherokee Tobacco (Boudinot v. United States), 11 Wall. 616, 20 L. ed. 227; Ropes v. Clinch, 8 Blatchf. 304, Fed. Cas. No. 12,041.

"Treaties are contracts between nations, and by the Constitution are made the law of the land. But the Constitution does not declare that the law so established shall never be altered or repealed by Congress. Good faith toward the other contracting nation might require Congress to refrain from making any change, but if it does act, its enactment becomes the controlling law in this country. The other nation may have ground for complaint, but [317] every person is bound to obey the law. And as a corollary it follows that no person acquires any vested right to the continued operation of a treaty."

Sixth, that error was committed in not deciding that § 37 of the act was void, "as it is a bill for raising revenue, and it originated in the Senate and not in the House of Representatives, in contravention to article 1, § 7, of the Constitution of the United States." Without intimating that there is judicial power, after an act of Congress has been duly promulgated, to inquire in which House it originated, for the purpose of determining its validity, and upon the assumption, for the sake of the argument, that such power may be invoked, again we think the court below disposed of the contention upon a ground entirely satisfactory, which we adopt and approve, the court saying:

"I am also satisfied that the section in question is not void as a bill for raising revenue originating in the Senate, and not in the House of Representatives. It appears that the section was proposed by the Senate as an amendment to a bill for raising revenue which originated in the House. That is sufficient. Having become an enrolled and duly authenticated act of Congress, it is not for this court to determine whether the amendment was or was not outside the purposes of the original bill."

Following the practice adopted in the cases previously decided, and treating, as we did in these cases, the United States as here on a cross writ of error complaining of the refusal to allow interest, it follows that the questions asked by the circuit court of appeals, covered by the certificates, need not be answered, and that the judgments of the court below in the cases on direct writ of error in so far as they rejected the claim of interest will be modified to the extent necessary to allow such claim, and in other respects will be affirmed. Therefore our order will be, modified and affirmed.

Digitized by Google

---

[318] BENJAMIN F. HARRISON, Secretary of State of the State of Oklahoma, Appt.,

v.

ST. LOUIS & SAN FRANCISCO RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 318-334.)

Removal of causes — restriction of right by state — foreign interstate carrier.

1. The right of a foreign interstate railway carrier doing business in Oklahoma to remove to a Federal court a suit brought against it in an Oklahoma court by a citizen and resident of that state is unconstitutionally abridged by the provisions of Okla. act of May 26, 1908, for the immediate revocation of the license or charter to do business within the state of every person, firm, or corporation who shall assert in any court of that state a domicil within another state or foreign country, and for the punishment by extraordinary penalties of the doing of business within the state after the license or charter shall have been so revoked.

[For other cases, see Removal of Causes, II. a; Corporations, XII. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

States — immunity from suit — suit against officers.

2. A suit to enjoin state officers from violating, under the sanction of a state statute, the constitutional rights of the complainant, is not a suit against the state.

[For other cases, see States, IX. c, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — invalid in part.

3. The unconstitutionality of the attempt to prevent access to the Federal courts, made by the provisions of Okla. act of May 26, 1908, for the immediate revocation of the license or charter to do business within the state of every person, firm, or corporation who shall assert in any court of that state a domicil within another state or foreign country, and for the punishment by extraordinary penalties of the doing of business within the state after the license or charter shall have been so revoked, renders invalid also that part of the statute which imposes a local citizenship and domicil upon every person, firm, or corporation doing business within the state.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Pleading — striking out — matters irrelevant to issues.

4. Averments challenging the foreign citizenship of a corporation are properly stricken from the answer in a suit brought by such corporation in a Federal court to enjoin state officials from enforcing a forfeiture of its right to do business in the state because of its assertion of a right to remove an action against it from a state court to a Federal court, since such matters are properly cognizable only where presented in an appropriate manner and at the proper time to the Federal tribunal, which has a right to pass upon them when considering the propriety of the removal which is prayed.

[For other cases, see Pleading, I. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 34.]

Submitted November 4, 1913. Decided February 24, 1914.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Oklahoma to review a decree enjoining state officials from enforcing a forfeiture of the right of a foreign corporation to do business in the state, incurred by its assertion of the right to remove an action against it from a state to a Federal court. Affirmed.

See same case below, 171 Fed. 480.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice White:

The St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company, a corporation chartered under the laws of Missouri, and a citizen and resident of that state, owned, controlled, or operated, for the purpose of interstate and intrastate commerce, many hundreds of miles of railway in Oklahoma, and extending into adjoining states and beyond. These lines existed and were operated by the company; some, it may be, before the territory of Oklahoma was organized, and most, if not all, before Oklahoma was endowed with statehood. The lines composing the system originated in various charters, some enacted by Congress, accompanied with

---

NOTE.—On recognition or exclusion of foreign corporation—see note to Cone Export & Commission Co. v. Poole, 24 L.R.A. 289.

On revocation of corporate license for removal of cause to Federal court—see note to Prewitt v. Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1019.

On suits against state officers as suits against state—see notes to Sanders v. Saxton, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 727; Ex parte Young, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Burr, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 189; and Beers v. Arkansas, 15 L. ed. U. S. 991.

On suits against Federal officers or agents as suits against United States—see note to Louisiana v. Garfield, 53 L. ed. U. S. 92.

Generally, on statutes part valid and part invalid—see notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. 1 L.R.A. 363, and Fayette County v. People's & D. Bank, 10 L.R.A. 196.

Digitized by Google

grant of land, and others by territorial grant. The unified system resulted from foreclosures, consolidations, etc. In 1908 the company was sued by a citizen and resident of Oklahoma, in a court of that state. On the ground of diversity of citizenship a petition and bond in due form and seasonable time were filed by the company for removal to the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Oklahoma. What action was taken by the state court does not appear, but presumably the petition was denied,—the following document having been issued by the secretary of state:

[320] State of Oklahoma.

Revocation of Charter of St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company in Oklahoma.

Guthrie, Oklahoma, August 29th, 1908.

In the District Court.

Gertrude Goode, Administratrix of the Estate of Frank R. Goode, Deceased, Plaintiff, vs.

St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company, a Corporation, Defendant.

Petition for Removal and to the Circuit Court of the United States.

State of Oklahoma,
Comanche County:

Having received due and legal notice from J. T. Johnson, judge of the district court of Comanche county, that the above-named corporation defendant, St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company, has filed a petition for removal to the United States court, a certified copy of which is on record in the office of the secretary of state at the Capitol in the city of Guthrie, in the state of Oklahoma.

Therefore, I, Leo Meyer, assistant secretary of state and now acting secretary of state of the state of Oklahoma, by authority invested in me under § 4 of house bill No. 131, approved by the governor of the state of Oklahoma, C. N. Haskell, May 26th, 1908, do hereby declare the license of the said St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company to transact business in the state of Oklahoma forfeited and revoked.

In testimony whereof, I have set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the state.

Done at the city of Guthrie this 29th day of August, A. D., 1908.

[Seal.] Leo Meyer,
Acting Secretary of State.

[321] Thereupon the suit which is now before us was commenced by the railroad company against the secretary of state and his assistant, seeking to enjoin them from giving effect to the certificate, or in any way disturbing or interfering with the company in carrying on business in the state. With much amplitude of statement the source and history of the title of the various railroads forming part of the complainant's system in Oklahoma were enumerated. In addition to asserting that rights secured to the corporation by the state Constitution had been denied by the action complained of, violations of the Constitution of the United States were specifically asserted on the following grounds: First, because the state law under which the secretary of state had purported to act, and the action taken thereunder, constituted an unwarranted interference on the part of the state and its officers with the judicial power of the United States; second, because the attempt to exclude the company from the state, and prevent it from doing business therein, under the circumstances stated, was repugnant to the commerce clause of the Constitution, the due process clause of the 14th Amendment, and the contract clause, the latter being based on the assertion that the congressional and legislative acts by which the roads forming part of the system of the company had been incorporated constituted contracts giving a right to do business in Oklahoma which that state had no power to impair. The court allowed a restraining order. The bill was demurred to on the ground of want of jurisdiction and want of equity. The demurrer was overruled. The court, in an elaborate opinion, expounded its reasons for so doing, holding that it had jurisdiction because of diversity of citizenship, the complainant being a citizen of Missouri, and the defendants, citizens and residents of Oklahoma. In reaching this conclusion, the court analyzed the various transactions, foreclosure, and consolidations, etc., by which the railroad company had acquired the lines [322] composing its system, and held that there was nothing in any of them which destroyed the Missouri citizenship of the complainant. It moreover held in any event there was ample ground for jurisdiction because of the constitutional rights asserted.

As to the alleged want of equity in the bill, the court, after stating that the obvious purpose of the legislation under which the secretary of state had acted as deduced from its text, was to prevent the removal of causes from the state to a court of the United States, declared that the defendant in argument had so conceded. It was decided that the state was without authority to legislate to that effect, and therefore the law in question and the action of the secretary of state taken under it were void because of repugnancy to the Constitution of the United States. The answer, which was then filed, admitted the incorporation of the complainant in Missouri, and the citizenship in Oklahoma of the defendants, as well as the jurisdictional amount. The allegations of the complaint as to interference with the authority of the courts of the United States as to the commerce and contract clauses of the Constitution and the due process and equal protection clauses of the 14th Amendment were sought to be traversed by copious averments concerning the subject. Finally it was asserted, 1, that the Missouri corporation was never authorized to acquire any railroad in either the Indian or Oklahoma territory, and it therefore had no standing to assert as a Missouri corporation, its ownership and control of such roads as a basis for removal; 2, that in forming the line or lines of railway which constituted its system, the complainant had consolidated parallel and competing roads, in violation of the anti-trust laws of the territory and of the state of Oklahoma, as well as the law of the United States, and therefore the corporation was not in a position to assert its Missouri citizenship; and 3, that the acquisition by the complainant of various [323] roads forming parts of its system, which were covered by charters granted by Congress or by Oklahoma territory, was in conflict with such charters, and for this reason, moreover, the corporation could not be heard to assert its Missouri citizenship. An exception of the complainant to the relevancy of the three grounds just stated was maintained, and they were stricken from the answer. By agreement between the parties, the present appellant, the successor in office as secretary of state, was substituted as defendant. Thereupon, the case having been submitted to the court on bill and answer, a decree was entered perpetually enjoining the secretary of state from giving effect to the order of revocation, or interfering with or disturbing the complainant in the transaction of its business in the state. It was expressly decreed that the act of the legislature of Oklahoma upon which the action of the secretary of state was taken was void and unenforceable because of its repugnancy to the Constitution of the United States. This appeal was then taken.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Charles West, Attorney General of Oklahoma, and Mr. Ben F. Harrison, submitted the cause for appellant:

The best reason for believing the act did not intend to hinder the Federal courts is because it must necessarily fail to accomplish that purpose.

Southern R. Co. v. Allison, 190 U. S. 330, 47 L. ed. 1080, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 713.

It will be claimed that the Oklahoma act is within the reasoning of Herndon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 135, 54 L. ed. 970, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 216 U. S. 400, 54 L. ed. 536, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, 19 Ann. Cas. 1247; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

In all of those cases the statute was held to be either a direct interference with interstate commerce, or else to discriminate against companies doing interstate commerce, and in each instance was held to violate the obligation of a contract. It will be noticed that the other acts operated upon foreign corporations differently than upon the domestic corporations, and thus caused a discrimination against the foreign corporations engaged in interstate commerce. The Oklahoma act works no such discrimination, and therefore is to be decided under the authority of Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, 202 U. S. 248, 50 L. ed. 1014, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619, 6 Ann. Cas. 317; Doyle v. Continental Ins. Co. 94 U. S. 535, 24 L. ed. 148; National Council v. State Council, 203 U. S. 163, 51 L. ed. 137, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 46.

As far as jurisdiction in the Federal courts is concerned, there is an indisputable presumption of law that the citizenship of corporations is in the state which originally created them.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 40 L. ed. 802, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621.

But this does not in any way interfere with the requirement that corporations be domiciled in the state, or the prohibition against such corporations having two domicils, one in and one out of the state, and the requirement that residence should not be subject to change, and the provision that the effect of an attempt to migrate might be the forfeiture of the rights in this state.

Thomp. Corp. 493–495; Martine v. International L. Ins. Co. 53 N. Y. 339, 13 Am. Rep. 529; State ex rel. Safford v. Topeka Water Co. 59 Kan. 151, 52 Pac. 422; Aspinwall v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 20 Ind. 492, 83 Am. Dec. 329; State ex rel. Childs v. Park & N. Lumber Co. 58 Minn. 330, 49 Am. St. Rep. 516, 59 N. W. 1048; Simmons v. Norfolk & B. S. B. Co. 113 N. C. 147, 22 L.R.A. 677, 37 Am. St. Rep. 614, 18 S. E. 117; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Milwaukee, L. S. & W. R. Co. 45 Wis. 579; Com. ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Pittsburg & C. R. Co. 58 Pa. 26; North & South Rolling Stock Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 234, 24 L.R.A. 462, 35 N. E. 608; State v. Southern P. R. Co. 24 Tex. 80;

Digitized by Google

People ex rel. Platt v. Oakland County Bank, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 282; Huylar v. Cragin Cattle Co. 40 N. J. Eq. 392, 2 Atl. 274.

The statute is not an interference with interstate commerce.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 45; 44 L. ed. 664, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 512, 518, 46 L. ed. 304, 306, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95.

Messrs. W. F. Evans and E. T. Miller submitted the cause for appellee:

The evident purpose of the Oklahoma act of 1908 is to prevent foreign corporations doing business in Oklahoma from invoking jurisdiction of the Federal courts in that state. If such be the purpose of the act, it is ineffectual to that end.

Buck Stove & Range Co. v. Vickers, 226 U. S. 205, 57 L. ed. 189, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; Herndon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 135, 54 L. ed. 970, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 40 L. ed. 802, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 216 U. S. 400, 54 L. ed. 536, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, 19 Ann. Cas. 1247; Southern P. Co. v. Denton, 146 U. S. 202, 36 L. ed. 943, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Southern R. Co. v. Allison, 190 U. S. 326, 47 L. ed. 1078, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 713; International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

The statute in question is void because it is an indirect interference with, and imposes a direct burden upon, interstate commerce.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Wharton, 207 U. S. 328, 52 L. ed. 230, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; Buck Stove & Range Co. v. Vickers, 226 U. S. 205, 57 L. ed. 189, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; I. M. Darnell & Son Co. v. Memphis, 208 U. S. 113, 52 L. ed. 413, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Heyman v. Southern R. Co. 203 U. S. 270, 51 L. ed. 178, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104, 7 Ann. Cas. 1130; Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 51 L. ed. 295, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

Mr. Chief Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

We have stated the case only to the extent necessary to make clear the questions essential to be decided.

The assignments of error in general terms assail the overruling of the demurrer, the striking of matter from the answer, and the final decree. The propositions, however, which are urged at bar to sustain these general assignments, are numerous and we think in some aspects redundant. To consider them in the order in which they are urged would, besides giving rise to repetition, tend to produce confusion. We hence disregard the mere order in which they are stated in the argument, and come to consider the fundamental propositions necessary to be taken [328] into view in order to determine whether the court below was right in holding that the law under which the secretary of state acted, as well as the action of that officer, was void because inconsistent with the judicial power of the United States, reserving until that is done such separate consideration of the propositions relied on as we may deem it necessary to make.

It may not be doubted that the judicial power of the United States as created by the Constitution and provided for by Congress pursuant to its constitutional authority is a power wholly independent of state action, and which therefore the several states may not by any exertion of authority in any form, directly or indirectly, destroy, abridge, limit, or render ineffacious. The doctrine is so elementary as to require no citation of authority to sustain it. Indeeed, it stands out so plainly as one of the essential and fundamental conceptions upon which our constitutional system rests, and the lines which define it are so broad and so obvious, that, unlike some of the other powers delegated by the Constitution, where the lines of distinction are less clearly defined, the attempts to transgress or forget them have been so infrequent as to call for few occasions for their statement and application. However, though infrequent, occasions have not been wanting, especially on the subject of the removal of causes with which we are now dealing, where the general principle has been expounded and applied so as to cause the subject, even from the mere point of view of authority, to be beyond the domain of all possible controversy.

See for general question, Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 391, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1021,

Digitized by Google

4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Hess v. Reynolds, 113 U. S. 73, 77, 28 L. ed. 927, 928, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377; Madisonville Traction Co. v. St. Bernard Min. Co. 196 U. S. 239, 252, 49 L. ed. 462, 467, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251, and on subject of removal, Southern P. Co. v. Denton, 146 U. S. 202, 36 L. ed. 942, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 40 L. ed. 802, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; [329] Southern R. Co. v. Allison, 190 U. S. 326, 47 L. ed. 1078, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 713; Herndon v. Chicago R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 135, 54 L. ed. 970, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633.

With this general principle in hand let us come to fix one or more of the essentials of the right to remove as a prelude to testing the assailed statute and the action taken under it. In the first place, the right, unrestrained and unpenalized by state action, on compliance with the forms required by the law of the United States, to ask the removal of a cause pending in a state to a United States court, is obviously of the very essence of the right to remove conferred by the law of the United States. In the second place, as the right given to remove by the United States law is paramount, it results that it is also of the essence of the right to remove, that when an issue of whether a prayer for removal was rightfully asked arises, a Federal question results which is determinable by the courts of the United States free from limitation or interference arising from an exertion of state power. In the third place, as the right freely exists to seek removal unchecked or unburdened by state authority, and the duty to determine the adequacy of a prayed removal is a Federal, and not a state, question, it follows that the states are, in the nature of things, without authority to penalize or punish one who has sought to avail himself of the Federal right of removal on the ground that the removal asked was unauthorized or illegal. Let us come, then, to the text of the statute, with the object of determining its constitutionality.

Its 1st section provides "that the domicil of every person, firm, or corporation conducting a business in person, by agent, through an office, or otherwise transacting business within the state of Oklahoma, and which has complied with or may comply with the Constitution and laws of the state of Oklahoma, shall be for all purposes deemed and held to be the state of Oklahoma." The 2d section provides for the immediate revocation of "the license or charter to do business within the state of [330] Oklahoma of every person, firm, or corporation conducting a business in person, by agent, through an office, or otherwise transacting business within said state of Oklahoma, who shall claim or declare in writing before any court of law or equity within said state of Oklahoma, domicil within another state or foreign country." [Okla. Laws of May 26, 1908.] The 3d section makes it the duty of the judge of any court before which any claim of foreign domicil is made within the contemplation of the 2d section to at once make report of the fact to the secretary of state, and to transmit to that officer a copy of the claim; and the 4th section imposes on the secretary of state the duty immediately, on the receipt of such report and copy of the declaration, to "declare the license or charter of any person, firm, or corporation so filing said claim or declaration forfeited and revoked;" and the 5th causes it to be a misdemeanor subjecting to a penalty of not less than one thousand nor more than five thousand dollars each day or part of day, for any person whose license or charter is revoked, to do business in Oklahoma in conflict with the prohibitions of the statute.

While the provisions of the statute are dependent one upon the other, and are unified in the sense that they all are components of a common purpose, that is, tend to the realization of one and the same legislative intent, its provisions, nevertheless, for the purpose of analysis, are plainly twofold in character; that is, one, the compulsory citizenship and domicil within the state which the 1st section imposes, and the other, the prohibition which the statute pronounces against any assertion in a court of the existence of any other citizenship and domicil than that which the statute ordains, and the means and penalties provided for sanctioning such prohibition. Although theoretically, the first would seem to be the more primary and fundamental of the two, since the second, after all, consists but of methods provided for making the first [331] operative, the second, from the point of view we are examining, is the primal consideration, since it directly deals with the assertion in a state court of a right to remove, and provides the mechanism which was deemed to be effectual to render the assertion of such right impossible. In other words, the difference between its two provisions is that which exists between an attempt on the one hand to render the enjoyment of a Federal right impossible by arbitrarily creating a fictitious legal status incompatible with the existence of the right, and on the other hand the formulation of such prohibitions and the establishment of such penalties against the attempt to avail of the Federal right as to cause it to be impossible to assert it.

Digitized by Google

Coming, then, to consider the statute from the second or latter point of view, we think it is clear that it plainly and obviously forbids a resort to the Federal courts on the ground of diversity of citizenship in the contingency contemplated, punishes by extraordinary penalties any assertion of a right to remove under the laws of the United States, and attempts to divest the Federal courts of their power to determine, if issue arises on the subject, whether there is a right to remove. Indeed, the statute goes much further, since, when an application to remove is made, in order to prevent a judicial consideration of its merits even by the state court, it in effect commands the judge of such court, on the making of the application, to refuse the same, and to certify the fact that it was made to a state executive officer to the end that such officer should, without judicial action, strip the petitioning corporation of its right to do business, besides subjecting it to penalties of the most destructive character as a means of compelling acquiescence. When the nature of the statute is thus properly appreciated, nothing need be further said to manifest its obvious repugnancy to the Constitution, or to demonstrate the correctness of the decree of the court below.

The conclusion just stated leaves us only the duty of [332] separately and briefly referring to some of the propositions pressed in argument; (a) the contention that because the object of the suit was to enjoin state officers from violating the constitutional rights of the complainant, it was therefore a suit against the state, and not maintainable, is so plainly in conflict with the settled doctrine to the contrary that we do not further notice it. (b) The contention so much insisted upon, that the act should not be declared unconstitutional because it does not discriminate, we assume refers to the provision of the statute creating an arbitrary standard of state citizenship and domicil; but, as we see no possibility of separating that provision from the unconstitutional attempt to prevent access to the courts of the United States, there is no occasion to further deal with the subject of discrimination. If, however, we were to separately consider it, at once it is to be observed that the contention proceeds upon a self-evident misconception, which is this: that if only wrong be indiscriminately done, it becomes rightful. (c) The proposition that the constitutionality of the statute and the action taken under it is supported by the decisions in Doyle v. Continental Ins. Co. 94 U. S. 535, 24 L. ed. 148, and Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, 202 U. S. 248, 50 L. ed. 1014, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619, 6 Ann. Cas. 317, is, we think plainly unfounded. Those cases involved state legislation as to a subject over which there was complete state authority; that is, the exclusion from the state of a corporation which was so organized that it had no authority to do anything but a purely intrastate business, and the decisions rested upon the want of power to deprive a state of its right to deal with a subject which was in its complete control, even though an unlawful motive might have impelled the state to exert its lawful power. But that the application of those cases to a situation where complete power in a state over the subject dealt with does not exist has since been so repeatedly passed upon as to cause the question not to be open. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 [333] U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; Buck Stove & Range Co. v. Vickers, 226 U. S. 205, 57 L. ed. 189, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; and Herndon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 135, 54 L. ed. 970, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633. The grounds of the decision in the last case show the extremely narrow scope of the rulings in the Doyle and Prewitt Cases, and render their inapplicability to this case certain. Indeed, the ruling in the Herndon Case and in those subsequent to the Doyle and Prewitt Cases, most of which were reviewed in the Herndon Case, demonstrates that no authority is afforded by those two cases for the conception that it is within the power of a state in any form, directly or indirectly, to destroy or deprive of a right conferred by the Constitution and laws of the United States. (d) The matters which the court below ordered stricken from the answer were irrelevant to the issue for decision, even if it be conceded hypothetically that they had merit; because, under that assumption, they would have only been properly cognizable if presented in an appropriate manner and at the proper time to the Federal tribunal which had a right to pass upon them when considering the propriety of the removal which was prayed.

(e) We consider that the plain text of the statute, the meaning affixed to it by the state court when the application to remove was made, the subsequent action taken by the state officers, the character of the pleadings, the concession as stated by the court below, which was made in the argument, all leave no room for the contention that, at all events, the statute should be construed not as an attempt on the part of the state to prevent the removal of causes, but simply as an effort on the part of the state to exert reasonable control over corporations within its borders. The argument that the statute, if understood as we understand it, is so flagrantly repugnant to the Constitution as to suggest the impossibility of believing that it was enacted with that end in view, but repudiates, as we have seen, the action of the state court and of the [334] state officers under it, and the whole course of the trial, and comes at last to the contention that the more plainly an enactment violates the Constitution, the more urgent the duty of deciding that it does not do so.

Digitized by Google

Affirmed.

J. C. BACCUS, Plff. in Err.,
v.
STATE OF LOUISIANA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 334-338.)

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — sales by itinerant venders.

Prohibiting the sale by itinerant venders of "any drug, nostrum, ointment, or application of any kind intended for the treatment of disease or injury," as is done by La. Laws 1894, act No. 49, § 12, does not violate the equal protection or due process of law clauses of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, although the sale of such articles by other persons is permitted.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 5, d; IV. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 170.]

Argued and submitted January 19, 1914.
Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Third Judicial District Court of the Parish of Claiborne, State of Louisiana, to review a conviction of an itinerant vender for selling drugs or medicinal compounds. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice White:

This writ of error was directed to a district court of the state of Louisiana, as that court had jurisdiction, in last resort, over the conviction sought to be reviewed. The information upon which the conviction was based charged that the accused had, in violation of § 12 of act 49 of the Laws of Louisiana for 1894, illegally, as an itinerant vender or peddler, "sold drugs, ointments, nostrums, and applications intended for the treatment of diseases and deformity." A motion was made to quash on the following [335] grounds: First, because the statute upon which the charge was based provided for no offense; second, because if it did, the acts charged were not, generally speaking, within the statute, and especially were not embraced by its provisions because the sale of drugs or proprietary preparations put up in sealed packages with directions for use did not constitute the practice of medicine; third, because if the statute embraced, as asserted, the acts charged, it was in conflict with the state Constitution, since it permitted all persons to sell drugs, ointments, etc., except itinerant venders; fourth, because if the statute operated as contended for, it was repugnant to the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States "(a) because it prevents a citizen from pursuing a lawful vocation; (b) it denies to other citizens rights enjoyed by all others in the state, and . . . is class legislation in its effect, as it gives to the local dealer a monopoly in the sale of such drugs, etc., and deprives the itinerant vender or dealer of the privilege to sell such articles . . ." The motion to quash having been overruled, the case was submitted to the court without a jury, upon an agreed statement of facts to the following effect: 1st, "that the defendant was an itinerant vender of drugs, nostrums," etc., and as such had sold the articles "intended for the treatment of diseases, as alleged in the information." 2d, "that the drugs so sold by the defendant as an itinerant vender were compounded and prepared by the Rawleigh Medical Company of the state of Illinois, and that said remedies, drugs, nostrums, ointments, and applications were put up in sealed packages or bottles ready

---

NOTE.—On the right to discriminate between harmless articles, in legislation regulating peddlers—see notes to State v. Wright, 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 349 and People ex rel. Moskowitz v. Jenkins, 35 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1079.

As to validity of ordinance regulating conduct of licensed street hucksters or peddlers—see note to Shreveport v. Dantes, 8 L.R.A.(N.S.) 304.

On the validity of license tax on peddlers, so high as to be prohibitory in effect—see note to People use of State Bd. of Health v. Wilson, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1074.

On the validity of license or occupation tax on hawkers and peddlers and persons engaged in soliciting orders by sample or otherwise, as an exercise of the police power—see notes to State v. Bayer, 19 L.R.A. (N.S.) 301, and Dozier v. State, 28 L.R.A. (N.S.) 265.

On discrimination against nonresidents by statute or municipal ordinance imposing license or occupation tax—see note to State v. Williams, 40 L.R.A.(N.S.) 286.

Digitized by Google

for use, with printed directions on the packages or bottles, and that defendant was an itinerant vender of same in original packages and bottles, and prepared by the proprietors." 3d, "that all persons except itinerant venders have the right to sell said remedies; that is, patent and proprietary drugs, nostrums, ointments, and applications, intended for the cure [336] of diseases." By requests to charge which were overruled, and to which exceptions were reserved, the defenses based both upon the state and the United States Constitution, embodied in the motion to quash, were reiterated, and on conviction and sentence after an unsuccessful effort by certiorari to procure as an act of grace, a review of the case by the supreme court of the state, this writ of error was sued out.

Mr. Thomas D. O'Brien argued the cause, and, with Mr. John A. Barnes, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The validity of the statute must be determined by this court as it has been construed, interpreted, and applied by the district court in this particular case.

Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 347, 25 L. ed. 679, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 547; Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409, 42 L. ed. 215, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

The selling and distribution of drugs is a proper subject for regulation. They may be classed by themselves, and be the subject of special regulations. So also peddlers may be licensed, regulated, and controlled; but a statute which makes no attempt to protect the public by defining what drugs may be put upon the market, or defining the qualifications to be possessed by those authorized to sell and distribute such drugs, and which merely prohibits itinerant vending, neither protects the public health nor morals, and is an arbitrary classification of persons, which violates the 14th Amendment.

People use of State Bd. of Health v. Wilson, 249 Ill. 195, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1074, 94 N. E. 141; Com. v. Payne Medicine Co. 138 Ky. 164, 127 S. W. 760; State v. Donaldson, 41 Minn. 74, 42 N. W. 781.

The enforcement of the statute would unwarrantably deprive plaintiff in error of liberty.

Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 589, 41 L. ed. 832, 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636.

The business and occupation attempted to be prohibited is lawful.

Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; State v. Donaldson, 41 Minn. 81, 42 N. W. 781; Westervelt, Pure Food & Drug Laws; Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Noel v. People, 187 Ill. 587, 52 L.R.A. 287, 79 Am. St. Rep. 238, 58 N. E. 616; People use of State Bd. of Health v. Wilson, 249 Ill. 195, 35 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1074, 94 N. E. 141.

Whatever may be said as to how far courts may go in questioning the motives actuating legislation, the purpose and effect of a statute are always proper subjects for judicial investigation, and, if the purpose is plainly unlawful, and the statute will only effectuate that unlawful purpose, the court will refuse its sanction.

Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 23, 27 L. ed. 843, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City, L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; People use of State Bd. of Health v. Wilson, 249 Ill. 195, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1074, 94 N. E. 141; Noel v. People, 187 Ill. 587, 52 L.R.A. 287, 79 Am. St. Rep. 238, 58 N. E. 616; State v. Donaldson, 41 Minn. 74, 42 N. W. 781; Chicago v. Netcher, 183 Ill. 104, 48 L.R.A. 261, 75 Am. St. Rep. 93, 55 N. E. 707; Carrollton v. Bazzette, 159 Ill. 284, 31 L.R.A. 522, 42 N. E. 837; Price v. People, 193 Ill. 114, 55 L.R.A. 588, 86 Am. St. Rep. 306, 61 N. E. 844; Spiegler v. Chicago, 216 Ill. 114, 74 N. E. 718; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 312, 21 L.R.A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; State v. Scougal, 3 S. D. 55, 15 L.R.A. 477, 44 Am. St. Rep. 756, 51 N. W. 858; State ex rel. Wyatt v. Ashbrook, 154 Mo. 375, 48 L.R.A. 265, 77 Am. St. Rep. 765, 55 S.

Digitized by Google

W. 627; State v. Bayer, 34 Utah, 257, 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 297, 97 Pac. 129.

The Louisiana statute here called in question favors monopoly, and is against competition, and is against the declared policy of the Federal, as well as of every state, government.

National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, 197 U. S. 129, 49 L. ed. 694, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379.

And such statutes have been almost universally condemned as being arbitrary and unwarranted classifications of persons or things, interfering with individual liberty, and intended to benefit some favored class.

Williams v. State, 99 Ark. 149, 137 S. W. 927, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 1056; People use of State Bd. of Health v. Wilson, 249 Ill. 195, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1074, 94 N. E. 141; State v. Donaldson, 41 Minn. 74, 42 N. W. 781; Com. v. Payne Medicine Co. 138 Ky. 164, 127 S. W. 760; 1 Tiedeman, State & Federal Control of Persons & Property, 505.

Since under the Louisiana statute "all others" except "itinerant venders" are permitted to do the acts for the doing of which the plaintiff in error has been adjudged criminally liable, all that we have said as to the deprivation of liberty is equally applicable to our claim that he has been denied equal protection of the law; and this court, as well as many of the state courts, have held that this cannot be done.

Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 313, 21 L.R.A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; State ex rel. Wyatt v. Ashbrook, 154 Mo. 375, 48 L.R.A. 265, 77 Am. St. Rep. 765, 55 S. W. 627; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

The claim made by defendant in error that it is necessary, in the interest of the public health, to confine the sale of proprietary medicines to local dealers, is without force.

Noel v. People, 187 Ill. 593, 52 L.R.A. 287, 79 Am. St. Rep. 238, 58 N. E. 616; State v. Donaldson, 41 Minn. 74, 42 N. W. 781; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 97, 43 L. ed. 910, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

Mr. Ruffin G. Pleasant, Attorney General of Louisiana, submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. G. A. Gondran was on the brief:

The statute assailed has reference to the regulations of the practice of medicine by the itinerant venders therein mentioned, and they are to be treated as persons practising medicine, and not merely to be considered as mere sellers and venders.

State ex rel. Wynne v. Lee, 106 La. 400, 31 So. 14; People use of State Bd. of Health v. Blue Mountain Joe, 129 Ill. 370, 21 N. E. 923.

The construction of the statute by the supreme court of that state, while perhaps not conclusive upon this court, is one towards which the courts will lean.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 101, 43 L. ed. 911, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Marchant v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 153 U. S. 380, 38 L. ed. 751, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; Baltimore Traction Co. v. Baltimore Belt R. Co. 151 U. S. 137, 38 L. ed. 102, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 294; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 193 U. S. 53, 48 L. ed. 614, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Collins v. Texas, 223 U. S. 294, 56 L. ed. 443, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286.

Consideration must be given to the purpose of the legislature, and to the mischief intended to be guarded against; whether it is a fair and a reasonably valid exercise of the police power, or arbitrary and capricious, must be determined in the light of the object sought to be attained by the act.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. ¶¶ 370, 376, 456.

There is no vested right to practise the medical profession, free from supervision and regulation of the state.

Bradwell v. Illinois, 16 Wall. 130, 21 L. ed. 442; Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 42 L. ed. 1002, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; State v. Harrington, 68 Vt. 622, 34 L.R.A. 100, 35 Atl. 515.

There is no arbitrary violation or discrimination made by this statute.

Bachtel v. Wilson, 204 U. S. 36, 51 L. ed. 357, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243.

Mr. Chief Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

We accept the construction affixed by the court below to the statute, and upon which alone it could in reason have held that the acts charged were embraced by its provisions. We hence disregard an intimation made in the argument of the defendant in error, that the statute is susceptible of a different interpretation, and therefore that the claim of Federal right which was made below, and which was necessarily passed upon, need not be here considered. It is inconceivable that the statute should mean one thing for the purpose of determining whether the acts charged were within its terms, and should then be held to mean another, for the purpose of escaping the Federal question. Thus considering the case in its true aspect, the single issue to be decided is, Did the state have power, without violating the equal protection or due process of [338] law clause of the 14th Amendment, to forbid the sale by itinerant venders of "any drug, nostrum, ointment, or application of any kind, intended for the treatment of disease or injury," although allowing the sale of such articles by other persons? That it did have such authority is so clearly the result of a previous ruling of this court (Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 39 L. ed. 430, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367), or, at all events, is so persuasively made manifest by the authorities cited and the reasoning which sustained the ruling of the court in the case just stated, as to leave no room for controversy on the subject (pp. 306, 307). Moreover, the power which the state government possessed to classify and regulate itinerant venders or peddlers, exerted in the statute under consideration, is cumulatively sustained and made, if possible, more obviously lawful by the fact that the regulation in question deals with the selling by itinerant venders or peddlers of drugs or medicinal compounds,—objects plainly within the power of government to regulate.

Digitized by Google

Affirmed.

TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
RAILROAD COMMISSION OF LOUISIANA and the Individual Members Thereof.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 338, 339.)

Appeal — review of facts — concurrent findings.

Findings of fact concurred in by the two lower courts will not be disturbed by the Federal Supreme Court on appeal unless shown to be clearly erroneous.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. 1, 5, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 186.]

Argued and submitted January 23, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, dismissing the bill in a suit to restrain the enforcement of an order of the Louisiana Railroad Commission, fixing freight rates. Affirmed.

See same case below, 112 C. C. A. 538, 192 Fed. 280.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Thomas J. Freeman submitted the cause for appellant.

Mr. Wylie M. Barrow argued the cause, and, with Mr. Ruffin G. Pleasant, Attorney General of Louisiana, filed a brief for appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Appellant, a corporation organized under the laws of the United States, filed its bill in equity in the circuit court for the eastern district of Louisiana to restrain the enforcement of an order of the Louisiana Railroad Commission fixing rates for the carriage of cottonseed and its products, on the ground that the order exceeded the powers conferred upon the commission by the state law; indeed, was so unreasonably low as to be a violation of the due process clause of the state Constitution. After issue joined the testimony was heard by a special master, who found for complainant. The circuit court, on exceptions filed by respondents to the master's report, after reviewing the facts, gave judgment sustaining the exceptions, setting aside the report, and dismissing the bill on the ground that the evidence did not support the master's report,—in other words, that the complainant had failed to prove its case. On appeal to the circuit court of appeals the evidence was again reviewed, and the judgment affirmed. 112 C. C. A. 538, 192 Fed. 280. This appeal was then taken.

Both the courts below passed on the facts, and agreed in holding that appellant failed to establish by the evidence its right to the relief demanded, and the rule is well settled that findings of fact concurred in by two lower courts will not be disturbed by this court unless shown to be clearly erroneous. Chicago Junction R. Co. v. King, 222 U. S. 222, 56 L. ed. 173, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79; Dun v. Lumbermen's Credit Asso. 209 U. S. 20, 52 L. ed. 663, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335, 14 Ann. Cas. 501. As from an examination of the record we find no ground for concluding that there was plain error, the decree must be and is affirmed.

Affirmed.

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

Digitized by Google

[340] LEROY FIBRE COMPANY,
v.
CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE, & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 340-354.)

Trial — question for jury — contributory negligence.

1. No question for the jury as to whether the owner of flax straw which he lawfully stored on his own premises, and which was destroyed by fire caused by the negligent operation of a railway locomotive, was himself negligent, is presented by evidence that the railway company preceded the owner in the establishment of its business, that the property was inflammable in character, and that it was stored near the railway right of way and track.

[For other cases, see Trial, 398-417, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Railroads — negligent operation — fires — contributory negligence.

2. An owner who lawfully stores his property on his own premises adjacent to a railway right of way and track is not held to the exercise of reasonable care to protect it from fire set by negligence of the railway company, and not resulting from unavoidable accident, or the reasonably careful conduct of its business.

[For other cases, see Railroads, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Railroads — negligent operation — fires — contributory negligence.

3. The owner of property lawfully stored on private premises adjacent to a railway right of way and track discharges his full legal duty for its protection against fire set by the railway company's locomotives if he exercises that care which a reasonably prudent man would exercise under like circumstances to protect it from the dangers incident to the operation of a railway conducted with reasonable care.

[For other cases, see Railroads, VIII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 175.]

Submitted January 19, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, presenting questions as to the contributory negligence of the owner of property stored near a railway right of way which was destroyed by fire caused by the negligent operation of a locomotive. Answered by holding that there is no room for the application of the doctrine of contributory negligence.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

The following questions are certified:

"1. In an action at law by the owner of a natural product of the soil, such as flax straw, which he lawfully stored on his own premises, and which was destroyed by fire caused by the negligent operation of a locomotive engine, to recover the value thereof from the railroad company operating the engine, is it a question for the jury whether the owner was also negligent, without other evidence than [341] that the railroad company preceded the owner in the establishment of its business, that the property was inflammable in character, and that it was stored near the railroad right of way and track?

"2. Is it a question for the jury whether an owner who lawfully stores his property on his own premises adjacent to a railroad right of way and track is held to the exercise of reasonable care to protect it from fire set by the negligence of the railroad company, and not resulting from unavoidable accident or the reasonably careful conduct of its business?

"3. As respects liability for the destruction by fire of property lawfully held on private premises adjacent to a railroad right of way and track, does the owner discharge his full legal duty for its protection if he exercises that care which a reasonably prudent man would exercise under like circumstances to protect it from the dangers incident to the operation of the railroad, conducted with reasonable care?"

The LeRoy Fibre Company, plaintiff in error (we will refer to it as plaintiff), brought an action against defendant in error (referred to herein as defendant) in a state court of Minnesota to recover the value of certain flax straw alleged to have been negligently burned and destroyed by defendant. The cause was removed to the circuit court for the district of Minnesota, where it was tried. One of the grounds of negligence set forth was that a locomotive engine of defendant, while passing the premises of plaintiff, was so negligently managed and operated by defendant's employees that it emitted and threw sparks and coals of unusual size upon the stacks of flax straw, and thereby set fire to and destroyed them.

The evidence at the trial showed the following without dispute:

"Some years after defendant had constructed and commenced operating its line of railroad through Grand Meadow, Minnesota, the plaintiff established at [342] that village a factory for the manufacture of tow from flax straw. The plaintiff had adjacent to its factory premises, a tract of ground abutting upon the railroad right of way and approximately 250 by 400 feet in dimension, upon which it stored flax straw it purchased for use in its manufacturing business. There were about 230 stacks, arranged in two rows, parallel with the right of way. Each stack contained from 3 to 3½ tons of straw. The distance from the center of the railroad track to the fence along the line of the right of way was 50 feet, from the fence to the nearest row of stacks, 20 or 25 feet, and from the fence to the second row of stacks, about 35 feet. A wagon road ran between the fence and the first row. On April 2, 1907, during a high wind, a fire started upon one of the stacks in the second row, and as a result all were consumed. The fire did not reach the stack through the intervening growth or refuse, but first appeared on the side of the stack above the ground. The flax straw was inflammable in character. It was easily ignited and easily burned.

NOTE.—On the duty of owner of property adjoining railroad right of way to protect it from fires set by passing locomotive—see notes to Hawley v. Sumpter Valley R. Co. 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 526, and Brunner v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 49 L.R.A. (N.S.) 166.

Digitized by Google

"There was substantial evidence at the trial tending to show that the fire was started by a locomotive engine of defendant which had just passed, and that through the negligent operation of defendant's employees in charge, it emitted large quantities of sparks and live cinders, which were carried to the straw stack by a high wind then prevailing. It was contended at the trial by defendant, that plaintiff itself was negligent, and that its negligence contributed to the destruction of its property. There was no evidence that plaintiff was negligent save that it had placed its property of an inflammable character upon its own premises so near the railroad tracks, that is to say, the first row of stacks, 70 or 75 feet, and the second row, in which the fire started, about 85 feet from the center of the railroad track. In other words, the character of the property and its proximity [343] to an operated railroad, for which plaintiff was responsible, was the sole evidence of plaintiff's contributory negligence.

"The trial court charged the jury that though the destruction of the straw was caused by defendant's negligence, yet if the plaintiff, in placing and maintaining two rows of stacks of flax straw within a hundred feet of the center line of the railroad, failed to exercise that ordinary care to avoid danger of firing its straw from sparks from engines passing on the railroad that a person of ordinary prudence would have exercised, under like circumstances, and that the failure contributed to cause the accident, the plaintiff could not recover. The trial court also submitted two questions to the jury, as follows:

"1. Did the Fibre Company, in placing and keeping two rows of flax straw within 100 feet of the center line of the railroad, fail to use the care to avoid danger to its straw from sparks of fire from engines operating on that railroad, that a person of ordinary prudence would have used under like circumstances? 2. Did the engineer McDonald fail to use that degree of care to prevent sparks from his engine from firing the stacks as he passed them, on April 2, 1907, that a person of ordinary prudence would have used under like circumstances?

"The jury answered both questions in the affirmative and found a general verdict for the defendant. Judgment was accordingly entered for defendant. The plaintiff duly saved exceptions to the charge of the court regarding its contributory negligence and to the submission of the first question to the jury, and has assigned the action of the court as error."

Mr. John F. Fitzpatrick submitted the cause for the LeRoy Fibre Company. Messrs. Edward P. Sanborn and F. M. Catlin were on the brief:

Evidence that the railroad company preceded the owner in establishing its business, and that the property destroyed by its negligence was inflammable in character, but lawfully stored on the owner's own premises, near the right of way, is not evidence of negligence of the owner in such a case.

Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Richardson, 91 U. S. 454, 473, 23 L. ed. 356, 363; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. South Fork Coal Co. 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 533, 71 C. C. A. 316, 139 Fed. 530; Thomp. Neg. § 2314; Shearm. & Redf. Neg. § 680; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Medley, 75 Va. 499, 40 Am. Rep. 734; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Marbury Lumber Co. 125 Ala. 235, 50 L.R.A. 620, 28 So. 438; Patton v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 87 Mo. 117, 56 Am. Rep. 446; Kellogg v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 26 Wis. 223, 7 Am. Rep. 69; Salmon v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 38 N. J. L. 5, 20 Am. Rep. 356; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Richardson, 66 Ind. 43, 32 Am. Rep. 94; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Jones, 86 Ind. 496, 44 Am. Rep. 334; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Beeler, 126 Ky. 328, 11 L.R.A. (N.S.) 930, 128 Am. St. Rep. 291, 103 S. W. 300, 15 Ann. Cas. 913; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Scantland, 151 Ind. 488, 51 N. E. 1068; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Hendrickson, 80 Pa. 182, 21 Am. Rep. 97; Reed v. Missouri P. R. Co. 50 Mo. App. 504; Rutherford v. Texas & P. R. Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 61 S. W. 422, 9 Am. Neg. Rep. 620; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Fields, 2 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (Willson) 700; Kimball v. Borden, 97 Va. 477, 34 S. E. 45; Kalbfleisch v. Long Island R. Co. 102 N. Y. 520, 55 Am. Rep. 832, 7 N. E. 557; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Malone, 116 Ala. 600, 22 So. 897; 3 Elliott, Railroads, § 1228.

Digitized by Google

The doctrine of contributory negligence of the owner has no application.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Marbury Lumber Co. 125 Ala. 237, 50 L.R.A. 620, 28 So. 438; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Hendrickson, 80 Pa. 182, 21 Am. Rep. 97; 13 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 482; 2 Thomp. Neg. § 2314; Kendrick v. Towle, 60 Mich. 363, 1 Am. St. Rep. 526, 27 N. W. 567; Mississippi Home Ins. Co. v. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. 70 Miss. 119, 12 So. 156; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Beeler, 126 Ky. 328, 11 L.R.A.(N.S.) 930, 128 Am. St. Rep. 291, 103 S. W. 800, 15 Ann. Cas. 913.

In no event is there any duty resting upon the owner to protect his property from injury by the negligence of the railroad company.

Fero v. Buffalo & State Line R. Co. 22 N. Y. 209, 78 Am. Dec. 178; Cook v. Champlain Transp. Co. 1 Denio, 91.

The negligence of the railroad company is the proximate cause of the loss.

Reed v. Missouri P. R. Co. 50 Mo. App. 504; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 9 C. C. A. 314, 22 U. S. App. 102, 60 Fed. 996; Inland & Seaboard Coasting Co. v. Tolson, 139 U. S. 551, 558, 35 L. ed. 270, 272, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Mathews, 165 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 611, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Kendrick v. Towle, 60 Mich. 363, 1 Am. St. Rep. 526, 27 N. W. 567.

Mr. H. H. Field submitted the cause for the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul Railway Company. Mr. M. B. Webber was on the brief:

The gist of the authorities is that the mere fact that the owner leaves his land in its natural state, near or next to a railroad, does not charge him with contributory negligence. Neither is he prevented from making legitimate use of his property because near a railroad right of way; but where he affirmatively does some act which renders the situation more hazardous, and that act is one that a person of ordinary prudence and care would not have committed, he cannot recover; and the question as to whether or not his conduct is that of a person of ordinary care and prudence is a question of fact for a jury.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Johnson, 4 C. C. A. 447, 10 U. S. App. 629, 54 Fed. 474; Clark v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 64 C. C. A. 19, 129 Fed. 341; Shearm. & Redf. Neg. § 679; Murphy v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 45 Wis. 222, 30 Am. Rep. 721; Ward v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 29 Wis. 144; Collins v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 5 Hun, 499, 71 N. Y. 609; Niskern v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 22 Fed. 811; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Shanefelt, 47 Ill. 497, 95 Am. Dec. 504; Hoffman v. Milwaukee, M. & St. P. R. Co. 40 Minn. 60, 41 N. W. 301; Karsen v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 29 Minn. 12, 11 N. W. 122; Schell v. Second Nat. Bank, 14 Minn. 43, Gil. 34; Fero v. Buffalo & State Line R. Co. 22 N. Y. 209, 78 Am. Dec. 178; Omaha Fair & Exposition Asso. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 42 Neb. 105, 60 N. W. 330; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Larmon, 67 Ill. 68; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Pennell, 94 Ill. 448; Kansas City, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. v. Owen, 25 Kan. 419; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Brady, 17 Kan. 380; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Cornell, 30 Kan. 35, 1 Pac. 312; Great Western R. Co. v. Haworth, 39 Ill. 347; Kesee v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 30 Iowa, 78, 6 Am. Rep. 643; Garrett v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 36 Iowa, 121; Slossen v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 60 Iowa, 215, 14 N. W. 244; Bryant v. Central Vermont R. Co. 56 Vt. 710.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The questions certified present two facts —(1) The negligence of the railroad was the immediate cause of the destruction of the property. (2) The property was placed [349] by its owner near the right of way of the railroad, but on the owner's own land.

The query is made in the first two questions whether the latter fact constituted evidence of negligence of the owner, to be submitted to the jury. It will be observed, the use of the land was of itself a proper use,—it did not interfere with nor embarrass the rightful operation of the railroad. It is manifest, therefore, the questions certified, including the third question, are but phases of the broader one, whether one is limited in the use of one's property by its proximity to a railroad; or, to limit the proposition to the case under review, whether one is subject in its use to the careless as well as to the careful operation of the road. We might not doubt that an immediate answer in the negative should be given if it were not for the hesitation of the circuit court of appeals, evinced by its questions, and the decisions of some courts in the affirmative. That one's uses of his property may be subject to the servitude of the wrongful use by another of his property seems an anomaly. It upsets the presumptions of law, and takes from him the assumption, and the freedom which comes from the assumption, that the other will obey the law, not violate it. It casts upon him the duty of not only using his own property so as not to injure another, but so to use his own property that it may not be injured by the wrongs of another. How far can this subjection be carried? Or, confining the question to railroads, what limits shall be put upon their immunity from the result of their wrongful operation? In the case at bar, the property destroyed is described as inflammable, but there are degrees of that quality; and how wrongful must be the operation? In this case, large quantities of sparks and "live cinders" were emitted from the passing engine. Houses may be said to be inflammable, and may be, as they have been, set on fire by sparks and cinders from defective or carelessly handled locomotives. Are they to be subject as well as [350] stacks of flax straw, to such lawless operation? And is the use of farms also, the cultivation of which the building of the railroad has preceded? Or is that a use which the railroad must have anticipated, and to which it hence owes a duty, which it does not owe to other uses? And why? The question is especially pertinent and immediately shows that the rights of one man in the use of his property cannot be limited by the wrongs of another. The doctrine of contributory negligence is entirely out of place. Depart from the simple requirement of the law, that everyone must use his property so as not to injure others, and you pass to refinements and confusing considerations. There is no embarrassment in the principle even to the operation of a railroad. Such operation is a legitimate use of property; other property in its vicinity may suffer inconveniences and be subject to risks by it, but a risk from wrongful operation is not one of them.

Digitized by Google

The legal conception of property is of rights. When you attempt to limit them by wrongs, you venture a solecism. If you declare a right is subject to a wrong, you confound the meaning of both. It is difficult to deal with the opposing contention. There are some principles that have axiomatic character. The tangibility of property is in its uses, and that the uses by one owner of his property may be limited by the wrongful use of another owner of his is a contradiction. But let us pass from principle to authority.

Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Richardson, 91 U. S. 454, 23 L. ed. 356, was an action for damages for the destruction of a sawmill, lumber shed, and other buildings and manufactured lumber, by fire communicated by a locomotive engine of a railroad. Some of the buildings were erected in part on the company's land near its track, and the railroad company requested the court to charge the jury that the erection of the buildings or the storing of lumber so near the company's track, as the evidence showed, was an [351] improvident or careless act, and that if such location contributed in any degree to the loss which ensued, then the plaintiffs could not recover, even though the fire was communicated by the railroad company's locomotive. The court refused the request and its action was sustained. Mr. Justice Strong, speaking for the court, said: "Such a location, if there was a license [for it, it not then being a trespass], was a lawful use of its property by the plaintiffs; and they did not lose their right to compensation for its loss occasioned by the negligence of the defendant. Cook v. Champlain Transp. Co. 1 Denio, 91; Fero v. Buffalo & State Line R. Co. 22 N. Y. 215, 78 Am. Dec. 178."

In Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. South Fork Coal Co. 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 533, 71 C. C. A. 316, 139 Fed. 530, there was the destruction of lumber placed on the railroad's right of way by permission of the railroad. It was destroyed by fire occurring through the negligent operation of the railroad's trains. Contributory negligence was urged against the right of recovery. The court (circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit), commenting on the cases cited by the railroad, said: "But in so far as the opinions go upon the theory that a plaintiff must lose his right of compensation for the negligent destruction of his own property, situated upon his own premises, because he had exposed it to dangers which could come to it only through the negligence of the railroad company, they do not meet our approval."

After citing cases, the court continued: "The rights of persons to the use and enjoyment of their own property are held upon no such tenure as this. The principle would forbid the use of property for many purposes if in such proximity to a railroad track as to expose it to dangers attributable to the negligent management of its business." Other cases might be adduced. They are cited in Thompson on Negligence, § 2314, and Shearman and Redfield on Negligence, § 680, for the principle that an owner of property is not limited in the uses of his property by its [352] proximity to a railroad, or subject to other risks than those which come from the careful operation of the road or unavoidable accident.

The first and second questions we answer in the negative, and the third question in the affirmative.

So ordered.

Mr. Justice Holmes, partially concurring:

The first two questions concern a standard of conduct, and therefore that which, in its nature and in theory, is a question of law. In this, I gather, we all agree, although the proposition often is forgotten or denied. But while the standard is external to the judgment of the party concerned, and must be known and conformed to by him at his peril (The Germanic [Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Aitken] 196 U. S. 589, 596, 49 L. ed. 610, 613, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317), courts, by a practice that seems at first sight an abdication of their function where it is most needed, but that I dare say is justified by good sense, in nice cases leave the standard to the jury as well as the facts. In the questions before us, however, the elements supposed are few and frequently recurring, so that but for what I have to say I should be very content to find that we were able to lay down the proper rule without a jury's aid. Furthermore, with regard to what that rule should be, I agree, for the purposes of argument, that as a general proposition people are entitled to assume that their neighbors will conform to the law; that a negligent tort is unlawful in as full a sense as a malicious one, and therefore that they are entitled to assume that their neighbors will not be negligent.

Digitized by Google

Nevertheless, I am not prepared to answer the first question, No, if it is to be answered at all. We are bound to consider that at a trial the case would be presented with more facts,—that this case was presented with at least one more fact bearing upon the right to recover,—I mean the distance. If a man stacked his flax so near to a railroad [353] that it obviously was likely to be set fire to by a well-managed train, I should say that he could not throw the loss upon the railroad by the oscillating result of an inquiry by the jury whether the road had used due care. I should say that, although of course he had a right to put his flax where he liked upon his own land, the liability of the railroad for a fire was absolutely conditioned upon the stacks being at a reasonably safe distance from the train. I take it that probably many, certainly some, rules of law based on less than universal considerations are made absolute and universal in order to limit those over-refined speculations that we all deprecate, especially where such rules are based upon or affect the continuous physical relations of material things. The right that is given to inflict various inconveniences upon neighboring lands by building or digging is given, I presume, because of the public interest in making improvement free, yet it generally is made absolute by the common law. It is not thought worth while to let the right to build or maintain a barn depend upon the speculations of a jury as to motives. A defect in the highway, declared a defect in the interest of the least competent travelers that can travel unattended without taking legal risks, or in the interest of the average man, I suppose to be a defect as to all. And as in this case the distinction between the inevitable and the negligent escape of sparks is one of the most refined in the world, I think that I must be right so far, as to the law in the case supposed.

If I am right so far, a very important element in determining the right to recover is whether the plaintiff's flax was so near to the track as to be in danger from even a prudently managed engine. Here certainly, except in a clear case, we should call in the jury. I do not suppose that anyone would call it prudent to stack flax within 5 feet of the engines, or imprudent to do it at a distance of half a mile, and it would not be absurd if the law ultimately [354] should formulate an exact measure, as it has tended to in other instances (Martin v. District of Columbia, 205 U. S. 135, 139, 51 L. ed. 743, 744, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440); but at present I take it that if the question I suggest be material, we should let the jury decide whether 70 feet was too near by the criterion that I have proposed. Therefore, while the majority answer the first question, No, on the ground that the railroad is liable upon the facts stated as matter of law, I should answer it Yes, with the proviso that it was to be answered No, in case the jury found that the flax, although near, was not near enough to the trains to endanger it if the engines were prudently managed, or else I should decline to answer the question because it fails to state the distance of the stacks.

I do not think we need trouble ourselves with the thought that my view depends upon differences of degree. The whole law does so as soon as it is civilized. See Nash v. United States, 229 U. S. 373, 376, 377, 57 L. ed. 1232, 1235, 1236, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780. Negligence is all degree,—that of the defendant here degree of the nicest sort; and between the variations according to distance that I suppose to exist, and the simple universality of the rules in the Twelve Tables, or the Leges Barbarorum, there lies the culture of two thousand years.

I am authorized to say that the CHIEF JUSTICE concurs in the opinion that I express.

Digitized by Google

[355] ANDRIEUS A. JONES, Receiver, Appt.,
v.
ST. LOUIS LAND & CATTLE COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 355–363.)

Private land claims — overlapping grants — confirmation by Congress.

Land common to two overlapping Mexican grants, one of which preceded the other in all the steps prior to the confirmation of both by Congress in the act of June 21, 1860 (12 Stat. at L. 71, chap. 167), which in § 4 saved to each grant its rights against the other, belongs to the earlier grant.

[For other cases, see Private Land Claims, III. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 203.]

Argued and submitted January 27, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the District Court for San Miguel County, in that territory, in favor of plaintiff in a suit to determine the title of persons claiming interests under a Mexican land grant. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 16 N. M. 754, 120 Pac. 898.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Andrieus A. Jones argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The court will look behind the confirmations, and determine as to which claimant had the better title under the former government.

Doe ex dem. Barbarie v. Eslava, 9 How. 446, 13 L. ed. 210; Berthold v. McDonald, 22 How. 340, 16 L. ed. 321; Henshaw v. Bissell, 18 Wall. 266, 21 L. ed. 839; Rodrigues v. United States, 1 Wall. 582, 17 L. ed. 689; Trenier v. Stewart, 101 U. S. 810, 25 L. ed. 1024.

If the original concessions furnish no guide to a just conclusion, we must seek a solution in the proceedings had before our tribunals and officers by which the claims of the parties were determined.

Miller v. Dale, 92 U. S. 474, 23 L. ed. 736.

Messrs. Charles A. Spiess and S. B. Davis, Jr., submitted the cause for appellee:

The supreme court of New Mexico, having concluded that neither the Perea nor the Preston Beck was a valid grant under Mexican law, decided that the land here in question should be divided between them. In so doing the court followed the rule laid down in —

Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 183 U. S. 519, 46 L. ed. 307, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 112 U. S. 720, 28 L. ed. 872, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 372, 40 L. ed. 185, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 349, 40 L. ed. 177, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17.

The doctrine of relation cannot be adopted so as to refer the title of the Beck grant to the date of the Mexican proceedings had thereon.

Dent v. Emmeger, 14 Wall. 308, 312, 313, 20 L. ed. 838–840; Menard v. Massey, 8 How. 307, 12 L. ed. 1091; Choteau v. Eckhart, 2 How. 345, 11 L. ed. 293; Les Bois v. Bramell, 4 How. 449, 11 L. ed. 1051; Rodriguez v. United States, 1 Wall. 582–588, 17 L. ed. 689–691; Hale v. Ackers, 69 Cal. 160, 10 Pac. 385; Jackson ex dem. Griswold v. Baird, 4 Johns. 230, 4 Am. Dec. 267; 3 Washb. Real Prop. 328, 329; Butler's Case, 3 Coke, 29; Gibson v. Choteau, 13 Wall. 101, 20 L. ed. 537; Lynch v. Bernal, 9 Wall. 315–325, 19 L. ed. 714–716; Evans v. Durango Land & Coal Co. 25 C. C. A. 531, 49 U. S. App. 320, 80 Fed. 439; Henshaw v. Bissell, 18 Wall. 255, 21 L. ed. 835; Berthold v. McDonald, 24 Mo. 126, 22 How. 334, 341, 16 L. ed. 318, 321; Doe ex dem. Barbarie v. Eslava, 9 How. 421, 446, 13 L. ed. 200, 210; Barry v. Gamble, 3 How. 32, 11 L. ed. 479; Lanfear v. Hunley, 4 Wall. 204, 18 L. ed. 325; McCabe v. Worthington, 16 How. 86, 14 L. ed. 856; Trenier v. Stewart, 101 U. S. 797, 808, 25 L. ed. 1021, 1023.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

In the year 1876 this suit was instituted by William P. Beck et al. for the purpose of determining the title of the parties to what is known as the Preston Beck grant, and for a partition of the same. This grant conflicts with a certain other grant, known as the Perea grant, to the extent of about 5,000 acres. In the year 1903, Andrieus A. Jones, appellant, was appointed receiver of the Beck grant, and entered into possession of it, including the land in conflict. The St. Louis Land & Cattle Company appellee, filed an intervening petition in the cause, and set up a claim to the land in conflict and prayed as relief that the receiver be ordered to surrender to it the land claimed. Answer was filed to the petition, which, among other things, denied that the Land & Cattle Company had any right, title, or interest in the land.

[359] After hearing, the district court decided in favor of the receiver, and dismissed the petition in intervention. The decree was reversed by the supreme court of the territory, and this appeal was then taken.

Digitized by Google

The question in the case is, Of which grant is the conflict land a part?

Both grants were reported favorably by the surveyor general of the territory to Congress for confirmation, the Beck grant September 30, 1856, the Perea grant September 15, 1857. Both were confirmed by Congress in the act of June 21, 1860 (12 Stat. at L. 71, chap. 167). The act recited the fact of the recommendation for confirmation by the surveyor general of the territory of certain private land claims in the territory, and confirmed them under the numbers by which he had designated them, the Beck grant being No. 1 and the Perea grant being No. 16.

Section 4 of the act provided "that the foregoing confirmation shall only be construed as quitclaims or relinquishments, on the part of the United States, and shall not affect the adverse rights of any other person or persons whomsoever."

The arguments of counsel have taken a wide range, but we think the decision of the case can be put on a short ground. Both grants have the same Mexican source; that is, they are grants by the political chief (governor) and the territorial deputation. The Beck grant was the prior one, its date being December, 1823; that of the Perea grant, March, 1825. Juridical possession was given of the Beck grant; it was not of the Perea grant. The Beck grant was presented for confirmation to the surveyor general of New Mexico in May, 1855, and declared valid by that officer, and a report made thereof September 30, 1856, to the Secretary of the Interior for confirmation by Congress. The Perea grant was presented for confirmation in 1857, decided to be valid, and reported to the Secretary of the Interior. Both grants, we have seen, were confirmed [360] by Congress by the same act. In 1860 the Beck grant was duly surveyed and the survey approved, and on the 13th of June, 1883, a patent was duly issued for the grant as surveyed. The survey of the Perea grant was not made until 1871. It will be observed, therefore, that the Beck grant, in all of its steps, preceded the Perea grant.

The supreme court of New Mexico, however, was of opinion that those steps could not be considered and that both grants were invalid under the Mexican law, and took their efficacy solely from the act of Congress, and that, therefore, the parties "holding by the same act of Congress, in so far as their grants conflict or overlap, have each an 'equal undivided moiety of the lands within the conflict,'" applying the principle of Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 183 U. S. 519, 46 L. ed. 307, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154. In this, we think the court erred. The act of Congress was not a gratuity, it was intended to be a discharge of the obligations of the treaty between the United States and Mexico. It was a confirmation of rights which existed, and as they existed.

The reports of the surveyor general were made under the authority of the act of Congress of 1854, which made it the duty of that officer "to ascertain the origin, nature, character, and extent of all claims to lands under the laws, usages, and customs of Spain and Mexico." He was required to make report thereof, "denoting the various grades of title, with his decision as to the validity or invalidity of each of the same under the laws, usages, and customs of the country before its cession to the United States, . . . which report shall be laid before Congress for such action thereon as may be deemed just and proper, with a view to confirming bona fide grants, and give full effect to the treaty of eighteen hundred and forty-eight between the United States and Mexico," [9 Stat. at L. 922]. 10 Stat. at L. 308, chap. 103.

The proceedings, therefore, for the confirmation of titles [361] derived from Mexico, commenced with the surveyor general, and were consummated by the confirming act, the surveyor general deciding in the first instance. The petition to him "is the commencement of proceedings, which necessarily involve the validity of the grant from the Mexican government." Congress, however, constituted itself the tribunal of ultimate decision of the validity or invalidity of the claim, as, of course, it might do in the discharge of the treaty obligations, or delegate that duty to the judicial department. Tameling v. United States Freehold & Emigration Co. 93 U. S. 644, 23 L. ed. 998; Astiazaran v. Santa Rita Land & Min. Co. 148 U. S. 80, 82, 84, 37 L. ed. 376–378, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457; Stoneroad v. Stoneroad, 158 U. S. 240, 248, 39 L. ed. 966, 968, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822.

The confirmation, therefore, cannot be dissociated from what preceded it, and it may be said of such direct confirmation by act of Congress, as has been said of confirmation through special tribunals created by Congress, that it constitutes a declaration of the validity of the claim under the Mexican laws, and that the claim is entitled to recognition and protection by the stipulations of the treaty. Beard v. Federy, 3 Wall. 478, 492, 18 L. ed. 88, 92. And if there be claims under two patents each of which reserves the rights of the other parties, the inquiry must extend to the character of the original concession. The controversy can only be settled by determining which of these two gives the better right to the demanded premises. Henshaw v. Bissell, 18 Wall. 255, 266, 21 L. ed. 835, 839.

Digitized by Google

In Miller v. Dale, 92 U. S. 473, 23 L. ed. 735, there was a conflict between a concession of the Mexican government, confirmed by the tribunals of the United States and a survey thereon, and a patent of the United States issued upon a similar confirmed concession, and the question in the case was which gave the better right to the premises. This court said: "To answer this question, we must look into the character of the original concessions; and if they furnish no guide to the just conclusion, we must seek a [362] solution in the proceedings had before our tribunals and officers by which the claims of the parties were determined." This rule is the only just and practical one, and, besides, the act of Congress confirming the Beck and Perea grants saved to each rights against the other by § 4 of the act.

It is urged, however, that this doctrine is opposed by Dent v. Emmeger, 14 Wall. 308, 20 L. ed. 838, Les Bois v. Bramell, 4 How. 449, 11 L. ed. 1051, and the cases cited by them. In Dent v. Emmeger, it was said of grants which were described as of "imperfect obligation, and affected only the conscience of the new sovereign," and received from it "a vitality and efficacy which they did not before possess," that "when confirmed by Congress they became American titles and took their legal validity wholly from the act of confirmation, and not from any French or Spanish element which entered into their previous existence. The doctrine of senior and junior equities and of relation back has no application in the jurisprudence of such cases."

Of the same character were the rights in the other cases. In some of them there were mere orders for surveys and promises of title which the new sovereign was under no obligation to yield to. In the case at bar we are dealing with rights which were recognized by the new sovereign because they were supposed to have legal validity under the old sovereign.

It is true in the case at bar, such validity is contested, and the contest is certainly justified as to the Perea grant. It was decided in Hayes v. United States, 170 U. S. 637, 644, 42 L. ed. 1174, 1177, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735, that after it was decreed by the general constituent Congress July 6, 1824, that "the province of New Mexico remains a territory of the federation," the adoption by the same Congress of a general colonization law, August 18, 1824, and a permanent Constitution October 24th of the same year, the officials of the territory had no "power to dispose of the public lands, even though it be [363] arguendo conceded that such power had theretofore been possessed by the officials who exercised authority within the area which was made a territory by the Constitution." But this only in passing. We are not called upon to consider the power of the territorial officers. The validity of the grants has been pronounced by Congress, and we are only required to consider their relation to each other and the public domain. We have seen that the Beck grant in all of its steps was prior to the Perea grant. Juridical possession was given of it before the Perea grant was applied for and the conveyance of the land embraced within its boundaries made complete. It was confirmed first by the surveyor general of the territory and surveyed first by the Interior Department, and a survey "was necessary to its accurate segregation and delimitation." Stoneroad v. Stoneroad, 158 U. S. 250, 39 L. ed. 969, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822.

It follows from these views that the land in conflict is part of the Beck grant, and the judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory is reversed, and the cause remanded to the Supreme Court of the state for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

SUSAN J. TAYLOR, as Administratrix of the Goods, Chattels, and Credits which were of Howard E. Taylor, Deceased, Plff. in Err.,

v.

SEXTUS E. TAYLOR.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 363-371.)

Commerce — exclusiveness of Federal power — employers' liability — distribution of damages.

Nothing in the state statute for the distribution of personal property can defeat the right of the childless widow of an interstate railway employee who was fatally injured while employed by the carrier in interstate commerce, to the entire net proceeds of a judgment for the resulting damages recovered by her as administratrix in an action against the carrier, whether her action was based upon the provisions of § 1 of the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322), making every such carrier liable in damages for the negligent death of such employee "to his or her personal representative for the benefit of the surviving widow or husband and children of such employee; and if none, than of such employee's parents; and if none, then of the next of kin dependent upon such employee," or upon the provision of § 9, added by the act of April 5, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 291, chap. 143, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1324), that "any right of action given by this act to a person suffering injury shall survive to his or her personal representative, for the benefit of the surviving widow or husband and children of such employee, and, if none, then to such employee's parents; and, if none, then of the next of kin dependent upon such employee, but in such cases there shall be only one recovery for the same injury," since such provisions govern the distribution of the damages to the exclusion of any applicable state legislation.

---

Note.—On the constitutionality, application, and effect of the Federal employers' liability act—see note to Lamphere v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 38.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1913 Supp.]

[No. 224.]

Argued January 30, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York in and for Orange County in that state to review a judgment directing the distribution according to the state law of the proceeds of a judgment recovered under the Federal employers' liability act, entered pursuant to the mandate of the Court of Appeals of the state, which affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Second Department, which had reversed an order of the Supreme Court at Special Term. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below in Appellate Division, 144 App. Div. 634, 128 N. Y. Supp. 378; in Court of Appeals, 204 N. Y. 135, 97 N. E. 502, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 276.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George F. Brownell, John Spalding Flannery, and William Hitz, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Upon authority of the opinions and judgments of this court in Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 56 L. ed. 327, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Wulf, 226 U. S. 570, 576, 57 L. ed. 355, 362, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 135; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Vreeland, 227 U. S. 59, 67, 57 L. ed. 417, 420, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; American R. Co. v. Didricksen, 227 U. S. 145, 149, 57 L. ed. 456, 457, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. McGinnis, 228 U. S. 173, 175, 57 L. ed. 785, 786, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426, 3 N. C. C. A. 806; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Hesterly, 228 U. S. 702, 57 L. ed. 1031, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 158, 162, 57 L. ed. 1129, 1133, 1135, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651,—the judgment of the state court herein complained of was wrong, and should be reversed, with instructions to reinstate the judgment of the special term of the supreme court of New York.

The right of action given by the Federal employers' liability acts is wholly dependent upon the disposition of the Congress in such regard. It does not inhere in the common law, and may be extended or withheld in the nature of a gratuity, as the Congress may see fit. If capable of being extended or withheld in toto, it may be extended upon conditions, and in favor of those only whom the Congress may select, in the order and to the extent which the Congress may specify.

Marvin v. Maysville Street R. & Transfer Co. 49 Fed. 436; McCarty v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 62 Fed. 437; Wilson v. Footle, 55 Fed. 211; Stewart v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 168 U. S. 445, 42 L. ed. 537, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 61 L.R.A. 410, 57 C. C. A. 167; 120 Fed. 799.

It being conceded that the Federal government, when operating within its own proper sphere, is supreme, it is of the very essence of that supremacy that it should also possess the incidental power to remove all obstacles to its operation, and to that end so to modify every power vested in subordinate governments as to exempt its own operations from their influence.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579.

No brief was filed for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error and defendant in error are respectively the widow and father of one Howard Taylor, a resident of Orange county, state of New York, who, through the negligence of the Erie Railroad Company, met with an accident which caused his death.

Plaintiff in error was appointed the administratrix of his estate, with right to prosecute any right of action granted by special provision of law as such administratrix. She brought suit, as such administratrix, against the railroad company for damages, alleging the employment of her husband in interstate commerce upon a train running from Port Jervis, New York, to Jersey City, New Jersey, the negligence of the railroad company as the cause of his death, and that the action was brought under the act of Congress of April 22,

Digitized by Google

1908 [35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322], entitled, "An Act Relating to Liability of Common Carriers by Railroads to their Employees in Certain Cases," known as the employers' liability law.

By permission of the surrogate of Orange county, she compromised with the railroad, accepting a judgment for $5,000.

Defendant in error filed a petition in the supreme court of Orange county for an order directing plaintiff in error to pay over to him one half of the net proceeds of the judgment in accordance with the statute of distribution of the state. The motion was denied and an order was entered determining that plaintiff in error, as widow of the deceased, was entitled to receive and retain for her own use all of the net proceeds of the judgment. The order was reversed by the appellate division of the supreme court, and the judgment of reversal, on appeal to the court of appeals, was affirmed and the record remitted [366] to the supreme court. This writ of error was then prosecuted.

The appellate division was of opinion that the law of the state gave the right of action and determined the distribution of the proceeds of the judgment. Considering the act of Congress and its provisions, the court was of the view that the act of Congress "should be construed as one granting a new remedy under certain circumstances, where none, or a less adequate one, existed under the state laws, and as not intended to supplant or abrogate a right of action of practically equal extent existing under the laws of this state." [144 App. Div. 641, 129 N. Y. Supp. 378.] The court further said: "It is only on the theory that this act of Congress constitutes the exclusive rule applicable to the facts of the case before us that the order of the special term [the order under review] can be upheld. If the remedy afforded by our laws be concurrent with that provided by Congress, then we think that our public policy will not permit an administratrix appointed by our courts under our laws, to use the Federal statute simply for the purpose of defeating our statute of distribution of personal property." The court of appeals expressed the opinion that the case presented a case of conflict between the Federal and state statutes, and determined that the state statutes must prevail. It was said that the power of Congress "to regulate interstate commerce must end somewhere, and so far as employees of common carriers engaged in interstate commerce are concerned, it appears to us that it must end with the death of the employee." [204 N. Y. 140, 97 N. E. 502, Ann. Cas. 1913 D, 276.] And considering that the consequences of a contrary doctrine would give Congress power over the distribution of real estate which might happen to be purchased by the earnings of an employee in interstate commerce, the court declared that the act of Congress, in so far as it attempted to distribute the funds in controversy, was "invalid and unauthorized." There were dissenting opinions expressed. The judgment of the [367] appellate division of the supreme court was affirmed, and the record was remitted to the supreme court, to be proceeded upon according to law, and the judgment of the latter court was entered conformably thereto.

We have had many occasions to declare the comprehensive and exclusive power which Congress possesses over interstate commerce. And starting with that power as a factor, we have only to consider the breadth and meaning of the act of Congress.

Section 1 provides that every common carrier by railroad, while engaged in interstate commerce, "shall be liable in damages to any person suffering injury while he is employed by such carrier in such commerce, or, in case of the death of such employee, to his or her personal representative, for the benefit of the surviving widow or husband and children of such employee; and, if none, then of such employee's parents; and, if none, then of the next of kin, dependent upon such employee, for such injury or death resulting in whole or in part from the negligence of any of the officers, agents, or employees of such carrier," or by reason of any defect in its instrumentalities.

Section 6, as amended April 5, 1910, provides that the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States shall be concurrent with that of the courts of the several states, and if the action be brought in a state court it shall not be removed to a court of the United States.

Section 9, as amended, is as follows:

"That any right of action given by this act to a person suffering injury shall survive to his or her personal representative, for the benefit of the surviving widow or husband and children of such employee, and, if none, then of such employee's parents; and, if none, then of the next of kin dependent upon such employee; but in such cases there shall be only one recovery for the same injury." [36 Stat. at L. 291, chap. 143, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1324.]

[368] The act has come up for consideration in a number of cases. In Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 56 L. ed. 327, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep.

Digitized by Google

169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875, it and its amendments were declared to be constitutional; that having been enacted in pursuance of a power reserved to Congress, state laws must give away to them. They established the policy for all, it was decided, and the courts of a state cannot refuse to enforce them on the ground that they are not in harmony with the policy of the state. Congress having acted, it was said, "the laws of the states, in so far as they cover the same field, are superseded; for necessarily that which is not supreme must yield to that which is."

In Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Wulf, 226 U. S. 570, 57 L. ed. 355, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 135, the Mondou Case was applied. The action was brought by the mother of a deceased employee in interstate commerce, under the state statute. The petition was subsequently amended to embrace a right of action by her under the Federal law as the personal representative of the decedent. The amendment was held not to be the commencement of a new action. It was said that notwithstanding the original petition asserted a cause of action under the state statute without making reference to the act of Congress, the court was presumed to be cognizant of the Federal enactment, and "to know that, with respect to the responsibility of interstate carriers by railroad to their employees injured in such commerce after its enactment, it had the effect of superseding state laws upon the subject."

In Michigan C. R. Co. v. Vreeland, 227 U. S. 59, 57 L. ed. 417, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, it is again said that the act of Congress has undertaken to cover the subject of the liability of railroad companies to their employees injured while engaged in interstate commerce, and that state legislation was superseded by it. "The obvious purpose of Congress," it was said, "was to save a right of action to certain relatives dependent upon an employee wrongfully injured, for the loss and [369] damage resulting to them financially by reason of the wrongful death." And again, "It is one beyond that which the decedent had,—one proceeding upon altogether different principles."

The same view was expressed in American R. Co. v. Didricksen, 227 U. S. 145, 57 L. ed. 456, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224. The action was by surviving parents, they being the sole beneficiaries under the statute. A distinction was expressed between a cause of action to an injured employee, and in case of his death, a cause of action to dependent relatives; and of the first it was said that it does not survive his death, but that in such case the act "creates a new and distinct right of action for the benefit of the dependent relatives named in the statute" for the damages which result to them because they have been deprived of a reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefits on account of his wrongful death.

In Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. McGinnis, 228 U. S. 173, 57 L. ed. 785, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426, 3 N. C. C. A. 806, the statute was again considered as giving a cause of action to the personal representative of the deceased employee for the benefit of the persons designated because of the pecuniary loss resulting to them.

In St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Hesterly, 228 U. S. 702, 57 L. ed. 1031, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703, the same principles were applied. In St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 57 L. ed. 1129, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651, the action was by the widow and parent of an interstate commerce employee. The petition stated a case under the state statute. The railroad company contended that the Federal statute was the applicable one. There was a conflict between the statutes. The state statute gave the right of action to the surviving husband, wife, children, and parents; the Federal statute vested the right of action in the personal representative of the deceased for certain named beneficiaries, the parents of the deceased having no rights if there be a widow, husband, or children. The railroad company, therefore, interposed the objection [370] grounded on the Federal statute that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover on the case proved. The state court overruled the objection and we declared the ruling to be error. We said: "Two of the plaintiffs, the father and mother, in whose favor there was a separate recovery, are not even beneficiaries under the Federal statute, there being a surviving widow; and she was not entitled to recover in her own name, but only through the deceased's personal representative, as is shown by the terms of the statute and the decisions before cited."

These cases were all brought under the statute as originally enacted and before the amendments of 1910. Section 1, however, was not amended, and in St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Hesterly, supra, it was said that the amendment of April 5, 1910, which added § 9, quoted above, "in like manner allows but one recovery, although it provides for survival of the right of the injured person."

It is clear from these decisions that the source of the right of plaintiff in error was the Federal statute; and this whether the cause of action is based on the 1st section of the act or on § 9, added in 1910. From plaintiff in error's complaint against the railroad company it is not clear whether she counted on § 1 alone or on that and § 9. If under § 1, the cause of action was not derived from the deceased in the sense of a succession from him. As said in one of the cited cases, her cause of action was "one beyond that which the decedent had,—one proceeding upon altogether different principles." It came to her, it is true, on account of his death, but because of her pecuniary interest in his life and the damage she suffered by his death. It was her loss, not that which his father may have suffered. The judgment she recovered was for herself alone. He had no interest in it. Any loss he may have suffered was not and could not have been any part of it, as we have seen.

Digitized by Google

[371] If the action included a right under § 9, the recovery was for her benefit exclusively as the widow of the decedent. The language of the section is that the right of action given to the employee survives to his personal representatives for the benefit of his parents only when there is no widow.

Judgment reversed and cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

ROSA MARIA CALAF Y FUGURUL et al., Appts.,
v.
FEDERICO CALAF Y RIVERA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 371–374.)

Evidence — filiation — judgment or solemn act.

1. The recognition of a natural son, ignored in his father's will, can be proved in the Porto Rico courts in a suit to nullify the institution of a universal heir by such will only by a judgment, or by an act in solemn and authentic form.

[For other cases, see Evidence, XII. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from Porto Rico courts — following decision below — res judicata.

2. A ruling of the Porto Rico supreme court that the dismissal of a suit to establish filiation by judgment is a bar to a subsequent suit between the same parties to nullify a will which ignored the child whose filiation was sought to be established in the earlier suit will not be disturbed by the Federal Supreme Court on appeal, unless shown by the clearest authority to be erroneous.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1; Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from Porto Rico courts — following decision below — res judicata.

3. The Federal Supreme Court will ordinarily not disturb on appeal the ruling of the Porto Rico supreme court upon the question whether there was a final judgment in a suit which could be set up as a bar to a later suit.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1; Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 199.]

Argued January 26, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of Porto Rico to review a decree, which, reversing a decree of the District Court of Arecibo, dismissed the complaint in a suit to nullify a will instituting a universal heir. Affirmed.

See same case below, 17 P. R. R. 185.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Manuel Rodriguez-Serra argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles Hartzell, filed a brief for appellants:

Under the law 11 of Toro, it is not required, in order to exercise the rights of a natural recognized son, that the fact of the recognition by the natural father be proved in a manner which is solemn, self-evident, and authentic.

Decisions of Supreme Court of Spain: 1853, October 8; 1864, April 16; 1865, January 26; 1865, February 20; 1865, March 2; 1865, April 4; 1865, June 30; 1865, October 9; 1870, June 11; 1871, January 5; 1872, March 23; 1873, January 10; 1874, January 10; 1875, October 14; 1876, December 27; 1877, May 21; 1881, May 6; 1882, October 18; 1886, November 16; 1889, March 29; 1890, March 18; 1888, January 19, 20; 1899, November 29; 1909, April 2; Legislative Collection 1861, p. 293; 1865, vol. 2, p. 50; 1869, vol. 2, p. 518; 1871, vol. 1, p. 582; 1873, vol. 1, p. 377; 1881, vol. 3, p. 868; Aviles v. Sucesion Lange, 1 D. P. R. 350; Rivera v. Borrero, 3 P. R. R. 439.

The certified copy of such a decision or opinion, which was introduced at the trial by defendant, is insufficient to base a plea of res judicata, because from it it does not appear that the case had been terminated, which condition is essential in order to produce the effects of res judicata.

Decisions of Supreme Court of Spain: 1864, June 14; 1868, May 6; 1897, April 8; 1897, September 28; Re Weber, 28 L.R.A. 637, note; Callanan v. Votruba, 104 Iowa, 672, 40 L.R.A. 376, 63 Am. St. Rep. 538, 74 N. W. 13; 23 Cyc. 836, 1124, 1155; Los Angeles v. Mellus, 59 Cal. 444; 1 Freeman, NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over Porto Rican courts—see note to Garrozi v. Pastas, 51 L. ed. U. S. 369.

Digitized by Google

Judgm. p. 17, § 15, p. 485; Elwell v. Johnson, 74 N. Y. 80; Cambridge Valley Nat. Bank v. Lynch, 76 N. Y. 514; Rose v. Gibson, 71 Ala. 35; Kirchner v. Wood, 48 Mich. 199, 12 N. W. 44; Gage v. Eich, 56 Ill. 297; Hall v. Hudson, 20 Ala. 284; Garner v. Harmony Mills, 13 Jones & S. 148, 6 Abb. N. C. 212; Ferris v. Aspinwall, 10 Abb. Pr. N. S. 137; Campbell v. New York Cotton Exch. 15 Jones & S. 558; Olsen v. Newton, 3 Wash. 429, 30 Pac. 450; Morago v. Emeric, 4 Cal. 308; Cummings v. Heard, 2 Minn. 34, Gil. 25; Slagle v. Bodmer, 58 Ind. 465; Newell v. Gatling, 7 Ind. 147; Andrews v. Loveland, 1 Colo. 8; 8 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 24; Clay v. His Creditors, 9 Mart. (La.) 519; Fink v. Martin, 5 La. Ann. 103.

If the plaintiff fails on demurrer in the first action from the omission of essential allegations in his declaration, which are fully supplied in the second suit, the judgment in the first suit is no bar to the complaint, although the respective actions were instituted to enforce the same right, for the reason that the merits of the cause as disclosed in the second declaration were not heard and decided in the first action.

24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 800; Gould v. Evansville & C. R. Co. 91 U. S. 526, 23 L. ed. 416; Leonard v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 198 U. S. 418, 49 L. ed. 1109, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; Smith v. McNeal, 109 U. S. 426, 27 L. ed. 986, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319; North Muskegon v. Clark, 10 C. C. A. 591, 22 U. S. App. 522, 62 Fed. 694; Reynolds v. Lincoln, 71 Cal. 183, 12 Pac. 449; Los Angeles v. Mellus, 59 Cal. 444.

The plea of prescription cannot be invoked in the matter of recognition of natural children who were born under the regime of law 11 of Toro. Natural children, under the legislation prior to the Civil Code, do not need to exercise the action of filiation, and to obtain, through it, a judicial recognition, previously or simultaneously to bringing their action for the purpose of enforcing the rights which they have as such natural children, provided that they have been recognized in accordance with the law 11 of Toro.

Decisions of Supreme Court of Spain: 1888, April 27; 1896, July 9; 1898, September 23; 1906, April 11; 1906, December 28; Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 20 L. ed. 513.

The private document by which Salvador Calaf made the recognition of his son, Ramon, meets all the conditions.

Armsterdam v. Puente, 16 P. R. R. 527; Puente v. Puente, 16 P. R. R. 556; Gual v. Bonafoux, 15 P. R. R. 545; Cordova v. Folgueras y Rijos, 227 U. S. 375, 57 L. ed. 556, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350.

The possession of the status of natural son cannot and should not be confounded with the recognition, express or tacit, referred to in law 11 of Toro.

Decision of Supreme Court of Spain: 1896, June 9.

Law 11 of Toro, within the ample scope of an express or tacit recognition, did admit an absolute inquiry of paternity, not permitted by the Civil Code, which restricts it only to the specific cases of § 135, to wit, undoubted written document of the father, or continuous possession of the status of natural son.

1 Scaevelo, Jurisprudence of the Civil Code, p. 350.

The possession of the status of natural son is characterized by the series of acts presenting a person in a direct and uninterrupted relation, as natural son, with respect to another.

Decisons of Supreme Court of Spain: 1895, June 28; 1896, May 21; 1896, November 7.

Mr. Paul Fuller argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frederic R. Coudert, filed a brief for appellee:

The foundation of the doctrine of res judicata, or estoppel by judgment, is that both parties have had their day in court.

2 Black, Judgm. §§ 500–504.

A right, question, or fact, distinctly put in issue and directly determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, as a ground of recovery, cannot be disputed in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies.

Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1–48, 42 L. ed. 355–376, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Johannessen v. United States, 225 U. S. 238, 56 L. ed. 1070, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613.

Where a judgment between the same parties is pleaded in bar, the plea will be upheld if the object of both suits is the same.

Gonzalez v. Méndez, 15 P. R. R. 682.

Either the allegation of recognition raises an issue to be determined in the action, and requiring proof and judicial sanction to make it operative in creating the status of natural son (and in that event this action is identical in issue and in purpose with the earlier action), or the plaintiff's case rests upon a mere allegation of a fact, the effect of which has not been judicially determined, and is not to be judicially determined in this action (which plaintiff avers and the court holds is not an action of filiation). In that event he is not entitled to the relief which can only be based upon judicial establishment of the status, or its creation by authentic and public instrument.

Gual v. Bonafoux, 15 P. R. R. 545.

Digitized by Google

by a suit in law or equity, effectually prosecuted, shall have been set up.

[For other cases, see Adverse Possession, I. k, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — prescription.

4. The heirs of the original grantee in the Alameda land grant are not deprived of their property without due process of law, contrary to the Federal Constitution, by N. M. Comp. Laws 1865, chap. 73, § 1, Comp. Laws 1897, § 2937, under which ten years' possession by a disseisor of a strip of such grant lying between the Rio Grande and the foothills to the west, under a deed purporting to convey the land from the river westward to the ridge of Rio Puerco, gives title to the whole.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 686-688, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — prescription.

5. The equal protection of the laws is not denied by confining to Spanish and Mexican grants the provision of N. M. Comp. Laws 1865, chap. 73, § 1, Comp. Laws 1897, § 2937, under which ten years' possession of land under a deed purporting to convey a fee simple gives title in fee to the quantity of land specified in the deed if, during the ten years, no claim by suit in law or equity, effectually prosecuted, shall have been set up.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 7, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 204.]

Argued January 27, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico to review a decree which affirmed in part and reversed in part a decree of the District Court for Bernalillo County, in that territory, in favor of interveners in a partition suit. Affirmed.

See same case below, 16 N. M. 349, 120 Pac. 676.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Alonzo B. McMillen argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The plaintiff and her cotenants having shown a perfect legal title, and possession of the grantee and his heirs down to the present time, certain presumptions prevail:

(1) Possession in accordance with the legal title is presumed.

Gonzales v. Ross, 120 U. S. 605, 629, 30 L. ed. 801, 809, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; Chesapeake Beach R. Co. v. Washington, P. & C. R. Co. 199 U. S. 247, 249, 50 L. ed. 175, 177, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

(2) All presumptions are in favor of the legal holder, and the burden of overcoming them rests with him who assails the legal title.

Evans v. Welch, 29 Colo. 355, 68 Pac. 776; 1 Washb. Real Prop. p. 63.

(3) It is a presumption of law that possession of one cotenant is possession of all.

Union Consol. Silver Min. Co. v. Taylor, 100 U. S. 37, 40, 25 L. ed. 541, 542, 5 Mor. Min. Rep. 323; M'Clung v. Ross, 5 Wheat. 116, 124, 5 L. ed. 46, 49; Barr v. Gratz, 4 Wheat. 213, 222, 4 L. ed. 553, 555; Armijo v. Neher, 11 N. M. 645, 72 Pac. 12; Stevens v. Martin, 168 Mo. 407, 68 S. W. 347; Freeman, Cotenancy & Partition, §§ 166, 167, 222; 1 Washb. Real Prop. p. 689.

(4) If several persons have a mixed possession of land, and one of them has title to it, the seisin belongs to him only.

1 Washb. Real Prop. p. 63.

(5) It is a conclusive presumption of law that where two persons are in possession of land at the same time, under different titles, the law adjudges him to have the seisin of the estate who has the better right. Both cannot be seised, and therefore the seisin follows the title:

Barr v. Gratz, 4 Wheat. 213, 223, 4 L. ed. 553, 555; Brownsville v. Cavazos, 100 U. S. 138, 145, 25 L. ed. 574, 577.

(6) It is also a conclusive presumption of law that where the rightful owner is in the actual occupancy of a part of his tract he is in the constructive and legal possession and seisin of the whole, unless he is disseised by actual occupation and dispossession: and where the possession is mixed, the legal seisin is according to the legal title.

Deputron v. Young, 134 U. S. 241, 254, 33 L. ed. 923, 929, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539; Ward v. Cochran, 150 U. S. 597, 605, 608, 37 L. ed. 1195, 1197, 1198, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 230; Hunnicutt v. Peyton, 102 U. S. 333, 367-369, 26 L. ed. 113, 120, 121; Bracken v. Union P. R. Co. 21 C. C. A. 387, 41 U. S. App. 491, 75 Fed. 347.

The decree of partition was a final judgment as to all adverse claimants, and nothing remained to be done except to carry out the provisions of the statute by a division of the land or its proceeds among the cotenants.

1 Freeman, Judgm. 4th ed. §§ 104-A, 304, 307; 30 Cyc. 253, ¶ 8; Keil v. West, 21 Fla. 508; Irvin v. Buckles, 148 Ind. 389, 47 N. E. 822; Janes v. Brown, 48 Iowa, 568; Traverso v. Row, 11 La. 498; Allen v. Hall, 50 Me. 253; Ham v. Ham, 39 Me. 216; Partridge v. Luce, 36 Me. 16; Slingluff v. Stanley, 66 Md. 220, 7 Atl. 261; Pfeltz v. Pfeltz, 1 Md. Ch. 455; Mt. Hope Iron Co. v. Dearden, 140 Mass. 430, 4 N. E. 803; Bughardt v. Van Deusen, 4 Allen, 374; Brown v. Bulkley, 11 Cush. 168; Foster v. Jones, — Miss. —, 17 So. 893; Hinds v. Stevena, 45 Mo. 209; Rockwell v. Decker, 5 N. Y. Civ. Proc. Rep. 62; Grimes v. Taft, 98 N. C. 193, 3 S. E. 674; Clemans's Appeal, 8 Sadler (Pa.) 321, 11 Atl. 559; Johnson v. Murray, 12 Lea, 109; Petrucio v. Seardon, 76 Tex. 639, 13 S. W. 560.

Digitized by Google

Where a statute requires payment of taxes as an element of adverse possession, it is necessary for the adverse claimant to show such payment of taxes during the full period necessary to establish adverse possession.

Beaver v. Taylor, 1 Wall. 637, 17 L. ed. 601; Warvelle, Ejectment, § 342; Wettig v. Bowman, 47 Ill. 17; Power v. Kitching, 10 N. D. 254, 88 Am. St. Rep. 691, 86 N. W. 737; Reynolds v. Willard, 80 Cal. 605, 22 Pac. 262; Irwin v. Miller, 23 Ill. 401; Cofield v. Furry, 19 Ill. 183; Snowden v. Rush, 76 Tex. 197, 13 S. W. 189; Hardin v. Gouveneur, 69 Ill. 140.

In order to constitute adverse possession it must be actual, open, visible, notorious, continuous, exclusive, hostile, and under claim of right.

Johnston v. Albuquerque, 12 N. M. 20, 72 Pac. 9; Gentile v. Kennedy, 8 N. M. 347, 45 Pac. 879; Probst v. Domestic Missions, 3 N. M. 373, 5 Pac. 702; Jenkins v. Maxwell Land Grant Co. 15 N. M. 281, 107 Pac. 730; Armstrong v. Morrill, 14 Wall. 120, 145, 20 L. ed. 765, 772; Hogan v. Kurtz, 94 U. S. 773, 24 L. ed. 317; Ward v. Cochran, 150 U. S. 597, 606, 37 L. ed. 1195, 1197, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 230; Clarke v. Courtney, 5 Pet. 319, 8 L. ed. 140; Hunnicutt v. Peyton, 102 U. S. 368, 26 L. ed. 120; Barr v. Gratz, 4 Wheat. 223, 4 L. ed. 555; Brownsville v. Cavazos, 100 U. S. 138, 145, 25 L. ed. 574, 577; Deputron v. Young, 134 U. S. 241, 254, 33 L. ed. 923, 929, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539; Bracken v. Union P. R. Co. 21 C. C. A. 387, 36 U. S. App. 629, 75 Fed. 347.

The line of demarcation between statutes of limitation and statutes which attempt to adjudicate or transfer property is clear. Statutes of limitation do not attempt to transfer the right, but merely limit the remedy to a certain reasonable time; and a statute of limitation which does not give a reasonable time within which to bring an action is unconstitutional and void.

Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 21 L. ed. 737; McClellan v. Kellogg, 17 Ill. 498; McConnel v. Street, 17 Ill. 253; Woodward v. Blanchard, 16 Ill. 424; Irving v. Brownell, 11 Ill. 402; Gittings v. Stearns, 19 Ill. 380; Groesbeck v. Seeley, 13 Mich. 342; Baker v. Kelley, 11 Minn. 480, Gil. 358; Smith v. Sherry, 54 Wis. 114, 11 N. W. 465; Farrar v. Clark, 85 Ind. 449; Dingey v. Paxton, 60 Miss. 1038; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 449, note 3.

All limitation laws must proceed upon the theory that the party, by lapse of time and omission on his part, has forfeited his right to assert his title in the law.

Gittings v. Stearns, 19 Ill. 376; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122–207, 4 L. ed. 529–551; Pearce v. Patton, 7 B. Mon. 162, 45 Am. Dec. 61; Griffin v. McKenzie, 7 Ga. 163, 50 Am. Dec. 389; Coleman v. Holmes, 44 Ala. 124, 4 Am. Rep. 121.

Mr. George S. Klock argued the cause, and, with Mr. Neill B. Field, filed a brief for appellees:

The decree of partition was interlocutory, and was not a final decree until after the district court confirmed the report of the commissioners and ordered the sale of the property.

30 Cyc. 252, subdiv. 6; Randles v. Randles, 63 Ind. 93; Aull v. Day, 133 Mo. 337, 34 S. W. 578; Warren v. Williams, 25 Mo. App. 22; Mingay v. Lackey, 142 N. Y. 449, 37 N. E. 471; Schweitzer's Estate, 4 Lanc. L. Rev. 369; Zittle's Estate, 4 Lanc. L. Rev. 163; 15 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 810; Hart v. Steedman, 98 Mo. 457, 11 S. W. 993; Holloway v. Holloway, 103 Mo. 284, 15 S. W. 536; 3 Bl. Com. 296; 1 Black, Judgm. §§ 17, 39; Green v. Fisk, 103 U. S. 518, 26 L. ed. 486; Green v. Fisk, 154 U. S. 668, and 26 L. ed. 486, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1193; Elder v. McClaskey, 17 C. C. A. 251, 37 U. S. App. 1, 199, 70 Fed. 529; Gesell's Appeal, 84 Pa. 238; Beebe v. Griffing, 6 N. Y. 465; Templeman v. Steptoe, 1 Munf. 339; Young v. Skipwith, 2 Wash. (Va.) 300; Putman v. Lewis, 1 Fla. 507; Medford v. Harrell, 10 N. C. (3 Hawks) 41; Clester v. Gibson, 15 Ind. 10; Davis v. Davis, 36 Ind. 160; Kern v. Maginnis, 41 Ind. 398; Pipkin v. Allen, 29 Mo. 229; Durham v. Darby, 34 Mo. 447; Ivory v. Delore, 26 Mo. 505; Gates v. Salmon, 28 Cal. 320; Peck v. Vandenberg, 30 Cal. 11; Mills v. Miller, 2 Neb. 299; Murray v. Yates, 73 Mo. 13; Green v. Fiske, 103 U. S. 518, 26 L. ed. 486; 10 Rose's Notes (U. S.) 83; Williams v. Field, 60 Am. Dec. 434, note; Knapp, Partition, pp. 202, 203; Emeric v Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529, 2 Pac. 418; Booth Real Actions, 244; Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pr. 2254; Ham v. Ham, 39 Me. 218; Robinson v. Glancy, 69 Pa. 89; Clarke v. Baird, 98 Cal. 642, 33 Pac. 756; Tompkins v. Hyatt, 19 N. Y. 534; McKeown v. Officer, 127 N. Y. 687, 28 N. E. 401; 30 Cyc. 301, 302.

The interveners established title to the strips of land claimed by them, and the findings of fact warranted the decree in favor of such interveners.

Tyler, Ejectment & Adverse Enjoyment, pp. 88, 872, 873; Wright v. Mattison, 18 How. 50, 15 L. ed. 280; 5 Rose's Notes (U. S.) 526–528; Lea v. Polk County Copper Co. 21 How. 493, 16 L. ed. 203; Walls v. Smith, 19 Ga. 8; Dickenson v. Breeden, 30 Ill. 279; Hanna v. Renfro, 32 Miss. 125; Jackson ex dem. Bradstreet v. Huntington, 5 Pet. 402, 8 L. ed. 170; Ewing v. Burnett, 11 Pet. 51, 52, 9 L. ed. 628, 629; 3 Rose's Notes (U. S.) 637–643; Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. 437, 9 L. ed. 1147.

Digitized by Google

Where one is in actual possession of a portion of the tract under color of title, his possession will be presumed to extend, by construction, to the limits of the land described in his deed.

Ellicott v. Pearl, 10 Pet. 413, 9 L. ed. 476; 3 Rose's Notes (U. S.) 592–594.

The presumption of amicable relation between tenants in common is merely a rule of evidence, liable to be overcome by the circumstances of any particular case involving the question whether in fact the possession was adverse; and it is not a rule of law denying the application of the statute of limitations to persons sustaining the relation of tenants in common.

1 Enc. Ev. pp. 685, 686.

In the acquisition of title by adverse possession, the distinction between strangers and tenants in common relates to the character of the evidence necessary to prove that the possession was adverse.

Foulke v. Bond, 41 N. J. L. 527.

The acts of an occupant may create such notorious evidence of his adverse claim as to render it unnecessary to show either positive notice to a cotenant, or facts showing actual knowledge on his part.

Elder v. McClaskey, 17 C. C. A. 251, 37 U. S. App. 1, 199, 70 Fed. 529; Packard v. Johnson, 57 Cal. 180; Dugan v. Follett, 100 Ill. 581; Sullivan v. Holmes, 8 Cush. 252.

The exclusive possession and in severalty by coparceners, of the various parts of the common land, acquiesced in for a great number of years, will authorize an inference of parol partition, unless other circumstances rebut such presumption.

1 Enc. Ev. 690; Berry v. Seawall, 13 C. C. A. 101, 31 U. S. App. 30, 65 Fed. 742; Allen v. Seawell, 17 C. C. A. 217, 37 U. S. App. 436, 70 Fed. 561.

The area of interveners' possession was coextensive with the land as described in their several deeds and assurances.

Campbell v. Bates, 143 Ala. 338, 39 So. 144; Connerly v. Dickinson, 81 Ark. 258, 99 S. W. 82; Rucker v. Dixon, 78 Ark. 99, 93 S. W. 750; George v. Cole, 109 La. 816, 33 So. 784; Santee River Cypress Lumber Co. v. James, 50 Fed. 360; Peden v. Crenshaw, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 81 S. W. 369; Roberson v. Downing Co. 120 Ga. 833, 102 Am. St. Rep. 128, 48 S. E. 429, 1 Ann. Cas. 757; O'Brien v. Fletcher, 123 Ga. 427, 51 S. E. 405; Van Gunden v. Virginia Coal & I. Co. 3 C. C. A. 294, 8 U. S. App. 229, 52 Fed. 838; Brackett v. Persons Unknown, 53 Me. 228, 87 Am. Dec. 548; Green v. Irving, 54 Miss. 450, 28 Am. Rep. 360; Little v. Downing, 37 N. H. 355; Black v. Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. Co. 93 Ala. 109, 9 So. 537; Watters v. Connelly, 59 Iowa, 217, 13 N. W. 82; Taliaferro v. Butler, 77 Tex. 578, 14 S. W. 191; Hodges v. Ross, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 437, 25 S. W. 975; Brown v. O'Brien, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 459, 33 S. W. 267; Swift v. Gage, 26 Vt. 224.

An unregistered deed is sufficient to constitute the bar of the statute of limitations.

Lea v. Polk County Copper Co. 21 How. 493, 16 L. ed. 203; Packard v. Moss, 68 Cal. 128, 8 Pac. 818; Den ex dem. Chastien v. Philips, 33 N. C. (11 Ired. L.) 255; Doe ex dem. Hardin v. Barrett, 51 N. C. (6 Jones, L.) 159; Doe ex dem. Kron v. Hinson, 53 N. C. (8 Jones, L.) 347; Rawson v. Fox, 65 Ill. 200; Bellows v. Jewell, 60 N. H. 420; Minot v. Brooks, 16 N. H. 374; Dickenson v. Breeden, 30 Ill. 279.

Registration or record of a deed is not essential to give color of title in cases where constructive possession of the whole of a tract of land is claimed by reason of actual possession of part thereof.

Dorlan v. Westervitch, 140 Ala. 283, 103 Am. St. Rep. 35, 37 So. 382; Packard v. Moss, 68 Cal. 123, 8 Pac. 818; Dickenson v. Breeden, 30 Ill. 279; Rawson v. Fox, 65 Ill. 200; Hanna v. Renfro, 32 Miss. 125; Plaster v. Grabeel, 160 Mo. 669, 61 S. W. 589; Minot v. Brooks, 16 N. H. 374; Lea v. Polk County Copper Co. 21 How. 493, 16 L. ed. 203; Jaques v. Lester, 118 Ill. 246, 8 N. E. 795.

A state may classify the objects of legislation, so long as its attempt at classification is not merely arbitrary and unreasonable.

Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 44 L. ed. 392, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. pp. 14–18; San Mateo County v. Southern P. R. Co. 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722; Wood, Limitations, 3d ed. § 254, p. 567.

A statute of limitations cannot be said to impair the obligation of the contract, or to deprive one of property without due process of law, unless in its application to an existing line of action it unreasonably limits the opportunity to enforce that right by suit.

Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 245, 34 L. ed. 659, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Probst v. Domestic Missions, 129 U. S. 182, 32 L. ed. 655, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; 2 Tucker, Const. § 390; Campbell v. Holt, 115 U. S. 620, 29 L. ed. 483, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 17 L. ed. 261;

Digitized by Google

Croxall v. Shererd, 5 Wall. 268, 18 L. ed. 572; Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 578, 25 L. ed. 618; Bicknell v. Comstock, 113 U. S. 149, 28 L. ed. 962, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

No rule as to the length of time which will be deemed reasonable can be laid down for the government of all cases alike. Different circumstances will often require a different rule. What would be reasonable in one class of cases would be entirely unreasonable in another.

McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 34 L. ed. 304, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972.

Title to land acquired by adverse possession has always been held of such validity that the repeal of the statute has been conceded and decided to amount to the taking of property from the person who acquired title to his land, in contravention of article 5 of the Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

Campbell v. Holt, 115 U. S. 620, 29 L. ed. 483, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; Baker v. Oakwood, 123 N. Y. 16, 10 L.R.A. 387, 25 N. E. 312; Orman v. Van Arsdell, 12 N. M. 349, 67 L.R.A. 438, 78 Pac. 48.

A person who enters into possession of lands under a conveyance, although the person so conveying has not title thereto, is presumed to enter according to the description of the deed; and his occupancy of a part, claiming the whole, is construed as a possession of the entire tract.

Coleman v. Billings, 89 Ill. 183; Fisher v. Bennehoff, 121 Ill. 426, 13 N. E. 150; Kruse v. Wilson, 79 Ill. 233; Hamilton v. Boggess, 63 Mo. 233; Mason v. Ayers, 73 Ill. 121.

Legislative power can be exerted rightfully in creating a right by limitation. It is not confined exclusively to barring the remedy.

United States v. Chandler-Dunbar Water Power Co. 209 U. S. 452, 52 L. ed. 887, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579; Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 605, 17 L. ed. 261, 263; Sharon v. Tucker, 144 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed. 532, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; Davis v. Mills, 194 U. S. 451, 457, 48 L. ed. 1067, 1072, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692.

[376] Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was begun on June 12, 1906, for the partition, among the remote heirs of Juan Gonzales, of the Alameda land grant, a Spanish grant of land in New Mexico, confirmed as perfect by the court of private land claims of the United States. On June 17, 1907, a judgment of partition was entered, declaring the persons named to be entitled to stated fractional undivided interests, and appointing commissioners to divide the land, or to report to the court if it could not be divided without prejudice to the owners. On July 3, 1907, the commissioners reported that partition could not be made, and before further action of the court, on July 20, 1907, the appellees asked leave to intervene in order to assert adverse interests. The application was allowed on November 20, 1907, and the questions now before this court arise between these interveners and heirs of Gonzales. By way of parenthesis we will dispose of a preliminary objection at this point. It was argued that the decree of partition was a final decree and that the intervention came too late; but apart from the often-stated disposition of this court to leave decisions upon matters of local procedure undisturbed (Tiaco v. Forbes, 228 U. S. 549, 558, 57 L. ed. 960, 965, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585), the right to intervene was given by statute "during the pendency of such suit," and the decision that the suit still was pending was right. N. M. Comp. Laws, 1897, § 3182, Acts of 1907, chap. 107, subsec. 269. See further Clark v. Roller, 199 U. S. 541, 546, 50 L. ed. 300, 302, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

The main questions concern the merits of the case. The greater part of the Alameda grant, it is found, has been occupied in strips, from beyond the memory of men now living. The interveners claim such strips, most of them but a few yards wide, but extending, as they say, from the Rio Grande westward to the Ceja or ridge of Rio Puerco,—a distance of some 16 miles. They have [377] no documentary evidence of a title derived from Juan Gonzales, but they and their predecessors in title have occupied the bottom lands between the Rio Grande and the foothills to the west for more than ten years under deeds purporting to convey a fee simple in the respective strips to the ridge of Rio Puerco. The eastern part has been fenced, cultivated, and built upon; but from the foothills to the Ceja of Rio Puerco the land is unfenced, and by a general custom has been used mainly for the grazing of cattle by the interveners and others claiming ownership in the grant. The title to this last-mentioned land alone is in question now, and it will be seen that if the interveners have the title they claim, it must have been gained by the lapse of time during which they have held what they have held under the above-mentioned deeds. The judgment was in their favor in the courts below. 16 N. M. 349, 120 Pac. 676.

The title of the interveners does not depend upon the ordinary statute of limitations, and some considerations that might be relevant under that statute are not relevant here. The title rests upon a peculiar statute that has been in force unchanged in any particular affecting this case, it is said, since 1858. Comp. Laws. 1865, chap. 73, § 1, Comp. Laws 1897, § 2937. By this act, possession for ten years, under a deed purporting to convey a fee simple, of any lands which have been granted by Spain, Mexico, or the United States, gives a title in fee to the quantity of land specified in the deed, if, during the ten years, no claim by suit in law or equity, effectually prosecuted, shall have been set up. We stat the statute according to its construction by the court below, with which, again, we should be slow to interfere (Gray v. Taylor, 227 U. S. 51, 57, 57 L. ed. 413, 416, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199), and which also seems plainly right. The interveners, therefore, brought precisely within the words of the act, and we think it unnecessary to spend time on the suggestion that the appellants equally are within it, and [378] therefore, on the principle of cases such as Hunnicutt v. Peyton, 102 U. S. 333, 26 L. ed. 113, are entitled to prevail on the strength of their older title so far as they were not actually excluded from the land. The purpose of the act is to ripen disseisin into title according to the deed under which the disseisor holds, and it is especially directed against ancient claims such as the appellants set up.

Digitized by Google

It only remains to consider whether there is anything in the Constitution of the United States to prevent the statute from doing its work. We limit our inquiry to its operation in the present case, and do not speculate as to whether other cases could be put in which the letter of some parts of the law could not be sustained. As applied to the interveners, the statute simply enacts that possession for ten years of the front and cultivable portion of a strip under a deed carrying the whole of it back to the ridge of the Puerco shall give title to the whole. We can see no taking of property without due process of law in this. A statute of limitation may give title. Toltec Ranch Co. v. Cook, 191 U. S. 532, 48 L. ed. 291, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Davis v. Mills, 194 U. S. 451, 456, 457, 48 L. ed. 1067, 1071, 1072, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; United States v. Chandler-Dunbar Water Power Co. 209 U. S. 447, 52 L. ed. 881, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579. The disseisee has notice of the law and of the fact that he is dispossessed, and that a deed to the disseisor may purport to convey more than is fenced in. If he chooses to wait ten years without bringing suit, he is not in a position to complain of the consequences,—at least, not when, as in the present case, the deeds do not purport to convey more than a reasonable man probably would have anticipated. See Soper v. Lawrence Bros. Co. 201 U. S. 359, 367, 368, 50 L. ed. 788, 790, 791, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473. For we should conjecture, if it were material, that in this case the deeds under which the interveners held were in a form that was usual and expected in that place.

The statute does not deny the equal protection of the laws, even if it should be confined to Spanish and Mexican grants. For there very well may have been grounds for [379] the discrimination in the history of those grants and the greater probability of an attempt to revive stale claims, as is explained by the supreme court of New Mexico. There is no other matter that we think proper for reconsideration here.

Judgment affirmed.

MITCHELL STORE BUILDING COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

R. DE V. CARROLL, Trustee in Bankruptcy of the Herman Keck Manufacturing Company, Bankrupt.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 379–382.)

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals — final decree — bankruptcy case.

1. A decree of a Federal circuit court of appeals, which affirmed an order of a court of bankruptcy, granting a temporary injunction against the prosecution in a state court of a suit affecting the bankrupt estate, is interlocutory, and is therefore not reviewable under the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418), § 24a, providing for appeals in controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings as in other cases, although the case is not one of the class which the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488), § 6, makes final in the circuit courts of appeals.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. d, 19, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals — bankruptcy case.

2. An appeal will not lie to the Federal Supreme Court from a decision of a circuit court of appeals, made in the exercise of its jurisdiction under the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898, § 24b, upon a petition to revise the proceedings of the bankruptcy courts.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, III. d, 2, e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 212.]

Note.—On appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court in bankruptcy cases—see note to James v. Stone & Co. 57 L. ed. U. S. 573.

Digitized by Google

Argued January 28, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Southern District of Ohio, enjoining the prosecution in a state court of a suit affecting a bankrupt estate. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Also a PETITION for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review the same decree. Denied.

See same case below, 113 C. C. A. 484, 193 Fed. 616.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. P. Lincoln Mitchell and Walter A. DeCamp argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Joseph S. Graydon argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Joseph L. Lackner and Lawrence Maxwell, filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the memorandum opinion of the court:

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against the Keck Manufacturing Company on February 8, 1909, in the district court of the United States for the southern district of Ohio, and it was later adjudicated a bankrupt. Upon application a receiver was appointed for the Duhme Jewelry Company, an adjunct of the Keck Manufacturing Company, all of the stock of the former being owned by the latter company, and subsequently the receiver, in pursuance of an order of the court, transferred all the property and assets of the Duhme Jewelry Company to the trustee of the bankrupt, by him to be kept under separate account.

The Mitchell Store Building Company had leased certain premises to the Duhme Jewelry Company, which on June 30, 1910, the rent being paid to that time, the latter company vacated, although the lease had not yet expired. The Mitchell Store Building Company brought suit against the Duhme Jewelry Company in the common pleas court of Hamilton county, Ohio, to recover under the lease, also applying to the district court for an order on the trustee to withhold sufficient in amount of the assets of the Duhme Jewelry Company to satisfy its claim, which was eventually refused by the referee, and is now before the district judge upon petition for review.

Upon the petition of the trustee, the Mitchell Store Building Company was made a party to the bankruptcy proceeding, in the district court, and later the trustee [381] sought to restrain that company from prosecuting its suit in the state court. The district judge granted a temporary injunction, and upon appeal the circuit court of appeals affirmed the order of the district court. There was also a petition to review the order of the district court, granting the temporary injunction, but that was not passed upon by the circuit court of appeals. The case was then brought to this court by appeal, the petition for appeal stating that "this cause is one in which the United States circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit has not final jurisdiction, and that it is a proper cause to be reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States on appeal."

The jurisdiction of the appellate courts of the United States, including this court, under the bankruptcy act, is regulated by §§ 24 and 25 of that act. Under the latter section appeals may be taken in certain cases from the district court to the circuit court of appeals, and, under certain limitations, appeals may be allowed from the latter court to this court, from final decisions of the circuit court of appeals allowing or rejecting claims. This case does not come within § 25. Section 24a provides for appeals in controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings, and controls the present case. In such cases the appeal takes the course prescribed in the circuit court of appeals act (26 Stat. at L. 826, 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 488, 549). See Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, 194 U. S. 296, 48 L. ed. 986, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 53 L. ed. 772, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008.

It is undertaken to sue out the appeal in this case from the circuit court of appeals under § 6 of the circuit court of appeals act, as the petition for allowance of appeal shows; while the appeal to the circuit court of appeals was under § 7 of that act, as amended (31 Stat. at. L. 660, chap. 803, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 551), providing for an appeal from an interlocutory order of a district or circuit court, granting an injunction, to the circuit court of appeals [382] in a cause in which an appeal from a final decree might have been taken under the act. No provision is made in this section, or in any other, for a further appeal concerning such interlocutory orders, to this court.

Section 6 regulates appeals from the circuit court of appeals to this court, providing that cases not made final by that section shall be entitled to review in this court. While this case, taken to the circuit court of appeals under § 7, is not one of the class made final in that court by § 6, it is well settled that this court's jurisdiction under § 6 relates solely to final orders of the district court reviewed by the circuit court of appeals. The decree in the district court being an interlocutory order granting a temporary injunction, and the circuit court of appeals simply affirming that order, it is not a proper case for appeal to this court. Kirwan v. Murphy, 170 U. S. 205, 42 L. ed. 1009, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592.

Digitized by Google

If this case were treated as an appeal from the judgment of the circuit court of appeals upon a petition to revise under § 24b of the bankruptcy act, this court would not entertain the appeal. Holden v. Stratton, 191 U. S. 115, 48 L. ed. 116, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

It follows that the appeal must be dismissed. The petition for a writ of certiorari, filed in this cause, is denied.

---

[383] FREMONT WEEKS, Plff. in Err., v. UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 383–399.)

Searches and seizures — use of evidence wrongfully obtained.

1. The immunity from unreasonable searches and seizures afforded by U. S. Const., 4th Amend., has been denied the accused in a criminal prosecution in a Federal district court where that court has refused the accused's seasonable application for the return of his letters and private documents seized in his house in his absence, by a United States marshal holding no warrant for his arrest and none for the search of his premises, and has permitted their use in evidence at the trial.

[For other cases, see Searches and Seizures; Evidence VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Searches and seizures — protection against misconduct of police officers.

2. Protection against individual misconduct of municipal police officers not acting under any claim of Federal authority is not afforded by the guaranty of U. S. Const., 4th Amend., of immunity from unreasonable searches and seizures, but the limitations of such Amendment reach only the Federal Government and its agents.

[For other cases, see Searches and Seizures; Constitutional Law, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 461.]

Argued and submitted December 2 and 3, 1913. Decided February 24, 1914.

Note.—As to unreasonable searches and seizures—see note to Levy v. Superior Ct. 29 L.R.A. 818.

As to admissibility in evidence against accused of documents or other things taken from him—see note to State v. Edwards, 59 L.R.A. 465.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Missouri to review a conviction for the unlawful use of the mails. Reversed and remanded for a new trial.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Martin J. O'Donnell argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The constitutional questions herein involved have never been decided by this court adversely to defendant's contention.

Adams v. New York, 192 U. S. 585, 48 L. ed. 575, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372; American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, 207 U. S. 284, 302, 52 L. ed. 208, 219, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72, 12 Ann. Cas. 595; Ensign v. Pennsylvania, 227 U. S. 592, 57 L. ed. 658, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 50 L. ed. 652, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370.

The decision of the district court denying defendant's petition to return his property and private papers after it had taken jurisdiction of the subject-matter set forth in the petition, and found that such private papers had come into the possession of the government as a result of its own unlawful acts, in violation of its own Constitution, is reversible error.

Adams v. New York, 192 U. S. 585, 48 L. ed. 575, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 50 L. ed. 652, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370; United States v. Mounday, 208 Fed. 186; United States v. McHie, 196 Fed. 586, 194 Fed. 894; United States v. Wilson, 163 Fed. 338; United States v. Mills, 185 Fed. 318; Wise v. Mills, 220 U. S. 549, 55 L. ed. 579, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 597; Wise v. Henkel, 220 U. S. 556, 55 L. ed. 581, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599.

The reception in evidence of the property and papers seized by officers of the government, after the court had inquired into and found that they had been so seized, was reversible error.

3 Bl. Com. p. 256; 4 Bl. Com. pp. 180, 223; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Broom, Legal Maxims, 7th ed. 227; Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 35 L. ed. 1110, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; Ex parte Jackson, 96 U. S. 727, 24 L. ed. 877; Gindrat v. People, 138 Ill. 103, 27 N. E. 1085; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 245a; Marshall v. Riley, 7 Ga. 367; 3 Bl. Com. p. 256, note 1; Rusher v. State, 94 Ga. 366, 47 Am. St. Rep. 175, 21 S. E. 594; Shields v. State, 104 Ala. 35, 53 Am. St. Rep. 17, 16 So. 85, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 149; State v. Flynn, 36 N. H. 64; Thornton v. State, 117 Wis. 338, 98 Am. St. Rep. 924, 93 N. W. 1107; Underwood v. State, 13 Ga. App. 206, 78 S. E. 1103; United States v. Wong Quong Wong,

Digitized by Google

94 Fed. 832; 4 Wigmore, Ev. §§ 2251, 2270; 2 Wharton, Crim. Ev. 10th ed. § 516f, p. 1076.

The common-law rules of evidence embodied in the Constitution have, by being so embodied, been clothed with the dignity of a fundamental law; and the application of the same under the Constitution is not limited by the rules of the common law.

Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Black, Const. & Interpretation of Laws, p. 22; Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 532, 542, 42 L. ed. 568, 573, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183, 10 Am. Crim. Rep. 547; Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 596, 597, 40 L. ed. 820, 821, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 369, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 35 L. ed. 1110, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; Emery's Case, 107 Mass. 172, 9 Am. Rep. 22; Entick v. Carrington, 19 How. St. Tr. 1029; People ex rel. Hackley v. Kelly, 24 N. Y. 74; Sohm, Institutes of Roman Law, 2d ed. p. 30; Thayer, Ev. 263, 276.

Solicitor General Davis and Assistant Attorney General Denison submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The question is no longer open.

Adams v. New York, 192 U. S. 585, 48 L. ed. 575, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 50 L. ed. 652, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370; American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, 207 U. S. 284, 302, 52 L. ed. 208, 218, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72, 12 Ann. Cas. 595; Holt v. United States, 218 U. S. 245, 252, 54 L. ed. 1021, 1030, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20, 20 Ann. Cas. 1138; United States v. Wilson, 163 Fed. 338; Hardesty v. United States, 91 C. C. A. 1, 164 Fed. 420.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

An indictment was returned against the plaintiff in error, defendant below, and herein so designated, in the district court of the United States for the western district of Missouri, containing nine counts. The seventh count, upon which a conviction was had, charged the use of the mails for the purpose of transporting certain coupons or tickets representing chances or shares in a lottery or gift enterprise, in violation of § 213 of the Criminal Code [35 Stat. at L. 1129, chap. 321, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1652]. Sentence of fine and imprisonment was imposed. This writ of error is to review that judgment.

The defendant was arrested by a police officer, so far as the record shows, without warrant, at the Union Station in Kansas City, Missouri, where he was employed by an express company. Other police officers had gone to the house of the defendant, and being told by a neighbor where the key was kept, found it and entered the house. They searched the defendant's room and took possession of various papers and articles found there, which were afterwards turned over to the United States marshal. Later in the same day police officers returned with the marshal, who thought he might find additional evidence, and, being admitted by someone in the house, probably a boarder, in response to a rap, the marshal searched the defendant's room and carried away certain letters and envelops found in the drawer of a chiffonier. Neither the marshal nor the police officers had a search warrant.

[387] The defendant filed in the cause before the time for trial the following petition:

Petition to Return Private Papers, Books, and Other Property.

Now comes defendant and states that he is a citizen and resident of Kansas City, Missouri, and that he resides, owns, and occupies a home at 1834 Penn street in said city;

That on the 21st day of December, 1911, while plaintiff was absent at his daily vocation, certain officers of the government whose names are to plaintiff unknown, unlawfully and without warrant or authority so to do, broke open the door to plaintiff's said home and seized all of his books, letters, money, papers, notes, evidences of indebtedness, stock, certificates, insurance policies, deeds, abstracts, and other muniments of title, bonds, candies, clothes, and other property in said home, and this in violation of §§ 11 and 23 of the Constitution of Missouri, and of the 4th and 5th Amendments to the Constitution of the United States;

That the district attorney, marshal, and clerk of the United States court for the western district of Missouri took the above-described property so seized into their possession, and have failed and refused to return to defendant portion of same, to wit:

One (1) leather grip, value about $7; one (1) tin box valued at $3; one (1) Pettis county, Missouri, bond, value $500; three (3) mining stock certificates which defendant is unable to more particularly describe, valued at $12,000; and certain stock certificates in addition thereto, issued by the San Domingo Mining, Loan, & Investment Company; about $75 in currency; one (1) newspaper published about 1790, an heirloom; and certain other property which plaintiff is now unable to describe.

That said property is being unlawfully and improperly [388] held by said district attorney, marshal, and clerk, in violation of defendant's rights under the Constitution of the United States and the state of Missouri.

Digitized by Google

That said district attorney purposes to use said books, letters, papers, certificates of stock, etc., at the trial of the above-entitled cause, and that by reason thereof and of the facts above set forth defendant's rights under the amendments aforesaid to the Constitution of Missouri and the United States have been and will be violated unless the court order the return prayed for;

Wherefore, defendant prays that said district attorney, marshal, and clerk be notified, and that the court direct and order said district attorney, marshal, and clerk, to return said property to said defendant.

Upon consideration of the petition the court entered in the cause an order directing the return of such property as was not pertinent to the charge against the defendant, but denied the petition as to pertinent matter, reserving the right to pass upon the pertinency at a later time. In obedience to the order the district attorney returned part of the property taken, and retained the remainder, concluding a list of the latter with the statement that, "all of which last above described property is to be used in evidence in the trial of the above-entitled cause, and pertains to the alleged sale of lottery tickets of the company above named."

After the jury had been sworn and before any evidence had been given, the defendant again urged his petition for the return of his property, which was denied by the court. Upon the introduction of such papers during the trial, the defendant objected on the ground that the papers had been obtained without a search warrant, and by breaking open his home, in violation of the 4th and 5th Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, which objection was overruled by the court. Among the papers retained and put in evidence were a number of [389] lottery tickets and statements with reference to the lottery, taken at the first visit of the police to the defendant's room, and a number of letters written to the defendant in respect to the lottery, taken by the marshal upon his search of defendant's room.

The defendant assigns error, among other things, in the court's refusal to grant his petition for the return of his property, and in permitting the papers to be used at the trial.

It is thus apparent that the question presented involves the determination of the duty of the court with reference to the motion made by the defendant for the return of certain letters, as well as other papers, taken from his room by the United States marshal, who, without authority of process, if any such could have been legally issued, visited the room of the defendant for the declared purpose of obtaining additional testimony to support the charge against the accused, and, having gained admission to the house, took from the drawer of a chiffonier there found certain letters written to the defendant, tending to show his guilt. These letters were placed in the control of the district attorney, and were subsequently produced by him and offered in evidence against the accused at the trial. The defendant contends that such appropriation of his private correspondence was in violation of rights secured to him by the 4th and 5th Amendments to the Constitution of the United States. We shall deal with the 4th Amendment, which provides:

"The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

The history of this Amendment is given with particularity in the opinion of Mr. Justice Bradley, speaking for [390] the court in Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524. As was there shown, it took its origin in the determination of the framers of the Amendments to the Federal Constitution to provide for that instrument a Bill of Rights, securing to the American people, among other things, those safeguards which had grown up in England to protect the people from unreasonable searches and seizures, such as were permitted under the general warrants issued under authority of the government, by which there had been invasions of the home and privacy of the citizens, and the seizure of their private papers in support of charges, real or imaginary, made against them. Such practices had also received sanction under warrants and seizures under the so-called writs of assistance, issued in the American colonies. See 2 Watson, Const. 1414 et seq. Resistance to these practices had established the principle which was enacted into the fundamental law in the 4th Amendment, that a man's house was his castle, and not to be invaded by any general authority to search and seize his goods and papers. Judge Cooley, in his Constitutional Limitations, pp. 425, 426, in treating of this feature of our Constitution said: "The maxim that 'every man's house is his castle' is made a part of our constitutional law in the clauses prohibiting unreasonable searches and seizures, and has always been looked upon as of high value to the citizen." "Accordingly," says Lieber in his work on Civil Liberty and Self-Government, 62, in speaking of the English law in this respect, "no man's house can be forcibly opened, or he or his goods be carried away after it has thus been forced, except in cases of felony; and then the sheriff must be furnished with a warrant, and take great care lest he commit a trespass. This principle is jealously insisted upon." In Ex parte Jackson, 96 U. S. 727, 733, 24 L. ed. 877, 879, this court recognized the principle of protection as applicable to letters and sealed packages in the mail, and held that, consistently [391] with this guaranty of the right of the people to be secure in their papers against unreasonable searches and seizures, such matter could only be opened and examined upon warrants issued on oath or affirmation, particularly describing the thing to be seized, "as is required when papers are subjected to search in one's own household."

Digitized by Google

In the Boyd Case, supra, after citing Lord Camden's judgment in Entick v. Carrington, 19 How. St. Tr. 1029, Mr. Justice Bradley said (630):

"The principles laid down in this opinion affect the very essence of constitutional liberty and security. They reach farther than the concrete form of the case then before the court, with its adventitious circumstances; they apply to all invasions on the part of the government and its employees of the sanctity of a man's home and the privacies of life. It is not the breaking of his doors and the rummaging of his drawers that constitutes the essence of the offense; but it is the invasion of his indefeasible right of personal security, personal liberty, and private property, where that right has never been forfeited by his conviction of some public offense,—it is the invasion of this sacred right which underlies and constitutes the essence of Lord Camden's judgment."

In Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 532, 42 L. ed. 568, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183, 10 Am. Crim. Rep. 547, this court, in speaking by the present Chief Justice of Boyd's Case, dealing with the 4th and 5th Amendments, said (544):

"It was in that case demonstrated that both of these Amendments contemplated perpetuating, in their full efficacy, by means of a constitutional provision, principles of humanity and civil liberty which had been secured in the mother country only after years of struggle, so as to implant them in our institutions in the fullness of their integrity, free from the possibilities of future legislative change."

The effect of the 4th Amendment is to put the courts [392] of the United States and Federal officials, in the exercise of their power and authority, under limitations and restraints as to the exercise of such power and authority, and to forever secure the people, their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against all unreasonable searches and seizures under the guise of law. This protection reaches all alike, whether accused of crime or not, and the duty of giving to it force and effect is obligatory upon all intrusted under our Federal system with the enforcement of the laws. The tendency of those who execute the criminal laws of the country to obtain conviction by means of unlawful seizures and enforced confessions, the latter often obtained after subjecting accused persons to unwarranted practices destructive of rights secured by the Federal Constitution, should find no sanction in the judgments of the courts, which are charged at all times with the support of the Constitution, and to which people of all conditions have a right to appeal for the maintenance of such fundamental rights.

What, then, is the present case? Before answering that inquiry specifically, it may be well by a process of exclusion to state what it is not. It is not an assertion of the right on the part of the government, always recognized under English and American law, to search the person of the accused when legally arrested, to discover and seize the fruits or evidences of crime. This right has been uniformly maintained in many cases. 1 Bishop. Crim. Proc. § 211; Wharton, Crim. Pl. & Pr. 8th ed. § 60; Dillon v. O'Brien, 16 Cox, C. C. 245, Ir. L. R. 20 C. L. 300, 7 Am. Crim. Rep. 66. Nor is it the case of testimony offered at a trial where the court is asked to stop and consider the illegal means by which proofs, otherwise competent, were obtained,—of which we shall have occasion to treat later in this opinion. Nor is it the case of burglar's tools or other proofs of guilt found upon his arrest within the control of the accused.

[393] The case in the aspect in which we are dealing with it involves the right of the court in a criminal prosecution to retain for the purposes of evidence the letters and correspondence of the accused, seized in his house in his absence and without his authority, by a United States marshal holding no warrant for his arrest and none for the search of his premises. The accused, without awaiting his trial, made timely application to the court for an order for the return of these letters, as well or other property. This application was denied, the letters retained and put in evidence, after a further application at the beginning of the trial, both applications asserting the rights of the accused under the 4th and 5th Amendments to the Constitution. If letters and private documents can thus be seized and held and used in evidence against a citizen accused of an offense, the protection of the 4th Amendment, declaring his right to be secure against such searches and seizures, is of no value, and, so far as those thus placed are concerned, might as well be stricken from the Constitution. The efforts of the courts and their officials to bring the guilty to punishment, praiseworthy as they are, are not to be aided by the sacrifice of those great principles established by years of endeavor and suffering which have resulted in their embodiment in the fundamental law of the land. The United States marshal could only have invaded the house of the accused when armed with a warrant issued as required by the Constitution, upon sworn information, and describing with reasonable particularity the thing for which the search was to be made. Instead, he acted without sanction of law, doubtless prompted by the desire to bring further proof to the aid of the government, and under color of his office undertook to make a seizure of private papers in direct violation of the constitutional prohibition against such action. Under such circumstances, without sworn information and particular description, not even an order of court would [394] have justified such procedure; much less was it within the authority of the United States marshal to thus invade the house and privacy of the accused. In Adams v. New York, 192 U. S. 585, 48 L. ed. 575, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372, this court said that the 4th Amendment was intended to secure the citizen in person and property against unlawful invasion of the sanctity of his home by officers of the law, acting under legislative or judicial sanction. This protection is equally extended to the action of the government and officers of the law acting under it. Boyd Case, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524. To sanction such proceedings would be to affirm by judicial decision a manifest neglect, if not an open defiance, of the prohibitions of the Constitution, intended for the protection of the people against such unauthorized action.

Digitized by Google

The court before which the application was made in this case recognized the illegal character of the seizure, and ordered the return of property not in its judgment competent to be offered at the trial, but refused the application of the accused to turn over the letters, which were afterwards put in evidence on behalf of the government. While there is no opinion in the case, the court in this proceeding doubtless relied upon what is now contended by the government to be the correct rule of law under such circumstances, that the letters having come into the control of the court, it would not inquire into the manner in which they were obtained, but, if competent, would keep them and permit their use in evidence. Such proposition, the government asserts, is conclusively established by certain decisions of this court, the first of which is Adams v. New York, supra. In that case the plaintiff in error had been convicted in the supreme court of the state of New York for having in his possession certain gambling paraphernalia used in the game known as policy, in violation of the Penal Code of New York. At the trial certain papers, which had been seized by police officers executing a search warrant for the discovery and [395] seizure of policy slips, and which had been found in addition to the policy slips, were offered in evidence over his objection. The conviction was affirmed by the court of appeals of New York (176 N. Y. 351, 63 L.R.A. 406, 98 Am. St. Rep. 675, 68 N. E. 636), and the case was brought here for alleged violation of the 4th and 5th Amendments to the Constitution of the United States. Pretermitting the question whether these Amendments applied to the action of the states, this court proceeded to examine the alleged violations of the 4th and 5th Amendments, and put its decision upon the ground that the papers found in the execution of the search warrant, which warrant had a legal purpose in the attempt to find gambling paraphernalia, were competent evidence against the accused, and their offer in testimony did not violate his constitutional privilege against unlawful search or seizure, for is was held that such incriminatory documents thus discovered were not the subject of an unreasonable search and seizure, and in effect that the same were incidentally seized in the lawful execution of a warrant, and not in the wrongful invasion of the home of a citizen, and the unwarranted seizure of his papers and property. It was further held, approving in that respect the doctrine laid down in 1 Greenleaf, Ev. § 254a, that it was no valid objection to the use of the papers that they had been thus seized, and that the courts in the course of a trial would not make an issue to determine that question, and many state cases were cited supporting that doctrine.

The same point had been ruled in People v. Adams, 176 N. Y. 351, 63 L.R.A. 406, 98 Am. St. Rep. 675, 68 N. E. 636, from which decision the case was brought to this court, where it was held that if the papers seized in addition to the policy slips were competent evidence in the case, as the court held they were, they were admissible in evidence at the trial, the court saying (p. 358): "The underlying principle obviously is that the court, when engaged in trying a criminal cause, will not take notice of [396] the manner in which witnesses have possessed themselves of papers, or other articles of personal property, which are material and properly offered in evidence." This doctrine thus laid down by the New York court of appeals and approved by this court, that a court will not, in trying a criminal cause, permit a collateral issue to be raised as to the source of competent testimony, has the sanction of so many state cases that it would be impracticable to cite or refer to them in detail. Many of them are collected in the note to State v. Turner, 136 Am. St. Rep. 129, 135 et seq. After citing numerous cases the editor says: "The underlying principle of all these decisions obviously is, that the court, when engaged in the trial of a criminal action, will not take notice of the manner in which a witness has possessed himself of papers or other chattels, subjects of evidence, which are material and properly offered in evidence. People v. Adams, supra. Such an investigation is not involved necessarily in the litigation in chief, and to pursue it would be to halt in the orderly progress of a cause, and consider incidentally a question which has happened to cross the path of such litigation, and which is wholly independent thereof."

Digitized by Google

It is therefore evident that the Adams Case affords no authority for the action of the court in this case, when applied to in due season for the return of papers seized in violation of the Constitutional Amendment. The decision in that case rests upon incidental seizure made in the execution of a legal warrant, and in the application of the doctrine that a collateral issue will not be raised to ascertain the source from which testimony, competent in a criminal case, comes.

The government also relies upon Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 50 L. ed. 652, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370, in which the previous cases of Boyd v. United States, and Adams v. New York, supra; Interstate Commerce [397] Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. ed. 1047, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125, and Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 48 L. ed. 860, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563, are reviewed, and wherein it was held that a subpœna duces tecum requiring a corporation to produce all its contracts and correspondence with no less than six other companies, as well as all letters received by the corporation from thirteen other companies, located in different parts of the United States, was an unreasonable search and seizure within the 4th Amendment, and it was there stated that (p. 76) "an order for the production of books and papers may constitute an unreasonable search and seizure within the 4th Amendment. While a search ordinarily implies a quest by an officer of the law, and a seizure contemplates a forcible dispossession of the owner, still, as was held in the Boyd Case, the substance of the offense is the compulsory production of private papers, whether under a search warrant or a subpœna duces tecum, against which the person, be he individual or corporation, is entitled to protection." If such a seizure under the authority of a warrant supposed to be legal, constitutes a violation of the constitutional protection, a fortiori does the attempt of an officer of the United States, the United States marshal, acting under color of his office, without even the sanction of a warrant, constitute an invasion of the rights within the protection afforded by the 4th Amendment.

Another case relied upon is American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, 207 U. S. 284, 52 L. ed. 208, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72, 12 Ann. Cas. 595, in which it was held that the seizure by the United States marshal in a copyright case of certain pictures under a writ of replevin did not constitute an unreasonable search and seizure. The other case from this court relied upon is Holt v. United States, 218 U. S. 245, 54 L. ed. 1021, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20, 20 Ann. Cas. 1138, in which it was held that testimony tending to show that a certain blouse which was in evidence as incriminating him, had been put upon the prisoner, and fitted him, did not violate his constitutional right. We [398] are at a loss to see the application of these cases to the one in hand.

The right of the court to deal with papers and documents in the possession of the district attorney and other officers of the court, and subject to its authority, was recognized in Wise v. Henkel, 220 U. S. 556, 55 L. ed. 581, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599. That papers wrongfully seized should be turned over to the accused has been frequently recognized in the early as well as later decisions of the courts. 1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 210; Rex v. Barnett, 3 Car. & P. 600; Rex v. Kinsey, 7 Car. & P. 447; United States v. Mills, 185 Fed. 318; United States v. McHie, 194 Fed. 894, 898.

We therefore reach the conclusion that the letters in question were taken from the house of the accused by an official of the United States, acting under color of his office, in direct violation of the constitutional rights of the defendant; that having made a seasonable application for their return, which was heard and passed upon by the court, there was involved in the order refusing the application a denial of the constitutional rights of the accused, and that the court should have restored these letters to the accused. In holding them and permitting their use upon the trial, we think prejudicial error was committed. As to the papers and property seized by the policemen, it does not appear that they acted under any claim of Federal authority such as would make the amendment applicable to such unauthorized seizures. The record shows that what they did by way of arrest and search and seizure was done before the finding of the indictment in the Federal court; under what supposed right or authority does not appear. What remedies the defendant may have against them we need not inquire, as the 4th Amendment is not directed to individual misconduct of such officials. Its limitations reach the Federal government and its agencies. Boyd Case, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524, and see Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 53 L. ed. 97, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14.

Digitized by Google

[399] It results that the judgment of the court below must be reversed, and the case remanded for further proceedings in accordance with this opinion.

Reversed.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Petitioner,
v.
LEXINGTON MILL & ELEVATOR COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 399–413.)

Food and drugs — adulteration — poisonous ingredients.

1. The addition of poisonous substances to an article of food in such minute quantities that the health of consumers cannot possibly be injured is not condemned by the provisions of the food and drugs act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 768, chap. 3915, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1356), § 7, subd. 5, that for the purposes of the act an article shall be deemed to be adulterated "if it contain any added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient which may render such article injurious to health."

[Pure food laws, see Food and Drugs, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1913 Supp.]

Evidence — burden of proof — adulteration.

2. The government, when proceeding to condemn, under the pure food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, § 10, an article of food which it claims is adulterated under § 7, subd. 5, of that act, because it contains "any added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient which may render such article injurious to health," is charged with the burden of proving that the added poisonous or deleterious substance is such as may render such article dangerous to health.

[For other cases, see Evidence, II. m, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 548.]

Argued January 5, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the District Court for the Western District of Missouri, condemning certain flour as adulterated. Affirmed and cause remanded to District Court for a new trial.

See same case below, 121 C. C. A. 23, 202 Fed. 615.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Attorney General McReynolds argued the cause, and, with Mr. Francis G. Caffey, filed a brief for petitioner:

The seized flour was adulterated within subd. 5, § 7, of the food and drugs act, relating to food.

United States v. 1950 Boxes of Macaroni, 181 Fed. 427; United States v. Koca Nola Co. (N. D. Ga.) Notice of Judgment, 202; United States v. Mayfield, 177 Fed. 765; United States v. Rosebrock & Co. (S. D. N. Y.) Notice of Judgment, 825; Friend v. Matt, 68 J. P. 589; French Silver Dragee Co. v. United States, 103 C. C. A. 316, 179 Fed. 824.

Being remedial, the statute should be liberally construed.

United States v. Corbett, 215 U. S. 233, 54 L. ed. 173, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 81; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 391, 50 L. ed. 515, 521, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412.

Messrs. Edward P. Smith and Bruce S. Elliott argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Edward L. Scarritt, C. J. Smyth, and W. C. Scarritt, filed a brief for respondent:

The language used in the act in question is not susceptible of the interpretation placed thereon by the trial court.

Post Master General v. Early, 12 Wheat. 136, 6 L. ed. 577; Montclair Twp. v. Ramsdell, 107 U. S. 147, 27 L. ed. 431, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; French Silver Dragee Co. v. United States, 103 C. C. A. 316, 179 Fed. 824; Friend v. Mapp, 68 J. P. 589; Hull v. Horsnell, 68 J. P. 591.

Digitized by Google

The act as construed by the trial court is arbitrary, and an unreasonable interference with the rights of property.

Jew Ho v. Williamson, 103 Fed. 10; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Collins v. New Hampshire, 171 U. S. 30, 43 L. ed. 60, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; State v. Layton, 160 Mo. 474, 62 L.R.A. 163, 83 Am. St. Rep. 487, 61 S. W. 171; State v. Addington, 12 Mo. App. 219; State v. Fisher, 52 Mo. 174; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Jacksonville, 67 Ill. 37, 16 Am. Rep. 611; River Rendering Co. v. Behr, 77 Mo. 91, 46 Am. Rep. 6; McConnell v. McKillip, 71 Neb. 712, 65 L.R.A. 610, 115 Am. St. Rep. 614, 99 N. W. 505, 8 Ann. Cas. 898.

The interpretation placed upon the act of June 30, 1906, by the circuit court of appeals, is reasonable, gives effect to all the language contained in the act, and is the only interpretation under which its constitutionality can be sustained.

Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Collins v. New Hampshire, 171 U. S. 30, 43 L. ed. 60, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; Interstate Drainage & Invest. Co. v. Freeborn County, 85 C. C. A. 532, 158 Fed. 270; Martin v. United States, 168 Fed. 201, 93 C. C. A. 484; Maillard v. Lawrence, 16 How. 251, 14 L. ed. 925; Levy v. M'Cartee, 6 Pet. 110, 8 L. ed. 337; Parsons v. Hunter, 2 Sumn. 422, Fed. Cas. No. 10,778; Bernier v. Bernier, 147 U. S. 246, 37 L. ed. 154, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Washington Market Co. v. Hoffman, 101 U. S. 115, 25 L. ed. 783; Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 670, 32 L. ed. 1063, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 421, 44 L. ed. 222, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Swarts v. Siegel, 54 C. C. A. 399, 117 Fed. 18; Glover v. United States, 164 U. S. 298, 41 L. ed. 441, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Harless v. United States, 31 C. C. A. 397, 59 U. S. App. 745, 88 Fed. 102; United States v. Fisher, 109 U. S. 145, 27 L. ed. 886, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Lake Superior Ship Canal, R. & Iron Co. v. Cunningham, 155 U. S. 380, 39 L. ed. 192, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 103; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 423, 42 L. ed. 1095, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664.

Mr. Ralph S. Rounds filed a brief as amicus curiæ:

The phrase must be construed strictly, as the food law is a penal statute.

United States v. 84 Boxes of Sugar, 7 Pet. 453, 463, 8 L. ed. 745, 749; United States v. A Lot of Silk Umbrellas, 12 Fed. 412; United States v. 1150½ Pounds of Celluloid, 27 C. C. A. 231, 54 U. S. App. 273, 82 Fed. 627; United States v. Johnson, 177 Fed. 313, affirmed in 221 U. S. 488, 55 L. ed. 823, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627.

The purpose of the food law is to prevent the sale of fraudulent and unhealthful products.

United States v. Morgan, 222 U. S. 274, 281, 56 L. ed. 198, 200, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 81; United States v. Johnson, 177 Fed. 315, affirmed in 221 U. S. 488, 55 L. ed. 823, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627; United States v. One Car Load of Corno Horse & Mule Feed, 188 Fed. 463; United States v. Five Boxes of Asafoetida, 181 Fed. 565; United States v. 1950 Boxes of Macaroni, 181 Fed. 427; United States v. Buffalo Cold Storage Co. 179 Fed. 866; French Silver Dragee Co. v. United States, 103 C. C. A. 316, 179 Fed. 824; Ex parte Kohler, 74 Cal. 42, 15 Pac. 436.

Where the purpose of a statute is in general the same as that of the common law, it will be presumed that the legislature intended to re-enact, in statute form, the common rules.

Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 59, 60, 55 L. ed. 619, 644, 645, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. ed. 1135, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 246; Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, 125, 132, 49 L. ed. 114, 122, 125, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, 1 Ann. Cas. 655; United States v. Sanges, 144 U. S. 310, 311, 36 L. ed. 445, 446, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 653, 42 L. ed. 890, 892, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Moore v. United States, 91 U. S. 270, 274, 23 L. ed. 346, 347; 8 Cyc. 386.

At the common law, both in England and in the several states, it was a criminal offense to offer for sale unwholesome food, or food or drink to which poisonous or deleterious substances had been added to such an extent as to make the article injurious to health; so that the health provisions of the food law cover the same general ground as those of the common law. Unwholesomeness was a necessary element of the offense at common law, and it must be held to be a necessary element, under the section in question, of the definition of the words used in the present statute.

Bishop, Crim. Law, 8th ed. ¶ 491; 19 Cyc. 1086, note 3; State v. Norton, 24 N. C. (2 Ired. L.) 40; Goodrich v. People, 19 N. Y. 578; State v. Buckman, 8 N. H. 203, 29 Am. Dec. 646; State v. Smith, 10 N. C. (3 Hawks) 378, 14 Am. Dec. 594; Craft v.

Digitized by Google

Parker, W. & Co. 96 Mich. 245, 21 L.R.A. 140, 55 N. W. 812.

This court has in many notable instances limited general words of statutes by construction.

Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 59, 60, 68, 55 L. ed. 619, 644, 645, 648, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; American Security & T. Co. v. District of Columbia, 224 U. S. 491, 494, 495, 56 L. ed. 856, 857, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 61, 36 L. ed. 340, 345, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517; United States v. Kirby, 7 Wall. 482, 19 L. ed. 278; Price v. Forrest, 173 U. S. 410, 43 L. ed. 749, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; Chesapeake & P. Teleph. Co. v. Manning, 186 U. S. 238, 46 L. ed. 1144, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; United States v. Laws, 163 U. S. 258, 41 L. ed. 151, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 998; Oates v. First Nat. Bank, 100 U. S. 239, 244, 25 L. ed. 580, 582; United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 102, 42 L. ed. 394, 398, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3; McKee v. United States, 164 U. S. 287, 293, 41 L. ed. 437, 439, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1017, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 465.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The petitioner, the United States of America, proceeding under § 10 of the food and drugs act (34 Stat. at L. 768, chap. 3915, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1354), by libel filed in the district court of the United States for the western district of Missouri, sought to seize and condemn 625 sacks of flour in the possession of one Terry, which had been shipped from Lexington, Nebraska, to Castle, Missouri, and which remained in original, unbroken packages. The judgment of the district court, upon verdict in favor of the government, was reversed by the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit (121 C. C. A. 23, 202 Fed. 615), and this writ of certiorari is to review the judgment of that court.

[405] The amended libel charged that the flour had been treated by the "Alsop Process," so called, by which nitrogen proxide gas, generated by electricity, was mixed with atmospheric air, and the mixture then brought in contact with the flour, and that it was thereby adulterated under the fourth and fifth subdivisions of § 7 of the act; namely, (1) in that the flour had been mixed, colored, and stained in a manner whereby damage and inferiority were concealed and the flour given the appearance of a better grade of flour than it really was, and (2) in that the flour had been caused to contain added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredients, to-wit, nitrites or nitrite reacting material, nitrogen peroxide, nitrous acid, nitric acid, and other poisonous and deleterious substances which might render the flour injurious to health. The libel also charged that the flour was adulterated under the first subdivision of § 7, and was misbranded; but the government does not urge these features of the case here. The verdict was broad enough to cover the charge under the first subdivision of § 7, but in the view we take of the case as to the instruction of the court under subdivision 5, it need not be noticed.

The Lexington Mill & Elevator Company, the respondent herein, appeared, claiming the flour, and answered the libel, admitting that the flour had been treated by the Alsop Process, but denying that it had been adulterated, and attacking the constitutionality of the act.

A special verdict to the effect that the flour was adulterated was returned and judgment of condemnation entered. The case was taken to the circuit court of appeals upon writ of error. The respondent contended that, among other errors, the instructions of the trial court as to adulteration were erroneous and that the act was unconstitutional. The circuit court of appeals held that the testimony was insufficient to show that by the [406] bleaching process the flour was so colored as to conceal inferiority, and was thereby adulterated, within the provisions of subdivision 4. That court also held—and this holding gives rise to the principal controversy here—that the trial court erred in instructing the jury that the addition of a poisonous substance, in any quantity, would adulterate the article, for the reason that "the possibility of injury to health due to the added ingredient, and in the quantity in which it is added, is plainly made an essential element of the prohibition." It did not pass upon the constitutionality of the act, in view of its rulings on the act's construction.

The case requires a construction of the food and drugs act. Parts of the statute pertinent to this case are:

"Sec. 7. That for the purposes of this act an article shall be deemed to be adulterated: . . .

"In the case of food:

"First. If any substance has been mixed and packed with it so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect its quality or strength. . . .

"Fourth. If it be mixed, colored, powdered, coated, or stained in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed.

Digitized by Google

"Fifth. If it contain any added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient which may render such article injurious to health.

. . .

"Sec. 10. That any article of food, drug, or liquor that is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act, and is being transported from one state, territory, district, or insular possession to another for sale, or, having been transported, remains unloaded, unsold, or in original unbroken packages, . . . shall be liable to be proceeded against in any district court of the United States within the district where the same is found, and seized for confiscation by a process of libel for [407] condemnation. And if such article is condemned as being adulterated or misbranded, or of a poisonous or deleterious character, within the meaning of this act, the same shall be disposed of by destruction or sale, as the said court may direct."

Without reciting the testimony in detail it is enough to say that for the government it tended to show that the added poisonous substances introduced into the flour by the Alsop Process, in the proportion of 1.8 parts per million, calculated as nitrogen, may be injurious to the health of those who use the flour in bread and other forms of food. On the other hand, the testimony for the respondent tended to show that the process does not add to the flour any poisonous or deleterious ingredients which can in any manner render it injurious to the health of a consumer. On these conflicting proofs the trial court was required to submit the case to the jury. That court—after stating the claims of the parties, the government insisting that the flour was adulerated and should be condemned if it contained any added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient of a kind or character which was capable of rendering such article injurious to health; the respondent contending that the flour should not be condemned unless the added substances were present in such quantity that the flour would be thereby rendered injurious to health—gave certain instructions to the jury. Part of the charge, excepted to by the respondent reads:

"The fact that poisonous substances are to be found in the bodies of human beings in the air, in potable water, and in articles of food, such as ham, bacon, fruits, certain vegetables, and other articles, does not justify the adding of the same or other poisonous substances to articles of food, such as flour, because the statute condemns the adding of poisonous substances. Therefore the court charges you that the government need not prove that this flour,, or foodstuffs made by the use of it, would injure [408] the health of any consumer. It is the character—not the quantity—of the added substance, if any, which is to determine this case."

On the other hand, the respondent insisted that the law is, and requested the court to charge the jury:

"That the burden is upon the prosecution to prove the truth of the charge in the libel, that by the treatment of the flour in question by the said Alsop Process it has been caused to contain added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredients, to wit, nitrites or nitrite reacting material, which may render said flour injurious to health.

"And in this connection you are further instructed that it is incumbent upon the government to prove that any such added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredients, if any, contained in said flour, are of such a character and contained in the flour seized in such quantities, conditions, and amounts as may render said flour injurious to health; and unless you find that all of such facts are so proven you cannot find against the claimant, or condemn the flour in question under that charge in the libel; and if you fail to so find, your verdict upon that count or charge in the libel must be in favor of the claimant or defendant.

. . . . . .

"The law does not prohibit the adding of nitrites or nitrite reacting material to flour, and a jury cannot find for the government or against the claimant, even if it be shown that nitrites or nitrite reacting material was added to the flour in question, unless they believe from a preponderance of the evidence that such addition, if any, rendered said flour injurious to the health of those who might consume the bread or other foods made from said flour."

It is evident from the charge given and requests refused that the trial court regarded the addition to the flour of any poisonous ingredient as an offense within this statute, no [409] matter how small the quantity, and whether the flour might or might not injure the health of the consumer. At least, such is the purport of the part of the charge above given, and if not correct, it was clearly misleading, notwithstanding other parts of the charge seem to recognize that, in order to prove adulteration, it is necessary to show that the flour may be injurious to health. The testimony shows that the effect of the Alsop Process is to bleach or whiten the flour, and thus make it more marketable. If the testimony introduced on the part of the respondent was believed by the jury, they must necessarily have found that the added ingredient, nitrites of a poisonous character, did not have the effect to make the consumption of the flour by any possibility injurious to the health of the consumer.

Digitized by Google

The statute upon its face shows that the primary purpose of Congress was to prevent injury to the public health by the sale and transportation in interstate commerce of misbranded and adulterated foods. The legislation, as against misbranding, intended to make it possible that the consumer should know that an article purchased was what it purported to be; that it might be bought for what it really was, and not upon misrepresentations as to character and quality. As against adulteration, the statute was intended to protect the public health from possible injury by adding to articles of food consumption poisonous and deleterious substances which might render such articles injurious to the health of consumers. If this purpose has been effected by plain and unambiguous language, and the act is within the power of Congress, the only duty of the courts is to give it effect according to its terms. This principle has been frequently recognized in this court. Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 670, 32 L. ed. 1060, 1063, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

"Where a law is expressed in plain and unambiguous terms, whether those terms are general or limited, the legislature should be intended to mean what they have [410] plainly expressed, and consequently no room is left for construction."

Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 414, 421, 44 L. ed. 219, 222, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

"The cases are so numerous in this court to the effect that the province of construction lies wholly within the domain of ambiguity, that an extended review of them is quite unnecessary."

Furthermore, all the words used in the statute should be given their proper signification and effect. Washington Market Co. v. Hoffman, 101 U. S. 112, 115, 25 L. ed. 782, 783.

"We are not at liberty," said Mr. Justice Strong, "to construe any statute so as to deny effect to any part of its language. It is a cardinal rule of statutory construction that significance and effect shall, if possible, be accorded to every word. As early as in Bacon's Abridgment, § 2, it was said that 'a statute ought, upon the whole, to be so construed that, if it can be prevented, no clause, sentence, or word, shall be superfluous, void, or insignificant.' This rule has been repeated innumerable times."

Applying these well-known principles in considering this statute, we find that the fifth subdivision of § 7 provides that food shall be deemed to be adulterated "if it contain any added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient which may render such article injurious to health." The instruction of the trial court permitted his statute to be read without the final and qualifying words, concerning the effect of the article upon health. If Congress had so intended, the provision would have stopped with the condemnation of food which contained any added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient. In other words, the first and familiar consideration is that, if Congress had intended to enact the statute in that form, it would have done so by choice of apt words to express that intent. It did not do so, but only condemned food containing an added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient when such addition might render the article of food injurious [411] to the health. Congress has here, in this statute, with its penalties and forfeitures, definitely outlined its inhibition against a particular class of adulteration.

It is not required that the article of food containing added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredients must affect the public health, and it is not incumbent upon the government in order to make out a case to establish that fact. The act has placed upon the government the burden of establishing, in order to secure a verdict of condemnation under this statute, that the added poisonous or deleterious substances must be such as may render such article injurious to health. The word "may" is here used in its ordinary and usual signification, there being nothing to show the intention of Congress to affix to it any other meaning. It is, says Webster, "an auxiliary verb, qualifying the meaning of another verb, by expressing ability, . . . contingency or liability, or possibility or probability." In thus describing the offense, Congress doubtless took into consideration that flour may be used in many ways, in bread, cake, gravy, broth, etc. It may be consumed, when prepared as a food, by the strong and the weak, the old and the young, the well and the sick; and it is intended that if any flour, because of any added poisonous or other deleterious ingredient, may possibly injure the health of any of these, it shall come within the ban of the statute. If it cannot by any possibility, when the facts are reasonably considered, injure the health of any consumer, such flour, though having a small addition of poisonous or deleterious ingredients, may not be condemned under the act. This is the plain meaning of the words, and in our view needs no additional support by reference to reports and debates, although it may be said in passing that the meaning which we have given to the statute was well expressed by Mr. Heyburn, chairman of the committee having it in charge upon the floor of the Senate (Congressional Record, vol. 40, pt. 2, p. 1131):

Digitized by Google

412] "As to the use of the term 'poisonous,' let me state that everything which contains poison is not poison. It depends on the quantity and the combination. A very large majority of the things consumed by the human family contain, under analysis, some kind of poison, but it depends upon the combination, the chemical relation which it bears to the body in which it exists, as to whether or not it is dangerous to take into the human system."

And such is the view of the English courts construing a similar statute. The English statute provides (§ 3, of the sale of food and drugs act 1875):

"No person shall mix, color, . . . or order or permit any other person to mix, color, . . . any article of food with any ingredient or material so as to render the article injurious to health."

That section was construed in Hull v. Horsnell, 68 J. P. 591, which involved preserved peas, the color of which had been retained by the addition of sulphate of copper, charged to be a poisonous substance and injurious to health. There was a conviction in the lower court. Lord Alverstone, L. C. J., in reversing and remitting the case on appeal, said:

"In my opinion, if the justices convicted the appellant of an offense under § 3 of the sale of food and drugs act 1875, on the ground that the ingredient mixed with the article of food was injurious to health,—that the sulphate of copper was injurious to health, and not on the ground that the peas, by reason of the addition of sulphate of copper, were rendered injurious to health, the conviction is clearly wrong. To constitute an offense under the latter part of § 3 the article of food sold must, by the addition of an ingredient, be rendered injurious to health. All the circumstances must be examined to see whether the article of food has been rendered injurious to health."

We reach the conclusion that the circuit court of appeals did not err in reversing the judgment of the district [413] court for error in its charge with reference to subdivision 5 of § 7.

The circuit court of appeals reached the conclusion that there was no substantial proof to warrant the conviction under the fourth subdivision of § 7, that the flour was mixed, colored, and stained in a manner whereby damage and inferiority were concealed. As the case is to be retried to a jury, we say nothing upon this point.

As to the objection on constitutional grounds, it is not contended that the statute, as construed by the circuit court of appeals and this court, is unconstitutional.

It follows that the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals, reversing the judgment of the District Court, must be affirmed, and the case remanded to the District Court for a new trial.

Affirmed.

RUBBER TIRE WHEEL COMPANY, and Consolidated Rubber Tire Company, Petitioners,

v.

GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 413–420.)

Judgment — conclusiveness — in patent case.

1. A decree of a Federal circuit court of appeals denying patentability to the Grant patent, No. 554,675, for an improvement in rubber-tired wheels consisting of a solid rubber tire held in place in a flaring channel by the tension of two tightly drawn wires imbedded in the rubber within the periphery of the flanges does not work an estoppel in favor of one not a party to the suit, so as to afford him a defense against a charge of infringement (the patent having been upheld by the Supreme Court in a later suit) in making the patented structure by assembling the various elements for that purpose and effecting the combination, merely because he bought one element of the tire, viz., the rubber, from the defendant in the first suit.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 581–587, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — conclusiveness — in patent suit.

2. Defendant's rights under the final decree in a patent infringement suit denying patentability to the Grant patent, No. 554,675 for an improvement in rubber-tired wheels consisting of a solid rubber tire held in place in a flaring channel by the tension of two tightly drawn wires imbedded in the rubber within the periphery of the flanges are not violated by the action of complainants in bringing suit (after the patent has been upheld by the Federal Supreme Court in another suit) against defendant's customers who bought its rubber tire, purchasing from others the wire and flaring channel, and themselves made the patented combination by assembling its various elements.

---

NOTE. — On conclusiveness of judgments, generally—see notes to Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572; Bollong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank, 3 L.R.A. 142; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 577; Morrill v. Morrill, 11 L.R.A. 155; Shores v. Hooper, 11 L.R.A. 308; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson County v. Wharton, 38 L. ed. U. S. 429; and Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Judgment, 581–587, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 37.]

Argued May 7, 1913. Decided February 24, 1914.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed in part a decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, enjoining the prosecution of patent infringement suits against the customers of the defendant in another suit in which the patent was held invalid. Reversed and remanded to the District Court, with instructions to deny the injunction.

See same case below, 106 C. C. A. 318, 183 Fed. 978.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frederick P. Fish argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. L. Stackpole, filed a brief for petitioners:

Doherty infringes the Grant patent when he made a rubber-tired wheel. The Goodyear Company did not make a Grant wheel when it made and sold Doherty the rubber which he used. If Doherty had used the rubber for another purpose, or had sent it to Canada to be made into a rubber-tired wheel, the Goodyear Company would not even have been a contributory infringer, because it would not have acted with Doherty to infringe the patent.

Bullock Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. 63 C. C. A. 607, 129 Fed. 105.

If the Goodyear Company had sold the rubber to Doherty, knowing and intending that he was to use it in making up a Grant rubber-tired wheel, and he did so use it, then the Goodyear Company would have been a contributory infringer, and liable as such, except for the decree which protects it from suit.

Thomson-Houston Electric Co. v. Ohio Brass Co. 26 C. C. A. 170, 54 U. S. App. 1, 80 Fed. 712.

Doherty in the specific case at bar is not protected by the decree in favor of the Goodyear Company, because he is not in privity with the Goodyear Company, who alone is a party to the decree relied on. It is only in favor of the Goodyear Company, not of Doherty, that the estoppel raised by the decree runs.

Reed v. Locks & Canals, 8 How. 274, 12 L. ed. 1077; Aspden v. Nixon, 4 How. 467, 11 L. ed. 1059; Birdsell v. Shaliol, 112 U. S. 485, 28 L. ed. 768, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Russell v. Place, 94 U. S. 606, 24 L. ed. 214.

It has been said that the Goodyear Company is in the position of a licensee under the Grant patent, having the right to make, use, and sell the rubber-tired wheel of the Grant patent. If such is the legal status of the Goodyear Company, it follows that Doherty is not protected by the license. The Goodyear Company could not assign its license to Doherty, and there is no pretense that Doherty was acting as the agent of the Goodyear Company. He was an independent individual manufacturing the rubber-tired wheel on his own responsibility, for his own profit, and on his own machinery, at his own expense. The Goodyear Company could not assign its license to him.

Hapgood v. Hewitt, 119 U. S. 226, 234, 30 L. ed. 369, 372, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193; Troy Iron & Nail Factory v. Corning, 14 How. 205, 14 L. ed. 388; Oliver v. Rumford Chemical Works, 109 U. S. 75, 83, 27 L. ed. 862, 864, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61; Bowers v. Lake Superior Contracting & Dredging Co. 79 C. C. A. 493, 149 Fed. 983.

The situation arising in this case bears a close analogy to infringement by the reconstruction of a patented article, a part of which has worn out by its intended use. The purchaser of a patented article, such for example as a Grant rubber-tired wheel, has the right to use it until it is worn out, but has no right to reconstruct it; that is, if he used a Grant tire until the rubber was entirely worn out, he would have no right to make a new tire by taking off the worn-out rubber and replacing it with a new rubber. Such a reconstruction would be plainly the making of a new tire, and an infringement of the Grant patent.

National Cash Register Co. v. Grobet. 82 C. C. A. 651, 153 Fed. 905; American Cotton-Tie Co. v. Simmons, 106 U. S. 89, 27 L. ed. 79, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52; Davis Electrical Works v. Edison Electric Light Co. 8 C. C. A. 615, 21 U. S. App. 74, 60 Fed. 276; Thomson-Houston Electric Co. v. Kelsey Electric R. Specialty Co. 22 C. C. A. 1, 45 U. S. App. 95, 75 Fed. 1005; Goodyear Shoe Machinery Co. v. Jackson, 55 L.R.A. 692, 50 C. C. A. 159, 112 Fed. 146; Shickle, H. & H. Iron Co. v. St. Louis Car-Coupler Co. 23 C. C. A. 433, 40 U. S. App. 728, 77 Fed. 739.

Mr. H. A. Toulmin argued the cause and filed a brief for respondent:

Petitioners must show better and graver reasons than the facts of this litigation present, before this court will be justified in abdicating or modifying Kessler v. Eldred, 206 U. S. 285, 51 L. ed. 1065, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611, or in abdicating or modifying Waterman v. Mackenzie, 138 U. S. 252, 34 L. ed. 923, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334.

Digitized by Google

The right under the statute to sue the maker, user, and seller, although it means a concurrent right to sue all three at once, or a successive right to sue one such party after another, is subject to the qualification that in either such case the right to sue the other two falls when a judgment giving satisfaction has been rendered against one such defendant.

Birdsell v. Shaliol, 112 U. S. 485, 488, 28 L. ed. 768, 769, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

Where one party buys and sells or deals in the goods of a manufacturer, he holds the relation of privy, and, as such, is entitled to the benefits of a final judgment rendered in a case between his principal and a complainant who afterwards sues him.

Warren Featherbone Co. v. DeCamp, 154 Fed. 198; Lea v. Deakin, 11 Biss. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 8,154; Norton v. San Jose Fruit-Packing Co. 25 C. C. A. 194, 48 U. S. App. 295, 79 Fed. 793, 27 C. C. A. 576, 48 U. S. App. 590, 83 Fed. 512; Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 113, 170, 40 L. ed. 95, 110, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139.

As the action of petitioners in suing respondent's customers reacts against respondent's business to its injury, respondent is entitled, by reason of its relation of privity with its customers, to restrain the prosecution of such suits to prevent irreparable loss due to such reaction.

Johnson Steel Street Rail Co. v. Wharton, 152 U. S. 252, 38 L. ed. 429, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 608; Hubbell v. United States, 171 U. S. 203, 43 L. ed. 136, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 828.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The petitioners are the owners of the Grant patent (No. 554,675) issued February 18, 1896, for an improvement in rubber-tired wheels. In a suit for infringement brought by the petitioners against the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company (the respondent) it was held by the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit that the patent was void for want of novelty. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. Rubber Tire Wheel Co. 53 C. C. A. 583, 116 Fed. 363. Upon the basis of the decree entered upon that decision, the respondent instituted the present suit in the southern district of Ohio, to restrain the petitioners from prosecuting suits for infringement against the respondent's customers. The circuit court granted a preliminary injunction. Upon appeal, the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit sustained the injunction so far as it applied to the prosecution of a suit which the petitioners had brought against John Doherty in the circuit court for the southern district of New York. 106 C. C. A. 318, 183 Fed. 978. This writ of certiorari was then granted.

[415] The Grant tire is composed of three elements: (1) a channel or groove with tapered or inclined sides, (2) a rubber tire with a described shape, adapted to fit into the channel, and (3) a fastening device consisting of independent retaining wires, which pass through the rubber tire and are placed in a particular position. It was held in the sixth circuit that both the elements and the results were old, and hence patentability was denied. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. Rubber Tire Wheel Co. supra; Rubber-Tire Wheel Co. v. Victor Rubber-Tire Co. 59 C. C. A. 215, 123 Fed. 85. In the second circuit, and in the circuit court for the northern district of Georgia, the patent was sustained. Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. Columbia Pneumatic Wagon Wheel Co. 91 Fed. 978; Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. v. Finley Rubber Tire Co. 116 Fed. 629; Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. 147 Fed. 739, 80 C. C. A. 589, 151 Fed. 237; Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. v. Diamond Rubber Co. 85 C. C. A. 349, 157 Fed. 677, 89 C. C. A. 582, 162 Fed. 892. The controversy came to this court upon certiorari to review the decision of the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit in the case last mentioned, and it was finally determined that the patent was valid. Diamond Rubber Co. v. Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. 220 U. S. 428, 55 L. ed. 527, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444. The patented structure was held to be not a mere aggregation of elements, but a new combination of parts, co-acting so as to produce a new and useful result. It was found that the Grant tire possessed a distinctive characteristic; that is, a "tipping and reseating power." This, said this court, "is the result of something more than each element acting separately. It is not the result alone of the iron channel, with diverging sides, nor alone of the retaining bands or the rubber. They each have uses and perform them to an end different from the effect of either, and they must have been designed to such end,—contrived to exactly produce it. There can be no other deduction from their careful relation. The adaptation of the rubber to [416] the flaring channel, the shape of that permitting lateral movement and compression, the retaining band, holding and yielding, placed in such precise adjustment and correlation with the other parts, producing a tire that 'when compressed and bent sidewise shall not escape from the channel, and shall not be cut on the flange of the channel,' and yet shall 'be mobile in the channel.'" 220 U. S. p. 443. There was thus a patentable combination, the patentability of which did not depend on the novelty of any of the elements entering into it, whether rubber, iron, or wires.

Digitized by Google

Doherty, against whom suit was enjoined, had a shop in New York city, where he was engaged in the business of applying rubber tires to vehicle wheels. It appeared that having purchased the rubber from the respondent, and the wire and channel from other parties, he combined these elements and fitted them to a carriage wheel, thus constructing a complete tire. This we may assume to be a typical case.

It is at once apparent that the decree in favor of the Goodyear Company in the former suit does not work an estoppel in favor of Doherty, so as to afford him a defense against the charge of infringement in making the patented structure. He was not a party to the suit in which that decree was rendered; nor, at least with respect to tires made by him, can he be regarded as a privy to that decree. We may lay on one side the question as to the rights of one purchasing from the respondent the completed article. Doherty did not purchase it; he made it himself, assembling its various elements for that purpose and effecting the combination. On no possible theory can it be said that, if the tire thus constructed was covered by the patent, Doherty was entitled to immunity simply because he bought one element of the time from the Goodyear Company.

The respondent, however, is asserting its own right, and not that of Doherty. It insists that, by virtue of the [417] decree in its favor in the infringement suit, it should have the injunction in order to protect its trade. It contends that it has an equitable right to this protection by restraining suits not only against those who buy from it the structure which is the subject of the patent, but also against those who buy its rubber and themselves make the patented tire. In urging this contention the respondent relies upon the doctrine of Kessler v. Eldred, 206 U. S. 285, 51 L. ed. 1065, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611. There, Kessler and Eldred were rival manufacturers of electric cigar lighters. Eldred, being the owner of the Chambers patent, sued Kessler in the northern district of Indiana for infringement. The circuit court, finding noninfringement, dismissed the bill; and this decree was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit. 45 C. C. A. 454, 106 Fed. 509. Subsequently, Eldred brought suit on the same patent in the northern district of New York against Kirkland, who was selling a similar cigar lighter, but not of Kessler's make. The circuit court of appeals for the second circuit held the Kirkland lighter to be an infringement. 64 C. C. A. 588, 130 Fed. 342. Eldred then began a suit for infringement in the western district of New York against Breitwieser, a user of Kessler's lighters. Thereupon Kessler filed his bill in the circuit court for the northern district of Illinois to enjoin Eldred from prosecuting suit against anyone for alleged infringement of the Chambers patent by purchase, use, or sale of any electric cigar lighter manufactured by Kessler, and identical with the lighter before the court in the suit of Eldred v. Kessler. Kessler, being defeated in the circuit court, appealed to the circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit. Answering questions certified by that court, this court held that the decree in the suit of Eldred v. Kessler had the effect of entitling Kessler to continue the business of manufacturing and selling throughout the United States the same lighter he had theretofore been manufacturing and selling, without molestation by Eldred [418] through the patent which he held; and that the decree also had the effect of making a suit by Eldred against any customer of Kessler for the alleged infringement of the patent by use or sale of Kessler's lighters a wrongful interference with Kessler's business, with respect to which he was without adequate remedy at law. 206 U. S. pp. 287, 290.

It will be observed that the equity thus sustained sprang from the decree in the former suit between the parties, and that the decision went no further than to hold it to be a wrongful interference with Kessler's business to sue his customers for using and selling the lighter which Kessler had made and sold to them, and which was the same as that passed upon by the court in the previous suit. His right to make and sell the particular article, the making of which Eldred had unsuccessfully challenged as an infringement, was deemed to include the right to have others secure in buying that article, and in its use and resale. But the present question was in no way involved. It was not held that Kessler would have been entitled to restrain Eldred from suing other manufacturers of lighters who might buy from Kessler some of the materials used in such manufacture.

The distinction is controlling. Under the doctrine of Kessler v. Eldred, the respondent—by reason of the final adjudication in its favor—was entitled to make and sell the Grant structure, and to have those who bought that structure from it unmolested in taking title and in enjoying the rights of ownership. It may also be assumed that the respondent had the right to make and sell its rubber without hindrance by the petitioners claiming under the patent. The trade right of the respondent, however, whether with respect to the complete structure or its separate parts, is merely the right to have that which it lawfully produces freely bought and sold without restraint or interference. It is a right which attaches to its product—to a particular thing—as an article of lawful commerce, [419] and it continues only so long as the commodity to which the right applies retains its separate identity. If that commodity is combined with other things in the process of the manufacture of a new commodity, the trade right in the original part as an article of commerce is necessarily gone. So that when other persons become manufacturers on their own behalf, assembling the various elements and uniting them so as to produce the patented device,—a new article,—it is manifest that the respondent cannot insist upon their being protected from suit for infringement by reason merely of its right to make and sell, and the fact of its having made and sold, some component part of that article. It must be able to go beyond a mere trade right in that element, and to show itself to be entitled to have its customers manufacture the patented structure. Thus the fallacy in the respondent's contention becomes apparent. The decree gave the respondent no right to have others make Grant tires. It could make and sell them, and it could make and sell rubber; it could demand protection for its trade rights in the commodities it produced. But it had no transferable immunity in manufacture. The decree gave it no privilege to demand that others should be allowed to make and sell the patented structure in order that it might have a market for its rubber.

Digitized by Google

The suit against Doherty was based upon his conduct in constructing Grant tires. The fact that the respondent could not be charged with liability as a participant in the infringement thus alleged did not excuse him; and the petitioners, in bringing the suit, did not violate any right of the respondent.

It is not necessary to consider the evidence bearing upon the question whether Doherty had authority from the petitioners, as that is a matter between him and them; and if the facts afford him a defense, he is free to urge it.

The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals, in so far [420] as it affirmed the order of injunction granted by the Circuit Court, is reversed, and the cause is remanded to the District Court, with instructions to enter an order denying the application for injunction.

It is so ordered.

Mr. Justice Day states that in his view the suit against Doherty was properly enjoined upon the principles established in this court in Kessler v. Eldred, 206 U. S. 285, 51 L. ed. 1065, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; and, without repeating, agrees with the reasoning by which that conclusion was reached in the opinion of Judge Warrington, speaking for the circuit court of appeals in this case.

WILLIAM SEIM and Gustav Reissig
v.
JAMES D. HURD, Consolidated Rubber Tire Company, and Rubber Tire Wheel Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 420-427.)

Cases certified — questions not presented by facts.

Questions certified by a Federal circuit court of appeals to the Supreme Court must go unanswered where they are not apposite to the facts as stated in the certificate.

[For other cases, see Cases Certified, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 141.]

Argued December 17, 1913. Decided February 24, 1914.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, presenting four questions as to the immunity of the successful defendant in a patent infringement suit, and its customers, from subsequent prosecutions for infringement. Dismissed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Hughes:

The certificate in this case is as follows:

"There arises in this case a question of law upon which this court desires the instruction of the Supreme Court for its proper decision.

[421] "It is therefore ordered that the statement and questions here following be certified to the Supreme Court as provided by the 6th section of the act of March 3d, 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549].

"United States patent No. 554,675 was issued February 18, 1896, to Arthur W. Grant for rubber tired wheel. The patentee immediately assigned the entire interest in

---

NOTE.—On definiteness of question to be certified—see note to Waco Water & Light Co. v. Waco, 31 L.R.A. 392.

Digitized by Google

said patent to the Rubber Tire Wheel Company. October 11, 1897, the Rubber Tire Wheel Company, being the sole owner, sold and assigned to the complainant, James D. Hurd, an exclusive license and shop-right to put on rubber tires according to said patent in Berkshire county, Massachusetts, in the western part of Vermont, and in seventeen counties in New York state, 'with the exclusive right to ship and sell the same throughout said territory, and not elsewhere;' subject, however, to the rights of the Hartford Rubber Works Company, under a certain contract. Mr. Hurd immediately commenced and has ever since continued to operate under said patent in said territory.

"July 18, 1899, the owner of said patent conveyed the exclusive license to make and vend such tires throughout the United States to the Consolidated Rubber Tire Company, subject, however, to Hurd's rights and the Hartford Rubber Works Company contract.

"Much litigation has been had in reference to said patent. The following are the only cases important here, all of which were commenced after the exclusive license was granted to the complainant Hurd, and in none of which was he a party to the action or in control of the action.

"The circuit court of appeals in the sixth circuit, in the case of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. Rubber Tire Wheel Co. 53 C. C. A. 583, 116 Fed. 363, held that the patent was invalid.

"The court in the second circuit, in the case of the Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. v. Finley Rubber Tire Co. 116 Fed. 629, held that the patent was valid.

"The court in the sixth circuit, in the case of Rubber-Tire Wheel Co. v. Victor Rubber-Tire Co. 59 C. C. A. 215, 123 Fed. 85, held that the patent was void.

"The court in the second circuit, in the case of the [422] Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. 147 Fed. 739, affirmed on appeal in 80 C. C. A. 589, 151 Fed. 237, held that the patent was valid and infringed.

"The circuit court of the district of Indiana, in the case of the Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. and Rubber Tire Wheel Co., D. B. Sullivan and Kenney & Sullivan v. Kokomo Co., D. C. Sparker, A. Lehman, and G. W. Landan, not reported, dismissed the complaint upon the pleadings, testimony, and exhibits for want of equity, no opinion being written, and the ground for the decision not being set forth in the order, except that the complaint was dismissed 'for want of equity,' the case then being appealed by the complainants to the U. S. circuit court of appeals of the seventh circuit, and thereupon dismissed thereafter.

"The circuit court of appeals in the second circuit, in the case of the Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. v. Diamond Rubber Co. 85 C. C. A. 349, 157 Fed. 678, and on rehearing (89 C. C. A. 582, 162 Fed. 892), held that the patent was valid and infringed by the defendant.

"The Supreme Court of the United States affirmed this decision in 220 U. S. 428, 55 L. ed. 527, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444, and held that the patent was valid and infringed by the defendant.

"None of these cases were for infringement in Hurd's exclusive territory.

"In view of the ruling of the Supreme Court in Kessler v. Eldred, 206 U. S. 285, 51 L. ed. 1065, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611, the court of appeals in the second circuit inserted the following clause in the final decree in the case of the Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. v. Diamond Rubber Co. 89 C. C. A. 582, 162 Fed. 895.

[423] " 'Nothing in this injunction shall prevent or is intended to prevent or enjoin this defendant from handling, using, and selling rubber tires and rims covered by the Grant patent, manufactured by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, having a right to manufacture, use, and sell such tires under a judicial decree in the Federal courts of the sixth circuit; or manufactured by the Kokomo Rubber Company, having a right to manufacture, use, and sell such tires under a judicial decree in the district of Indiana, seventh circuit; or manufactured by the Victor Rubber Tire Company, under a judicial decree in a litigation in the Federal courts in the sixth circuit, wherein in such litigations it has been judicially determined that the said Grant patent is invalid and void.'

"After the decision of the Supreme Court sustaining the Grant patent, Hurd commenced this suit, joining with him the legal owner and licensee of the patent, against defendants residing and doing business within Hurd's exclusive territory. Defendants purchased the infringing tires from the Diamond Rubber Company of New York, which was the defendant in the former litigation, and at the city of New York, and such tires were delivered to defendants at the city of New York, and then taken to Albany, complainant Hurd's territory, and the rubber, metal channel, and retaining wires were there assembled and attached to the wheel rim by defendants, and not by the Kokomo Company or the Diamond Rubber Company of New York.

"Defendants now claim that the infringing tires used by them in their business were made by the Kokomo Rubber Company and sold to them by the Diamond Rubber Company of and at New York city, said Kokomo Company being the defendant in the action in the district of Indiana, where the complaint wa. dismissed for want of equity.

Digitized by Google

"Defendants claim that under the ruling of the Supreme [424] Court in the case of Kessler v. Eldred, supra, the Kokomo Company have the right to manufacture the infringing tires, and that the tires so made are free from the monopoly of the patent, and the users of the tires made by the Kokomo Company are immune from prosecution, and such tires may be used and sold by anyone.

"On the other hand, it is claimed by complainants that the doctrine of the case of Kessler v. Eldred does not apply here for the reason that the patent has since been held valid by the Supreme Court, and that the complainant Hurd had possession of his limited territory under his exclusive license before any of the suits in question were commenced, and was not a party to those actions, and had no control over any of those actions, and is not privy to the parties in those actions, and is therefore not bound by the decisions in those actions; also that the decision in Kessler v. Eldred was upon the ground that a decree that an article in question is, or is not, an infringement of the patent, is res judicata as to similar articles only, and does not apply to a case where the patent was held void by the lower court, and afterward held valid by the Supreme Court, and also that no specific ground for the decision in the case against the Kokomo Company having be stated by the court, the reasons for that decision cannot now be inferred, and such decision cannot be binding upon any person not a party to that action.

Questions Certified.

"The court entertaining a doubt as to which is the correct interpretation to be put upon the opinion in Kessler v. Eldred, upon the facts set forth above, desires the instruction of the Supreme Court for the proper decision of this appeal, and to that end it certifies to the Supreme Court under § 6 of the court of appeals act, for its instruction, the following questions:

"1st. Has the Kokomo Company the right to manufacture [425] the infringing tires free from the monopoly of the patent?

"2d. Are purchasers and users of infringing tires made by the Kokomo Company immune from prosecution by the owners of the patent?

"3d. Are the defendants immune from prosecution by the complainant Hurd for using and selling the infringing tires made by the Kokomo Company, and sold and delivered to them by the Diamond Rubber Company of New York, at the city of New York, in the exclusive territory conveyed to Hurd prior to the commencement of the action against the Kokomo Company?

"4th. If the Kokomo Company is immune in making the infringing rubber, which is only one element of the combination of the patent, are its customers who purchase the rubber of the Kokomo Company and the metal rims and retaining wires of other parties, and sell them to be assembled upon wheel rims, making the completed structure of the patent, also immune from prosecution?"

Mr. Charles K. Offield argued the cause and filed a brief for William Seim et al.

Mr. Walter E. Ward argued the cause and filed a brief for James D. Hurd et al.

Mr. Justice Hughes, after making the above statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Hurd, a licensee for a limited territory under the Grant patent for rubber tires, joining with him the legal owner of the patent and the holder of an exclusive license subject to the rights of Hurd and another, brought suit against Seim and Reissig, for infringement. It is stated that the defendants purchased the infringing tires from the Diamond Rubber Company of New York, and, also, that it is the contention of the defendants that these tires were bought by the Diamond Rubber Company from the [426] Kokomo Company. The patent had been sustained in a suit against the Diamond Rubber Company (89 C. C. A. 582, 162 Fed. 895, 220 U. S. 428, 55 L. ed. 527, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444), but by a provision in the final decree there was excepted from the operation of the injunction tires manufactured by parties to other suits in which the patent had been declared invalid, naming, among others, the Kokomo Company.

The further statement of the certificate, however, makes it plain that the defendants did not purchase the patented structure, but made it themselves. The statement is that "such tires" (referring to those purchased by the defendants) "were delivered to defendants at the city of New York, and then taken to Albany, complainant Hurd's territory, and the rubber, metal channel, and retaining wires were there assembled and attached to the wheel rim by defendants, and not by the Kokomo Company or the Diamond Rubber Company of New York."

The elements in the Grant structure were old. There had been previous combinations of rubber, metal channels, and retaining wires in the effort to produce a successful rubber tire (220 U. S. pp. 438, 439). The claims of the Grant patent were narrow and were limited closely to a specified combination which, through the co-operation of the various parts, when these were correlated in the precise adjustment described, produced a new and useful result.

Digitized by Google

It is thus apparent that the defendants themselves constructed the device, effecting that union of the separate elements which alone could bring the structure within the patent claims. In this aspect, it is immaterial from whom they bought the rubber or the wires or the channel. It is not the case of the purchase of the article in question from one who had a right to sell. There was no actual infringement until they made the tire, and for their act in making it they could not escape liability by the purchase of parts from others. See Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. [427] Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. decided this day [232 U. S. 413, ante, 663, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403].

None of the questions certified is apposite to the facts as we understand the certificate to state them. It may have been the intention by the use of the words "infringing tires" in the first, second, and third questions to refer to the rubber stock only. It seems to be conceded in the arguments of both parties that the rubber alone is made by the Kokomo Company. But the questions, as put, are not raised by the case made, and for that reason they must go unanswered. Neither the right of the Kokomo Company to make the Grant structure, nor the right of a purchaser or user of that structure, if made and sold by the Kokomo Company, is involved.

The fourth question is as follows:

"If the Kokomo Company is immune in making the infringing rubber, which is only one element of the combination of the patent, are its customers, who purchase the rubber of the Kokomo Company and the metal rims and retaining wires of other parties, and sell them, to be assembled upon wheel rims, making the completed structure of the patent, also immune from prosecution?"

A similar question is answered in the case of Woodward Co. v. Hurd, decided this day [232 U. S. 428, infra, 670, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 409], but it is not presented by the facts of the present case. There is no suggestion that the defendants here purchased the various parts and sold them to be assembled by their customers, but, on the contrary, as we have said, the defendants made the structure themselves.

In view of the form of the questions, the certificate must be dismissed.

Dismissed.

[428] WOODWARD COMPANY v. JAMES D. HURD, Consolidated Rubber Tire Company, and Rubber Tire Wheel Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 428–430.)

Judgment — conclusiveness — in patent case.

A decree dismissing for want of equity a suit for the infringement of the Grant patent No. 554,675 for an improvement in rubber-tired wheels consisting of a solid rubber tire held in place in a flaring channel by the tension of two tightly drawn wires imbedded in the rubber within the periphery of the flanges affords no defense to defendant's customers against a charge of contributory infringement (the patent having afterwards been upheld by the Federal Supreme Court in another suit) based upon their purchase of the rubber from defendant, and the metal channel and retaining wires from other parties, and the resale of these various elements with the intent that they shall be assembled and combined by the purchasers into the patented structure.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 581–587, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 142.]

Argued December 17, 1913. Decided February 24, 1914.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, presenting four questions as to the immunity of the successful defendant in a patent infringement suit, and its customers, from subsequent prosecutions for infringement. Fourth question answered in the negative; other questions unanswered.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles K. Offield argued the cause and filed a brief for the Woodward Company.

Mr. Walter E. Ward argued the cause and filed a brief for James D. Hurd et al.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The recitals of the certificate with respect to the Grant patent, and the decrees which have been rendered in suits brought for its infringement, are identical with those contained in the certificate in Seim v. Hurd, decided this day [232 U. S. 420, ante, 667, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406]. The questions certified are, in substance, the same. The facts of the present case are thus stated in the certificate:

NOTE.—On conclusiveness of judgments, generally, see notes to Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572; Bollong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank, 3 L.R.A. 142; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 577; Morrill v. Morrill, 11 L.R.A. 155; Shores v. Hooper, 11 L.R.A. 308; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson County v. Wharton, 38 L. ed. U. S. 429; and Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

Digitized by Google

"After the decision of the Supreme Court sustaining the Grant patent, Hurd commenced this suit, joining with him the legal owner and licensee of the patent, against defendants, residing and doing business within Hurd's exclusive territory. Defendant purchased the infringing tires—the rubber portions only, not the metal channel or retaining wires—from the Diamond Rubber Company of [429] New York, which was the defendant in the former litigation, and the rubber, metal channels, and retaining wires were sold by the defendant, the Woodward Company, to be assembled and attached to the wheel rim of its purchasers, and not by the Kokomo Company.

"Defendants now claim that the infringing tires—the rubber stock only—used by them in their business was made by the Kokomo Rubber Company, which was the defendant in the action in the district of Indiana, where the complaint was dismissed for want of equity, and sold to them by the Diamond Rubber Company of New York, at the city of New York, and there delivered."

It thus appears that the Kokomo Company did not make the patented device, but only one of its elements,—the rubber stock. Nor did the defendant itself make the patented article. The defendant, buying from the Diamond Company the rubber that had been made by the Kokomo Company, and otherwise obtaining the necessary channel of metal and the retaining wires, sold all the parts to be united into the patented structure by its customers. Neither the right of the Kokomo Company, by virtue of the decree in its favor, to make and sell the patented thing, or to make and sell its rubber, nor its right to have the commodity which it lawfully produces freely move as an article of commerce through the channels of trade without hindrance by the owners of the patent, is here involved. See Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. decided this day [232 U. S. 413, ante, 663, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403]. The case as stated concerns the liability of the defendant as a contributory infringer upon the assumption that, in the manner described, it assembles the various elements essential to the making of the Grant tire, and sells them with the intent and purpose that they shall be so combined.

Can the defendant demand immunity upon the ground that one of the elements in which it dealt was made and sold by the Kokomo Company? We think not. It is not [430] simply a purchaser of, or dealer in, that which the Kokomo Company produces. The defendant goes beyond that; it buys from others the parts that are as much needed in effecting the patented combination as the rubber itself, and sells them in order that the infringing device may be constructed by its customers.

The fourth question which is certified by the court below is:

"If the Kokomo Company is immune in making the infringing rubber, which is only one element of the combination of the patent, are its customers who purchase the rubber of the Kokomo Company and the metal rims and retaining wires of other parties, and sell them to be assembled upon wheel rims, making the completed structure of the patent, also immune from prosecution?"

We answer this question in the negative. The other questions are not raised by the case made, and hence are left unanswered. It is so ordered.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE, & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
CITY OF MINNEAPOLIS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 430–442.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — imposing special burden on railway company.

The expense of constructing and maintaining the necessary bridge over the gap in a railway right of way made by the mu-

---

NOTE.—On the power to compel a railroad to establish or maintain at its own expense overhead or underground crossing, as affected by the fact that the street or highway is opened subsequently to the construction of the railroad—see note to State ex rel. Minneapolis v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 298.

As to the power to lay out streets or highways across railway property or right of way—see note to Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Louisville, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1213.

As to the necessity of making compensation upon laying out streets across railway property, and the measure thereof, including damages for constructing the crossing and necessary safety appliances—see note to New York, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Rhodes, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1225.

On the duty of a railroad company to construct bridges at its own expense over public drainage ditches—see note to Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Appanoose County, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1118.

On canal as navigable water—see note to State ex rel. Lyon v. Columbia Water Power Co. 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 435.

Digitized by Google

nicipal construction across it of a canal or water way with footpaths on each side connecting two lakes used for public recreation may be cast upon the railway company without denying it the due process of law guaranteed by the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 458–466, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 150.]

Argued December 19, 1913. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for Hennepin County, in that state, in a controversy submitted upon an agreed statement of facts presenting the question as to the right of a railway company to compensation for bridging the gap in its right of way made by the municipal construction of a canal. Affirmed.

See same case below, 115 Minn. 460, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 133 N. W. 169, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 1029.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. F. W. Root argued the cause, and, with Mr. Burton Hanson, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Counsel for the city will be unable to cite the court to any respectable case which applies the doctrine of police power to the acquisition of private property, to the compulsory outlay of private funds, not to the avoidance or correction of something injurious to the community, but to the provision of some mere pleasure to either the few or the many.

Contrast the holding of the state supreme court in our case with the sedulous care exhibited by that court for the property of the individual citizen since the amendment to the state Constitution, which forbids damage to private property without compensation.

Sallden v. Little Falls, 102 Minn. 358, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 790, 120 Am. St. Rep. 635, 113 N. W. 884.

Mr. Chelsea J. Rockwood argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

Railways are charged with the duty of separating grades, or adopting other safety devices, at their own expense.

State ex rel. Minneapolis v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 35 Minn. 131, 59 Am. Rep. 313, 28 N. W. 3; State ex rel. Minneapolis v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 39 Minn. 219, 39 N. W. 153; State ex rel. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. District Ct. 42 Minn. 247, 7 L.R.A. 121, 44 N. W. 7; State ex rel. Minneapolis v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 98 Minn. 380, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 298, 120 Am. St. Rep. 581, 108 N. W. 261, 8 Ann. Cas. 1047, affirmed in 214 U. S. 497, 53 L. ed. 1060, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698; State ex rel. Duluth v. Northern P. R. Co. 98 Minn. 429, 108 N. W. 269, affirmed in 208 U. S. 583, 52 L. ed. 630, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; State ex rel. Faribault v. Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. 98 Minn. 536, 108 N. W. 822; Minneapolis v. Minneapolis Street R. Co. 115 Minn. 514, 133 N. W. 80; Twin City Separator Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 118 Minn. 491, 137 N. W. 193; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 38 L. ed. 269, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Detroit, Ft. W. & B. I. R. Co. v. Osborn, 189 U. S. 383, 47 L. ed. 860, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Fayetteville, 75 Ark. 534, 87 S. W. 1174; Woodruff v. Catlin, 54 Conn. 277, 6 Atl. 849; Cleveland v. Augusta, 102 Ga. 233, 43 L.R.A. 638, 29 S. E. 584; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, 140 Ill. 309, 29 N. E. 1109; Chicago, B & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 149 Ill. 457, 37 N. E. 78, affirmed in 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Shelley, 163 Ind. 36, 71 N. E. 151; Cincinnati, I. & W. R. Co. v. Connersville, 170 Ind. 316, 83 N. E. 503; New York, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Rhodes, 171 Ind. 521, 24 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1225, 86 N. E. 840; Boston & M. R. Co. v. York County, 79 Me. 386, 10 Atl. 113; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, 47 Neb. 549, 41 L.R.A. 481, 53 Am. St. Rep. 557, 66 N. W. 624; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Sharpe, 38 Ohio St. 150; Thorpe v. Rutland & B. R. Co. 27 Vt. 140, 62 Am. Dec. 625; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Milwaukee, 97 Wis. 418, 72 N. W. 1118.

As a necessary corollary, the measure of damages, in the absence of a statute on the subject, in taking an easement for the crossing of a railway for highway purposes, does not include the cost of bridges and other safety devices.

State ex rel. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. District Ct. 42 Minn. 247, 7 L.R.A. 121, 44 N. W. 7; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 149 Ill. 457, 37 N. E. 78, affirmed in 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Cincinnati, I. & W. R. Co. v. Connersville, 170 Ind. 316, 83 N. E. 503, affirmed in 218 U. S. 336, 54 L. ed. 1060, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93, 20 Ann. Cas. 1206; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Fayetteville, 75 Ark. 534, 87 S. W. 1174; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, 140 Ill. 309, 29 N. E. 1109; Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Shelley, 163 Ind. 36, 71 N. E. 151; New York, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Rhodes, 171 Ind. 521, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1225, 86 N. E. 840; Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 144 Iowa, 10, 121

Digitized by Google

N. W. 690; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Louisville, 131 Ky. 108, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1213, 114 S. W. 743; Albany Northern R. Co. v. Brownell, 24 N. Y. 345; People ex rel. Buffalo v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 156 N. Y. 570, 51 N. E. 312; Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Canal Bd. 204 N. Y. 476, 97 N. E. 964, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1228; Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Oklahoma, 12 Okla. 82, 69 Pac. 1050.

The right of the public to convenient crossings, and the duty of protection to the public, exist at common law.

State ex rel. Minneapolis v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 98 Minn. 400, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 298, 120 Am. St. Rep. 581, 108 N. W. 261, 8 Ann. Cas. 1047; Chicago & Erie R. Co. v. Luddington, 175 Ind. 35, 91 N. E. 939, 93 N. E. 273; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Gregg, — Ind. —, 102 N. E. 961.

The same rule applies to waterways, natural and artificial.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Illinois, 201 U. S. 506, 50 L. ed. 845, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518, affirming 214 Ill. 9, 73 N. E. 393; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Appanoose County, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1117, 104 C. C. A. 573, 182 Fed. 291; Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Luddington, 175 Ind. 35, 91 N. E. 939, 93 N. E. 273; Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 144 Iowa, 10, 121 N. W. 690; Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Canal Bd. 204 N. Y. 476, 97 N. E. 964, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1228.

Lands and waters reserved for the recreation of the people are devoted to a public use, a use as fully entitled as any other to the protection of the law.

Lamprey v. State, 52 Minn. 181, 18 L.R.A. 670, 38 Am. St. Rep. 541, 53 N. W. 1139; State Park Comrs. v. Henry, 38 Minn. 266, 36 N. W. 874; Shoemaker v. United States, 147 U. S. 282, 37 L. ed. 170, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361; Smart v. Aroostook Lumber Co. 103 Me. 37, 14 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1083, 68 Atl. 527; Atty. Gen. v. Woods, 108 Mass. 436, 11 Am. Rep. 380; Atty. Gen. v. Williams (Knowlton v. Williams), 174 Mass. 476, 47 L.R.A. 314, 55 N. E. 77; Grand Rapids v. Powers, 89 Mich. 94, 14 L.R.A. 498, 28 Am. St. Rep. 276, 50 N. W. 661; People v. Adirondack R. Co. 160 N. Y. 248, 54 N. E. 689, affirmed in 176 U. S. 335, 44 L. ed. 492, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460; Re New York, 167 N. Y. 624, 60 N. E. 1108, affirming 57 App. Div. 166, 68 N. Y. Supp. 196; State ex rel. Lyon v. Columbia Water Power Co. 82 S. C. 181, 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 435, 129 Am. St. Rep. 876, 63 S. E. 884, 17 Ann. Cas. 343; Madson v. Spokane Valley Land & Water Co. 40 Wash. 414, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 82 Pac. 718.

[436] Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to review a judgment of the supreme court of the state of Minnesota, which affirmed a judgment entered in a controversy submitted upon an agreed statement of facts. The statement, in substance, shows:

Within the limits of the city of Minneapolis are Lake Calhoun, Lake of the Isles, and Cedar lake, lying in close proximity to each other, and used by the public for pleasure boating and other recreations. The city, having acquired for park and parkway purposes the shores of Lake Calhoun and Lake of the Isles, and a portion of the shores of Cedar lake, together with large tracts of land in the vicinity, is engaged in constructing two canals which will connect the lakes and will greatly enhance their usefulness to the public. Between Lake Calhoun and Lake of the Isles is a strip of land, 600 feet wide in its narrowest part, through which one of these canals is to be opened. Along this strip and near its center lies the right of way—100 feet in width—of the appellant, the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul Railway Company, which is used by it in the operation of its road. The city, in order to provide for the canal and walks on either side, seeks to condemn an easement in a piece of land 100 feet wide across the right of way. The two lakes are now connected by a small water course which crosses the right of way about 59 feet from the center of the proposed canal, and is carried under the railway tracks by a pipe about 3 feet in diameter. The construction of the canal will render the water course and pipe useless and permit the closing of this channel. At the point where the land is to be taken by the city, the railway tracks are upon an artificial embankment about 18 feet above the established level of the [437] water in the lakes. The city's improvement will require the construction of a bridge to carry the tracks across the canal and walks. The agreed value of the mere land proposed to be taken, irrespective of the cost of the bridge, is the sum of $10; and the estimated cost of building a bridge in accordance with plans prepared by the city and accepted by the railway company is the sum of $18,513. It is agreed that an adequate bridge for railway purposes, built according to the plans usually adopted by the railway company, would cost only $15,969. The difference in cost, or $2,544, is due to ornamental features, and this amount it is agreed that, in any event, the city shall pay. For the purposes of this proceeding, the railway company conceded the authority of the city to take the described land under the power of eminent domain; and it was agreed accordingly that the city should take the land and construct the canal and walks, and that the railway company should build the bridge after the city's plans; but no claim for damages or compensation to which the railway company was entitled under the law by reason of the taking was waived.

Digitized by Google

The controversy submitted was as to the amount which the company should receive. It was contended by the company that it should be paid (1) the sum of $10 as the agreed value of the land taken, (2) the entire cost of the bridge, and (3) such further sum as would be sufficient to maintain the bridge. It was also insisted that to divest it of its property without such payment would be a violation both of the state Constitution and of § 1 of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution. In the court of first instance it was held that the company was entitled to recover only the sum of $2,554, being the value of the land and the cost of the ornamental features of the bridge; and this judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. 115 Minn. 460, 51 L.R.A.(N.S.) 236, 133 N. W. 169, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 1029.

The question thus presented is whether the refusal [438] to allow compensation for the cost of constructing and maintaining the necessary railroad bridge across the gap in the right of way, made by the building of the canal, amounts to a deprivation of property without due process of law.

It is well settled that railroad corporations may be required, at their own expense, not only to abolish existing grade crossings, but also to build and maintain suitable bridges or viaducts to carry highways, newly laid out, over their tracks, or to carry their tracks over such highways. New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 567, 38 L. ed. 269, 272, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 252, 255, 41 L. ed. 979, 990, 991, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 170 U. S. 57, 42 L. ed. 948, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Northern P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 208 U. S. 583, 597, 52 L. ed. 630, 636, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 214 U. S. 497, 53 L. ed. 1060, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698; Cincinnati, I. & W. R. Co. v. Connersville, 218 U. S. 336, 343, 344, 54 L. ed. 1060, 1064, 1065, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93, 20 Ann. Cas. 1206. See also Detroit, Ft. W. & B. I. R. Co. v. Osborn, 189 U. S. 383, 47 L. ed. 860, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Drainage Commission, 197 U. S. 453, 462, 49 L. ed. 831, 835, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 471; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 592, 593, 50 L. ed. 596, 609, 610, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Goldsboro, decided this day [232 U. S. 548, ante, 721, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364]. The rule, as established in the state of Minnesota, was thus declared in the case of State ex rel. Minneapolis v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 98 Minn. 380, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 298, 120 Am. St. Rep. 581, 108 N. W. 261, 8 Ann. Cas. 1047 (see 115 Minn. p. 466): "A railroad company receives its charter and franchise subject to the implied right of the state to establish and open such streets and highways over and across its right of way as public convenience and necessity may, from time to time, require. That right on the part of the state attaches by implication of law to the franchise of the railroad company, and imposes upon it an obligation to construct and maintain at its own expense suitable crossings at new streets and highways to the same extent as required by the rules of the common law at streets and highways in existence when the railroad was constructed." In that case, it appeared that long after the construction of the railroad, the city of Minneapolis had laid [439] out a street across the railroad right of way, building at its own cost a bridge over the railroad tracks. After the bridge had been maintained for several years by the city it was destroyed by fire, and the city then demanded that the railroad company should build a new one. This demand the state court sustained; and, mandamus having thereupon been awarded (101 Minn. 545, 112 N. W. 1142), the case was brought to this court, one of the grounds being that the action of the state deprived the company of its property without due process of law. The judgment was affirmed (St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 214 U. S. 497, 53 L. ed. 1060, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698), this conclusion being reached upon the authority of Northern P. R. Co. v. Duluth, 208 U. S. 583, 52 L. ed. 630, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341. Although the Duluth Case was earlier in this court, the decision therein by the supreme court of the state immediately followed that of the same court in the Minneapolis Case, and applied the principle which had been there announced. State ex rel. Duluth v. Northern P. R. Co. 98 Minn. 429, 108 N. W. 269. The facts were that after the railroad had been built, a street had been opened across the right of way, and subsequently a viaduct for the crossing had been constructed at the joint expense of the city and the railroad company, the former agreeing to maintain it. Later, the city, repudiating the agreement, insisted that the company should repair the viaduct at its own expense. The state court entered judgment for the city, holding that the obligation to construct and maintain the viaduct rested upon the railroad company, and that hence the contract was invalid. This court affirmed the judgment, saying: "As the supreme court of Minnesota points out in the opinion in 98 Minn. 380, . . . the state courts are not altogether agreed as to the right to compel railroads, without compensation, to construct and maintain suitable crossings at streets extended over its right of way, after the construction of the railroad. The great weight of state authority [440] is in favor of such right. See cases cited in 98 Minn. 380. There can be no question as to the attitude of this court upon this question, as it has been uniformly held that the right to exercise the police power is a continuing one; that it cannot be contracted away, and that a requirement that a company or individual comply with reasonable police regulations without compensation is the legitimate exercise of the power, and not in violation of the constitutional inhibition against the impairment of the obligation of contracts. . . . In this case the supreme court of Minnesota has held that the charter of the company, as well as the common law, required the railroad, as to existing and future streets, to maintain them in safety, and to hold its charter rights subject to the exercise of the legislative power in this behalf, and that any contract which undertook to limit the exercise of this right was without consideration, against public policy, and void. This doctrine is entirely consistent with the principles decided in the cases referred to in this court."

Digitized by Google

In Cincinnati, I. & W. R. Co. v. Connersville, 218 U. S. 336, 343, 344, 54 L. ed. 1060, 1064, 1065, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93, 20 Ann. Cas. 1206, a street was opened through an embankment upon which the railroad tracks were laid. At the time of the construction of the railroad that part of the embankment was outside the city limits. But the city was extended, and the intersecting street was laid out in order to provide a suitable means of communication between the parts of the city on either side of the embankment. On reviewing the judgment entered in the condemnation proceeding, it was held that there was no violation of the 14th Amendment in refusing to allow to the company the cost of building a bridge for its tracks over the opening made by the street. "The question," said the court, "as to the right of the railway company to be reimbursed for any moneys necessarily expended in constructing the bridge in question is, we think, concluded [441] by former decisions of this court. . . . The railway company accepted its franchise from the state, subject necessarily to the condition that it would conform at its own expense to any regulations, not arbitrary in their character, as to the opening or use of streets, which had for their object the safety of the public, or the promotion of the public convenience, and which might, from time to time, be established by the municipality, when proceeding under legislative authority, within whose limits the company's business was conducted. . . . Without further discussion, . . . we adjudge, upon the authority of former cases, that there was no error in holding that the city could not be compelled to reimburse the railway company for the cost of the bridge in question."

Under the doctrine of these decisions, it necessarily follows that if the city of Minneapolis had opened a public road through the embankment of the plaintiff in error, the latter would have had no ground to complain that its constitutional rights had been violated because it was compelled to bridge the gap at its own cost. No different rule could be applied because the highway was laid out in order to increase the advantages of a public park. In this aspect, it would be equally a crossing devoted to the public use (Shoemaker v. United States, 147 U. S. 282, 297, 37 L. ed. 170, 184, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361); and we see no basis for a distinction in principle in the case of an intersecting public road opened under competent authority because such a highway might lead to public recreation grounds instead of to places of business, or might connect lakes instead of avenues.

If there is a distinction in the present case, it must lie in the fact that the crossing is an artificial waterway instead of a road. But it is none the less a public highway, established to afford an appropriate place of public passage. Walks are provided for those who go afoot, and it does not concern the plaintiff in error that others go in [442] boats instead of vehicles. "The way sought to be established," said the supreme court of Minnesota, "a canal or waterway, with walks along each side," was "clearly a public way, subject to the rules governing public ways." It cannot make a difference in the constitutional rights of the railway company that this way was not constructed entirely, or chiefly, of solid earth; it is the fact, and not the mode, of public passage, that is controlling. The case must be regarded as being one of a public crossing provided by law; and the authorities we have cited lead to the conclusion that the state, without infringing the guaranties of the Federal Constitution, could require the railway company to make suitable provision for carrying its tracks over the crossing without compensation.

Digitized by Google

The judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.
SAM PELICAN and Tony Ponterre, alias Alex Licomte.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 442–452.)

Indians — opening reservation to settlement — excepted lands — individual allotments.

1. Lands allotted in severalty to individual Indians under the act of July 1, 1892 (27 Stat. at L. 62, chap. 140), were excepted from that part of the Colville Indian Reservation which was restored to the public domain by that act "subject to the reservations and allotment of lands in severalty to the individual members of the Indians of the Colville Reservation," for which such act provided, and which was thrown open to settlement by the President's proclamation of April 10, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 1963), which saved and excepted such tracts as had been or might be "allotted to, or reserved or selected for, the Indians, or other purposes," under the governing statutes.

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — Federal control — crimes in Indian country.

2. Land allotted to an Indian under the act of July 1, 1892 (27 Stat. at L. 62, chap. 140), and therefore excepted from that part of the Colville Indian Reservation which was restored to the public domain by that act, is, during the trust period, "Indian country," within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2145, extending to the Indian country certain general laws of the United States as to the punishment of crime.

[For other cases, see Indians, 23–28, 45–50, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — jurisdiction — crimes in Indian country.

3. The killing of an Indian allottee during the trust period by persons not of Indian blood, when committed upon land allotted to him by the act of July 1, 1892, within that part of the Colville Indian Reservation which was restored to the public domain by that act, is cognizable in the Federal courts under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2145, which extends to the Indian country certain general laws of the United States as to the punishment of crime.

[For other cases, see Courts, 1454–1458, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On jurisdiction to punish crimes committed by or against Indians—see note to State v. Campbell, 21 L.R.A. 169.

On Federal control of Indians—see note to Worcester v. Georgia, 8 L. ed. U. S. 484.

[No. 787.]

Argued January 13, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Washington to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to an indictment for the murder of an Indian allottee. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Wallace argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Every question in this case is foreclosed in favor of the government's contention, save the effect of the act of July 1, 1892, and the proceedings had thereunder.

Donnelly v. United States, 228 U. S. 271, 57 L. ed. 832, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 710.

The allotment under the act of July 1, 1892 (providing for proceedings after selection, pursuant to the act of 1887, as amended), did not deprive Louie of his character as an Indian.

Eells v. Ross, 12 C. C. A. 207, 29 U. S. App. 59, 64 Fed. 417; United States v. Celestine, 215 U. S. 287, 54 L. ed. 198, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93.

The disparaging reference, in §§ 1 and 8 of the act, to the previous Executive order creating the reservation, cannot lessen the force of the latter, nor the title or rights of the Indians in the lands; neither can they be affected by the declaration, in the closing section of the act, that it is not to be construed as recognizing any title in the Indians; for, whatever Congress then said, these Indians had, as a matter of law and by force of the Executive order and earlier acts of Congress, referring to and recognizing the reservation, the very same right in the land as if it had been carved out of their own previous occupancy.

Re Wilson, 140 U. S. 577, 35 L. ed. 514, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870; McFadden v. Mountain View Min. & Mill. Co. 38 C. C. A. 354, 97 Fed. 670.

Because this allotment was a part of the Colville Reservation, and therefore "Indian country" (at least before the passage of the act of July 1, 1892), jurisdiction in the district court would have attached under § 2145 of the Revised Statutes, and would continue to attach after the passage of that act, unless, as a result of the act or its operation, the land in the "Agnes" allotment had ceased to be Indian country. Allotments while held in trust, if selected from reservation lands, would not cease to be "Indian country."

Digitized by Google

Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 209, 24 L. ed. 473; United States v. Celestine, 215 U. S. 284, 285, 54 L. ed. 197, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; United States v. Sutton, 215 U. S. 295, 54 L. ed. 202, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116; Monson v. Simonson, 231 U. S. 341, ante, 260, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; United States v. Gardner, 189 Fed. 690.

The allotment was excepted from the operation of the act of July 1, 1892, and hence remained a part of the Indian country.

McFadden v. Mountain View Min. & Mill. Co. 38 C. C. A. 354, 97 Fed. 677.

The argument of inconvenience, dwelt on by the court below, and suggested in Ex parte Moore, 28 S. D. 339, 133 N. W. 817, cited in the court's opinion, which seems formidable at first, becomes less so upon analysis.

Donnelly v. United States, 228 U. S. 271, 57 L. ed. 832, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 710; Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 351, 52 L. ed. 524, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; United States v. 43 Gallons of Whiskey (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 193, 195, 197, 23 L. ed. 846–848; United States v. Sutton, 215 U. S. 295, 54 L. ed. 202, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116; Starr v. Long Jim, 227 U. S. 621, 57 L. ed. 674, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358; United States v. Celestine, 215 U. S. 285, 54 L. ed. 197, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Marchie, Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 312, 55 L. ed. 738, 748, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578.

No appearance for defendant in error.

[444] Mr Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendants were indicted for the murder, on August 30, 1913, of Ed Louie, a full-blood Indian and a member of the Colville tribe. It was charged that the crime was committed "at a point about 9 miles northwest of the town of Curlew, in the county of Ferry, state of Washington, in the Indian country, to wit, upon the allotment of one Agnes, an Indian, being lot 3 of section 26, and lot 9 of section 35, in township 40 north, or range 32 E. W. M., in the northern division of the eastern district of Washington, said land being then held in trust by the United States for the said Agnes for the period of twenty-five years from the date of the trust patent; to wit, from the 6th day of December, A. D., 1909."

The indictment was based upon § 2145 of the Revised Statutes, which provides that, save as stated, "the general laws of the United States as to the punishment of crimes committed in any place within the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, except the District of Columbia, shall extend to the Indian country" (see Rev. Stat. § 5339, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3627; Criminal Code, 35 Stat. at L. 1088, chap. 321, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1588, §§ 272, 273, 341).

A demurrer was filed upon the ground that it did not appear that the crime had been committed within "the Indian country," and hence that the court was without jurisdiction. In connection with the hearing upon the demurrer the parties stipulated that the land described in the indictment as the place of the crime had been allotted to the Indian Agnes under the act approved February 8, 1887 [24 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 119], and the act in amendment and extension thereof approved February 28, 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 794, chap. 383], and that this land was situated on that part of the Colville Indian Reservation which had been opened to settlement and entry by [445] the act of Congress. See act of July 1, 1892, 27 Stat. at L. 62, chap. 140. The district court, holding that the Agnes allotment was not a part of the Indian country within the meaning of the statute, sustained the demurrer; and the government brings this writ of error under the criminal appeals act, March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1246, chap. 2564).

There can be no doubt that the Colville Reservation, set apart by Executive order on July 2, 1872 (Exec. Ord. Ind. Reserv. [1912 ed.], 194, 195; 1 Kappler, 915, 916), and repeatedly recognized by acts of Congress,† was a legally constituted reservation. Re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 577, 35 L. ed. 513, 514, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870. As such it was included in the "Indian country" to which § 2145 of the Revised Statutes refers, and it was none the less embraced within that description because it had been segregated from the public domain. Donnelly v. United States, 228 U. S. 243, 269, 57 L. ed. 820, 831, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep.

†July 4, 1884, chap. 180, 23 Stat. at L. 76, 79; February 8, 1887, chap. 119, 24 Stat. at L. 388; February 28, 1891, chap. 383, 26 Stat. at L. 794; July 1, 1892, chap. 140, 27 Stat. at L. 62; February 20, 1896, chap. 24, 29 Stat. at L. 9; March 6, 1896, chap. 42, 29 Stat. at L. 44; June 18, 1898, chap. 465, 30 Stat. at L. 475; July 1, 1898, chap. 545, 30 Stat. at L. 571, 593; March 22, 1906, chap. 1126, 34 Stat. at L. 80.

Digitized by Google

449, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 710. The inquiry then, is whether, with respect to the part of the original reservation that is comprised in the described allotment, the United States has lost the jurisdiction which it formerly had. The authority of Congress to deal with crimes committed by or against Indians upon the lands within the reservation was not affected by the admission of the state of Washington into the Union (act of February 22, 1889, chap. 180, 25 Stat. at L. 676, 677; Draper v. United States, 164 U. S. 240, 242, 247, 41 L. ed. 419, 420, 421, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; Donnelly v. United States, 228 U. S. 243, 271, 272, 57 L. ed. 820, 832, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 710); and we pass to the consideration of the effect of the Federal legislation by which the reservation was diminished.

By the act of July 1, 1892, chap. 140, 27 Stat. at L. 62, a specified tract or portion of the reservation—with certain exceptions—was "vacated and restored to the public domain," [446] and it was provided that this tract should be open to settlement and entry by the proclamation of the President, and should be disposed of under the general laws applicable to the disposition of public lands in the state of Washington. The exceptions were made by Congress in order to care for the Indians residing on that portion of the reservation. Every such Indian was entitled to select therefrom 80 acres which were to be allotted to the Indian in severalty (§ 4). The titles to the lands selected were to "be held in trust for the benefit of the allottees, respectively, and afterwards conveyed in fee simple to the allottees or their heirs," as provided in the acts of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 119), and February 28, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 794, chap. 383). Further, certain school and mill lands within the described tract were reserved from the operation of the statute, unless other lands were selected in their stead (§ 6).

The evident purpose of Congress was to carve out of the portion of the reservation restored to the public domain the lands to be allotted and reserved, as stated, and to make the restoration effective only as to the residue. The vacation and restoration which the statute accomplished (§ 1) was thus expressly made "subject to the reservations and allotment of lands in severalty to the individual members of the Indians of the Colville Reservation" for which the act provided. In 1898, in furtherance of the same object, Congress required the completion of the allotments as soon as practicable, and not later than six months after the President's proclamation (act of July 1, 1898, chap. 545, 30 Stat. at L. 571, 593). Accordingly the President issued his proclamation on April 10, 1900, declaring that the restored portion of the reservation would be open to settlement and entry on October 10, 1900, and an appropriate clause was inserted which saved and excepted such tracts as had been or might be "allotted to or reserved or selected for the Indians, or other purposes," [447] under the governing statutes. 31 Stat. at L. 1963, 1965. The government presents extracts from the records of the Department of the Interior which purport to show that the actual allotment to the Indian Agnes, of the land described in the indictment, had been made prior to the date of this proclamation, and we are asked to take notice of that fact. We find it to be unnecessary to pass upon this, but we shall assume, in view of the grounds of the decision below, that the allotment was duly made under the statutory provisions to which we have referred, and it follows that these allotted lands must be demed to be among those excepted from the portion of the reservation which was thrown open to settlement.

Although the lands were allotted in severalty, they were to be held in trust by the United States for twenty-five years for the sole use and benefit of the allottee, or his heirs, and during this period were to be inalienable. That the lands, being so held, continued to be under the jurisdiction and control of Congress for all governmental purposes relating to the guardianship and protection of the Indians, is not open to controversy. United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 437, 47 L. ed. 532, 536, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; McKay v. Kalyton, 204 U. S. 458, 466, 468, 51 L. ed. 566, 570, 571, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Couture v. United States, 207 U. S. 581, 52 L. ed. 350, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; United States v. Celestine, 215 U. S. 278, 290, 291, 54 L. ed. 195, 199, 200, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; United States v. Sutton, 215 U. S. 291, 54 L. ed. 200, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116; Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 315, 316, 55 L. ed. 738, 749, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 55 L. ed. 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587; United States v. Wright, 229 U. S. 226, 237, 57 L. ed. 1160, 1166, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630. Thus, in the act of January 30, 1897, chap. 109, 29 Stat. at L. 506, relating to the introduction of intoxicating liquor "into the Indian country," it is expressly provided that this term "shall include any Indian allotment while the title to the same shall be held in trust by the government. or while the same shall remain inalienable by the allottee without the consent of the United States." This statute was upheld in United States v. Sutton, 215 U. S. 291, 54 L. ed. 200, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116, as a valid exercise of Federal power with respect to allotments made under the [448] act of February 8, 1887, within the Yakima Reservation in the state of Washington. Again, in Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 55 L. ed. 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587, the Federal jurisdiction under the same statute was sustained with respect to an allotment to an Omaha Indian in Nebraska, the title being held in trust by the government under the act of August 7, 1882 (22 Stat. at L. 341, chap. 434). There it appeared that practically all the lands in the Omaha Reservation had been allotted, and that many of the allotments of deceased Indians had passed into the hands of the whites, without restrictions, under the provisions of the act of May 27, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 275, chap. 888). Further, the Omaha Indians were exercising the rights of citizenship within the state, and the defendant himself, who was charged with taking liquor to his own allotment, was a citizen and had served as a public officer. The question certified to this court was, in effect, whether the fact that the allotment was held by the government in trust authorized Congress to regulate or prohibit the introduction of liquor. This question was answered in the affirmative, the court saying (p. 324): "In the case at bar, the United States had not parted with the title to the lands, but still held them in trust for the Indians. In that situation its power to make rules and regulations respecting such territory was ample. . . . While for many purposes the jurisdiction of the state of Nebraska had attached, and the Indian as a citizen was entitled to the rights, privileges, and immunities of citizenship, still the United States, within its own territory and in the interest of the Indians, had jurisdiction to pass laws protecting such Indians from the evil results of intoxicating liquors as was done in the act of January 30, 1897, which made it an offense to introduce intoxicating liquors into such Indian country, including an Indian allotment." It cannot be doubted that the power of Congress was quite as complete to punish crimes committed by or against Indians upon [449] allotted lands of this character as to prohibit the introduction of liquor. The present question, then, is not one of power, but whether it can be said that the descriptive term "Indian country," as it is used in § 2145 of the Revised Statutes, is inadequate to embrace these allotments, or, if it is adequate for that purpose, whether Congress, in providing for the allotments, has excluded them from the purview of that statute.

Digitized by Google

We find no inadequacy in the statutory description. The lands, which, prior to the allotment, undoubtedly formed part of the Indian country, still retain during the trust period a distinctively Indian character, being devoted to Indian occupancy under the limitations imposed by Federal legislation. The explicit provision in the act of 1897, as to allotments, we do not regard as pointing a distinction, but rather as emphasizing the intent of Congress in carrying out its policy with respect to allotments in severalty where these have been accompanied with restrictions upon alienation or provision for trusteeship on the part of the government. In the present case, the original reservation was Indian country simply because it had been validly set apart for the use of the Indians as such, under the superintendence of the government. Donnelly v. United States, 228 U. S. 243, 271, 272, 57 L. ed. 820, 832, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 710. The same considerations, in substance, apply to the allotted lands which, when the reservation was diminished, were excepted from the portion restored to the public domain. The allottees were permitted to enjoy a more secure tenure, and provision was made for their ultimate ownership without restrictions. But, meanwhile, the lands remained Indian lands, set apart for Indians under governmental care; and we are unable to find ground for the conclusion that they became other than Indian country through the distribution into separate holdings, the government retaining control.

It is said that it is not to be supposed that Congress has intended to maintain the Federal jurisdiction over hundreds [450] of allotments scattered through territory other portions of which were open to white settlement. But Congress expressly so provided with respect to offenses committed in violation of the act of 1897. Nor does the territorial jurisdiction of the United States depend upon the size of the particular areas which are held for Federal purposes (Criminal Code, § 272 [35 Stat. at L. 1142, chap. 321, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1671]). It must be remembered that the fundamental consideration is the protection of a dependent people. As the court said in United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 437, 47 L. ed. 532, 536, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478, where allotments had been made under the conditions provided by the act of February 8, 1887 (and it was found that the agreement with the Indians, 26 Stat. at L. 1035–1038, chap. 543, did not indicate any different relation of the United States to the allotted lands from that created or recognized by that act): "These Indians are yet wards of the nation, and a condition of pupilage or dependency, and have not been discharged from that condition. They occupy these lands with the consent and authority of the United States; and the holding of them by the United States under the act of 1887, and the agreement of 1889, ratified by the act of 1891, is part of the national policy by which the Indians are to be maintained as well as prepared for assuming the habits of civilized life, and ultimately the privileges of citizenship." It is true that by § 6 of the act of 1887 it was provided that upon the completion of the allotments and the patenting of the lands to the allottees under that act, every allottee should "have the benefit of and be subject to the laws, both civil and criminal, of the state or territory" in which he resided. See Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506. But, by the act of May 8, 1906, chap. 2348 (34 Stat. at L. 182), Congress amended this section so as distinctly to postpone to the expiration of the trust period the subjection of allottees under that act to state laws. The first part of the section, as amended, is: "That at the expiration of the trust period, and when the [451] lands have been conveyed to the Indians by patent in fee, as provided in § 5 of this act, then each and every allottee shall have the benefit of and be subject to the laws, both civil and criminal, of the state or territory in which they may reside." And, at the same time, there was added to the section the explicit proviso: "That until the issuance of fee-simple patents all allottees to whom trust patents shall hereafter be issued shall be subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States." We deem is to be clear that Congress had the power thus to continue the guardianship of the government (United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 383, 384, 30 L. ed. 228, 231, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1109; United States v. Celestine, 215 U. S. 278, 290, 291, 54 L. ed. 195, 199, 200, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 315, 316, 55 L. ed. 738, 749, 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Hallowell v. United States, supra; Heckman v. United States, 224 U. S. 413, 437, 56 L. ed. 820, 829, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424; Ex parte Webb, 225 U. S. 663, 683, 56 L. ed. 1248, 1256, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; United States v. Wright, 229 U. S. 226, 237, 57 L. ed. 1160, 1166, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630; United States v. Sandoval, 231 U. S. 28, 46, ante, 107, 114, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Perrin v. United States, decided this day [232 U. S. 478, post, 691, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387]); and these provisions leave no room for doubt as to the intent of Congress with respect to the maintenance of the Federal jurisdiction over the allotted lands described in the indictment.

Digitized by Google

A cognate question is presented as to the status of the person with whose murder the defendants are charged. It is not alleged in the indictment that the defendants were Indians, and we assume that they were not. But the court below had jurisdiction if the deceased was an Indian ward. Donnelly v. United States, 228 U. S. 269–272, 57 L. ed. 831, 832, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 710. It is alleged, as already stated, that the deceased was "a full-blood Indian, a member of the Colville tribe," and, further, that he had received an allotment of land under the act of 1887, as amended in 1891, and under the act of July 1, 1892, the land being held in trust by the United States for twenty-five years from the date of the patent, July, 31, 1900. Upon this statement, the deceased must be regarded as one who was still under the government's care. Congress had not terminated that relation, and the commission [452] of a crime against his person upon Indian lands, such as we have found the allotted lands in question to be, was punishable under the laws of the United States.

The order sustaining the demurrer is reversed and the cause is remanded to the District Court for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

EDWIN L. GAUTHIER, Plff. in Err.,
v.
PETER MORRISON et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 452–462.)

Error to state court — Federal question — rights under homestead law.

1. A decree of the highest state court adverse to the asserted rights under the Federal homestead law to settle upon unsurveyed public land, notwithstanding the wrongful act or error of the surveyor in designating and meandering such land as a lake, and to remain in possession to the end that the acts essential to the acquisition of title may be performed, is re-

---

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On error to state courts in cases involving land titles—see note to O'Conor v. Texas, 50 L. ed. U. S. 1120.

Digitized by Google

viewable under the Federal Judicial Code, § 237, by the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1825-1871, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — unsurveyed lands — wrongful act or error of surveyor.

2. A tract of agricultural land susceptible of cultivation, but which by wrongful act or error of the surveyor was omitted from the survey, and was designated and meandered as a lake, was as much public land after the survey, and as much within the operation of the Federal settlement laws, as if its true character had been reported by the surveyor. It merely was left unsurveyed.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, I. e, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — relation to Land Department — restoring possession under inceptive homestead claim.

3. Jurisdiction of a suit by a homestead settler to re-establish the possession which trespassers have invaded and interrupted, to the end that he may continue his efforts to earn the title, may not be declined by a state court on the theory that to entertain jurisdiction will amount to an interference with the Land Department or a usurpation of its functions because the land in question forms part of a tract of agricultural land which the surveyor unlawfully or erroneously omitted from the survey, designating and meandering it as a lake.

[For other cases, see Courts, I. e, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 157.]

Argued December 19, 1913. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Spokane County, in that state, in favor of defendants in an action of ejectment. Reversed.

See same case below, 62 Wash. 572, 114 Pac. 501.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Fred B. Morrill argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. C. Jones, L. F. Chester, and John J. Skuse, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

No appropriation of public land can be made for any purpose but by the authority of an act of Congress.

United States v. Fitzgerald, 15 Pet. 407, 10 L. ed. 785; United States v. Gratiot, 14 Pet. 526, 10 L. ed. 573; Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. 436, 10 L. ed. 235; United States v. Tichenor, 8 Sawy. 142, 12 Fed. 415; Frazee v. Spokane County, 29 Wash. 278, 69 Pac. 779.

Hence no officer of the government has the power or authority to dispose of public lands without authority of Congress, and he cannot waive the conditions and limitations provided by Congress.

Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 29 L. ed. 423, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Davis v. Wiebbold, 139 U. S. 507, 35 L. ed. 238, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Taylor v. Brown, 5 Dak. 335, 40 N. W. 525, 147 U. S. 640, 37 L. ed. 313, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549; Eells v. Ross, 12 C. C. A. 205, 29 U. S. App. 59, 64 Fed. 417.

Nothing passes title to public lands but a patent, the sole exception being a grant by an act of Congress.

United States v. Fitzgerald, 15 Pet. 407, 10 L. ed. 785; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264.

While the surveyor meandered the lands and designated the same as a lake, such meandered lines are not conclusive as to the existence of a lake within such meandered lines, and if there never was a permanent body of water within such lines, as alleged in the complaint herein, or if one did not exist at the time of the survey, such meandered lines are not conclusive as to the government of the United States, or anyone else.

Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 175 U. S. 300, 44 L. ed. 171, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; French-Glenn Live Stock Co. v. Springer, 185 U. S. 47, 46 L. ed. 800, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563, 35 Or. 312; Horne v. Smith, 159 U. S. 40, 40 L. ed. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988; Security Land & Exploration Co. v. Burns, 193 U. S. 168, 48 L. ed. 662, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. 190 U. S. 458, 47 L. ed. 1136, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Carr v. Moore, 119 Iowa, 152, 97 Am. St. Rep. 292, 93 N. W. 52; Schlosser v. Hemphill, 118 Iowa, 452, 90 N. W. 842; Lammers v. Nissen, 4 Neb. 245; Bissell v. Fletcher, 19 Neb. 725, 28 N. W. 303; Grant v. Hemphill, 92 Iowa, 218, 59 N. W. 263, 60 N. W. 618; Chapman & D. Land Co. v. Bigelow, 206 U. S. 41, 51 L. ed. 953, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679.

The rule of construction in the case of a grant from the Sovereign is quite different from that which governs private grants.

Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. ed. 773; Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 367, 10 L. ed. 997; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; The Rebeckah, 1 C. Rob. 227.

Lands within meandered lines, where such surveys were not correct, or where waters originally within those lines have disappeared, should be surveyed, and the lands brought under the operation of the laws governing the disposal of public lands.

Arkansas Sunk Lands, 37 Land Dec. 345, 462.

Land covered by water within the public domain of the United States is as much a part thereof as the dry land.

Digitized by Google

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Chicago, 176 U. S. 646, 44 L. ed. 622, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509.

It has been the settled policy of the United States, from the beginning of our present form of government, to concede all navigable waters, as well as the land under them, as belonging to the states, to be held in trust for the people, subject only to the power of Congress to regulate commerce thereon.

Kean v. Calument Canal & Improv. Co. 190 U. S. 485, 47 L. ed. 1147, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

As a necessary consequence of the ownership, in trust, by the states, of all navigable water therein, as well as the land under them, it came to be decided that rights in such navigable water, and the lands under them, were to be determined by the Federal courts solely with reference to the law of the state in which such waters were situate.

St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. 168 U. S. 349, 42 L. ed. 497, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 224.

When the lands sought to be entered are unsurveyed, the homestead settler initiates his claim and right to the land by making a settlement thereon, and by such settlement the claimant acquires a valuable and valid vested right under the laws of the United States, which were enacted for the benefit of the actual settler.

Moss v. Dowman, 176 U. S. 413, 44 L. ed. 526, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 23 L. ed. 424; Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed. 272, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47, 29 L. ed. 61, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 782.

It cannot be that the courts are powerless under such conditions, and that a settler cannot seek and receive protection in his rights through courts of justice.

Hebeisen v. Hatchell, 12 Okla. 29, 69 Pac. 888; La Chapelle v. Bubb, 62 Fed. 545, 69 Fed. 481; Colwell v. Smith, 1 Wash. Terr. 92; Ward v. Moorey, 1 Wash. Terr. 104; Zimmerman v. McCurdy, 15 N. D. 79, 106 N. W. 125, 12 Ann. Cas. 29; Wood v. Murray, 85 Iowa, 505, 52 N. W. 356; Hadley v. Ulrich, 1 Okla. 380, 33 Pac. 705; Peckham v. Faught, 2 Okla. 173, 37 Pac. 1085; Commager v. Dicks, 1 Okla. 82, 28 Pac. 864, 867; Fulmele v. Camp, 20 Colo. 495, 39 Pac. 407; Matthews v. O'Brien, 84 Minn. 505, 88 N. W. 12; Woodsides v. Rickey, 1 Or. 108.

The lands settled upon by plaintiff in error being public lands, then the real status of the respondents is that of trespassers, and they cannot prevent the plaintiff in error, as a qualified settler, from residing thereon, and occupying and improving the same, and taking all necessary steps to fully comply with the homestead law and acquire title thereunder.

Kitts v. Austin, 83 Cal. 167, 23 Pac. 290; Haven v. Haws, 63 Cal. 514; Whittaker v. Pendola, 78 Cal. 296, 20 Pac. 680; Thallmann v. Thomas, 49 C. C. A. 317, 111 Fed. 277, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 573; United States v. Waddell, 112 U. S. 76, 28 L. ed. 673, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35.

Mr. Reese H. Voorhees argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

It will be observed that the court below refused to decide any question, either of fact or law, with regard to the merits of the case, by expressly refusing to take jurisdiction of it. The rule of this court is that, in order to give it jurisdiction of a writ of error from a state court, the Federal question relied upon must not only be clearly raised in the case, and clearly relied upon in the court below, but must have been expressly decided by the court below, or necessarily decided in reaching its judgment; and it is further the rule of this court that, where the opinion of the court below is brought to this court, and shows that the court below refused to entertain jurisdiction, the writ of error will be dismissed for lack of a Federal question; and this is true even though there might have arisen a Federal question, and it might have been decided had the court entertained jurisdiction.

Semple v. Hagar, 4 Wall. 431, 18 L. ed. 402; Smith v. Adsit, 16 Wall. 185, 21 L. ed. 310; Jacks v. Helena, 115 U. S. 288, 29 L. ed. 392, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; California v. Holladay, 159 U. S. 415, 40 L. ed. 202, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53; Cox v. Texas, 202 U. S. 446, 50 L. ed. 1099, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; De Lamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 523, 44 L. ed. 872, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Endowment Benev. Asso. v. Kansas, 120 U. S. 103, 30 L. ed. 593, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 358.

The question as to who had acquired this priority of possession was not a Federal question, but a pure question of fact, upon which the decision of the state court was conclusive. No construction was put upon the statute; no question arose under it; but a preliminary question was to be decided before the statute became material, and that was whether defendants were first in possession of the land. Even if priority of possession had been shown, it would still have been necessary to prove that defendants' right to the use of the water was recognized and acknowledged by ocal customs, laws, and decisions,—all of which were questions of state law. The jurisdiction of this court in this class of cases does not extend to questions of fact or of local law, which are merely preliminary to, or the possible basis of, a Federal question.

Digitized by Google

Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 175 U. S. 639, 44 L. ed. 305, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 187 U. S. 569, 47 L. ed. 307, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178; Myrtle v. Nevada, C. & O. R. Co. 137 Fed. 193.

This court has repeatedly ruled that there is no jurisdiction in the courts,—this court and other Federal courts as well as state courts,—of the questions affecting public land raised upon plaintiff in error's complaint; that the courts have no jurisdiction, either to control the public land or the action of the government in connection therewith, before patent shall have issued and until the land shall have ceased to be public land.

Cragin v. Powell, 128 U. S. 691, 32 L. ed. 566, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 26 L. ed. 167; Stoneroad v. Stoneroad, 158 U. S. 240, 39 L. ed. 966, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Russell v. Maxwell Land Grant Co. 158 U. S. 253, 39 L. ed. 971, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827; Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 35 L. ed. 974, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; Kirwan v. Murphy, 189 U. S. 35, 47 L. ed. 698, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; Humbird v. Avery, 195 U. S. 480, 49 L. ed. 286, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 42 L. ed. 591, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 473, 43 L. ed. 772, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 50 L. ed. 935, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Columbia Canal Co. v. Benham, 47 Wash. 249, 125 Am. St. Rep. 901, 91 Pac. 961.

In this kind of an action the plaintiff, if he prevails at all, must prevail upon the strength of his own title, and not upon the weakness of that of the adversary. The basis of this claim is a possessory right.

George v. Columbia & P. S. R. Co. 38 Wash. 483, 80 Pac. 767; Helm v. Johnson, 40 Wash. 422, 82 Pac. 402; Humphries v. Sorenson, 33 Wash. 570, 74 Pac. 690; Seymour v. Dufur, 53 Wash. 650, 102 Pac. 756.

The classification of the public lands for the purposes of disposition under the various acts of Congress is a part of the duty imposed by law upon the Secretary of the Interior; and even after patent has issued, his determination cannot be reversed by a mere intruder without title.

Ehrhardt v. Hogaboom, 115 U. S. 67, 29 L. ed. 346, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1157.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This case originated in the superior court of Spokane county, Washington, and involves the present right of possession of a tract of unsurveyed public land, containing about 75 acres, in that county.

Considerably abridged, the facts stated in the complaint are these: In 1877, when the public lands in that vicinity were surveyed, an area embracing approximately 1,200 acres was, by the wrongful act or error of the surveyor, omitted from the survey and meandered as a lake, when in truth it was not such, but was agricultural land susceptible of cultivation. That area still remains unsurveyed and includes the tract in question. On October 30, 1909, this tract was unappropriated public land, open to settlement under the homestead law of the United States. On that day the plaintiff, being in every way qualified so to do, made actual settlement upon the tract with the purpose of acquiring the title under that law by a full and bona fide compliance with its requirements, and, in furtherance of that purpose, erected upon the tract a habitable frame dwelling, furnished the same with all necessary household goods, entered into possession of the tract, and established [457] his actual residence thereon. Shortly thereafter, during the continuance of his possession and residence, the defendants, with the wrongful purpose of preventing him from complying with the requirements of the homestead law, and of subjecting the tract to their own use, unlawfully compelled him to withdraw therefrom and remain away; and when the action was commenced, a few months later, they were wrongfully withholding the tract from him, and were themselves mere trespassers thereon. It also was alleged: "That in order to comply with the requirements of the homestead law of the United States, and to acquire title to the land so settled upon by this plaintiff, as aforesaid, under said law, it becomes and is necessary for this plaintiff to reside upon and cultivate such land, and to have possession thereof for a period of five years; and unless this plaintiff can reside upon, cultivate, and have possession of said land for and during such period of time from and after his said settlement, this plaintiff cannot comply with the requirements of the homestead law of the United States, and sustain and maintain his rights to said land, and acquire title thereto from the government of the United States under the homestead law of the United States." The prayer was for a judgment establishing the plain-tiff's right to the possession, declaring the defendants were without any right thereto, and awarding costs.

Digitized by Google

The defendants demurred upon the grounds that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, and that the court was without jurisdiction of the subject-matter. The demurrer was sustained, and, the plaintiff electing to stand upon his complaint, a judgment of dismissal was entered. An appeal resulted in an affirmance by the supreme court of the state, which held, first, that the land was not subject to settlement under the homestead law, because the surveyor had designated and meandered it as a lake; and, second, that [458] only the Land Department could undo and correct the wrong or error of the surveyor in that regard. 62 Wash. 572, 114 Pac. 501. To secure a reversal of the judgment the plaintiff prosecutes this writ of error.

Although challenged by the defendants, our jurisdiction does not admit of any doubt. The plaintiff asserted a right to settle upon the land notwithstanding the wrongful act or error of the surveyor in designating and meandering it as a lake, and also a right to remain in possession to the end that he might perform the acts essential to the acquisition of the title; and he expressly predicated these rights upon the homestead law of the United States. The decision was against the rights so claimed, and this brings the case within § 709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575) now § 237 of the Judicial Code [36 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227].

The state courts seem to have proceeded upon the theory (a) that the surveyor's action in designating and meandering the 1,200-acre area as a lake operated as an authoritative determination that it was not agricultural land, but a permanent body of water; and (b) that this determination, while remaining undisturbed by the Land Department, took the land without the operation of the settlement laws, including the homestead law. But in this there was a misconception of the authority of the surveyor. He was not invested with power to determine the character of the land which he surveyed or left unsurveyed, or to classify it as within or without the operation of particular laws. All that he was to do in that regard was to note and report its character, as it appeared to him, as a means of enlarging the sources of information upon that subject otherwise available. In Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 292, 320, 38 L. ed. 992, 993, 999, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030, in disposing of a contention that the lands there in question had been determined and reported by the surveyor as agricultural, and not mineral, and that the determination and report remained in force, this court said: "But [459] the conclusive answer to such alleged determination and report is that the matters to which they relate were not left to the Surveyor General. Neither he nor any of his subordinates was authorized to determine finally the character of any lands granted, or make any binding report thereon. Information of the character of all lands surveyed is required of surveying officers, so far as knowledge respecting them is obtained in the course of their duties, but they are not clothed with authority to especially examine as to these matters outside of their other duties, or determine them, nor does their report have any binding force. It is simply an addition made to the general information obtained from different sources on the subject." So, if the area designated and meandered as a lake was in truth agricultural land susceptible of cultivation, as alleged in the complaint and admitted by the demurrer, it was as much public land after the survey, and as much within the operation of the settlement laws, as if its true character had been reported by the surveyor. It merely was left unsurveyed. See Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 175 U. S. 300, 308, 44 L. ed. 171, 174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; French-Glenn Live Stock Co. v. Springer, 185 U. S. 47, 46 L. ed. 800, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Security Land & Exploration Co. v. Burns, 193 U. S. 167, 187, 48 L. ed. 662, 674, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Scott v. Lattig, 227 U. S. 229, 241, 57 L. ed. 490, 495, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 107, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242.

It will be perceived that we are not speaking of land which was covered by a permanent body of water at the time of the survey, and thereafter was laid bare by a subsidence of the water, nor yet of comparatively small areas which sometimes lie within meander lines reasonably approximating the shores of permanent bodies of water. See Horne v. Smith, 159 U. S. 40, 40 L. ed. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988; Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. 190 U. S. 452, 47 L. ed. 1134, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Hardin v. Shedd, 190 U. S. 508, 47 L. ed. 1156, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 685. Neither are we concerned with a collateral attack upon a public survey, as was the case in Cragin v. Powell, 128 U. S. 691, 33 L. ed. 566, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203, and Stoneroad v. Stoneroad, 158 U. S. 240, 39 L. ed. 966, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822, for the plaintiff is not asking that any of the lines of the survey be rejected or altered, but only that a possessory right acquired [460] by settlement upon public land confessedly left unsurveyed be protected.

The homestead law in terms subjects unsurveyed public lands, if agricultural and unappropriated, to settlement by persons having the requisite qualifications and intending to comply with its requirements as a means of acquiring the title, and also plainly confers upon the settler the right of possession, without which compliance with those requirements would be impossible. Rev. Stat. §§ 2289 et seq.; U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1388; act May 14, 1880, 21 Stat. at L. 140, chap. 89, § 3; U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1392; Rev. Stat. § 2266; act March 3, 1891, 26 Stat. at L. 1095, chap. 561, § 5, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1535; United States v. Waddell, 112 U. S. 76, 80, 26 L. ed. 673, 674, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Sturr v. Beck, 133 U. S. 541, 547, 33 L. ed. 761, 764, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Nelson v. Northern P. R. Co. 188 U. S. 108, 125, 47 L. ed. 406, 413, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302; Scott v. Lattig, 227 U. S. 229, 240, 57 L. ed. 490, 495, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 107, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; Wadkins v. Producers' Oil Co. 227 U. S. 368, 373, 57 L. ed. 551, 555, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380. So, it clearly appears from the allegations of the complaint, as admitted by the demurrer, that the land in question was open to homestead settlement when the plaintiff settled thereon; that by his settlement and subsequent acts he acquired an inceptive homestead right which entitled him to the possession; and that the defendants, in forcing him to withdraw from the land, and in then withholding the same from him, wrongfully invaded this possessory right.

Digitized by Google

The question of the jurisdiction of the court of first instance, although not difficult of solution, remains to be noticed. It was not held by the appellate court that the jurisdiction of the former under the local laws was not broad enough to enable it to entertain the action and award appropriate relief, but only that this jurisdiction could not be exerted consistently with the laws of Congress; and this upon the theory that the latter invested the Land Department with exclusive authority to deal with the subject.

It is true that the authority to make surveys of the public lands is confided to the Land Department, and that [461] the courts possess no power to revise or disturb its action in that regard; but here the court was not asked to make a survey or to revise or disturb one already made. As has been indicated, the land in question was not surveyed, but left unsurveyed; and the plaintiff, whose possession under a lawful homestead settlement had been invaded and interrupted by mere trespasses, was seeking a return of the possession to the end that he might continue his rightful efforts to earn the title. In short, it was not a survey, but the right of possession under an inceptive homestead claim, that was in question.

Generally speaking, it also is true that it is not a province of the courts to interfere with the Land Department in the administration of the public-land laws, and that they are to be deemed in process of administration until the proceedings for the acquisition of the title terminate in the issuing of a patent. But no interference with that Department or usurpation of its functions was here sought or involved. It has not been invested with authority to redress or restrain trespasses upon possessory rights, or to restore the possession to lawful claimants when wrongfully dispossessed. Congress has not prescribed the forum and mode in which such wrongs may be restrained and redressed, as doubtless it could, but has pursued the policy of permitting them to be dealt with in the local tribunals according to local modes of procedure. And the exercise of this jurisdiction has been not only sanctioned by the appellate courts in many of the public-land states, but also recognized and approved by this court. Woodsides v. Rickey, 1 Or. 108; Colwell v. Smith, 1 Wash. Terr. 92; Ward v. Moorey, 1 Wash. Terr. 104, 107; Arment v. Hensel, 5 Wash. 152, 31 Pac. 464; Fulmele v. Camp, 20 Colo. 495, 39 Pac. 407; Wood v. Murray, 85 Iowa, 505, 52 N. W. 356; Matthews v. O'Brien, 84 Minn. 505, 88 N. W. 12; Zimmerman v. McCurdy, 15 N. D. 79, 106 N. W. 125, 12 Ann. Cas. 29; Whittaker v. Pendola, 78 Cal. 296, 20 Pac. 680; Sproat v. Durland, 2 Okla. 24, 45, 35 Pac. 682, 886; Peckham v. Faught, 2 Okla. 173, 37 Pac. 1085; [462] Lytle v. Arkansas, 22 How. 193, 205, 16 L. ed. 306, 310; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 475, 25 L. ed. 800, 801; Black v. Jackson, 177 U. S. 349, 44 L. ed. 801, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; United States v. Buchanan, 232 U. S. 72, ante, 511, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237. See also Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 190 U. S. 301, 308, 315, 47 L. ed. 1064, 1070, 1073, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Humbird v. Avery, 195 U. S. 480, 504, 49 L. ed. 286, 297, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; Bunker Hill & S. M. & Concentrating Co. v. United States, 226 U. S. 548, 550, 57 L. ed. 345, 346, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 138. It was well said by the supreme court of Oklahoma in Sproat v. Durland, 2 Okla. 24, 45, 35 Pac. 682: "To say that no relief can be granted, or that our courts are powerless to do justice between litigants in this class of cases, pending the settlement of title in the Land Department, would be the announcement of a doctrine abhorrent to a sense of common justice. It would encourage the strong to override the weak; would place a premium upon greed and the use of force, and in many instances lead to bloodshed and crime. Such a state of affairs is to be avoided; and the courts should not hesitate to invoke the powers inherent in them and lend their aid, in every way possible, in aid of justice by preventing encroachments upon the possessory rights of settlers, or by equitably adjusting their differences."

Digitized by Google

We are accordingly of opinion that the laws of Congress interposed no obstacle to the jurisdiction of the court of first instance, and that, instead of dismissing the case, it should have proceeded to an appropriate disposition of the asserted right of possession. See Rem. & Bal. Code, Wash. § 942; Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 55–59, 56 L. ed. 327, 348–350, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875.

Judgment reversed.

---

[463] UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.
PAUL BEATTY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 463–468.)

Error to circuit court of appeals — final judgment.

1. A judgment of a Federal circuit court of appeals which reverses the judgment of a district court in condemnation proceedings, vacates the commissioners' award to the owners of the property taken, and requires that compensation be ascertained anew through a trial by jury, is essentially interlocutory, and cannot be the subject of a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. d., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Certiorari — to circuit court of appeals — when allowed.

2. The power conferred upon the Federal Supreme Court by the Judicial Code, § 240, to require by writ of certiorari that cases in the circuit courts of appeals be certified for review and determination in the former court, is plainly confined to that class of cases in which, according to the provisions of §§ 128 and 241 of such Code, the final judgments and decrees of those courts are not reviewable upon appeal or writ of error.

[For other cases, see Certiorari, II. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Certiorari — to circuit court of appeals — substitute for writ of error or appeal.

3. The employment of a writ of certiorari directed to a Federal circuit court of appeals to correct mere errors committed by that court in the exercise of its lawful jurisdiction in rendering an interlocutory judgment which may be corrected upon writ of error from the final judgment is not contemplated by the provision of the Judicial Code, § 262, which empowers the Supreme Court of the United States to issue all writs not specifically provided for by statute which may be necessary for the exercise of its jurisdiction, and agreeable to the usage and principles of law.

[For other cases, see Certiorari, I. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—As to what judgments or decrees are final for purposes of review—see notes to Gibbons v. Ogden, 5 L. ed. U. S. 302, and Schlosser v. Hemphill, 49 L. ed. U. S. 1001.

On the appellate jurisdiction of Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

On certiorari from Federal Supreme Court to circuit courts of appeals—see note to United States v. Dickinson, 53 L. ed. U. S. 711.

[No. 555.]

Argued January 12 and 13, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a judgment which, reversing a judgment of the District Court for the Western District of Virginia in condemnation proceedings, directed that the compensation be ascertained anew through a trial by jury. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Also a PETITION for a Writ of Certiorari to review the same judgment. Denied.

See same case below, 122 C. C. A. 16, 203 Fed. 620.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Davis argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. C. Herron, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. E. Hilton Jackson and D. C. O'Flaherty argued the cause, and, with Mr. E. H. Jackson, filed a brief for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a statutory proceeding by the United States to acquire for public use, by condemnation under judicial process, certain land in Warren county, in the western district of Virginia. It was based upon two congressional enactments: One, a provision in the army appropriation act of March 3, 1911 (36 Stat. at L. 1037, 1049, chap. 209), appropriating "not to exceed two hundred thousand dollars for the purchase of land accessible to the horse-raising section of the state of Virginia, for the assembling, grazing, and training of horses purchased for the mounted service;" and the other, the act of August 1, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 357, chap. 728, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2516) which reads as follows:

Digitized by Google

"That in every case in which the Secretary of the Treasury, or any other officer of the government, has been, or hereafter shall be, authorized to procure real estate for the erection of a public building or for other public uses, he shall be, and hereby is, authorized to acquire the same for the United States by condemnation, under judicial process, whenever, in his opinion, it is necessary or advantageous to the government to do so; and the United States circuit or district courts of the district wherein such real estate is located shall have jurisdiction of proceedings for such condemnation, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General of the United States, upon every application of the Secretary of the Treasury, under this act, or such other officer, to cause proceedings to be commenced [465] for condemnation, within thirty days from the receipt of the application at the Department of Justice.

"Sec. 2. The practice, pleadings, forms, and modes of proceeding in causes arising under the provisions of this act, shall conform, as near as may be, to the practice, pleadings, forms, and proceedings existing at the time in like causes in the courts of record of the state within which such circuit or district courts are held, any rule of the court to the contrary notwithstanding."

The proceeding was initiated, under the Attorney General's direction, by a petition filed in the district court of the United States for the district wherein the land is situate, praying for the appointment of commissioners, according to the law of the state, to ascertain the just compensation to be paid. Due notice having been given, the owners appeared and interposed objections to the proceeding; all of which having been considered and overruled, an order was entered appointing commissioners agreeably to the prayer in the petition and to the state statute. The commissioners viewed the land, heard the evidence, fixed the compensation at upwards of $30,000, and returned into the district court a report of their proceedings and ascertainment. Exceptions to the report were filed by the owners, and, after a hearing, were overruled; whereupon a judgment was entered, confirming the report. 198 Fed. 284. The owners carried the cause to the circuit court of appeals, and that court, being of opinion that the 7th Amendment to the Constitution, preserving the right of trial by jury, embraces such a proceeding, reversed the judgment, with a direction that the compensation be determined upon a trial before a common-law jury. 122 C. C. A. 16, 203 Fed. 620. The United States then sued out the present writ of error, and subsequently presented a petition praying that the judgment of the circuit court of appeals be reviewed upon writ of certiorari, if the writ of error should be regarded as premature. [466] Consideration of this petition was postponed to the hearing upon the writ of error.

As the proceeding was begun by the United States, and the amount in controversy greatly exceeds $1,000, besides costs, there can be no doubt that the case is one in which a final judgment in the circuit court of appeals may be reviewed by this court upon a writ of error. Judicial Code, §§ 128, 241 [36 Stat. at L. 1133, 1157, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, pp. 193, 229]. But the judgment rendered in that court is not final either in form or substance. It reverses the judgment in the district court, vacates the commissioners' award, and requires that the compensation be ascertained anew through a trial by jury. Thus, it puts at large the principal matter in controversy, and refers it to the district court for solution in the mode indicated. It is therefore essentially interlocutory, and cannot be the subject of a writ of error from this court. Tracy v. Holcombe, 24 How. 426, 16 L. ed. 742; Macfarland v. Brown, 187 U. S. 239, 47 L. ed. 159, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; United States v. Krall, 174 U. S. 385, 43 L. ed. 1017, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712; German Nat. Bank v. Speckert, 181 U. S. 405, 409, 45 L. ed. 926, 927, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688. If it be erroneous, and ultimately operates prejudicially to the United States, the latter may, of course, secure its correction by a writ of error from this court; but not until the case proceeds to a final judgment in the circuit court of appeals. United States v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 191 U. S. 84, 93, 48 L. ed. 106, 109, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Messenger v. Anderson, 225 U. S. 436, 444, 56 L. ed. 1152, 1156, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Zeckendorf v. Steinfeld, 225 U. S. 445, 454, 56 L. ed. 1156, 1162, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728; Union Trust Co. v. Westhus, 228 U. S. 519, 57 L. ed. 947, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593, and cases cited. Being premature, the writ of error must be dismissed.

The power conferred upon this court by § 240 of the Judicial Code to require, by writ of certiorari, that cases in the circuit courts of appeals be certified here for review and determination, is plainly confined to that class of cases in which, according to the provisions of §§ 128 and 241, the final decrees and judgments of those courts are not reviewable upon appeal or writ of error; that is to say, if a case be one which may come here under § 241 by [467] appeal or writ of error after a final decree or judgment in the circuit court of appeals, it is not a case which may be brought here by certiorari under § 240. It is not intended that these two modes of exercising appellate authority over the circuit courts of appeals, one upon appeal or writ of error and the other upon certiorari, shall be coexistent as respects any case or class of cases, but rather that the former, where it exists at all, shall be exclusive. This is fully recognized in Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 58, 36 L. ed. 340, 344, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517; American Constr. Co. v. Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. 148 U. S. 372, 385, 37 L. ed. 486, 491, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 758, and Forsyth v. Hammond, 166 U. S. 506, 513, 514, 41 L. ed. 1095, 1099, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665.

Digitized by Google

This case is not within any of the classes enumerated in the latter part of § 128, and the amount in controversy is greatly in excess of $1,000, besides costs; so it is a case, as before indicated, in which a final judgment by the circuit court of appeals may be reviewed by this court upon writ of error under § 241. And from this it follows that it is not a case which may be brought here by certiorari under § 240.

We do not overlook § 262 of the Judicial Code [36 Stat. at L. 1162, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 235], formerly § 716 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 580), which empowers this court to issue all writs, not specifically provided for by statute, which may be necessary for the exercise of its jurisdiction, and agreeable to the usages and principles of law. No doubt, this provision contemplates the employment of the writ of certiorari in instances not covered by § 240, and affords ample authority for using the writ as an auxiliary process, and, whenever there is imperative necessity therefor, as a means of correcting excesses of jurisdiction, of giving full force and effect to existing appellate authority, and of furthering justice in other kindred ways. American Constr. Co. v. Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. 148 U. S. 372, 380, 37 L. ed. 486, 489, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 758; Re Chetwood, 165 U. S. 443, 462, 41 L. ed. 782, 788, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 50 L. ed. 963, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 584; McClellan v. Carland, 217 U. S. 268, 54 L. ed. 762, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 501. But it may not be used under this provision as a substitute [468] for an appeal or writ of error to correct mere errors committed in the exercise of a lawful jurisdiction. American Constr. Co. v. Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. 148 U. S. 372, 385, 37 L. ed. 486, 491, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 758; Re Tampa Suburban R. Co. 168 U. S. 583, 42 L. ed. 589, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; United States v. Dickinson, 213 U. S. 92, 102, 53 L. ed. 711, 719, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

Here the use sought to be made of the writ is not an admissible one. Whether the 7th Amendment, preserving the right of trial by jury, embraces a proceeding to condemn land for public use, was one of the questions arising for decision in the circuit court of appeals. In deciding it, the court but exercised an undoubted jurisdiction, and this whether the decision was right or wrong. If wrong, it was a mere error, and the landowners, having invited it, will not be heard to complain. The jury may award a less compensation than did the commissioners, and, if so, the United States will hardly be in a position to complain. Interlocutory rulings not infrequently become of no importance by reason of the final result or of intervening matters, and that may be true here. But if the decision ultimately operates prejudicially to the United States, it can be reviewed, and, if need be, corrected upon a writ of error from the final judgment, as before indicated. In this situation we perceive no adequate reason for resorting to the writ of certiorari under § 262.

Writ of error dismissed.

Petition for certiorari denied.

---

[469] MALINDA THURSTON, Administratrix, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES and Ute Indians.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 469–478.)

Claims — jurisdiction of court of claims — Indian depredations.

A claim was not pending before Congress prior to the passage of the Indian depredation act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 851, chap. 538, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 758), so as to prevent the application of the restrictive clause in § 2 of that act, excluding from the jurisdiction of the court of claims all claims accruing prior to July 1, 1865, "unless the claim shall be allowed, or has been, or is, pending prior to the passage of this act," where the only claim for the depredation in question which had been presented to Congress was one for reimbursement for a depredation committed by Mormons, not by Indians.

[For other cases, see Claims, 145–163, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 605.]

Submitted December 22, 1913. Decided February 24, 1914.

Digitized by Google

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review the dismissal of a suit under the Indian depredation act. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Harry Peyton, F. Sprigg Perry, and J. Wharton Clark submitted the cause for appellant:

A court must determine the meaning of the law from the words of that law. There can be no construction where there is no ambiguity.

United States v. Temple, 105 U. S. 97, 99, 26 L. ed. 967, 968; Maxwell v. Moore, 22 How. 185, 191, 16 L. ed. 251, 253; Thornley v. United States, 113 U. S. 310, 313, 28 L. ed. 999, 1000, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 358, 2 L. ed. 304; White v. United States, 191 U. S. 545, 550, 48 L. ed. 295, 297, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 202, 4 L. ed. 529, 550; Potter's Dwarr. Stat. Constr. p. 199; 2 Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. § 367; Lewis v. United States. 92 U. S. 618, 23 L. ed. 513; Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 601, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Brewer v. Blougher, 14 Pet. 178, 10 L. ed. 408; Washington Market Co. v. Hoffman, 101 U. S. 116, 25 L. ed. 783; Petri v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 142 U. S. 650, 35 L. ed. 1146, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; McKee v. United States, 164 U. S. 293, 41 L. ed. 439, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 42 L. ed. 394, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3; Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 32 L. ed. 1060, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Dewey v. United States, 178 U. S. 510, 44 L. ed. 1170, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 981; Marks v. United States, 161 U. S. 297, 40 L. ed. 706, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476; Yerke v. United States, 173 U. S. 439, 43 L. ed. 760, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Johnson v. United States, 160 U. S. 546, 549, 40 L. ed. 529, 531, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377.

The term "claim pending" is simply a designation of a particular class of cases. It was not intended by this Indian depredation act to change the nature of an Indian depredation claim. This term is simply a definition of the nature and character of the claims embraced, and was not intended to be considered as a strict and technical rule of pleading.

Johnson v. United States, 160 U. S. 546, 40 L. ed. 529, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377.

Congress intended to allow great liberality in dealing with technical questions. All questions of the manner of filing claims were waived. It was not necessary to name the proper tribe of Indians. It was intended that the court of claims should render judgment against the United States alone, if the tribe of Indians could not be identified. Such has been the practice in the court of claims under this act, and judgments have been frequently rendered against the United States and unknown Indians where it has been impossible, from the evidence, to determine the tribe of Indians committing the wrong.

United States v. Gorham, 165 U. S. 316, 41 L. ed. 729, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 382.

The proviso does not relate to that part of the enacting clause which waives all questions of the manner of presenting claims. This is an entirely separate and distinct part of the enacting clause, and the dependent proviso is in no way connected with it.

Sedgw. Interpretation of Statutes, § 186, p. 257; Minis v. United States, 15 Pet. 423, 445, 10 L. ed. 791, 799; American Exp. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 522, 534, 53 L. ed. 635, 640, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; Burlingham v. Crouse, 228 U. S. 459, 471, 57 L. ed. 920, 926, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 148, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; White v. United States, 191 U. S. 545, 48 L. ed. 295, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 36, 48 L. ed. 860, 865, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563.

The claim of Malinda Thurston is a claim for a depredation committed by Indians. The manner of filing that claim in Congress against the Indians was defective. This defect in the manner of filing the claim was expressly waived by the Indian depredation act.

Nesbitt v. United States, 186 U. S. 153, 46 L. ed. 1100, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 805; Leahy v. United States, 41 Ct. Cl. 266; United States v. Martinez, 195 U. S. 469, 49 L. ed. 282, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Brown v. United States, 32 Ct. Cl. 432.

The saving clause is not to be considered as an exception from the action of the provisional clause. The saving clause is to be considered as a part of the general enacting clause, and in furtherance of the desire of Congress to be liberal towards pending claims.

United States v. Martinez, 195 U. S. 476, 49 L. ed. 285, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Ryan v. Carter, 93 U. S. 78, 23 L. ed. 807.

Unless this case falls clearly within the terms of the proviso, it is to be considered as falling within the terms of the general enacting and saving clauses.

Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 10, 51 L. ed. 681, 685, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; United States v. Dickson, 15 Pet. 141, 10 L. ed. 689; Javierre v. Central Altagracia, 217 U. S. 502, 507, 54 L. ed. 859, 860, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598.

In the determination of claims for Indian depredations filed in the Interior Department, it was not necessary that notice be given to the Indians.

Digitized by Google

Jaeger v. United States, 27 Ct. Cl. 278.

It is sufficient for a claim to be pending before Congress, if such claim is filed and considered by that body. Hence it was not necessary in Congress to name Indians as defendants.

Leahy v. United States, 41 Ct. Cl. 266; Cahalan v. United States, 42 Ct. Cl. 281; Cofer v. United States, 30 Ct. Cl. 131.

The purpose of § 2 of the Indian depredation act was to protect diligent claimants and to prevent the filing of stale claims.

Weston v. United States, 29 Ct. Cl. 420; Stevens v. United States, 34 Ct. Cl. 244; Martin v. United States, 46 Ct. Cl. 200.

Not only did Congress have special notice of the facts of this massacre, but the matter was of such prominence that it has become a part of the history of our country. The courts, and Congress as well, will take judicial notice of a matter of history.

Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. 519, 590, 10 L. ed. 274, 308; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 72, 79, 23 L. ed. 224, 228; 1 Greenl. Ev. 15th ed. § 5; Swinnerton v. Columbian Ins. Co. 37 N. Y. 174, 93 Am. Dec. 560.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson submitted the cause for appellees:

The statute of March 3, 1891, being in derogation of common law, and giving "a right of action for an injury not previously actionable," must be strictly construed against the petitioner.

Price v. United States, 174 U. S. 373, 43 L. ed. 1011, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 765; Wilson v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 6; Johnson v. United States, 160 U. S. 546, 40 L. ed. 529, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. United States, 164 U. S. 190, 202, 41 L. ed. 399, 403, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

The Indian depredation act required that a claim which accrued previous to July 1, 1865, must, as presented to Congress, have charged Indians with having committed the depredation.

Marks v. United States, 161 U. S. 297, 306, 40 L. ed. 706, 709, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476.

The proviso of said act is one of limitation, and in order that the court of claims might have jurisdiction, a claim which accrued prior to July 1, 1865, must have been filed in Congress prior to March 3, 1891.

Appellant's petition before Congress, having prayed for a gratuity, did not allege a claim.

Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539–615, 10 L. ed. 1060–1089.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was begun in the court of claims in 1892, under the Indian depredation act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 851, chap. 538, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 758), to recover from the United States and the Ute Indians the value of certain personal property alleged to have belonged to appellant's intestate, and to have been taken and destroyed by members of the Ute tribe in 1857. It was also alleged that the claim had been presented to, and was pending before, the House of Representatives in 1877 and 1878. The allegations of the petition were traversed, and a trial resulted in a judgment of dismissal for want of jurisdiction, upon the ground that the claim accrued before July 1, 1865, and had not been presented to Congress, or any officer authorized to inquire into such claims, prior to the act of 1891, and so was not cognizable under that act.

The facts disclosed in the findings, and material to be noticed, are these: The depredation occurred at Mountain Meadows, Utah, September 11, 1857, while the appellant's intestate was en route, with an emigrant train, from Arkansas to California, his life being taken at the time. In 1877 and again in 1878 one of his daughters, on behalf of his heirs, presented to Congress a petition praying that they be reimbursed for the property from the public treasury. The petitions, as also the accompanying affidavits, represented that the depredation was committed by Mormons acting under the direction of Brigham Young, and contained no suggestion that it was in anywise chargeable to the Ute Indians or to any Indians. In response to each of the petitions a bill was introduced in the House of Representatives, reciting that the depredation was committed [476] by Mormons at the instance of Brigham Young, and making an appropriation to reimburse the heirs as prayed in the petition, but neither bill was passed, and the claim was not otherwise recognized by Congress. In no other way or form was the claim presented to or pending before any department of the government, or any of its officers or agents, prior to the passage of the act of 1891.

Preliminarily, it is well to observe that the court of claims has no general jurisdiction over claims against the United States, and can take cognizance only of those which, by the terms of some act of Congress, are committed to it. Johnson v. United States, 160 U. S. 546, 549, 40 L. ed. 529, 531, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377.

Turning to the act of 1891 we find that it is not couched in general terms, but, on the contrary, carefully specifies what claims may be considered, and as carefully points out some which it is intended shall not be considered. It is entitled, "An act to Provide for the Adjudication and Payment of Claims Arising from Indian Depredations." Its 1st section empowers the court to inquire into and adjudicate, among others not material here, "all claims for property of citizens of the United States, taken or destroyed by Indians belonging to any band, tribe, or nation in amity with the United States, without just cause or provocation on the part of the owner or agent in charge, and not returned or paid for." And the 2d section declares:

Digitized by Google

"That all questions of limitations as to time and manner of presenting claims are hereby waived, and no claim shall be excluded from the jurisdiction of the court because not heretofore presented to the Secretary of the Interior or other officer or department of the government: Provided, That no claim accruing prior to July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, shall be considered by the court unless the claim shall be allowed or has been or is pending, prior to the passage of this act, before the Secretary of the Interior or the Congress of the United [477] States, or before any superintendent, agent, subagent, or commissioner authorized under any act of Congress to inquire into such claims; but no case shall be considered pending unless evidence has been presented therein: . . . "

Assuming, without so deciding, that the clause quoted from the first section, if not otherwise restrained, is broad enough to embrace the present claim, notwithstanding some of its particulars not here noticed, we come to consider whether it is within the restrictive clause in the 2d section, declaring that no claim accruing prior to July 1, 1865, shall be considered unless it was allowed or was pending prior to the passage of the act. To a better understanding of this clause and the preceding one in the same section it is well to recall that there was an existing limitation of time upon the prosecution of claims against the government (Rev. Stat. § 1069, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 740), and that there had been and were then various statutory and treaty provisions regulating the manner of presenting claims for Indian depredations, by whom they were to be examined, and the evidence required to sustain them. 4 Stat. at L. 731, chap. 161, § 17; 11 Stat. at L. 401, chap. 66, § 8; 12 Stat. at L. 120, Res. No. 26; 16 Stat. at L. 360, chap. 296, § 4; 17 Stat. at L. 190, chap. 233, § 7, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 254; Rev. Stat. §§ 466, 2098, 2156, 2157, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 264; 23 Stat. at L. 376, chap. 341; 13 Stat. at L. 674, art. 6; 15 Stat. at L. 620, arts. 5 and 6. Both clauses must be read in the light of those limitations and provisions, and when this is done, it is apparent that Congress, while disposed to be very liberal in waiving prior restrictions upon the time and mode of presenting such claims, deemed it unwise to open the door so wide in respect of claims accruing prior to July 1, 1865, and therefore declared that the court should not consider them, save where they had been allowed or had been pending prior to the passage of the act.

The present claim accrued in 1857, was never allowed, and was not a pending claim before the date of the act; [478] unless it can be said that it was pending before Congress in 1877 and 1878. We think this cannot properly be said. The claim to which the attention of Congress was invited in those years was not for an act of depredation by Indians, but, as was stated in the petitions and accompanying affidavits and in the bills introduced in response thereto, was for a depredation by Mormons. No one could understand from the petitions and affidavits or from the bills that there was any purpose to claim indemnity from the government on the ground that the depredation was committed by its Indian wards, or to obtain reparation from the latter through the exertion of the government's control over them. Rightly speaking, it was merely an appeal to the bounty or generosity of Congress, and probably was so regarded by the latter. At all events it was not an assertion or presentation of the claim which is the subject of this suit, for the latter is for an act of depredation by Indians, not by Mormons. We are accordingly of opinion that the claim is one jurisdiction of which is expressly withheld from the Court of Claims by the act of 1891.

Judgment affirmed.

SAM B. PERRIN, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 478–487.)

Indians — power of Congress over ceded lands — commerce in intoxicating liquor.

1. The power to protect the government's Indian wards against the evils of intemperance is sufficiently comprehensive to enable Congress, when securing the cession of part of an Indian reservation within a state, to prohibit the sale of intoxicants upon the ceded lands if, in its judgment, that is reasonably essential to the protection of the Indians residing on the unceded lands.

[For other cases, see Indians, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Digitized by Google

Indians — power of Congress over ceded lands — commerce in intoxicating liquor.

2. The prohibition against the sale of intoxicating liquors upon any of the ceded lands embraced in an agreement ratified and confirmed by Congress by the act of August 15, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 286, chap. 290), by which the Yankton tribe of Sioux Indians ceded and relinquished to the United States all the unallotted lands in a reservation in South Dakota, does not transcend the power of Congress as covering an unnecessarily extensive territory, where the reservation originally embraced 400,000 acres, and the lands which had been allotted to the Indians in severalty are in small tracts scattered throughout the ceded district, and aggregate nearly 100,000 acres, occupied by more than 1,500 Indians.

[For other cases, see Indians, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — power of Congress over ceded lands — commerce in intoxicating liquors.

3. The failure expressly to limit the duration of the prohibition against the sale of intoxicating liquors upon the ceded lands embraced in an agreement ratified and confirmed by Congress by the act of August 15, 1894, by which the Yankton tribe of Sioux Indians ceded all their unallotted lands in a reservation in South Dakota, will not invalidate such prohibition so long as the period during which the United States, under the act of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 119), § 5, holds the allotted lands in trust, has not expired, and the tribal relation has not been dissolved, and the wardship of the Indians has not been terminated.

[For other cases, see Indians, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 707.]

Submitted January 13, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of South Dakota to review a conviction for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors upon lands ceded by Indians. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Charles H. Bartelt and Edwin R. Winans submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The plaintiff in error is a white male citizen and resident of the state of South Dakota, and amenable to all the laws of the state, both civil and criminal, and owes allegiance to the state, which is bound to protect him in his rights as such citizen; and in doing so the state should have the right to legislate concerning the sale and introduction of intoxicating liquor by him.

People v. Bray, 105 Cal. 344, 27 L.R.A. 158, 38 Pac. 731.

When the unallotted lands of Yankton Indian Reservation were ceded to the United States by the Yankton tribe of Sioux Indians by treaty of December 31, 1892, and when such unallotted lands were opened to settlement by virtue of the act of Congress approved August 15th, 1894, and by the proclamation of the President of the United States in pursuance thereof dated May 16, 1895, the United States relinquished its jurisdiction thereover and it then became subject to the general jurisdiction of the state of South Dakota, for the purpose of punishing criminal offenses committed on said land.

Ex parte Moore, 28 S. D. 339, 133 N. W. 817; State v. Nimrod, 30 S. D. 239, 138 N. W. 377.

If the state has the right to legislate concerning the sale of intoxicating liquor, it cannot belong to the Federal government.

United States v. Ward, McCahon (Kan.) 199.

A citizen is one who owes the government, allegiance, service, and money by way of taxation, and to whom the government in turn grants and guarantees liberty of person, conscience, the right of acquiring and possessing property, of marriage and the social relations, of suit and defense, and security in person, estate, and reputation.

United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588.

Congress cannot make police regulations affecting citizens of states.

United States v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41, 19 L. ed. 593; State v. Wise, 70 Minn. 99, 72 N. W. 843.

Assistant Attorney General Wallace submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The cession grant did not disturb the status of the land as Indian country.

Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

A like unlimited restriction is found in Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 316, 55 L. ed. 749, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578, where the "condition" as applied to allotted lands, with the ordinary twenty-five-year nonalienation provision, forever requires the approval of the Secretary of the Interior before a valid conveyance can be made by the Indian.

So long as a tribal organization obtains capable of making agreements from time to time with the United States, so long as there is a tribal property, so long must Congress possess this power to protect the members of the tribe against the evil consequences of indulging in liquor. And the period during which that protection may be demanded is a legislative, and not a judicial, question.

Digitized by Google

United States v. Sandoval, 231 U. S. 28, ante, 107, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 311–315, 55 L. ed. 747–749, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; United States v. Sutton, 215 U. S. 296, 54 L. ed. 202, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116; United States v. Richert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; United States v. 43 Gallons of Whiskey (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 195, 196, 23 L. ed. 847, 848.

This court has also decided that the unlimited restriction against the sale of liquor is perfectly valid in the case of a private grant.

Cowell v. Colorado Springs Co. 100 U. S. 55, 25 L. ed. 547.

And so far as the feature of condition subsequent is concerned, the analogy is pointed out in Beck v. Flournoy Live Stock & Real Estate Co. 12 C. C. A. 497, 27 U. S. App. 618, 65 Fed. 35; quoted in Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 313, 55 L. ed. 748, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578.

The fact that some or all of these Indians may have become citizens under the provisions of the allotment act of 1887 does not in any way affect the power of Congress to protect them against their appetites (which are not altered by the investiture of citizenship), or to protect the neighboring white inhabitants, whose safety would be affected by excessive indulgence of the Indian appetite.

Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 314, 315, 55 L. ed. 749, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578.

[480] Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This direct writ of error brings under review a judgment of conviction for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors upon ceded lands formerly included in the Yankton Sioux Indian Reservation, in the state of South Dakota. This reservation was created by the treaty of April 19, 1858 (11 Stat. at L. 743), for the use of the Yankton tribe of Sioux Indians, and originally embraced 400,000 acres. A considerable part of it was allotted in severalty to the members of the tribe under the act of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 119), and the amendatory act of February 28, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 794, chap. 383), the allotments being in small tracts scattered throughout the reservation. By an agreement ratified and confirmed by Congress August 15, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 286, 314, chap. 290), the tribe ceded and relinquished to the United States all the unallotted lands. In the 17th article of the agreement it was stipulated: "No intoxicating liquors nor other intoxicants shall ever be sold or given away upon any of the lands by this agreement ceded and sold to the United States, nor upon any other lands within or comprising the reservations of the Yankton Sioux or Dakota Indians, as described in the treaty between the said Indians and the United States, dated April 19th, 1858, and as afterwards surveyed and set off to the said Indians. The penalty for the violation of this provision shall be such as Congress may prescribe in the act ratifying this agreement." And in the ratifying act it was provided: "That every person who shall sell or give away any intoxicating liquors or other intoxicants upon any of the lands by said agreement ceded, or upon any of the lands included in the Yankton Sioux Indian Reservation as created by the treaty of April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, shall be punishable by imprisonment for not more than two [481] years and by a fine of not more than three hundred dollars." [p. 319.]

Conformably to § 5 of the act of 1887, each allottee was given a trust certificate declaring that the United States would hold the land embraced in his allotment, for the period of twenty-five years, or such extended period as the President might direct, in trust for him, or, in case of his decease, for his heirs, but without power in him or them to convey or make any contract touching the land during the trust period, and at the expiration of that period would issue to him or them a patent conveying the title in fee, discharged of the trust. Some of the allotted lands were subsequently disposed of pursuant to express authority from Congress, and those remaining approach 100,000 acres, occupied by more than 1,500 Indians. Rep. Com. Ind. Affairs, 1911, p. 72. The trust period has not expired, nor has the tribal relation of the Indians been dissolved. An agent or superintendent remains in charge of their affairs and they are still wards of the government. Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 55 L. ed. 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587; United States v. Sandoval, 231 U. S. 28, ante, 107, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

The ceded lands, excepting some small tracts retained by the government as sites for an Indian agency, Indian schools, and the like, were opened to disposition under the homestead and town-site laws, May 21, 1895 (29 Stat. at L. 865), and have largely passed into private ownership.

The place at which the intoxicating liquors were sold was within the defendant's own premises in the town of Dante, an organized municipality located upon a part of the ceded lands then held in private ownership by the inhabitants, none of whom was an India. . The defendant is a white man, but whether the persons to whom the liquors were sold were white or Indian does not appear, and is immaterial under the statutory provision before quoted, upon which the prosecution was founded.

Digitized by Google

The objections urged in the district court against the [482] conviction, and now renewed, call in question the validity of that statutory provision, and are, first, that the power to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors upon all ceded lands rests exclusively in the state; and, second, that if Congress possesses any such power, it necessarily is limited to what is reasonably essential to the protection of the Indians occupying the unceded lands, and that this limitation is transcended by the provision in question because it embraces territory greatly in excess of what the situation reasonably requires, and because its operation is not confined to a designated period, reasonable in duration, but apparently is intended to be perpetual.

The power of Congress to prohibit the introduction of intoxicating liquors into an Indian reservation, wheresoever situate, and to prohibit traffic in such liquors with tribal Indians, whether upon or off a reservation and whether within or without the limits of a state, does not admit of any doubt. It arises in part from the clause in the Constitution investing Congress with authority "to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes," and in part from the recognized relation of tribal Indians to the Federal government. United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 417, 18 L. ed. 182, 185; United States v. Sutton, 215 U. S. 291, 54 L. ed. 200, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116; Hallowell v. United States, supra; Ex parte Webb, 225 U. S. 663, 683, 691, 56 L. ed. 1248, 1256, 1259, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; United States v. Wright, 229 U. S. 226, 57 L. ed. 1160, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630; United States v. Sandoval, supra. "These Indian tribes are the wards of the Nation. They are communities dependent on the United States. . . . From their very weakness and helplessness, so largely due to the course of dealing of the Federal government with them and the treaties in which it has been promised, there arises the duty of protection, and with it the power. This has always been recognized by the Executive and by Congress, and by this court, whenever the question has arisen." United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 383, 30 L. ed. 228, 231, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1109.

[483] Whether this power to protect the government's Indian wards against the evils of intemperance, of which they are easy victims, is sufficiently comprehensive to enable Congress, when securing the cession of part of an Indian reservation within a state, to prohibit the sale of intoxicants upon the ceded lands, if, in its judgment, that is reasonably essential to the protection of the Indians residing upon the unceded lands, is the real question presented by the first of the defendant's objections. We say it is the real question, because if Congress possesses power to do this it follows that the state possesses no exclusive control over the subject, and that the congressional prohibition is supreme. United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 419, 18 L. ed. 186.

The stipulation before quoted shows that when the Indians and the commissioners representing the United States agreed upon a cession of the unallotted lands, among which the allotted tracts were interspersed, both were of opinion that due regard for the welfare of the Indians required that traffic in intoxicants upon the ceded lands be interdicted, as it was before the cession; and Congress, evidently being of a like opinion, inserted in the ratifying act the provision making it a punishable offense for any person to sell or give away any intoxicating liquors or other intoxicants upon any of the ceded lands. Stipulations and provisions of this character are not new, but have occasionally appeared in Indian treaties and legislation for more than fifty years. The case of United States v. 43 Gallons of Whiskey (United States v. Lariviere), 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. ed. 846, arose out of a treaty with the Chippewas in 1863 (13 Stat. at L. 668), wherein a considerable portion of a reservation in the state of Minnesota was ceded to the United States. The treaty contained a stipulation that the laws of the United States, then in force or thereafter enacted, prohibiting the introduction and sale of spirituous liquors in the Indian country, should be operative throughout the ceded lands [484] until Congress or the President should direct otherwise; and the principal question in the case was whether this stipulation encroached upon the power of the state and upon its equal footing with the original states. This court upheld the stipulation, and in the course of the opinion, after observing that the power of Congress to regulate commerce with the Indian tribes is "as broad and as free from restrictions as that to regulate commerce with foreign nations," said (p. 195): "As long as these Indians remain a distinct people, with an existing tribal organization, recognized by the political department of the government, Congress has the power to say with whom, and on what terms, they shall deal, and what articles shall be contraband. If liquor is injurious to them inside of a reservation, it is equally so outside of it; and why cannot Congress forbid its introduction into a place near by, which they would be likely to frequent? It is easy to see that the love of liquor would tempt them to stray beyond their borders to obtain it; and that bad white men, knowing this, would carry on the traffic in adjoining localities, rather than venture upon forbidden ground." And again (p. 197): "The chiefs doubtless saw, from the curtailment of their reservation, and the consequent restriction of the limits of the 'Indian country,' that the ceded lands would be used to store liquors for sale to the young men of the tribe; and they well knew that, if there was no cession, they were already sufficiently protected by the extent of their reservation. Under such circumstances, it was natural that they should be unwilling to sell until assured that the commercial regulation respecting the introduction of spirituous liquors should remain in force in the ceded country, until otherwise directed by Congress or the President. This stipulation was not only reasonable in itself, but was justly due from a strong government to a weak people it had engaged to protect. . . . Based as it is exclusively on the Federal [485] authority over the subject-matter, there is no disturbance of the principle of state equality." The case came here a second time and the views before expressed were reaffirmed. 108 U. S. 491, 27 L. ed. 803, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906.

Digitized by Google

The case of Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399, is even more in point. There the Nez Percé tribe, by an agreement ratified by Congress, had ceded to the United States a large portion of their reservation in the state of Idaho, and in the agreement was a stipulation subjecting the ceded lands, for a period of twenty-five years, to the Federal laws prohibiting the introduction of intoxicants into the Indian country. The major part of the unceded lands was allotted in severalty to members of the tribe under the acts of 1887 and 1891, supra, and the ceded lands were opened to disposition under the public-land laws. In regular course, some of the ceded lands were patented to white men and came to be the site of a town. Under the stipulation, Dick was prosecuted for introducing intoxicating liquors into the town, and was convicted; whereupon he brought the judgment here for review, his chief contention being that, in view of Idaho's position as a state, Congress was without constitutional power to authorize or ratify the stipulation. Upon full consideration this court affirmed the judgment, and, following United States v. 43 Gallons of Whiskey, supra, and other cases, held that the stipulation was a valid regulation, and not subject to objection on constitutional grounds. See also Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 208, 24 L. ed. 471, 472; Clairmont v. United States, 225 U. S. 551, 558, 56 L. ed. 1201, 1204, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787.

We could not sustain the defendant's first objection without departing from the principles announced and applied in those cases, and this we have no disposition to do, for we regard them as embodying a right conception of the power of Congress in dealing with the Indian wards and adopting measures for their protection.

We come, then, to the objection that the prohibition in [486] the act of 1894 covers an unnecessarily extensive territory, and is not limited in duration, and so transcends the power of Congress.

As the power is incident only to the presence of the Indians and their status as wards of the government, it must be conceded that it does not go beyond what is reasonably essential to their protection, and that, to be effective, its exercise must not be purely arbitrary, but founded upon some reasonable basis. Thus, a prohibition like that now before us, if covering an entire state when there were only a few Indian wards in a single county, undoubtedly would be condemned as arbitrary. And a prohibition valid in the beginning doubtless would become inoperative when, in regular course, the Indians affected were completely emancipated from Federal guardianship and control. A different view in either case would involve an unjustifiable encroachment upon a power obviously residing in the state. On the other hand, it must also be conceded that, in determining what is reasonably essential to the protection of the Indians, Congress is invested with a wide discretion, and its action, unless purely arbitrary, must be accepted and given full effect by the courts.

The claim that the territory covered by this prohibition is so excessive as to make it purely arbitrary is devoid of merit. The original reservation embraced 400,000 acres,—a district practically 25 miles square. The allotments are in small tracts scattered throughout this district, and aggregate nearly 100,000 acres. The number of Indians affected is upwards of 1,500, and they are more or less in a state of transition from an unsettled to a settled life. In this situation, and having some regard to the weakness of Indians in respect of the use of intoxicants, we are far from believing that Congress exceeded the limits of its discretion in applying the prohibition to all the ceded lands.

Digitized by Google

[487] Of the claim that the prohibition is not expressly limited in its duration it is enough to observe that this objection cannot be of present avail. The conditions justifying the prohibition remain substantially the same as when it was adopted. The trust period has not expired, the tribal relation has not been dissolved, and the wardship of the Indians has not been terminated. See Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 315, 55 L. ed. 738, 749, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; act May 8, 1906, 34 Stat. at L. 182, chap. 2348; United States v. Pelican (decided this day [232 U. S. 442, ante, 676, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396]). The fact that the conditions may become so changed in the future as to render the prohibition inoperative affords no reason for condemning it now. Unless sooner repealed, it will continue in force as long as the presence and status of the Indians sustain it as a Federal regulation.

Judgment affirmed.

JOSEPH PRONOVOST, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 487–490.)

Error to district court — jurisdiction below — Federal question.

A direct writ of error will not lie from the Federal Supreme Court under the Judicial Code, § 238, to a district court, to review a conviction for introducing intoxicating liquors into the Indian country, where the grounds upon which the jurisdiction of the district court was challenged are not disclosed by the record, and there is no constitutional or treaty question involved.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, III. d, 3, g, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 128.]

Submitted January 15, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Montana to review a conviction for introducing intoxicating liquors into the Indian country. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

No brief was filed for plaintiff in error.

Assistant Attorney General Wallace submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a criminal prosecution for introducing intoxicating liquors into the Indian country. Upon the trial, the jury found the defendant guilty, and a judgment of conviction followed, to reverse which he sued out this direct writ of error. No brief or argument has been submitted in his behalf, and the grounds upon which he seeks a reversal are not made clear.

It appears that the jurisdiction of the district court was challenged upon some ground, not disclosed in the record, and that the objection was overruled. The indictment is in the usual form, gives January 2, 1911, as the date of the offense, describes the liquors as consisting of designated quantities of whisky, wine, and beer, and charges that they were introduced by the defendant into the Flathead Indian Reservation, in the state of Montana, the same "then and there being an Indian country." A brief bill of exceptions recites that the government produced evidence in support of the charge, and that the defendant admitted the introduction of the liquors "as charged in the indictment." Nothing more appears respecting what was shown at the trial.

An act of Congress makes the introduction of liquors, such as whisky, wine, and beer, into the Indian country, an offense against the United States, and prescribes its punishment. 29 Stat. at L. 506, chap. 109. [489] This act embraces Indian country within the limits of a state. Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 55 L. ed. 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587; United States v. Wright, 229 U. S. 226, 237, 57 L. ed. 1160, 1166, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630. An Indian reservation is Indian country (Clairmont v. United States, 225 U. S. 551, 56 L. ed. 1201, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787), and we take judicial notice that on the date named there was an Indian reservation in the state of Montana known as the Flathead Indian Reservation. Treaty of July 16, 1855, 12 Stat. at L. 975, art. 2; acts April 23, 1904, 33 Stat. at L. 302, chap. 1495, § 12, and March 3, 1905. 33 Stat. at L. 1048, 1080, chap. 1479, § 9: Rep. Com. Ind. Affairs, 1911, p. 83. Subject to exceptions not here material, the jurisdiction of the district court, as prescribed by law, embraced all offenses against the United States committed within the state of Montana. Rev. Stat. § 563, U. S. Comp.

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of judgments of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741, and B. Altman & Co. v. United States, 56 L. ed. U. S. 894.

Digitized by Google

Stat. 1901, p. 455; 25 Stat. at L. 676, 682, chap. 180, § 21.

Thus we see not only that the grounds upon which the court's jurisdiction was challenged are not disclosed by the record, but also that, so far as appears, the offense charged in the indictment and shown at the trial was manifestly cognizable in the district court.

The bill of exceptions contains a further recital that the defendant, at the conclusion of the evidence, requested the court to direct a verdict of acquittal upon the ground that the town of Polson was incorporated under the laws of Montana and subject to the state's police power, and that the subject-matter of the case was not within the control of the United States. In this there may have been an indirect assertion that the liquors were introduced into the town of Polson, not into the Flathead Indian Reservation, and that the offense, if any, was not one against the United States. But, even if so, the assertion has no other support in the record. The indictment makes no mention of the town of Polson, and neither does the recital respecting what was shown at the trial. The latter, as we have seen, states that the government produced [490] evidence in support of the charge, and that the defendant admitted the introduction of the liquor "as charged in the indictment." The natural import of this is that the liquors were introduced into the Flathead Indian Reservation. In this situation the reference to the town of Polson cannot be regarded as a factor in the case. But, as bearing upon the possible status of the lands occupied by the town, see Perrin v. United States, 232 U. S. 478, ante, 691, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; 34 Stat. at L. 354, chap. 3504, § 17; 35 Stat. at L. 795, chap. 263, § 21.

As no real question of the District Court's jurisdiction is involved, nor any constitutional or treaty question, there is no basis for the direct writ of error. The Judicial Code, § 238 [36 Stat. at L. 1157, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 228].

Writ of error dismissed.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND, & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
JELSKE CRAMER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 490–493.)

Commerce — Federal power — superseding state regulation — carrier's liability.

State statutes which, like Iowa Code, § 2074, nullify contracts limiting the liability of a carrier for loss or damage to the agreed or declared value upon which the rate was based, were superseded, so far as interstate shipments are concerned, by the Carmack amendment of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288), § 7, to the act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), § 20, which furnishes the exclusive rule on the subject of the liability of a carrier under contracts for interstate shipments.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 156.]

Submitted January 16, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa, to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Wright County, in that state, against a carrier for the full amount of the damage to an interstate shipment, notwithstanding stipulations limiting the carrier's liability to the agreed value. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 153 Iowa, 103, 133 N. W. 387.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. M. L. Bell submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. F. C. Dillard was on the brief:

The provisions of § 20 of the act of February 4, 1887, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, constitute an exclusive regulation of contracts for interstate shipments by railroad common carriers, superseding all state regulations upon the same subject.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Miller, 226 U. S. 513, 57 L. ed. 323, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Latta, 226 U. S. 519, 57 L. ed. 328, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

The liability imposed by said amended § 20 is the liability imposed by the common law upon a common carrier, and may be limited or qualified by special contract with the shipper, provided the limitation or qualification is reasonable and does not exempt from loss due to negligence.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman,

NOTE.—On validity of stipulation limiting carrier's liability to agreed valuation, as affected by the Hepburn act—see note to Bernard v. Adams Exp. Co. 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 293.

On Carmack amendment as affecting state regulations as to stipulations limiting liability of common carriers for loss or damage to goods—see note to Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257.

Digitized by Google

227 U. S. 672, 57 L. ed. 698, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 652, 57 L. ed. 683, 688, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391.

An agreed valuation regulation determining a rate is, when filed and published according to law, in effect a part of the act of Congress. Its reasonableness is not open to question in this action.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. ed. 297, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. ed. 1011, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Poor v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 418, 469; L. W. Blinn Lumber Co. v. Southern P. Co. 18 Inters. Com. Rep. 430.

No appearance for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff, Cramer, sued the railroad company to recover $992, the amount of damage to a carload of 60 hogs shipped from Galt, Iowa, to Chicago, Illinois. The company defended on the ground that the plaintiff overloaded the car, and placed therein such an excessive quantity of hay as to overheat the animals, thereby damaging some and causing the death of others. It further contended that no agent of the company had any knowledge as to the value of the hogs, except what was stated by the shipper, who represented that their value did not exceed $10 per head, and thereby secured the benefit of the lower of two rates specified in the tariff on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission and at Galt. One of these rates applied where the value of the hogs did not exceed $10 per head, and the other, a higher rate, applied where the value exceeded $10 per head. The defendant claimed that the tariffs were binding on plaintiff, [493] and that he could not, in any event, recover beyond the valuation on which the freight was charged. This latter defense was stricken out on demurrer, and the trial resulted in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for more than $600. On writ of error the supreme court affirmed the judgment and sustained the order, striking out the plea on the ground that such defense was prohibited by § 2074 of the Iowa Code, which provides that:

"No contract, receipt, rule, or regulation shall exempt any railway corporation engaged in transporting persons or property, from the liability of a common carrier or carrier of passengers, which would exist had no contract, receipt, rule, or regulation been made or entered into."

In Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289, decided in January, 1898, it was held that this statute was valid even as applied to interstate shipments. But in 1906 Congress passed the Hepburn bill [34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288], which established in interstate commerce a uniform rule of liability. That rule of liability is to be enforced in the light of the fact that the provisions of the tariff enter into and form a part of the contract of shipment, and if a regularly filed tariff offers two rates, based on value, and the goods are forwarded at the low value in order to secure the low rate, then the carrier may avail itself of that valuation when sued for loss or damage to the property. The question has been so fully considered in cases determined since the decision herein of the supreme court of Iowa, that it is unnecessary to do more than refer to Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 645, 57 L. ed. 685, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397, where the facts were substantially like those here involved, and where it was held that a carrier had the right to make a defense like that filed in the court below. As it was error to strike the plea, the judgment is reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

---

[494] D. E. FOOTE & COMPANY, Incorporated, et al., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

CHARLES H. STANLEY, Comptroller of the State of Maryland.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 494–508.)

Commerce — state regulation of imports — inspection fees.

The charge of 1 cent per bushel upon oysters coming from other states, which is levied by the Maryland oyster law, § 69, to help defray the expenses of the inspection provided for by that section, and the other expenses of the State Fishery Force, violates U. S. Const. art. 1, § 8, as unlawfully interfering with interstate commerce, where such tax regularly yields a revenue largely Note.—On inspection laws as regulations of commerce—see note to New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 51 L. ed. U. S. 78.

Digitized by Google

in excess of the amount required to pay the salaries of the inspectors, and the excess is devoted to noninspection purposes.
[For other cases, see Commerce, V.; VI. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 159.]

Argued January 16, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Maryland to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court of Baltimore City, in that state, dismissing the bill in a suit to enjoin the collection of a tax upon oysters coming into the state. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 117 Md. 335, 82 Atl. 380.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

The plaintiffs are engaged in packing oysters taken from the waters of Maryland, Virginia, and New Jersey, and shipped to Baltimore, where they are inspected under the provisions of the Maryland oyster law. This comprehensive statute contains 82 sections, one of which (§ 69) provides for the appointment of 20 special inspectors, to be paid $45 per month each, during the season. They are required to inspect all oysters in the district to which they are assigned, and to give a certificate to buyer and seller in substantially the following form:

"I hereby certify that I have this day inspected for Captain ———— of the schooner ————, a cargo of oysters, sold to ————, and found the same to contain —— bushels of merchantable oysters, and —— bushels of unmerchantable oysters. . . ."

The section further provides that "a charge of 1 cent per bushel is hereby levied to help defray the expenses of such inspection and the other expenses of the State Fishery Force, upon all oysters unloaded from vessels at the place where said oysters are to be no further shipped in bulk in vessels."

The fee was to be charged equally to the buyer and seller, and in case it was not paid at the end of the week, the property of the party indebted was to be levied on and sold by the comptroller "as in cases of taxes in default, without further process of law."

[496] The four plaintiffs refused to pay the inspection fees charged against them between October, 1910, and April, 1911. The comptroller threatened to enforce collection by levy and sale, and they filed a bill in the circuit court of Baltimore city, seeking an injunction on the ground that the inspection fees were excessive and constituted a burden on interstate commerce and a violation of the provision of the Constitution that "no state shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws." [Art. 1, § 10.]

The case was heard on an agreed statement of facts which, in addition to those above recited, showed that the act of April, 1910, was a re-enactment of sections of a prior statute (Code of Maryland, art. 72) which was substantially like the present law, with the same charge of 1 cent a bushel for measuring oysters.

Extracts from various annual reports of the comptroller were stipulated into the record. They show that the salaries of the inspectors amounted to about $14,000 per annum. After the deduction of salaries of these inspectors there was for 1909 and 1910 respectively, an excess of $22,010 and $28,680. This annual excess was carried to the credit of the oyster fund, provided for both in the repealed and re-enacted oyster law. In the report of the comptroller for 1909, he says: "The tax as to 1 cent per bushel on all oysters inspected in this state, as enacted by chapter 488 of the Acts of 1908, has been sufficient not only to pay the cost of such inspections, but also to carry to this [oyster] fund the balance or excess of $22,010.95."

In the report for 1910, he says: "During the fiscal year ending September 30, 1910, the receipts of taxes on oysters amounted to $43,671.94. The disbursements for account of salaries of the measurers and inspectors of oysters were $14,991, leaving a balance or excess [497] of $28,680.94, which was carried to the credit of the Maryland state oyster fund."

"The receipts from dredging and tonging licenses show a heavy shrinkage by reason of fewer boats being engaged in the industry; nevertheless the excess tax of 1 cent per bushel on oysters sold amounted to $28,680.94, making the fund self-sustaining for the year" (1911).

Section 30 of the oyster law referred to provides that the oyster fund shall only be drawn upon for "the purpose of maintaining sufficient and proper police regulations for the protection of fish and oysters in Maryland waters, and in the payment of the officers and men, and keeping in repair and supplying the necessary means of sailing the boats and vessels of the state fishery force."

After a hearing and consideration of the facts submitted, the circuit court held that the inspection tax was valid, refused to enjoin its collection, and dismissed the bill. That judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals (117 Md. 335, 82 Atl. 380), and the case was brought here by writ of error.

Digitized by Google

Messrs. W. Thomas Kemp and George Whitelock argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

Under art. 1, § 8 of the Federal Constitution, the state of Maryland can impose no tax upon Virginia and New Jersey oysters, except such as may be reasonably necessary for inspection purposes "to secure the due quality and measure of" the oysters shipped from Virginia and New Jersey into Maryland, and inspected in Maryland at the termination of the shipment.

Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 43 L. ed. 191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592.

Interstate commerce can only be impeded by such local statutes as seek fairly and honestly to protect the citizens of a state from the fraud of short measures, or injury by introduction of dangerous or unwholesome articles. The act of inspection of goods shipped into a state must be performed at the termination of the shipment, or, as Chief Justice Marshall observes, it must be on land, "while the article is in the bosom of the country." The person to perform the inspection must be one qualified to measure, weigh, or in some manner judge as to the particular commodity to be examined.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 203, 6 L. ed. 23, 71; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 437, 438, 6 L. ed. 678, 685; Foster v. Master & Wardens, 94 U. S. 246, 24 L. ed. 122; Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38, 55, 27 L. ed. 370, 376, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; New York v. Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 59, 62, 63, 27 L. ed. 383, 385, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87.

The Federal Constitution contemplates and permits only such state inspection taxes as are reasonable in amount, single in purpose, and assessed under a law designed for the protection of the health or safety of the community, as distinguished from a tax which, in whole or in part, levies tribute upon interstate commerce for the enrichment of the coffers of the taxing state itself.

Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 460, 6 L. ed. 678, 693; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 108, 34 L. ed. 128, 132, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38, 27 L. ed. 370, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 51 L. ed. 78, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Re Rebman, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 126, 41 Fed. 867, affirmed in 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 320, 34 L. ed. 455, 458, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 532, 43 Fed. 609; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 43 L. ed. 191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Taylor, 192 U. S. 64, 48 L. ed. 342, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 27, 54 L. ed. 355, 366, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Red "C" Oil Mfg. Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 222 U. S. 381, 394, 56 L. ed. 241, 245, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Savage v. Jones, 225 U. S. 501, 56 L. ed. 1182, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715.

This tax is grossly excessive and is imposed for other than inspection purposes.

Red "C" Oil Mfg. Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 222 U. S. 381, 394, 56 L. ed. 241, 245, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Savage v. Jones, 225 U. S. 501, 56 L. ed. 1182, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Standard Stock Food Co. v. Wright, 225 U. S. 540, 56 L. ed. 1197, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Re Rebman, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 126, 41 Fed. 875.

Mr. Edgar Allan Poe, Attorney General of Maryland, argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

In view of the fact that it appears from the bill of complaint and agreed statement of facts that the plaintiffs in error are not complaining of the imposition of any inspection charge upon oysters imported from foreign countries, § 10 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States has no bearing upon the controversy now before this court.

New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 49, 51 L. ed. 85, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

The vesting in Congress of exclusive power to regulate interstate commerce does not prohibit the states from passing, in the exercise of the police power, inspection laws, even though such laws operate upon articles of interstate commerce.

New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 50, 51 L. ed. 86, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 43 L. ed. 191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Neilson v. Garza, 2 Woods, 287, Fed. Cas. No. 10,091; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592.

The interpretation of article 72 of the

Digitized by Google

Maryland Code, as set forth by the court of last resort in Maryland, is conclusive and binding upon this court, and completely and finally disposes of the contention advanced by the plaintiffs in error.

Tampa Waterworks Co. v. Tampa, 199 U. S. 241, 50 L. ed. 170, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 23; Gatewood v. North Carolina, 203 U. S. 531, 51 L. ed. 305, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 167; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 55 L. ed. 369, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 160.

The statute in question must be considered as an inspection law which it was in the power of the state of Maryland to enact, and its fair import is that the fees exacted under its provisions are for the purpose of meeting the expenses of inspection.

Standard Stock Food Co. v. Wright, 225 U. S. 549, 56 L. ed. 1200, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiffs are engaged in the business of packing oysters in the city of Baltimore, and, during the season of 1910-11 purchased 736,000 bushels, of which 494,000 bushels were taken from the waters of the state of Maryland, 228,000 from the waters of the state of Virginia, and 14,118 from the state of New Jersey. These oysters were inspected in Baltimore by officers appointed under the provisions of the Maryland statute, which fixed an inspection fee of 1 cent per bushel to be paid, one half by the seller and one half by the buyer. The plaintiffs having refused to pay the inspection charge assessed against them, litigation followed. The decision was against their claim of immunity under art. I, §§ 8 and 10, of the Constitution. The case was then brought here on the ground that the inspection fee of 1 cent per bushel charge was excessive, that it interfered with interstate [503] commerce, and levied an unlawful impost duty upon goods shipped into Maryland from other states.

1. The Constitution prohibits a state from regulating interstate commerce, but at the same time authorizes the collection of the necessary expenses of its inspection laws, with the result that interstate commerce is to that extent lawfully burdened. Inspection is intended to determine the weight, condition, quantity, and quality of merchandise to be sold within or beyond the state's borders. It is usually "accomplished by looking at or weighing or measuring the thing to be inspected." (New York v. Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 62, 27 L. ed. 384, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87), though there may be cases in which some degree of supervision or policing is required in order to secure the proper certification of the property intended for sale or shipment. But while the two duties may sometimes overlap, there is a difference between policing and inspection, and if the state imposes upon one set of officers the performance of the two duties, and pays the whole or a part of the joint expenses out of inspection fees, it must be made to appear that such tax does not materially exceed the cost of inspection,—the burden in such cases being on those seeking to collect the combined charge. For if the cost of inspection is so intermingled with other expenses as to make it impossible to separate the two, interstate commerce might be burdened by fees collected both for inspection and revenue,—for a lawful and for an unlawful purpose. Such is the contention here, the plaintiffs insisting that the fees are collected partly for inspecting oysters and partly for the cost of policing the waters of Chesapeake bay; while the defendant insists that the charge is collected and spent solely for inspection.

2. Inspection necessarily involves expense, and the power to fix the fee, to cover that expense, is left primarily to the legislature, which must exercise discretion in determining the amount to be charged, since it is impossible [504] to tell exactly how much will be realized under the future operations of any law. Beside, receipts and disbursements may so vary from time to time that the surplus of one year may be needed to supply the deficiency of another. If, therefore, the fees exceed cost by a sum not unreasonable, no question can arise as to the validity of the tax so far as the amount of the charge is concerned. And even if it appears that the sum collected is beyond what is needed for inspection expenses, the courts do not interfere, immediately on application, because of the presumption that the legislature will reduce the fees to a proper sum. Red "C" Oil Mfg. Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 222 U. S. 393, 56 L. ed. 244, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152. But when the facts show that what was known to be an unnecessary amount has been levied, or that what has proved to be an unreasonable charge is continued, then they are obliged to act in the light of those facts, and to give effect to the provision of the Constitution prohibiting the collection by a state of more than is necessary for executing its inspection laws. In such inquiry they treat the fees fixed by the legislature for inspection proper as prima facie reasonable, and do not enter into any nice calculation as to the difference between cost and collection; nor will they declare the fees to be excessive unless it is made clearly to appear that they are obviously and largely beyond what is needed to pay for the inspection services rendered. Still, effect must be given to the provision of the Constitution, which, in unusual and emphatic terms, permits the state to collect only what is "absolutely necessary." If, therefore, it is shown, that the fees are disproportionate to the service rendered, or, that they include the cost of something beyond legitimate inspection to determine quality and condition, the tax must be declared void because such costs, by necessary operation, obstruct the freedom of commerce among the states. New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38, 51 L. ed. 78, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 [505] U. S. 83, 34 L. ed. 864, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Taylor, 192 U. S. 64, 48 L. ed. 342, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 354, 43 L. ed. 194, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Red "C" Oil Mfg. Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 222 U. S. 394, 56 L. ed. 245, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Savage v. Jones, 225 U. S. 501, 56 L. ed. 1182, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715.

Digitized by Google

3. The unreasonableness of inspection fees may appear from the language of the act, as in D. E. Foote & Co. v. Clagett, 116 Md. 228, 81 Atl. 511, where a charge of 2 cents a bushel on oysters was collected, under a statute which provided that one half was to be used for inspection and the other half was to be used for replacing shells on the natural beds for the purpose of increasing the oyster crop. That law was declared void by the court of appeals of Maryland, because of the provision that one half of the inspection fee should be applied to other than the inspection purpose. The present statute contains language susceptible of the same construction, for it provides for an inspection fee of 1 cent per bushel to be "levied to help pay the salary of the inspectors and the other expenses of the State Fishery Force."

As the act itself makes a clear distinction between inspection expenses "and other expenses," the question at once arises as to whether the state did not provide for the collection of more than was "absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws," thereby rendering the statute void because it included the cost of "something beyond legitimate inspection to determine quality and condition." Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 83, 34 L. ed. 864, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213.

This objection, apparent on the face of the act, was sought to be answered by the suggestion that § 69, which levied the tax, was but a part of an elaborate system of inspection running through the whole law, "the enforcement of which was an inseparable part of the duty of the State Fishery Force," and that "the expense of such inspection is a component part of all the expenses of that force." 117 Md. 335, 82 Atl. 380. It was urged that, in addition to inspecting oysters as they were unloaded from vessels, [506] the Fishery Force performed other inspection duties such as preventing what were known as "buy-boats" from secretly carrying culls and other unmerchantable oysters beyond the limits of the state for consumption or transplanting. But even if it be conceded that these, or like services, could be classed as inspection within the meaning of the Constitution, they form only a part of the many and various duties imposed upon the Fishery Force. That organization is supplied with men and boats, and required to patrol, day and night, the waters of Chesapeake bay to prevent unlicensed boats from taking oysters from improper tonging or dredging, and to see that shells and culls are returned to the natural beds,—provisions intended for the preservation of the supply rather than determining the merchantable quality of oysters offered for sale. Other noninspection duties might be named, but the foregoing will suffice to show that inspection, policing, and business expenses are to be paid for out of inspection fees.

3. But the commingling of these various duties, paid for out of a fund raised for inspection, does not necessarily show that the fee is excessive. For the presumption of invalidity arising from such intermingling might be met by carrying the burden of showing that, while the statute required payment out of which joint fund, the collections were not sufficient, but only helped, to pay the definitely ascertained expenses of inspection. The question of reasonableness, therefore, may be considered in the light of the practical operation of the law with a view of determining, with reasonable certainty, the permanent relation between the amount collected and the cost of inspecting. The court of appeals of Maryland, following the intimation in Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38, 27 L. ed. 370, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44, declined to pass on the question, upon the ground that a court could not decide whether "a charge or duty under an inspection law is or is not excessive." That suggestion, [507] however, is opposed to the distinct rulings in Brimmer v. Rebman, supra, and other cases above cited, which hold that it is the duty of the courts to pass upon the question, so as to protect the private citizen against the payment of inspection fees larger than those authorized by the Constitution.

Digitized by Google

4. The Maryland statute provided for that kind of inspection that could be performed by "looking at or measuring the thing to be inspected" (New York v. Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 62, 27 L. ed. 384, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87). It fixed the amount of salary to be paid the inspectors for such services, so that the cost was definitely known. The receipts, too, are reasonably certain in view of collections in the past.

The present statute is a re-enactment of an old law levying the same charge of 1 cent per bushel. Under the operations of that law it appeared that about 4,000,000 bushels were inspected each year, producing a revenue of $40,000, one third of which was sufficient to pay the salaries of the inspectors, the other two thirds being appropriated to the "other expenses of the Fishery Force." The comptroller, in his annual reports, called the attention of the legislature to the fact that, as required, this "excess" had been credited to the oyster fund. This fund was to be used—not for inspection purposes, but for "maintaining sufficient and proper police regulations for the protection of fish and oysters in Maryland waters, and the payment of the officers and men, and for keeping in repair and supplying the necessary means of sailing the boats and vessels of the State Fishery Force."

Even during the year following the enactment of the new statute, and the failure of many to pay, pending the decision as to the validity of the tax, the collections were in excess of the cost of inspection. In the light of the operation of the previous act, and the failure to show that the amount collected under the new would not be more than was necessary for the expenses of inspection proper, [508] the present statute must be held to be void. The excess collected may have been valid as a tax on property in Maryland, but was a burden on interstate commerce when levied upon oysters coming from other states. This fact renders the whole tax void, because there is no claim that the intrastate commerce can be separated from the interstate shipments, or that the legislature would have taxed one and left the other untaxed.

Judgment reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
GERTRUDE O'CONNOR.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 508–516.)

Principal and agent — authority of forwarder — statement as to value.

1. A carrier receiving from a forwarder engaged in combining shipments of various owners to secure carload rates, a carload shipment billed as household goods of small value, is not required, in the absence of anything to indicate false billing, to make special inquiry as to value, but may rely on the forwarder's statement that the car is loaded with goods of the character and value stated.

[For other cases, see Principal and Agent, III. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Principal and agent — authority of forwarder — secret instructions.

2. A carrier has the right to assume, nothing to the contrary appearing, that a forwarder engaged in combining shipments of various owners to secure carload rates has the authority to agree upon the terms of shipment, and is therefore not bound by the private instructions of one of the owners.

[For other cases, see Principal and Agent, III. c. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — limiting liability — agreed value — use of printed forms.

3. A case of an agreed valuation within the meaning of the rule that a carrier, when its rates are graduated by value, may limit its liability for the loss of an interstate shipment to the agreed or declared value, is presented where the shipper's agent filled out a printed bill of lading describing the shipment as "emigrant movables . . . Released to $10 per cwt.," which, on presentation, was signed by the carrier's agent, and the goods were shipped under the lower rate applicable to goods of that character and value.

[For other cases, see Carriers, II. b, 7, b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 473.]

NOTE.—As to limitation of carrier's liability for loss to agreed valuation—see notes to Everett v. Norfolk & S. R. Co. 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 985.

As to carrier's power to limit amount of liability in case of negligence generally—see note to Ballou v. Earle, 14 L.R.A. 433.

As to right to limit liability by contract in the absence of negligence—see note to Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Cravens, 18 L.R.A. 527.

On validity of stipulation limiting carrier's liability to agreed valuation as affected by the Hepburn act—see note to Bernard v. Adams Exp. Co. 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 293.

On Carmack amendment as affecting state regulations as to stipulations limiting liability of common carriers for loss or damage to goods—see note to Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257.

Digitized by Google

Submitted January 6, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review a judgment which, on a second appeal, affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Ramsey County, in that state, against a carrier for the full value of a lost interstate shipment, notwithstanding stipulations limiting the carrier's liability to the agreed value. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below on first appeal, 118 Minn. 223, 136 N. W. 743, on second appeal, 126 Minn. 359, 139 N. W. 618.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

The Boyd Transfer Company of Minneapolis in addition to its regular transfer business acted as a forwarder by railroad. By collecting from different shippers small lots of goods sufficient in the aggregate to fill a car, it secured carload rates, and out of the difference between carload and less than carload rates it made a profit and at the same time was enabled to offer better rates to the small shipper. How this difference between the two rates was divided between owner and forwarder does not appear in the record. At the time of the shipment referred to in this case, the railroad company had four rates on household goods (including emigrant movables), which vary, both according to the weight and value of the shipment, as follows:

Less than carload lots (value not stated)	$3.00	per cwt.
Less than carload lots (not to exceed $10 per cwt.)	2.00	" "
Carload lots (value not stated)	1.60	" "
Carload lots (value not to exceed $10)	1.00	" "

While these tariffs were in force, the Boyd Transfer Company was employed by the plaintiff, on terms not stated, to box, transfer, and ship certain property which she desired to have sent to Portland, Oregon. The articles consisted of a typewriter, stationery, books, curtains, wearing apparel, jewelry, and other personal effects. Some of them had been packed in a trunk, and the balance were boxed by the Boyd Company and loaded by it into a car filled with household goods. The weight of the load was 22,000 lbs. The Boyd Company filled out a bill of lading, describing the shipment as "One car of Emigrant Movable." [510] "Released to $10 per cwt.," and naming "Boyd Transfer & Storage Company, shipper." The bill of lading on presentation was signed by the agent of the railroad company. The goods were lost en route and the plaintiff brought suit against the railroad company for $598.65, their full value. The company filed a plea setting up that the property had been destroyed without its fault, and further contended that in view of the provisions of the tariff, and the fact that the goods had been shipped on the $1 rate, the carrier could not be held liable beyond $10 per hundredweight.

At the trial the plaintiff testified she did not know that there had been any valuation of her goods, as the agent of the Boyd Company in soliciting the shipment had stated that it had a through car, but said nothing to her about shipping her effects as household goods, and she understood that they were to be shipped as a separate consignment. She testified that she had stated to the transfer company that her goods were new, and as she had no insurance, she was willing to pay the regular rates.

The defendant introduced the tariffs, and offered evidence to show that its agents had no knowledge of the contents of plaintiff's boxes which had been loaded into the car by the transfer company, which also made out the bill of lading and indorsed thereon a statement that the car contained "Emigrant Movables Released at $10 per cwt."

A number of auctioneers and dealers in secondhand furniture were introduced as witnesses for the purpose of establishing the average value of secondhand furniture and household goods. They testified that they were familiar with the value of household goods and secondhand furniture; testified that only a few of such effects are sold by weight, but the value being ascertained, the articles could be weighed and the value per pound then [511] determined. This they illustrated by giving the cost, weight, and value per pound of various articles, and gave their opinion as to the average value of shipments of household goods, including furniture, carpets, wearing apparel, and the like. One witness stated that the average value was about $4 per cwt., another $5 per cwt., another testified that, including a secondhand piano weighing 1,500 lbs., the average value would be about $7 per cwt. There was no testimony in rebuttal, beyond the fact that the articles belonging to plaintiff were shown to be worth much more than $10 per cwt.

The court charged that if the Boyd Company was the agent of the plaintiff to make the shipment, she was bound by its valuation, provided such valuation was not an arbitrary attempt to limit liability, and left to the jury to determine whether there had been such an arbitrary attempt to limit liability. They returned a verdict for the amount claimed in the complaint. The defendant moved for a new trial because of errors in the charge and because the verdict was in excess of the sum for which the defendant could be held responsible under the tariffs filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. The judge held that the carrier was not responsible for $62.50, the value of jewelry and silverware in the trunk, and the plaintiff having written off that amount, judgment was rendered against the defendant for $533.40, a sum much in excess of $10 per cwt. The case was then taken to the supreme court of Minnesota, which affirmed the judgment. It held that the railroad company was charged with knowledge that a considerable portion of the amount received by shipping at reduced rates went to the forwarding company, and not to the various owners of the goods packed in one car; and that the railway company must have known that the Boyd Company was ignorant of the value and contents of the boxes belonging to the different shippers. It ruled that the Boyd Company had no implied [512] authority to make an agreement as to the value of plaintiff's goods. It further held that whether there had been any bona fide attempt to fix value was a question of fact; and as the jury by their verdict had found that there had been no such effort, the plaintiff, under Ostroot v. Northern P. R. 111 Minn. 504, 127 N. W. 177, was entitled to recover the full value of the goods shipped. It further held that the rule announced by it was not opposed to Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Miller, 226 U. S. 513, 57 L. ed. 323, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Latta, 226 U. S. 519, 57 L. ed. 328, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155. The defendant then sued out a writ of error.

Digitized by Google

Mr. E. C. Lindley submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. M. L. Countryman was on the brief:

Under the act to regulate commerce, defendant in error was bound by the released valuation of $10 per cwt. declared by her agent, the Boyd Transfer & Storage Company, upon which valuation she obtained a lower rate of freight in accordance with the carrier's interstate tariff provisions.

Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 57 L. ed. 683, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; Wells, F. & Co. v. Neiman-Marcus Co. 227 U. S. 469, 57 L. ed. 600, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Miller, 226 U. S. 513, 57 L. ed. 323, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Latta, 226 U. S. 519, 57 L. ed. 328, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Ford v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 123 Minn. 87, 143 N. W. 249.

Mr. C. D. O'Brien submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. James Mattimore and T. P. McNamara were on the brief:

Nachtigall, the manager of the Boyd Transfer Company, had no authority to release the value of the goods of defendant in error.

Benson v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 35 Utah, 241, 136 Am. St. Rep. 1052, 99 Pac. 1072, 19 Ann. Cas. 803.

Without either a contract or acts constituting an estoppel, a carrier may not limit its liability for its own negligence.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; Re Released Rates, 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 554.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff owned personal effects weighing 545 lbs. and worth $598. She employed the Boyd Transfer Company, which was also a forwarder, to box and ship the property from Minneapolis to Portland. The regular freight rate on such a shipment would have been $3 per cwt.; but without express authority from her, the company forwarded her boxes with others under the terms of a tariff which named $1 as the rate on carload shipments of household goods valued at less than $10 per cwt. The car and its contents were destroyed, and the state supreme court held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the full value of her property because (1) the railroad agents must have known that the transfer company was a forwarder, without authority to value plaintiff's property, and because (2) there had been no bona fide effort to agree upon a valuation.

[514] 1. It is conceded that the carrier had no knowledge of the contents of the boxes which were loaded by the transfer company and forwarded under the low rate applicable to household goods worth less than $10 per cwt. In the absence of something to indicate that the transfer company was guilty of false billing, the carrier was not required to make special inquiry, but could rely on the statement that the car was loaded with goods of the character and value stated. For, although the Boyd Company was a forwarder, engaged in collecting a number of small shipments from various persons in order to fill a car and obtain the lower rates applicable to carload shipments, yet the railroad company was obliged to treat the forwarder as shipper, even though thereby the carrier lost the benefit of the higher rate which would have been applicable to separate and small shipments. This was the ruling in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. ed. 448, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392, where it was held that the carriers were not concerned with the question of title, but must treat the forwarder as shipper, and charge the rates applicable to the quantity of freight tendered regardless of who owned the separate articles. If the forwarder was shipper for the purpose of securing carload rates, it was also shipper for the purpose of classifying and valuing, in order to determine which tariff rate was applicable.

Digitized by Google

2. The plaintiff contended, however, that she had expected her goods to be transported as a separate consignment. But the transfer company had been intrusted with goods to be shipped by railway, and, nothing to the contrary appearing, the carrier had the right to assume that the transfer company could agree upon the terms of the shipment, some of which were embodied in the tariff. The carrier was not bound by her private instructions or limitation on the authority of the transfer company, whether it be treated as agent or forwarder. If there was any undervaluation, wrongful classification, or [515] violation of her instructions, resulting in damage, the plaintiff has her remedy against that company.

3. The plaintiff, however, claimed that, even if the Boyd Transfer Company is to be treated as her agent to agree upon the terms of shipment, there had been no bona fide effort to agree on a valuation, and that she was therefore entitled to recover the full value of her goods. In order to meet this contention the defendant offered evidence to show that it had no knowledge of the contents of the boxes, and was entitled to rely upon the entry on the bill of lading inasmuch as the fair average value of household goods was less than $10 per cwt. Under the decisions in Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 655, 57 L. ed. 689, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397, it was not necessary to offer evidence to sustain the reasonableness of rates, classification, or other terms in the tariff filed with the Commission. The shipper had the right, by appropriate proceedings, to attack the rate or the classification, and, if either or both were held to be unreasonable, could secure appropriate relief either by reparation order, or by suit in court, after such finding of unreasonableness. But so long as the tariff rate, based on value, remained operative, it was binding upon the shipper and carrier alike, and was to be enforced by the courts in fixing the rights and liabilities of the parties. The tariffs are filed with the Commission and are open to inspection at every station. In view of the multitude of transactions, it is not necessary that there shall be an inquiry as to each article, or a distinct agreement as to the value of each shipment. If no value is stated, the tariff rate applicable to such a state of facts applies. If, on the other hand, there are alternative rates based on value, and the shipper names a value to secure the lower rate, the carrier, in the absence of something to show rebating or false billing, is entitled to collect the rate which applies to goods of that class, and if sued for their loss it is liable only for the loss of [516] what the shipper had declared them to be in class and value.

4. Nor was the result changed because of the use of printed forms. This appears from the ruling in Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 U. S. 331, 28 L. ed. 717, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151, where it was claimed that the shipper had not been asked to state the value, but had merely signed a printed contract naming a value. The court said: "The valuation named was the 'agreed valuation,' the one on which the minds of the parties met, however it came to be fixed. and the rate of freight was based on that valuation, and was fixed on condition that such was the valuation, and that the liability should go to that extent and no further." The rule of the Hart, Carl, and Harriman Cases was not applied in the court below, and the judgment must be reversed, and the case remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

FARMERS & MECHANICS SAVINGS BANK OF MINNEAPOLIS, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF MINNESOTA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 516–531.)

Taxes — Federal agency — bonds of territorial municipalities.

1. A state may not tax bonds issued by municipalities in the Indian territory and in the territory of Oklahoma as property

Note.—On constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

On constitutional equality in respect to corporate taxation—see note to Bacon v. State Tax Comrs. 60 L.R.A. 321.

Digitized by Google

in the hands of the holders, since this would be to tax the performance of a governmental function by an instrumentality and agency of the Federal government, although the bonds may not have been guaranteed either by the United States or by the central government of the territory.

[For other cases, see Taxes, I. c, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxes — Federal agency — bonds of territorial municipality — effect of admission of state.

2. The admission of Oklahoma to the Union under the enabling act of June 16, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 267, chap. 3335), did not operate to deprive the holders of bonds issued by municipalities in the Indian territory and the territory of Oklahoma of the exemption from state taxation which they enjoyed as holders of obligations of an agency of the Federal government, even conceding that an obligation to pay the bonds was assumed by the new state.

[For other cases, see Taxes, I. c, 2; States, XI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxes — savings bank surplus — bonds of territorial municipalities.

3. A state, in taxing as credits the surplus of a savings bank, ascertained by deducting from its assets the amount of its deposits and other accounts payable, must leave out of the computation of its assets bonds issued by territorial municipalities which are exempt from taxation as the obligations of an agency of the Federal government.

[For other cases, see Taxes, I. c, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — taxation of savings banks — classification.

4. Requiring savings banks to include in the computation of their assets for taxation notes secured by mortgages upon Minnesota real estate upon which the registration tax has been paid, as is done by Minn. Laws 1907, chap. 328, which at the same time relieves mortgages upon such real estate when otherwise owned from all taxation except the registration tax, cannot be deemed to contravene the equal protection of the laws clause of U. S. Const., 14th Amend., in view of the privileges respecting taxation enjoyed by savings banks under Minn. Laws 1905, chap. 839, accorded to no other person or corporation subject to taxation.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 39.]

Argued May 8, 1913. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for the County of Hennepin, in that state, in favor of the state in proceedings to collect taxes assessed against a savings bank. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 114 Minn. 95, 130 N. W. 445, 851.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William A. Lancaster argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Claude B. Leonard and Milton D. Purdy, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Federal agencies and instrumentalities are not taxable by the states.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 449, 7 L. ed. 481; New York ex rel. Bank of Commerce v. Tax Comrs. 2 Black, 620, 15 L. ed. 451; Society for Savings v. Coite, 6 Wall. 594, 18 L. ed. 897; Banks v. New York, 7 Wall. 16, 18 L. ed. 57; Home Sav. Bank v. Des Moines, 205 U. S. 503, 51 L. ed. 901, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Grether v. Wright, 23 C. C. A. 498, 43 U. S. App. 770, 75 Fed. 742; Bank of New York v. New York County (New York ex rel. Bank of New York v. New York County) 7 Wall. 26, 19 L. ed. 60.

The Federal government cannot tax the bonds of the municipalities of a state.

Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138, 30 L. ed. 895, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322, 21 L. ed. 597.

It is just as incompetent for a state to tax the bonds of the municipalities of a territory as it is for the Federal government to tax the bonds of the municipalities of the state.

So much of § 3 of chapter 328, Minn. Laws of 1907, as attempts to hold banks, savings banks, and trust companies to double taxation on mortgages upon real estate in the state of Minnesota, at the same time relieving all mortgages upon such real estate owned by others than banks, savings banks, and trust companies from all other taxation thereon than the mortgage registration tax provided for by the act, is unconstitutional, as being in violation of § 1, article 14, of the Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

State v. Canada Cattle Car Co. 85 Minn. 457, 89 N. W. 66; Noonan v. Stillwater, 33 Minn. 198, 53 Am. Rep. 23, 22 N. W. 444; State v. Pioneer Sav. & L. Co. 63 Minn. 80, 65 N. W. 138; Faribault v. Misener, 20 Minn. 396, Gil. 347; State v. Weyerhauser, 68 Minn. 353, 71 N. W. 265; State v. Duluth Water & Light Co. 76 Minn. 96, 57 L.R.A. 63, 78 N. W. 1032.

Mr. Lyndon A. Smith, Attorney General of Minnesota, and Mr. James Robertson, argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

At the time of the making of the assessment, Indian territory and the territory of

Digitized by Google

Oklahoma had ceased to exist for nearly six months, and if the bonds of the municipalities of these territories were ever the obligations of the territorial government, they were, by the Constitution, assumed by the state of Oklahoma.

Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 112 U. S. 414, 28 L. ed. 794, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

Conceding, for the sake of the argument, that municipalities of territories are agencies of the national government, their exemption from taxation applies only in so far as their property is actually engaged in furthering the interest of and actually serving the national government. When a municipality of a territory issues bonds for local improvements, in what way is it serving the Federal government? And by reason of such service why should it be entitled to have its obligations exempt from taxation?

Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. LeSueur, 2 Ariz. 428, 1 L.R.A. 244, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 189, 19 Pac. 157; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 120 Fed. 984; State ex rel. Gottlieb v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 165 Mo. 521, 65 S. W. 775; Elmira Sav. Bank v. Davis, 142 N. Y. 595, 25 L.R.A. 546, 37 N. E. 646; Moore v. Beason, 7 Wyo. 292, 51 Pac. 875; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; Dyer v. Melrose, 215 U. S. 594, 54 L. ed. 341, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 361, 19 L. ed. 703; Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787; Van Brocklin v. Tennessee (Van Brocklin v. Anderson) 117 U. S. 151, 29 L. ed. 845, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670; Central P. R. Co. v. California, 162 U. S. 119, 40 L. ed. 912, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766; Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. v. San Francisco, 200 U. S. 314, 50 L. ed. 496, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265, 4 Ann. Cas. 934; Thomson v. Union P. R. Co. 9 Wall. 591, 19 L. ed. 798; Central P. R. Co. v. California, 162 U. S. 121, 40 L. ed. 913, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 477, 7 L. ed. 491; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Todd County, 142 U. S. 282, 35 L. ed. 1014, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Phœnix F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 174, 40 L. ed. 660, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 471; State v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 Minn. 22, 104 N. W. 567; Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 225, 21 L. ed. 804.

Does chapter 328, Laws of Minnesota for 1907, in excepting savings banks from the exemption of all other taxes allowed generally to other holders of real estate mortgages, paying the registry fee, unlawfully discriminate against such savings banks, and does it violate the equality clause of § 1, art. 14, of the Amendments of the Constitution of the United States?

Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Martin County, 104 Minn. 179, 116 N. W. 572; State ex rel. Hilderbrandt v. Fitzgerald, 117 Minn. 192, 134 N. W. 728; People ex rel. Eisman v. Ronner, 185 N. Y. 285, 291, 77 N. E. 1061; New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 1, 47, 50 L. ed. 65, 79, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705, 4 Ann. Cas. 381; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 237, 33 L. ed. 892, 895, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Southwestern Oil Co. v. Texas, 217 U. S. 122, 54 L. ed. 692, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 594, 33 L. ed. 1025, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 108, 160, 55 L. ed. 389, 417, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 172 N. Y. 35, 64 N. E. 756; Genet v. Brooklyn, 99 N. Y. 296, 1 N. E. 777; Gray, Limitations of Taxing Power, § 1630; 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. §§ 389, 397.

The statute of Minnesota providing for the registry tax seems on its face to make its payment cover not only all taxes upon the security, but also on the debt secured. The supreme court of Minnesota has construed that statute to the contrary.

Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Martin County, 104 Minn. 179, 116 N. W. 572; State ex rel. Hilderbrandt v. Fitzgerald, 117 Minn. 192, 134 N. W. 728.

Undoubtedly this court will regard the decisions of the supreme court of Minnesota as conclusive as to the proper construction of its own tax laws.

Chicago Theological Seminary v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 662, 674, 47 L. ed. 641, 649, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 386; Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 47, 52, 25 L. ed. 544, 546.

The tax in question is not specific.

State ex rel. Winona Motor Co. v. Minnesota Tax Commission, 117 Minn. 159, 134 N. W. 643; United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, 223 U. S. 335, 56 L. ed. 459, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211.

The 14th Amendment does not attempt the regulation of the details of taxation.

Brown-Forman Co. v. Kentucky, 217 U. S. 563, 572, 574, 54 L. ed. 883, 886, 887, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 205, 50 L. ed. 150, 154, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493.

The infirmity in appellant's argument is that it assumes that a discrimination exists against the bank because it is taxed in a different way from that by which other persons are taxed.

Digitized by Google

Home Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 211 U. S. 265, 281, 53 L. ed. 176, 186, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.

It was perhaps material to inquire whether these bonds were issued for private or for governmental purposes. Such question was not introduced into the case by either pleadings or evidence. The presumption, then, is that the bonds were of such a kind as to sustain the taxation of the bank on their account.

South Carolina v. United States, 199 U. S. 437, 50 L. ed. 261, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110, 4 Ann. Cas. 737; Vilas v. Manila, 220 U. S. 345, 55 L. ed. 491, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416; Audit Co. v. Louisville, 107 C. C. A. 467, 185 Fed. 349; Louisville v. Com. 1 Duv. 295, 85 Am. Dec. 624.

There was a marked difference between the District of Columbia and ordinary territories in their relations to the Federal Government.

Kawananakoa v. Polyblank, 205 U. S. 349, 353, 354, 51 L. ed. 834, 836, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Adams Exp. Co. v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 4 McCrary, 77, 16 Fed. 715; Honolulu Rapid Transit & Land Co. v. Wilder, 211 U. S. 137, 53 L. ed. 121, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Gromer v. Standard Dredging Co. 224 U. S. 362, 369, 370, 56 L. ed. 801, 804, 805, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499.

Another distinction between a case in which there is an interference with Federal agencies and operations and the case now being considered is drawn with accuracy and clearness in Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 32, 37, 21 L. ed. 787, 792, 793.

A tax which is objectionable because interfering with a Federal agency is shown in sharp contrast with a tax upon property somewhat connected with governmental operations in Williams v. Talladega, 226 U. S. 404, 57 L. ed. 275, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116.

No claim is made, and none could be, that the bonds in question were not taxable, except on the ground that they are practically United States bonds. If they were the municipal bonds of a state or any of its municipalities, they were taxable.

Bonaparte v. Appeal Tax Ct. 104 U. S. 592, 26 L. ed. 845.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

This writ of error brings under review a judgment of the supreme court of Minnesota (114 Minn. 95, 130 N. W. 445, 851), affirming the judgment of a lower court, in proceedings for the collection of taxes assessed against plaintiff in error for the year 1908. Plaintiff in error is a savings bank, having no capital stock, and was taxable under § 839, Rev. Laws 1905, which provides for ascertaining the surplus remaining after deducting from its assets (other than real estate, which is separately assessed) the amount [521] of the deposits and of all other accounts payable; the surplus to be taxed as "credits." The supreme court of Minnesota held that this section imposes not a franchise but a property tax, and that the surplus of savings banks as thus determined is taxable property. This construction is not questioned here; perhaps is not open to question.

Two Federal questions are raised.

First, the savings bank insisted in the state courts, and here renews the insistence, that certain bonds issued by municipalities in Indian territory and in the territory of Oklahoma, held by the bank, amounting to about $700,000 in value, should have been omitted from the list of its personal assets, for the reason that bonds of this character are not taxable by the state.

This question, although novel, is to be solved by the application of principles long established.

It was laid down by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, speaking for this court in M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 436, 4 L. ed. 579, 607, 608, that the state could not constitutionally impose taxation upon the operations of a local branch of the United States Bank, because the bank was an agency of the Federal government, and the states had no power, by taxation or otherwise, to hamper the execution by that government of the powers conferred upon it by the people. The supremacy of the Federal Constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof, and the entire independence of the general government from any control by the respective states, were the fundamental grounds of the decision. The principle has never since been departed from, and has often been reasserted and applied. Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 859, 6 L. ed. 204, 233; Home Sav. Bank v. Des Moines, 205 U. S. 503, 513, 51 L. ed. 901, 907, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Grether v. Wright, 23 C. C. A. 498, 43 U. S. App. 770, 75 Fed. 742, 753.

State taxation of national bank shares, as permitted by the act of Congress, without regard to the fact that a [522] part or the whole of the capital of the bank is invested in national securities which are exempt from taxation (Van Allen v. Assessors [Churchill v. Utica], 3 Wall. 573, 583, 18 L. ed. 229, 234; Bradley v. Illinois, 4 Wall. 459, 18 L. ed. 433; First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 353, 359, 19

Digitized by Google

L. ed. 701, 702), is an apparent, not a real, exception. The same is true of taxes upon the mere property of agencies of the Federal government (Thomson v. Union P. R. Co. 9 Wall. 579, 589, 19 L. ed. 792, 798; Union P. R. Co v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 32, 34, 21 L. ed. 787, 792, 793). Indeed, these exceptions rest upon distinctions that were recognized in the decision of M'Culloch v. Maryland. Chief Justice Marshall said, in closing the discussion: "This opinion . . . does not extend to a tax paid by the real property of the bank, in common with the other real property within the state, nor to a tax imposed on the interest which the citizens of Maryland may hold in this institution, in common with other property of the same description throughout the state. But this is a tax on the operations of the bank, and is, consequently, a tax on the operation of an instrument employed by the government of the Union to carry its powers into execution. Such a tax must be unconstitutional." For a fuller discussion of the Van Allen Case, see Home Sav. Bank v. Des Moines, 205 U. S. 503, 517, 51 L. ed. 901, 909, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571.

The government of the respective territories in question was that provided by the act of Congress of May 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 81, 93, chap. 182), of which the first 28 sections created a temporary government for the territory of Oklahoma; while § 29 (p. 93) and subsequent sections established laws for the government of what was thereafter to be known as the Indian territory, but without conferring general powers of local self-government. To the territorial government of Oklahoma legislative power was granted (§ 6), extending to "all rightful subjects of legislation not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States." Municipal corporations were in contemplation. Sec. 7 provided that [523] the legislative assembly should not authorize the issuing of any bond or evidence of debt by any county, city, town, or township for the construction of any railroad; thus recognizing that the borrowing power might be employed for other purposes. By § 11, certain provisions of the Compiled Laws of Nebraska, in force November 1, 1889, so far as locally applicable, were extended to and put in force in the territory until after the adjournment of the first session of its legislative assembly; among these being chapter 14, entitled, "Cities of the Second Class and Villages," which contains provisions for the organization of municipal corporations, with power to borrow money for public purposes. The Indian territory was not made an "organized territory," but by § 31 certain general laws of the state of Arkansas, as published in Mansfield's Digest (1884), were put in force there until Congress should otherwise provide; among these, the chapter relating to municipal corporations (§§ 722-959).

It is not disputed that the municipal bonds now in question were lawfully authorized and are in every respect valid obligations of the respective municipalities. Except as such obligations they would hardly be treated as taxable property in the hands of the holder.

The relation of the organized territories to the United States has been frequently adverted to. In First Nat. Bank v. Yankton County, 101 U. S. 129, 133, 25 L. ed. 1046, 1047, which had to do with the organic act of the territory of Dakota (12 Stat. at L. 239, chap. 86), the court, speaking by Mr. Chief Justice Waite, said:

"All territory within the jurisdiction of the United States, not included in any state, must necessarily be governed by or under the authority of Congress. The territories are but political subdivisions of the outlying dominion of the United States. Their relation to the general government is much the same as that which counties bear to the respective states, and Congress may [524] legislate for them as a state does for its municipal organizations. . . . Congress may not only abrogate laws of the territorial legislatures, but it may itself legislate directly for the local government. It may make a void act of the territorial legislature valid, and a valid act void. In other words, it has full and complete legislative authority over the people of the territories and all the departments of the territorial governments. It may do for the territories what the people, under the Constitution of the United States, may do for the states."

The territory of Oklahoma, therefore, was an instrumentality established by Congress for the government of the people within its borders, with authority to subdelegate the governmental power to the several municipal corporations therein. These corporations were established for public and governmental purposes only, and exercised their powers and performed their functions as agents of the central authority. With respect to Indian territory, the situation under the act of 1890 was somewhat different, and the municipal corporations derived their authority directly from the act of Congress.

No doubt, as is usual in such cases, the people of the respective municipalities had a more immediate and direct interest than others in the local government, and in the local improvements that presumably may have been constructed with the proceeds of the municipal bonds. But this interest was that of citizens and taxpayers, not that of proprietors. And the policy of Congress, as manifested in its legislation upon the subject, had regard not merely, nor even chiefly, for the particular and immediate interests of the several municipalities. It looked to the promotion of the prosperity and welfare of the whole people of the United States, through the development of organized self-governing communities—afterwards to become states of the Union—throughout the whole of the public domain. With statehood as the ultimate aim and [525] purpose, the organic acts were consciously framed. They were frequently, if not always, entitled: "An Act to Provide a Temporary Government for the Territory," etc.; and so reads the title of the act of May 2, 1890.

Digitized by Google

In our opinion, therefore, the municipalities of the territory of Oklahoma and of Indian territory were instrumentalities and agencies of the Federal government, with whose operations the states were not permitted to interfere by taxation or otherwise; and the issuing of municipal bonds was the performance of a governmental function, within the established doctrine. And we deem it immaterial that these bonds were not guaranteed by the United States, or even (in the case of the Oklahoma bonds) by the central government of the territory.

The supreme court of Minnesota, conceding that the municipalities were Federal agencies in the performance of governmental functions, yet deemed that a material narrowing of the doctrine of M'Culloch v. Maryland was to be inferred from an expression contained in the opinion of this court in First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 353, 362, 19 L. ed. 701, 703, where it was said: "The principle we are discussing has its limitation,—a limitation growing out of the necessity on which the principle itself is founded. That limitation is, that the agencies of the Federal government are only exempted from state legislation so far as that legislation may interfere with or impair their efficiency in performing the functions by which they are designed to serve that government." And from a like expression contained in the opinion in Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 36, 21 L. ed. 787, 793: "It is therefore manifest that exemption of Federal agencies from state taxation is dependent not upon the nature of the agents, or upon the mode of their constitution, or upon the fact that they are agents, but upon the effect of the tax; that is, upon the question whether the tax does in truth deprive them of power to serve the government as they were intended to [526] serve it, or does hinder the efficient exercise of their power. A tax upon their property has no such necessary effect. It leaves them free to discharge the duties they have undertaken to perform. A tax upon their operations is a direct obstruction to the exercise of Federal powers."

But we deem it entirely clear that a tax upon the exercise of the function of issuing municipal bonds is a tax upon the operations of the government, and not in any sense a tax upon the property of the municipality. And to tax the bonds as property in the hands of the holders is, in the last analysis, to impose a tax upon the right of the municipality to issue them. In Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 449, 466, 468, 7 L. ed. 481, 487, 488, which involved the right of the city, acting under the authority of the state of South Carolina, to ordain a tax upon United States stock in the hands of the owner, Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, speaking for the court, after reaffirming the principles settled in M'Culloch v. Maryland, said (p. 468): "The American people have conferred the power of borrowing money on their government, and by making that government supreme, have shielded its action, in the exercise of this power, from the action of the local governments. The grant of the power is incompatible with a restraining or controlling power, and the declaration of supremacy is a declaration that no such restraining or controlling power shall be exercised. The right to tax the contract to any extent, when made, must operate upon the power to borrow before it is exercised, and have a sensible influence on the contract. The extent of this influence depends on the will of a distinct government. To any extent, however inconsiderable, it is a burthen on the operations of government. It may be carried to an extent which shall arrest them entirely."

It is on this ground that United States bonds have always been held exempt from taxation under authority of the states. By like reasoning it has come to be recognised [527] that bonds issued by the states are not taxable by the Federal government, and it was upon this ground that this court held, in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 584, 39 L. ed. 759, 820, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673, that the income tax provisions of the act of August 27, 1894 [28 Stat. at L. 509, chap. 349], were unconstitutional in that they imposed a tax upon the income derived from municipal bonds issued under the authority of the states.

It is contended by defendant in error that the situation was changed by the admission of Oklahoma as a state, combining both the territory of Oklahoma and the Indian territory. This was accomplished under the enabling act of June 16, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 267, chap. 3335), and was evidenced by the proclamation of the President, issued November 16, 1907 [35 Stat. at L. 2160]. By § 4 of art. I. of the Oklahoma Constitution the debts and liabilities of the territory of Oklahoma were assumed by the state.

Digitized by Google

The argument is that at the time of making the assessment for taxes against plaintiff in error, the Indian territory and the territory of Oklahoma had ceased to exist as such for nearly six months, and that the bonds of the municipalities of those territories, being the obligations of the territorial government, were, by the Constitution, assumed by the state. There seems to be no provision of law that constitutes the bonds of the municipalities obligations of the territorial governments, and so the argument falls to the ground at once.

But we are unwilling to intimate a concession that an assumption by the state of Oklahoma of the obligation to pay these bonds would operate to deprive the bondholders of the exemption from taxation, previously enjoyed. Presumably the municipal credit was enhanced and the terms of the municipal borrowing rendered more favorable, by the understanding that the bonds, being obligations of an agency of the Federal government, would be exempt from taxation by the several states. The value of the bonds in the market was presumably thereby increased. [528] Indeed, the state court in the present case very plainly declares (114 Minn. 109, 130 N. W. 445, 851) that bonds of the municipalities of the territories, if not taxable by the state, command a higher price on the market than bonds of the municipalities of the states. To deprive bonds of the former description of their immunity from state taxation, and this because of the subsequent action of Congress in erecting the territories into a state, with or without an assumption by the new state of the obligations of the former Federal agency, would be in effect to impair the obligation of the contract; and this is so inconsistent with the honor and dignity of the United States that such an intent should not be presumed without the clearest legislative language requiring it.

It is, however, further suggested that the judgment under review does not sustain a tax upon the bonds as property, but only a tax upon the surplus of the savings bank, computed by taking into the account all of its assets, amounting to about $12,000,000, of which the bonds were only about $700,000, and deducting therefrom its liabilities. But as the surplus is treated as property and taxed as such, it is obvious that some portion of the burden of the tax is attributable to the ownership of the municipal bonds. In New York ex rel. Bank of Commerce v. Tax & A. Comrs. 2 Black, 620, 17 L. ed. 451, it was held that the state of New York, in taxing the capital of banks according to its valuation, must leave out of the calculation that portion of the capital invested in the stocks, bonds, or other securities of the United States not liable to taxation by the state. And see Bank Tax Case (New York ex rel. Bank of Commonwealth v. Tax & A. Comrs.), 2 Wall. 200, 17 L. ed. 793; Home Sav. Bank v. Des Moines, 205 U. S. 503, 509, 51 L. ed. 901, 906.

It results that the inclusion of the bonds now in question in the list of the assets of plaintiff in error, in ascertaining its surplus for the purpose of imposing a state property tax thereon, was repugnant to the Constitution of the United States.

[529] The second Federal question arises out of the insistence of the savings bank that it was entitled to have omitted from the computation of its surplus for purposes of taxation certain notes held by it, amounting to about $161,000, and secured by mortgages upon Minnesota real estate, upon which mortgages a registry tax had been paid.

It appears that the Minnesota legislature, by chap. 328, Laws of 1907, provided a registry tax upon debts secured by mortgages covering real property in the state, the amount of the tax being 50 cents upon each $100, payable at or before the filing of the mortgage for record or registration. By § 3 it was enacted that "all mortgages upon which such tax has been paid, with the debts or obligations secured thereby and the papers evidencing the same, shall be exempt from all other taxes; but nothing herein shall exempt such property from the operation of the laws relating to the taxation of gifts and inheritances, or those governing the taxation of banks, savings banks, or trust companies;" with a further proviso not now pertinent.

It was and is insisted that this section, in subjecting banks, savings banks, and trust companies to double taxation upon their mortgages covering real estate in the state of Minnesota, while at the same time relieving mortgages upon such real estate when otherwise owned, from all taxation except the registration tax, is in contravention of the "equal protection" clause of the 14th Amendment.

Although the clause limiting the exemption includes banks and trust companies, the supreme court of Minnesota declined to consider whether the classification was proper with respect to those institutions, and so declining dealt with the status of savings banks only. Holding that this class of institutions under other laws enjoyed privileges respecting taxation that were accorded to no other person or corporation subject to taxation, the court [530] held that savings banks might properly be treated as a class by themselves, and required to include such mortgages in the computation of their assets for purposes of taxation.

Digitized by Google

If there is no unconstitutional discrimination against savings banks, it is for present purposes unnecessary to inquire whether the act discriminates against other banks and trust companies. Tyler v. Registration Ct. Judges, 179 U. S. 405, 409, 45 L. ed. 252, 254, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 419, 48 L. ed. 1046, 1050, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; New York ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon, 204 U. S. 152, 160, 51 L. ed. 415, 422, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188, 9 Ann. Cas. 736; Southern R. Co. v. King, 217 U. S. 524, 534, 54 L. ed. 868, 871, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Standard Stock Food Co. v. Wright, 225 U. S. 540, 550, 56 L. ed. 1197, 1201, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Rosenthal v. New York, 226 U. S. 260, 271, 57 L. ed. 212, 217, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27.

The supreme court of Minnesota lucidly summarized the state of the law which furnished, in its judgment, a sufficient reason for the classification, as follows: "Section 839, Rev. Laws 1905, treats of savings banks, for the purposes of taxation, in a special manner. They have no capital stock, yet their property is not taxed in the same way as the property of individuals or of other corporations. By § 838 the value of the stock of corporations having capital stock is ascertained by deducting the value of the real and personal property from the market or actual value of the stock, and the amount of the difference is taxed as stocks and bonds, and the real estate and personal property are taxed in the ordinary way. Section 839 places all banks without capital stock (except savings banks), brokers, and stock jobbers in one class, and savings banks in another class. The former are taxed by ascertaining the difference between the amount of money on hand or in transit, the amount of money in the hands of others, subject to draft, the amount of checks or cash items, etc., the amount of bills receivable and other credits; and from the total of these amounts the deposits and accounts payable are deducted. The balance, if any, is assessed as money under § 835. The bonds and stocks and personal and real property are assessed separately [531] in the ordinary way. But in the case of savings banks no specific property is taxed separately except real property. Its money, checks, bills receivable, bonds, and stocks, and all personal property appertaining to the business are listed for the purpose of ascertaining whether there is a surplus, and the surplus is found by deducting the total of the deposits and accounts payable from the total value of the costs."

For these and other reasons pointed out in the opinion, it seems to us the court was justified in holding that there were reasonable grounds for the discrimination so far as savings banks were concerned, and that plaintiff in error had therefore not been deprived of the equal protection of the laws. In lieu of further discussion we refer to the oft quoted language employed by Mr. Justice Bradley, speaking for this court, in Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 237, 33 L. ed. 892, 895, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533.

But because of the error in subjecting the bonds of the municipalities of the territories to taxation, the judgment must be reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Judgment reversed.

PLYMOUTH COAL COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, David T. Davis, Inspector of Mines, etc.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 531-547.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — regulating coal mines — boundary pillars.

The method of fixing the width of the barrier pillar to be left between adjoining coal properties, which, under Pa. act of June 2, 1891 (P. L. 176), must be sufficient to safeguard the employees of either mine in case the other shall be abandoned and allowed to fill with water, is not so crude, uncertain, or unjust as to constitute a taking of property without due process of law because such width of pillar is to be determined under that statute "by the engineers of the adjoining property owners, together with the inspector of the district in which the mine is situated," nor because the statute does not require that notice be given to the lessor, being satisfied with reasonable notice to the lessee, nor NOTE.—On statutory regulations for the protection and safety of workmen in mines —see note to Consolidated Coal & Min. Co. v. Floyd, 25 L.R.A. 848.

Digitized by Google

prescribe the procedure, nor give a right to appeal.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 5; IV. b, 8, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 102.]

Argued January 15, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Pennsylvania to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Court of Common Pleas in Luzerne County, in that state, enjoining the working of a coal mine without leaving a barrier pillar along the line of an adjoining mine. Affirmed.

See same case below, 232 Pa. 141, 81 Atl. 148.

Statement by Mr. Justice Pitney:

This case involves the constitutionality of a section of the anthracite mine laws of the state of Pennsylvania, [533] being § 10 of art. 3 of the act of June 2, 1891 (P. L. pp. 176, 183), which reads as follows:

"It shall be obligatory on the owners of adjoining coal properties to leave, or cause to be left, a pillar of coal in each seam or vein of coal worked by them, along the line of adjoining property, of such width that, taken in connection with the pillar to be left by the adjoining property owner, will be a sufficient barrier for the safety of the employees of either mine in case the other should be abandoned and allowed to fill with water; such width of pillar to be determined by the engineers of the adjoining property owners together with the inspector of the district in which the mine is situated, and the surveys of the face of the workings along such pillar shall be made in duplicate and must practically agree. A copy of such duplicate surveys, certified to, must be filed with the owners of the adjoining properties and with the inspector of the district in which the mine or property is situated."

Art. 18, under the head of "Definition of Terms," contains, inter alia, the following:

"The term 'owners' and 'operators' means any person or body corporate who is the immediate proprietor or lessee or occupier of any coal mine or colliery or any part thereof. The term 'owner' does not include a person or body corporate who merely receives a royalty, rent, or fine from a coal mine or colliery or part thereof, or is merely the proprietor of the mine, subject to any lease, grant, or license for the working or operating thereof, or is merely the owner of the soil, and not interested in the minerals of the mine or any part thereof. But any 'contractor' for the working of a mine or colliery, or any part or district thereof, shall be subject to this act as an operator or owner, in like manner as if he were the owner."

The record shows that the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company and the Plymouth Coal Company are respectively the lessees or owners of adjoining coal properties [534] situate at Plymouth, in Luzerne county, Pennsylvania; that on August 31, 1909, Mr. Davis, the inspector of mines of the district in which the properties are located, wrote a letter to the president of the Plymouth Coal Company which reads as follows:

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 31, '09.

John C. Haddock, Pres. Plymouth Coal Co.

Dear Sir:—

Kindly have your engineer report at my office Thursday morning Sept. 2d at 10 o'clock at which time we can meet the engineer of the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company to decide as to thickness of barrier pillar to be left unmined between the properties of the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company and the Plymouth Coal Company, situated at Plymouth, Luz. Co., Pa., as per article 3, § 10, anthracite mine laws of this commonwealth, which reads as follows [quoting the section verbatim].

[Signed] D. T. Davis,
Inspector of Mines.

To this the following reply was made:

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.,
Sept. 1, 1909.

Mr. D. T. Davis, Inspector, Ninth Anthracite Inspection District, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Dear Sir:—

I am in receipt of yours of the 31st ult.

Allow me to say in reply that while it would give us great pleasure to meet you and the representatives of the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company at the suggested conference, to be held to-morrow, we cannot enter such a conference to even consider, much less conclude, an agreement that may affect our rights and our duty to our lessors at the Dodson Colliery.

I assume it is needless to assure you that we stand [535] ready at all times to comply with any reasonable request that may emanate from you or your office, but if I am advised correctly, this request or demand originated with the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company.

This was their right to make as it is ours to decline.

Yours very truly,
[Signed] John C. Haddock,
President The Plymouth Coal Co.

Thereupon, pursuant to article 15 of the above-mentioned statute, the mine inspector, acting in behalf of the commonwealth, filed his bill of complaint against the Plymouth Coal Company in the court of common pleas of Luzerne county, setting forth the above facts and averring that defendant refused to permit its engineer to meet with the mine inspector and the engineer of the adjoining property owner to determine the width of the barrier pillar, or to even consider the matter, and refused to leave or cause to be left a pillar that, taken in connection with the pillar to be left by the adjoining property owner, would be a sufficient barrier for the safety of the employees of either mine in case the other should be abandoned and allowed to fill with water; that defendant employed in its mine at least three hundred persons, and the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company employed in its mine at least seven hundred persons, and the refusal of the defendant endangered the lives and safety of the employees of both mines. There was a prayer for a preliminary and perpetual injunction to restrain defendant from working its mine without leaving a barrier pillar of coal of the thickness or width of at least 30 feet in each seam or vein worked by it along the line of the adjoining property. Defendant answered, admitting the truth of the averments of the bill without qualification, except that it denied that any barrier was necessary for the safety of the employees of either mine in case [536] the other mine should be abandoned. At the same time it averred that the act of June 2, 1891, upon which the bill was based, "is confiscatory, unconstitutional, and void." There was a preliminary injunction, restraining defendant from working its mine without leaving a barrier pillar at least 70 feet wide. This was continued until the final hearing, which resulted in a decree continuing the injunction, but without prejudice to defendant's right "to apply to the court for a dissolution or modification thereof, upon showing to the satisfaction of the court that the proper mine inspector and the engineers of the defendant company and the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company have, upon due investigation and consultation, determined that a barrier pillar of less width than that stated in the injunction (that is, less than 70 feet on defendant's property) is sufficient for the protection of the men employed in the mines of either company in case the mine of the other should be abandoned and allowed to fill with water, and have made duplicate surveys and filed copies of the same as required by law, or, upon such investigation and consultation shall have decided that no such barrier pillar is necessary to the safety of the employees of either company in the event aforesaid."

Digitized by Google

Upon appeal the supreme court of Pennsylvania affirmed the decree (232 Pa. 141, 81 Atl. 148), and the case comes here by virtue of § 237, Judicial Code [36 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227], for adjudication under the "due process" clause of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Messrs. William C. Price and John G. Johnson argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

While the phrase "due process of law," as applied in this country, is more or less controlled by its application to the facts and conditions of the particular case, yet in its universality it implies the right of the person to be affected by judicial proceedings against him to be placed before the tribunal which pronounces judgment upon the question of life, liberty, or property, in its most comprehensive sense; to be heard by testimony or otherwise, and to have the right of controverting by proof every material fact which bears on the question of right in the matter involved. If any question of fact or liability be conclusively presumed against him, there is not due process of law.

Rutherford's Case, 72 Pa. 82, 13 Am. Rep. 655; Philadelphia v. Scott, 81 Pa. 80, 22 Am. Rep. 738; Hancock v. Wyoming, 148 Pa. 635, 24 Atl. 88; 3 Words & Phrases, 2250; Kuntz v. Sumption, 117 Ind. 1, 2 L.R.A. 655, 19 N. E. 474.

It may be admitted that a statute which should authorize any debt or damage to be adjudged against a person upon purely ex parte proceedings, without a pretense of notice or any provision for defending, would be a violation of the Constitution, and be void.

Re Empire City Bank, 18 N. Y. 215; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 582.

Due process of law requires an orderly proceeding adapted to the nature of the case, in which the citizen has an opportunity to be heard, and to defend, enforce, and protect his rights. A hearing or an opportunity to be heard is absolutely essential.

Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Re Jensen, 28 Misc. 378, 59 N. Y. Supp. 653; San Mateo County v. Southern P. R. Co. 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722.

Whatever the character of the proceeding by which one is deprived of his property, whether judicial or administrative, and whether it takes the property directly or creates a charge or liability which may be the basis of taking it, the law directing the proceeding must provide for some kind of notice and offer to the owner an opportunity to be heard, or the proceeding will want the essential ingredient of due process of law.

Digitized by Google

Re Rosser, 41 C. C. A. 497, 101 Fed. 567; Londoner v. Denver, 210 U. S. 373, 52 L. ed. 1103, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708.

Just what is "due process of law" is not very easy to define; but we are aware of no proceeding like the present having even been claimed, much less decided, to be "due process."

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 389, 42 L. ed. 790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 276, 15 L. ed. 374.

Mr. John C. Bell, Attorney General of Pennsylvania, argued the cause, and, with Messrs. B. R. Jones, Morris Wolf, and William M. Hargest, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The trade or business of mining is a proper subject of regulation by the states under their police power.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Consolidated Coal Co. v. Illinois, 185 U. S. 203, 46 L. ed. 872, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; Barrett v. Indiana, 229 U. S. 26, 57 L. ed. 1050, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 199 U. S. 401, 50 L. ed. 246, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Lindsley v. National Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 55 L. ed. 369, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 160.

It is not a violation of the 14th Amendment to regulate the business of mining by restricting the use of property employed in such business in a manner and to an extent determined by an administrative officer or body.

Fischer v. St. Louis, 194 U. S. 361, 48 L. ed. 1018, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 Ann. Cas. 765; New York ex rel. Lieberman v. Van De Carr, 199 U. S. 552, 50 L. ed. 305, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 144; Bradley v. Richmond, 227 U. S. 477, 57 L. ed. 603, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Consolidated Coal Co. v. Illinois, 185 U. S. 203, 46 L. ed. 872, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; Davis v. Massachusetts, 167 U. S. 43, 42 L. ed. 71, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; Wilson v. Eureka City, 173 U. S. 32, 43 L. ed. 603, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317; Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633.

"Due process of law" does not require that a person whose property is affected should have personal notice of the proceeding. The notice may be actual or constructive.

Mason v. Messenger, 17 Iowa, 270; United States Trust Co. v. United States F. Ins. Co. 18 N. Y. 200.

Neither does "due process of law" require a hearing before a judicial tribunal. It only requires an orderly proceeding adapted to the nature of the case, in which the citizen has the opportunity to be heard and to defend and enforce his rights. This guaranty does not establish or perpetuate any particular form of action or mode of procedure, so long as the substantial rights are preserved.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Garvin v. Daussman, 114 Ind. 429, 5 Am. St. Rep. 637, 16 N. E. 826; Re Ross, 38 La. Ann. 523; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 571, 38 L. ed. 269, 274, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, 47 Neb. 549, 41 L.R.A. 481, 53 Am. St. Rep. 557, 66 N. W. 628; Com. v. Beatty, 15 Pa. Super. Ct. 5; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989; Consolidated Coal Co. v. People, 186 Ill. 135, 56 L.R.A. 266, 57 N. E. 880.

In determining the constitutionality of an act of assembly it is to be construed in every possible way to sustain it, and every possible presumption is to be indulged in favor of it. This applies as well whether it be tested by the state or the Federal Constitution.

Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 718, 25 L. ed. 496, 501; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 407, 53 L. ed. 836, 848, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

It is not important to the determination of any constitutional question whether the judgment must be that of all of the members of the tribunal, or of the majority only.

Omaha v. Omaha Water Co. 218 U. S. 180, 54 L. ed. 991, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1084, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615; Colombia v. Cauca Co. 190 U. S. 524, 47 L. ed. 1159, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 704; People ex rel. Washington v. Nichols, 52 N. Y. 478, 11 Am. Rep. 734; Wheeling Gas Co. v. Wheeling, 8 W. Va. 320; Grindley v. Barker, 1 Bos. & P. 229, 4 Revised Rep. 787.

A right of appeal would be implied in case the tribunal corruptly or unreasonably misused the power given to it.

North American Cold Storage Co. v. Chicago, 211 U. S. 306, 53 L. ed. 195, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101, 15 Ann. Cas. 276; Adams v. Milwaukee, 228 U. S. 572, 57 L. ed. 971, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 610; New York ex rel. Lieberman v. Van De Carr, 199 U. S. 552, 50 L. ed. 305, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 144; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Garrett, 231 U. S. 298, ante, 229, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48, 53; Bradley v. Richmond, 227 U. S. 477, 57 L. ed. 603, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Public Clearing House v. Coyne, 194 U. S. 497, 48 L. ed. 1092, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 789; Degge v. Hitchcock, 229 U. S. 162, 57 L. ed. 1135, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; Curran v. Delano, 235 Pa. 478, 84 Atl. 452; Brymer v. Butler Water Co. 179 Pa. 231, 36 L.R.A. 260, 36 Atl. 249.

Digitized by Google

The plaintiff in error not having submitted itself to this tribunal, whether the determination of the question by some tribunal in some other case might harass the operation of some other owner is academic, and plaintiff in error cannot raise this question.

8 Cyc. 787, 788, and notes 90, 92; Smith v. McCarthy, 56 Pa. 362; New York ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon, 204 U. S. 152, 160, 51 L. ed. 415, 422, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188, 9 Ann. Cas. 736.

The parties having vested rights are not complaining, and the plaintiff in error is in no position to complain for them of lack of provision for notice.

Bradley v. Richmond, 227 U. S. 477, 57 L. ed. 603, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 186, 44 L. ed. 725, 728, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Babcock, 204 U. S. 585, 51 L. ed. 636, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326; Straus v. Foxworth, 231 U. S. 162, ante, 168, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42.

Mine barrier pillar laws are constitutional.

Sterrick Creek Coal Company v. Dolph Coal Company, 11 Lack. Jur. 219; Com. ex rel. Williams v. Bonnell, 8 Phila. 534, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 14; Com. ex rel. Williams v. Wilkes Barre Coal Co. 29 Phila. Leg. Int. 213; Com. ex rel. Williams v. Kingston Coal Co. 6 Kulp, 241; Mapel v. John, 42 W. Va. 30, 32 L.R.A. 800, 57 Am. St. Rep. 839, 24 S. E. 608.

The long acquiescence in this act of assembly is entitled to great weight in determining its constitutionality.

Com. ex rel. Williams v. Kingston Coal Co. 6 Kulp, 241; Mapel v. John, 42 W. Va. 30, 32 L.R.A. 800, 57 Am. St. Rep. 839, 24 S. E. 608; 1 Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. p. 134; Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 634, 48 N. W. 1007; Continental Improv. Co. v. Phelps, 47 Mich. 299, 11 N. W. 167; Bohmer v. Haffen, 22 Misc. 565, 50 N. Y. Supp. 857; Cameron v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 63 Minn. 388, 31 L.R.A. 553, 65 N. W. 652.

Mr. Justice Pitney, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The statute in question is entitled, "An Act to Provide for the Health and Safety of Persons Employed in and about the Anthracite Coal Mines of Pennsylvania, and for the Protection and Preservation of Property Connected Therewith." It applies to every anthracite coal mine in the commonwealth employing more than ten persons; divides the anthracite coal region into eight inspection districts, with a mine inspector for each district, who is appointed by the governor of the commonwealth upon the recommendation of a board of examiners composed of three reputable coal miners and two reputable mining engineers, all to be selected by judges of the county courts, and the inspector thus appointed must be a citizen of Pennsylvania, more than thirty years of age, having a knowledge of the different systems of working coal mines, and at least five years practical experience in anthracite coal mines of Pennsylvania, including experience in mines where noxious and explosive gases are evolved. Each inspector is to reside in the district for which he is appointed, and is to give his whole time and attention to the duties of his office. He is to examine all the collieries in his district as often as may be required, see that every necessary precaution is taken to secure the safety of the workmen, and that the provisions of the act are observed and obeyed, and is to keep the maps and plans of the mines and the records thereof with all the papers relating thereto. The act contains a multitude of provisions looking to the safety of the men employed in and about the [540] mines, and deals apparently with every branch of the work and every source of danger.

That the business of mining coal is attended with dangers that render it the proper subject of regulation by the states in the exercise of the police power is entirely settled. Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 393, 42 L. ed. 780, 791, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Consolidated Coal Co. v. Illinois, 185 U. S. 203, 207, 46 L. ed. 872, 875, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; Barrett v. Indiana, 229 U. S. 26, 29, 57 L. ed. 1050, 1052, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 694.

Legislation requiring the owners of adjoining coal properties to cause boundary pillars of coal to be left of sufficient width to safeguard the employees of either mine in case the other should be abandoned and allowed to fill with water cannot be deemed an unreasonable exercise of the power. In effect it requires a comparatively small portion of the valuable contents of the vein to be left in place, so long as may be required for the safety of the men employed in mining upon either property.

All of this is very frankly admitted by plaintiff in error, and the criticism upon § 10 of the act is confined to the single ground that the method of fixing the width of the barrier pillar is so crude, uncertain, and unjust as to constitute a taking of property without due process of law.

Digitized by Google

So far as the record discloses, this particular objection was not brought to the attention of the state courts as a ground for holding the section in question to be unconstitutional. The very general objection raised by plaintiff in error in its answer has been stated. The court of common pleas in its opinion, not treating the mode of defining the pillar as having any bearing upon the constitutional question, but dealing with it as a matter of interpretation, said:

"If the constitutionality of this provision be conceded for the purpose of discussion, and if the question of the necessity for any barrier pillar at all between these properties may be regarded as an open one, the decision of that question would seem to be committed by the statute [541] to the tribunal of experts thereby constituted; viz., the mine inspector and the engineers of the owners of the adjoining coal properties. The purpose of the enactment is to secure the safety of the workmen in the mines. The law declares that 'it shall be obligatory' on the mine owners to leave such a barrier pillar as the tribunal of mine experts referred to shall determine to be sufficient for that purpose. It is for them to fix its width. Until they say that none at all is needed for the safety of the men, the obligation imposed by the statute remains. . . . If, therefore, we may apply the maxim that the law does not require a vain thing, there is room for the construction that, in vesting in the inspector and engineers the power to determine how wide the barrier pillar should be to secure safety, the intent of the law-making power was to also empower them to say, if such be the fact, that the safety of the men does not require a barrier pillar of any width at all. But, be that as it may, it is evident that the act does not warrant a mine owner in refusing to permit his engineer to participate in determining the question of the width of, or the need for, a barrier pillar simply because he, the mine owner, does not consider one necessary. In our opinion, the law requires such a pillar to be left, unless the inspector and engineers, after due examination of the premises and consideration of the subject, determine that none is needed to secure the safety of the men employed in either mine in case the other should be abandoned and allowed to fill with water."

The same view was repeated in the "Conclusions of Law" at the close of the opinion, and evidently afforded the reason for inserting in the final decree a clause reserving to defendant the right to apply for a dissolution or modification of the injunction after action by the statutory tribunal. The supreme court affirmed the decree on the opinion of the court of common pleas.

[542] In a later case, Curran v. Delano, 235 Pa. 478, 485, 84 Atl. 452, it was held, in effect, that the tribunal created by the statute was to be composed of "two mining engineers and a mine inspector;" or, as was said, "three mine experts;" that its jurisdiction was exclusive; and that even the act of one property owner in removing the coal from its mine up to the boundary line could not deprive the statutory tribunal of its authority, or confer jurisdiction upon a court of equity to determine the width of the boundary barrier. And see Sterrick Creek Coal Co. v. Dolph Coal Co. 11 Lack. Jur. 219.

Although the act has been upon the statute book for over twenty years, the cases just cited are, it seems, the only ones wherein the state courts have placed an authoritative construction upon the pertinent section.

The objections of plaintiff in error to the method of fixing the width of the barrier pillar are based upon the supposed uncertainty and want of uniformity in the membership of the statutory tribunal, and upon the fact that the statute does not expressly provide for notice to the parties interested, that the procedure is not prescribed, and that there is no right of appeal.

The legislature has not defined with precision the width of the pillar, and it is very properly admitted that, in the nature of things, this would have been impossible, because the width necessary in each case must be determined with reference to the situation of the particular property. From this it necessarily results that it was competent for the legislature to lay down a general rule, and then establish an administrative tribunal with authority to fix the precise width or thickness of pillar that will suit the necessities of the particular situation, and constitute a compliance with the general rule. United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 517-522, 55 L. ed. 563, 567-569, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480. Administrative bodies with authority not essentially different are a recognized governmental institution. Commissions for [543] the regulation of public service corporations are a familiar instance. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 495, 42

Digitized by Google

L. ed. 243, 251, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896. And it has become entirely settled that powers and discretion of this character may be delegated to administrative bodies, or even to a single individual. Re Kollock, 165 U. S. 526, 536, 41 L. ed. 813, 816, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444; Wilson v. Eureka City, 173 U. S. 32, 43 L. ed. 603, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317; Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 186, 44 L. ed. 725, 728, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Fischer v. St. Louis, 194 U. S. 361, 371, 372, 48 L. ed. 1018, 1023, 1024, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 25, 49 L. ed. 643, 649, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 Ann. Cas. 765; New York ex rel. Lieberman v. Van De Carr, 199 U. S. 552, 560, 562, 50 L. ed. 305, 310, 311, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 144.

But it is insisted that under the language of the act before us the tribunal lacks uniformity and there is uncertainty respecting the manner of its constitution. It is said that on one side of the property line there might be but a single owner, while on the other side there might be several owners, and the engineers representing the latter might outnumber and combine against the representative of the single owner, and compel him to leave a barrier pillar of an unreasonable width. This objection is for present purposes sufficiently disposed of by the decisions of the supreme court of Pennsylvania, which establish that the tribunal is composed of three; namely, the inspector and two engineers. We see no difficulty in working this out in practice. The owner on each side has a single engineer in the make-up of the body; and if there be a subdivision of the property on one side of the line, there would no doubt be separate findings with respect to the frontage of each subdivision.

It is objected that the act presupposes a condition which does not always exist; viz., that the owners of coal properties have engineers in their employ; whereas it is insisted that there are many coal owners who employ no engineer; especially among the lessors of coal property. But it cannot be seriously doubted, the business under regulation being so dangerous, that it is within the power of the state to declare that coal mining shall not be conducted [544] without the employment of an engineer; and we deem it to be within the competency of the law-making power to require, also, that notice of such a proceeding be given to the lessee actually in charge of the mining operations, leaving the lessor's interest to be represented by him. It is the lessee whose conduct is to be controlled. The lessor's interest is not so directly involved, and for the purpose in hand is not opposed to that of the lessee. It is not a judicial but a quasi legislative proceeding. And if the lessor desires to participate, it is not to be supposed that he would have difficulty in obtaining a hearing.

A requirement of reasonable notice to the lessee seems to be implied in the language of the section. There is to be a "determination" by a tribunal of which the lessee's representative is a member. Assuming, as we do, that for constitutional reasons there must be a fair though summary hearing, it requires no very clear expression to justify such a construction of the section as will render notice obligatory. Certainly this court ought not to adopt a contrary construction in the absence of something in the state decisions to require it.

Respecting this and some of the other objections, it should be said that the difficulties suggested are hypothetical rather than practical. Plaintiff in error had actual notice in fact, and made no objection on the score of lack of sufficient notice. Its lessor is not objecting. Plaintiff in error presumably has an engineer competent to represent it, or could readily employ one. It refused to enter the conference for other reasons, and the refusal can be justified in law only upon the theory that the section is wholly void.

We may once more repeat what has been so often said, that one who would strike down a state statute as violative of the Federal Constitution must show he is within the class with respect to whom the act is unconstitutional, and must show that the alleged unconstitutional feature [545] injures him, and so operates as to deprive him of rights protected by the Federal Constitution. Southern R. Co. v. King, 217 U. S. 524, 534, 54 L. ed. 868, 871, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Standard Stock Food Co. v. Wright, 225 U. S. 540, 550, 56 L. ed. 1197, 1201, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Rosenthal v. New York, 226 U. S. 260, 271, 57 L. ed. 212, 217, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27.

It is to be presumed, until the contrary appears, that the administrative body would have acted with reasonable regard to the property rights of plaintiff in error; and certainly if there had been any arbitrary exercise of its powers its determination would have been subject to judicial review. New York ex rel. Lieberman v. Van De Carr, 199 U. S. 552, 562, 50 L. ed. 305, 310, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 144; Bradley v. Richmond, 227 U. S. 477, 483, 57 L. ed. 603, 605, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318.

Indeed, the statute seems to contemplate some judicial control, for it prescribes no penalty for a violation of the findings of the engineers and inspector, nor any mode of enforcing their determination except by a suit for injunction under art. 15 of the act. In such a suit a party deeming himself aggrieved because of arbitrary action by the statutory tribunal may presumably have his opportunity to be heard with respect to this as well as other fundamental defenses.

Digitized by Google

It is objected that the act does not state whether the tribunal must be unanimous in order to reach a determination, or what shall be done in case of disagreement; and it is argued that in case of such disagreement the solution of the question to be determined might be delayed for such a length of time as to embarrass the mining operations and throw the workmen out of employment. Here, again, plaintiff in error seems to be unnecessarily borrowing trouble, but we will deal with the point on its merits. This particular objection does not seem to be met by the decision of the state court, either in the present case, or in that of Curran v. Delano, 235 Pa. 478, 84 Atl. 452. They seem to hold simply that the tribunal is made up of three, without deciding what function is to be performed by the respective members, nor how a conclusion is to be reached. That [546] being so, it is not incumbent upon us to construe the statute in this regard; but rather, to say merely whether the section admits of any reasonable construction that will sustain its constitutionality.

For in cases other than such as arise under the contract clause of the Constitution, it is the appropriate function of the court of last resort of a state to determine the meaning of the local statutes. And in exercising the jurisdiction conferred by § 237, Judicial Code [36 Stat. at L. 1136, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227], it is proper for this court rather to wait until the state court has adopted a construction of the statute under attack than to assume in advance that a construction will be adopted such as to render the law obnoxious to the Federal Constitution. Bachtel v. Wilson, 204 U. S. 36, 40, 51 L. ed. 357, 359, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Adams v. Russell, 229 U. S. 353, 360, 57 L. ed. 1224, 1227, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 846.

And, even aside from the consideration just adverted to, it is a general and fundamental rule that if a statute be reasonably susceptible of two interpretations, one of which would render it unconstitutional and the other valid, it is the duty of the courts to adopt that construction which will uphold its validity; there being a strong presumption that the law-making body has intended to act within, and not in excess of, its constitutional authority. Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 718, 25 L. ed. 496, 501; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Knights Templars' & M. Life Indemnity Co. v. Jarman, 187 U. S. 197, 205, 47 L. ed. 139, 145, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 407, 53 L. ed. 836, 848, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

Approaching the subject from this point of view, we observe first the language of the section—"such width of pillar to be determined by the engineers of the adjoining property owners, together with the inspector of the district in which the mine is situated." Attention has already been called to the qualifications of the inspector, and the safeguards surrounding the mode of his appointment. The statute confers upon him most important powers, and gives him access to complete information [547] respecting the problems that come before him. There is provision, also, for his removal if neglectful or incompetent, or if guilty of malfeasance in office.

In the clause in question, we think it is quite reasonable to interpret the words "together with the inspector of the district" as meaning that the inspector shall be of the quorum,—shall participate in any determination that is made. But the matter is "to be determined by the engineers . . . together with the inspector." The phrase, of course, admits of the interpretation that if the engineers agree, the added approval of the inspector shall end the matter. We think it not an unreasonable construction that if the engineers disagree they shall submit their differences to the inspector, and that a determination agreed to by one of them in conjunction with the inspector shall fulfil the requirements of the act. It must be remembered that this tribunal is to settle, not a private property right, but a matter affecting the public safety; hence, in the absence of clear language to the contrary, the section is open to the construction that, as in other public matters, a majority of the referees or arbitrators may act. Omaha v. Omaha Water Co. 218 U. S. 180, 192, 54 L. ed. 991, 996, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1084, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615.

It is further objected that the statute provides for no appeal from the determination of the tribunal. But in such cases the right of appeal on other than constitutional grounds may be conferred or withheld, at the discretion of the legislature. As already pointed out, an appeal on fundamental grounds in this instance seems to inhere in the very practice prescribed by the statute for the enforcement of the determination of the statutory tribunal. Were this not expressed in the act, it would none the less be implied, at least so far as pertains to any violation of rights guaranteed by the 14th Amendment. Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 370, 30 L. ed. 220, 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; New York ex rel. Lieberman v. Van De Carr, 199 U. S. 552, 562, 50 L. ed. 305, 310, 26 Sup Ct. Rep. 144.

Digitized by Google

Judgment affirmed.

---

[548] ATLANTIC COAST LINE RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
CITY OF GOLDSBORO, North Carolina.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 548–562.)

Error to state court — scope of review — question of local law.

1. Whether certain municipal ordinances challenged as violating the Federal Constitution are within the power conferred by the legislature upon the municipal corporation is a question of state law, the decision of which by the highest state court is conclusive upon the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to the state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2124–2151, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — Federal question — validity of state law.

2. Any enactment, from whatever source originating, to which a state gives the force of law, is a statute of the state, within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, governing writs of error from the Federal Supreme Court to state courts.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1645–1663, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — police power — municipal regulation of railway — impairing contract obligations — due process of law.

3. Neither the contract nor due process of law clause of the Federal Constitution prevents a municipal corporation from promoting the public health, safety, or general welfare by forbidding a railway company, through whose acquiescence a part of its right of way through the city not occupied by its tracks has by long user become the city's principal business street, to shift cars on the four blocks of such tracks which lie in the heart of the city except during certain specified hours, or to permit cars to stand within those blocks for a longer period than five minutes, and by requiring the tracks to conform to the street grade, and the spaces between the rails to be filled in except at street intersections,—even assuming that the railway company has still a complete and unqualified ownership of the strip of land that was originally acquired in fee simple, and, as proprietor, may lawfully exclude the public from it.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. c, 2; IV. d, 5; IV. g, 2, b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 112.]

Argued December 10, 1013. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Superior Court of Wayne County, in that state, refusing to restrain the enforcement of certain municipal ordinances affecting the operation of a railway. Affirmed.

See same case below, 155 N. C. 356, 71 S. E. 514.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George B. Elliott and George M. Rose, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The right of way of plaintiff in error is not a street.

Donahue v. State, 112 N. Y. 142, 2 L.R.A. 576, 19 N. E. 419; East Alabama R. Co. v. Doe, 114 U. S. 340, 29 L. ed. 136, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Union Point, 119 Ga. 809, 47 S. E. 183; Muse v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. 149 N. C. 443, 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 453, 63 S. E. 102; Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Seaboard

---

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

As to what constitutes due process of law generally—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

Generally as to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Henderson v. State Soldiers' & S. Monument Comrs. 13 L.R.A. 169; and Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162.

For a discussion of police power generally—see notes to State v. Marshall, 1 L.R.A. 51; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Electric Improv. Co. v. San Francisco, 13 L.R.A. 131; State v. Schlemmer, 10 L.R.A. 135; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; and Barbier v. Connolly, 28 L. ed. U. S. 923.

Digitized by Google

Air Line R. Co. v. Olive, 142 N. C. 257, 55 S. E. 263; Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Oklahoma City, 12 Okla. 82, 69 Pac. 1050; McLucas v. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. 67 Neb. 603, 93 N. W. 928, 97 N. W. 312, 2 Ann. Cas. 715; Poulan v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 123 Ga. 605, 51 S. E. 657.

Has the city of Goldsboro power to prevent the use of the franchise and property of the plaintiff in error, by ordinance?

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Armstrong, 77 Kan. 366, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 113, 114 Am. St. Rep. 474, 80 Pac. 978; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Fifth Baptist Church, 108 U. S. 317, 27 L. ed. 739, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 719; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Joliet, 79 Ill. 25; Drake v. Hudson River R. Co. 7 Barb. 508; Morgan v. Norfolk Southern R. Co. 98 N. C. 247, 3 S. E. 506; Moses v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 21 Ill. 516; New Orleans v. Lenfant, 126 La. 455, 29 L.R.A.(N.S.) 642, 52 So. 575; Lexington & O. R. Co. v. Applegate, 8 Dana, 289, 33 Am. Dec. 497; Hammersmith & C. R. Co. v. Brand, L. R. 4 H. L. 196, 38 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 205, 21 L. T. N. S. 238, 18 Week. Rep. 12, 1 Eng. Rul. Cas. 623; Taylor v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. 145 N. C. 400, 122 Am. St. Rep. 455, 59 S. E. 129; Thomason v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. 142 N. C. 318, 55 S. E. 205; Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 984.

Does this ordinance effect a taking of plaintiff's property and franchise without due process of law, and impair the obligation of its contract with the state? Is plaintiff in error entitled to equitable relief?

Atlanta v. Gate City Gaslight Co. 71 Ga. 106; Broadway & E. S. Stage Co. v. American Soc. 15 Abb. Pr. N. S. 51; Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co. 194 U. S. 517, 48 L. ed. 1102, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 49 L. ed. 169, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Atlanta, 118 Ga. 486, 45 S. E. 256; Mobile v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 84 Ala. 115, 5 Am. St. Rep. 342, 4 So. 106; Paulk v. Sycamore, 104 Ga. 24, 41 L.R.A. 772, 69 Am. St. Rep. 128, 30 S. E. 417; Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 211 U. S. 226, 53 L. ed. 158, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Asheville Street R. Co. v. Asheville, 109 N. C. 688, 14 S. E. 316; Chicago & W. I. R. Co. v. Dunbar, 100 Ill. 110; Rushville v. Rushville Natural Gas Co. 132 Ind. 575, 15 L.R.A. 321, 28 N. E. 853; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Southern Exp. Co. v. Ensley, 116 Fed. 756; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

Mr. Robert W. Winston argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. Crawford Biggs, D. C. Humphrey, J. D. Langston, and M. H. Allen, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The construction given to the statute of the state by the highest judicial tribunal of the state is regarded as a part of the statute, and is as binding as is the text upon the courts of the United States.

Lippincott v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 767, 24 L. ed. 315; 2 U. S. Dig. Sup. Ct. Rep. 1908, p. 2346.

That the highest court of the state of North Carolina was divided in its opinion in no way affects the force of this rule.

Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 304, 42 L. ed. 1047, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617.

Section 388 of the Revisal of North Carolina of 1905 does not apply to any right of way not actually condemned or purchased or taken possession of.

Raleigh & A. Air Line R. Co. v. Sturgeon, 120 N. C. 225, 26 S. E. 779; Beattie v. Carolina C. R. Co. 108 N. C. 432, 12 S. E. 913; Blue v. Aberdeen & W. E. R. Co. 117 N. C. 644, 23 S. E. 275.

The railway company has long since been equitably estopped to deny the right of the city of Goldsboro to the use of East and West Center streets, and the streets crossing the same.

Bank of United States v. Lee, 13 Pet. 107, 10 L. ed. 81; Morgan v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 96 U. S. 716, 24 L. ed. 743; Mason v. Williams, 66 N. C. 564.

Not only is the railroad estopped from denying the right of the city to these streets, but by its conduct it has dedicated them to the use of the public.

Morgan v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 96 U. S. 723, 24 L. ed. 746; Elliott, Roads & Streets, 2d ed. §§ 121–124; Tise v. Whitaker-Harvey Co. 146 N. C. 374, 59 S. E. 1012.

That the railroad was constructed before the city was built does not affect the principle herein, of the police power.

State ex rel. Minneapolis v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 98 Minn. 380, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 307, 120 Am. St. Rep. 581, 108 N. W. 261, 8 Ann. Cas. 1047; Cleveland v. Augusta, 102 Ga. 233, 43 L.R.A. 638, 29 S. E. 584; Northern P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 208 U. S. 583, 52 L. ed. 630, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341.

The railroad can be required by the state to lower its tracks or to raise them, and this without compensation, because the requirement is in the exercise of the police power, and is not the taking of private property for public uses.

22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 720, 732; Elliott, Roads & Streets, §§ 76, 461, 463; Eubank v. Richmond, 226 U. S. 137, 57 L. ed. 156, 42 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1123, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; District of Columbia v. Brooke,

Digitized by Google

214 U. S. 138, 53 L. ed. 941, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, 140 Ill. 309, 29 N. E. 1109.

The city has ample authority under its charter and the general statutes to promulgate the ordinances.

Lake View v. Rose Hill Cemetery Co. 70 Ill. 191, 22 Am. Rep. 71.

The governmental power of self-protection cannot be contracted away, nor the exercise of rights granted nor the use of property be withdrawn from the implied liability of governmental regulations peculiar and essential to the preservation of the community from injury.

New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 38 L. ed. 269, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Northern P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 208 U. S. 583, 52 L. ed. 630, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Milwaukee, 97 Wis. 418, 72 N. W. 1118.

A state's police power should be diligently guarded against any needless intrusion. It is almost as great as the power of Congress.

Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527.

Whenever a municipality has authority to restrict at all upon a given subject, the wisdom or unwisdom of its action is not the subject of judicial review. If the action is not plainly oppressive, the courts can give no relief.

Tate v. Greensboro, 114 N. C. 392, 24 L.R.A. 671, 19 S. E. 767; Rosenthal v. Goldsboro, 149 N. C. 132, 20 L.R.A.(N.S.) 809, 62 S. E. 905, 16 Ann. Cas. 639; Smith, Mun. Corp. § 1318; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Smith, 191 Ind. 119; Small v. Edenton, 146 N. C. 528, 20 L.R.A.(N.S.) 145, 60 S. E. 413; Barnes v. District of Columbia, 91 U. S. 540, 23 L. ed. 440.

These ordinances in effect declare the forbidden things to be nuisances, and it is within the competency of the city to declare what are and what are not nuisances.

Privett v. Whitaker, 73 N. C. 554.

Whenever the public takes private property, it must pay for it; but whenever private property is so used as to injure the public, the public may prevent such use of it without compensating the owner.

Freund, Pol. Power, §§ 511, 512.

It is the duty of a railroad at its own expense to remove a bridge maintained by it and also to erect a new bridge in conformity with regulations of drainage commissioners under the authority of the state.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 562, 50 L. ed. 601, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175.

There is a difference between the exertion of the power to establish rates in such manner as to confiscate the property of a public-service corporation by fixing them below a remunerative standard, and one compelling a corporation to render a service which it is essentially its duty to do.

Great Northern R. Co. v. Minnesota, 216 U. S. 216, 54 L. ed. 453, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344.

A court of equity has no jurisdiction to restrain a state from prosecuting the violation of statutes and ordinances.

Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764; Paul v. Washington, 134 N. C. 363, 65 L.R.A. 902, 47 S. E. 793; Hottinger v. New Orleans, 42 La. Ann. 629, 8 So. 575; Scott v. Smith, 121 N. C. 94, 28 S. E. 64; Cohan v. Goldsboro, 77 N. C. 2; Field v. Western Springs, 181 Ill. 186, 54 N. E. 929; Kelly v. Conner, 122 Tenn. 339, 25 L.R.A.(N.S.) 201, 123 S. W. 622; 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 370.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company, plaintiff in error, has succeeded to the ownership of the property, franchises, and rights of the Wilmington & Raleigh Railroad Company, which was chartered by the general assembly of North Carolina in the year 1833, and whose name was [551] afterwards changed to Wilmington & Weldon Railroad Company. Under its charter powers the original company constructed its railroad from Wilmington to and into Wayne county, North Carolina, passing through the place which later, and in the year 1847, became incorporated as the town of Goldsboro, now the city of Goldsboro, defendant in error.

For the purposes of its railroad, the Wilmington & Raleigh Company acquired a strip of land 130 feet wide, extending through Goldsboro from north to south, and constructed its road upon it before the incorporation of the town. The land was acquired in part under deeds conveying title in fee simple, in part by condemnation proceedings which conferred upon the company, as is claimed, the equivalent of a fee simple. Afterwards, two other companies, designated respectively as the North Carolina Railroad Company and the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad Company, with the consent and permission of the Wilmington & Raleigh, or Wilmington & Weldon, and under agreements with that company, constructed their railroad tracks upon the same "right of way."

The town naturally grew along the railroad, and the right of way, so far as not occupied by the tracks, was and still is used for the ordinary purposes of a street, without objection by plaintiff in error or its predecessors in title. In laying out the town, this right of way was designated as a street 130 feet wide; the portion lying east of the tracks being designated as East Center street, the portion on the west of the tracks as West Center street. Cross streets were laid out, designated successively (commencing at the north) as Holly, Beech, Vine, Oak, Ash, Mulberry, Walnut, Chestnut, Spruce, Pine, and Elm streets. East and West Center streets have become the principal business streets of the town and the portion between Ash and Spruce—four blocks—is the heart of the city.

Digitized by Google

[552] During the years since the incorporation of Goldsboro numerous industries have been and are now located on East and West Center streets, and the track of plaintiff in error, in addition to its use as a part of the main line, has been and is used by the company in shifting cars into and out of these industries, and also for reaching the freight terminals of the other two railroads, which are in the northerly part of the town; the terminal of plaintiff in error being in the southerly part. A belt line has been built around the city, over which through passenger trains and some freight trains are moved, but the use of the old main line for connecting with the other terminals, for shifting cars into industries, and loading tracks along the right of way, and for the passage of certain of its trains, is claimed by plaintiff in error to be still essential to its business.

The municipal corporation has for many years worked and maintained its streets and cross streets, including so much of the surface of East and West Center streets as lies outside of the space actually occupied by the railroad tracks. More recently it has instituted a system of street grades and of drainage extending throughout the city, and has paved a considerable part of East and West Center streets in conformity to the grade so established. From Chestnut street north the railroad tracks are (or, at least, prior to the municipal action complained of they were) from 6 to 18 inches above the established street grade; the tracks south of Chestnut street being in a cut from 1 to 8 feet deep.

In November, 1909, the board of aldermen passed an ordinance or ordinances containing the following provisions: Section 1 rendered it unlawful for any railroad company to run any freight or passenger train on East or West Center streets at a rate of speed exceeding 4 miles per hour, and required the companies to have flagmen proceed 50 feet in front of every train to warn persons of its approach. Section 2 provided that the shifting [553] limits on East and West Center streets should be from Spruce street to the city limits on the south, and from Ash street to the city limits on the north; thus excluding the four blocks between Spruce and Ash streets. Section 3 declared it to be unlawful for any railroad company to do any shifting within those four blocks at any other time than between the hours of 6:30 and 8:30 A. M., and between 4:30 and 6:30 P. M. Section 4 rendered it unlawful for any railroad company to place any car and allow it to stand for a longer period than five minutes at any point on East and West Center streets within the same four blocks. Section 5 required all railroad companies owning tracks on East and West Center streets between Walnut and Vine (four blocks) to lower the tracks so as to make them conform to the grade line of the streets, and to fill in the tracks between the rails; the required lowering being specified as 6 inches from Walnut to Mulberry, 10 inches between Mulberry and Ash, and 18 inches between Ash and Vine streets. Substantial penalties were prescribed for violations of these prohibitions.

Plaintiff in error began this action against the city of Goldsboro in the superior court of Wayne county, seeking to restrain the enforcement of the ordinances. A temporary restraining order was granted. At the hearing, the objection to the enforcement of § 1 was abandoned by plaintiff; as to the other sections the court vacated the restraining order. Upon appeal, the supreme court of North Carolina affirmed the judgment. 155 N. C. 356, 71 S. E. 514. The present writ of error under § 709, Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575 (Judicial Code, § 237 [36 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227]), is based upon the insistence, made in the state courts and there overruled, that the ordinances impair the obligation of the contract contained in the charter of the company, in contravention of § 10 of art. 1, of the Federal Constitution, and deprive the company of its property without due process of law, in contravention of the 14th Amendment.

[554] The supreme court of the state construed the section forbidding shifting as having reference to the "cutting out and putting in" of cars in the making up of a train before it is despatched upon its journey, and not as referring to the "transfer" of a train of cars, already made up by plaintiff in error, to another railroad company for transportation. In view of the fact that plaintiff in error has shifting yards farther from the center of the city, where its trains can be made up and at least the chief part of the necessary shifting done, the court held it to be a reasonable exercise of the police power to forbid car shifting, except within the limited hours specified, on the four blocks of the plaintiff's track that lie in the heart of the city; declaring this regulation to be necessary for the convenience and safety of the public at the crossings.

Digitized by Google

With reference to the section requiring the lowering of the tracks between Walnut and Vine streets so as to make them conform to the grade lines of the streets, the court held that the Company took its charter subject to the right of the state to lay out new roads and streets, and to require the company to make such alterations as would prevent the public passage over its tracks from being impeded; and that there was no contract exempting the railroad from changing its grade at crossings when required.

In this court, plaintiff in error abandons its attack upon the right of the city to require a change of grade at the street crossings. The controversy, therefore, is now limited to (a) the restrictions imposed by §§ 2 and 3 upon shifting operations on East and West Center streets between Spruce and Ash streets; (b) the prohibition of § 4 against the standing of cars for a longer period than five minutes within the same four blocks; and (c) the requirement under § 5 that the tracks from Walnut to Vine street shall conform to the grade of East and West Center streets, and shall be filled in between the rails, elsewhere [555] than at the crossing streets. Upon the argument, it was stated by counsel representing the city that plaintiff in error had complied with the decision of the state court as to § 5, at least, to the extent of lowering its tracks. But there was no clear admission of the fact in behalf of plaintiff in error, and we shall therefore disregard the supposed compliance.

It is, among other things, contended by plaintiff in error that the ordinances are not within the powers conferred by the legislature of North Carolina upon the municipal corporation. This is a question of state law, which, for present purposes, is conclusively settled by the decision of the supreme court of North Carolina in this case. Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 462, 42 L. ed. 236, 237, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829, and cases cited; Lombard v. West Chicago Park Comrs. 181 U. S. 33, 43, 45 L. ed. 731, 737, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 507.

A municipal by-law or ordinance, enacted by virtue of power for that purpose delegated by the legislature of the state, is a state law within the meaning of the Federal Constitution. New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18, 31, 31 L. ed. 607, 612, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741; Hamilton Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 258, 266, 36 L. ed. 963, 967, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 148, 45 L. ed. 788, 791, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Northern P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 208 U. S. 583, 590, 52 L. ed. 630, 633, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Grand Trunk Western R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 221 U. S. 400, 403, 55 L. ed. 786, 787, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537; Ross v. Oregon, 227 U. S. 150, 162, 57 L. ed. 458, 463, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220.

And any enactment, from whatever source originating, to which a state gives the force of law, is a statute of the state, within the meaning of the pertinent clause of § 709, Rev. Stat., Judicial Code, § 237; which confers jurisdiction on this court. Williams v. Bruffy, 96 U. S. 176, 183, 24 L. ed. 716, 717.

We must therefore treat the ordinances as legislation enacted by virtue of the lawmaking power of the state. They are manifestly an exertion of the police power, and the question is whether, viewed in that light, they run counter to the "contract" or "due process" clauses.

[556] That a railroad charter may embody a contract, within the meaning of the Constitution, hardly needs to be stated. Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. ed. 629. In the present case the supreme court of North Carolina held that by the Constitution of the state, the charter was subject to alteration or repeal at the legislative will. If the right of repeal was indeed thus reserved, the result is obvious. Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 13, 21, 26 L. ed. 961, 965; Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 189 U. S. 434, 437, 47 L. ed. 887, 891, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531. But when this court has under review the judgment of a state court by virtue of § 709, Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, and the validity of a state law is challenged on the ground that it impairs the obligation of a contract, this court must determine for itself the existence or nonexistence of the asserted contract, and whether its obligation has been impaired. Douglas v. Kentucky, 168 U. S. 488, 502, 42 L. ed. 553, 557, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199; Stearns v. Minnesota, 179 U. S. 223, 233, 45 L. ed. 162, 170, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73. We are not referred to and are unable to find, in the state Constitution as it existed when the charter now in question was granted, any reservation of the right of repeal, and will assume for present purposes that the contract was not thus qualified, and deal only with the question whether it has been impaired.

Digitized by Google

Plaintiff in error lays more particular stress upon the insistence that its property rights in the street will be infringed by the enforcement of the ordinances. Because its predecessors acquired the strip of land in fee simple, and because the municipal corporation has never condemned it or made compensation for its use as a street, the contention is that the title of the railroad company remains until now, absolute and unqualified. Reference is made to Rev. Code (N. C.) chap. 65, § 23. This section, it seems, became law in North Carolina in the year 1854, and has remained upon the statute books continuously until the present time, appearing now as § 388 of the Revisal of 1908; see also Code 1883, § 150. It provides that "no railroad, plank road, turnpike, or canal company [557] shall be barred of, or presumed to have conveyed, any real estate, right of way, easement, leasehold, or other interest in the soil which may have been condemned, or otherwise obtained for its use, as a right of way, depot, station house or place of landing, by any statute of limitation, or by occupation of the same by any person whatever." Two cases. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Olive, 142 N. C. 257, 271, 55 S. E. 263, and Muse v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. 149 N. C. 443, 446, 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 453, 63 S. E. 102, are cited as supporting the proposition that under this statute a permissive user of any portion of the railroad right of way by others, or even by the public as a street, cannot impair the title of the company unless at least there be adverse user or possession for a sufficient period to satisfy the statutes on that subject; and it is insisted there has been none. But in both cases the question was as to the effect of the permissive user or possession upon merely private rights, and in the Muse Case it was expressly conceded (149 N. C. 446) that the rights of the railroad company in that portion of its right of way that had been used as a street were subject to the police power of the town. In the present case, likewise, the state court (155 N. C. 363) treated the question of the ownership of the soil as not involved in the decision.

And we are not at present particularly concerned with either contract or property rights, except as they may serve to show the conditions under which the ordinances were adopted, and may bear upon the question of the reasonableness of those regulations. These have to do with the use and control of the property, rather than with its ownership; with the mode in which the franchise shall be enjoyed, rather than with its scope. Conceding, for argument's sake only, the utmost that may be claimed as to the charter and property rights of plaintiff in error, we still have yielded nothing that may defeat the exercise of the police power by the state, or by its authorized agency. Adopting the extreme assumption that the railroad [558] company has still a complete and unqualified ownership of every portion of the strip of land that was originally acquired in fee simple, and as proprietor might lawfully exercise its dominion by excluding the public from it: yet it does not do this, but permits, and long has permitted, the public to use material portions of the strip for ordinary street purposes; it apparently excludes the public from no portion except as the existence of the tracks and the passage of trains may have such a tendency or effect. And thus the company, at least for the time, devotes its property in part to public uses that are more or less inconsistent with the railroad uses, and under conditions such as to render the railroad operations necessarily a source of danger to the public while enjoying the permitted use. Under such circumstances the state, in the exercise of the police power, may legitimately extend the application of the principle that underlies the maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas, so far as may be requisite for the protection of the public.

For it is settled that neither the "contract" clause nor the "due process" clause has the effect of overriding the power of the state to establish all regulations that are reasonably necessary to secure the health, safety, good order, comfort, or general welfare of the community; that this power can neither be abdicated nor bargained away, and is inalienable even by express grant; and that all contract and property rights are held subject to its fair exercise. Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 62, 21 L. ed. 394, 404; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 125, 24 L. ed. 77, 84; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 33, 24 L. ed. 989, 992; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 665, 31 L. ed. 205, 211, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 89, 34 L. ed. 620, 621, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 567, 38 L. ed. 269, 272, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Miller, 221 U. S. 408, 414, 415, 55 L. ed. 789, 795, 796, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 534. And the enforcement of uncompensated obedience to a regulation established under this power for the public health or safety is not an unconstitutional taking of property without compensation or without [559] due process of law. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 255, 41 L.

Digitized by Google

ed. 979, 991, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Drainage Commission, 197 U. S. 453, 462, 49 L. ed. 831, 835, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 471; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 591, 592, 50 L. ed. 596, 608, 609, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175.

Of course, if it appear that the regulation under criticism is not in any way designed to promote the health, comfort, safety, or welfare of the community, or that the means employed have no real and substantial relation to the avowed or ostensible purpose, or that there is wanton or arbitrary interference with private rights, the question arises whether the law-making body has exceeded the legitimate bounds of the police power.

The ordinances now in question must be considered in view not only of the charter and property rights of plaintiff in error, but of the actual situation that has developed and now exists in Goldsboro, with the consent and long acquiescence of plaintiff in error and its predecessors in interest. A town of considerable size and importance has grown up along the line of the railroad. The strip of land 130 feet in width, so far as it is not occupied by the railroad tracks, for many years has been and still is used for the ordinary purposes of a street. The supreme court of North Carolina found, upon adequate evidence, that it is the main business street of the town, frequently crowded with pedestrians and vehicles; and that the operation of trains along it, notwithstanding the utmost care of the railroad company, tends to obstruct the crossings and is fraught with danger to life and property. There are, within the blocks covered by the ordinances, two main lines of railway besides that of plaintiff in error. These, of course, complicate the situation by narrowing the spaces available for ordinary travel north and south on East and West Center streets, and must also enhance the dangers at the crossings.

It is very properly conceded that the company may be required to limit the speed of its trains, and to have flagmen [560] precede them to warn persons of their approach; and that the company may be required to change its grade at the street crossings. In New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 567, 38 L. ed. 269, 272, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437, this court sustained a Connecticut statute directed to the extinction of grade crossings as a menace to public safety, and compelling this to be done at the expense of the companies, although the grade crossings had been long before established under legislative authority. In Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 251, 41 L. ed. 979, 989, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581, it was held that when the city opened a new street across the railroad it was not bound to take and pay for the fee in the land, but only to make compensation to the extent that the value of the company's right to use the land for railroad purposes was diminished by opening the street across it; and that the company was not entitled to have its compensation increased because of the fact that in order to safeguard the crossing it would thereafter be obliged to construct gates, and a tower for operating them, plank the crossing, fill in between the rails, and incur certain annual expenses for depreciation, maintenance, employment of gatemen, etc. To the same effect are Wabash R. Co. v. Defiance, 167 U. S. 88, 97, 42 L. ed. 87, 91, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 170 U. S. 57, 75, 42 L. ed. 948, 954, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Northern P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 208 U. S. 583, 597, 52 L. ed. 630, 636, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Cincinnati, I. & W. R. Co. v. Connersville, 218 U. S. 336, 343, 54 L. ed. 1060, 1064, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93, 20 Ann. Cas. 1206; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minneapolis, decided this day [232 U. S. 430, ante, 671, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400.] And see Grand Trunk Western R. Co. v. South Bend, 227 U. S. 544, 554, 57 L. ed. 633, 639, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 405, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303.

But manifestly the tracks cannot be brought to the street grade at the crossings without being lowered between the crossings as well. And if this is to be done, it follows that not merely the tracks, but the surface adjacent to the tracks, must be made to conform to the established grade of East and West Center streets between the crossing streets; or else the street will be rendered materially less convenient for purposes of north-and-south travel, [561] and the drainage will be materially interfered with; or at least the municipal authorities might reasonably so determine. The establishment of a proper system of drainage for the city in the interest of the public health and general welfare is an object that legitimately invokes the exercise of the police power. New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Drainage Commission, 197 U. S. 453, 460, 49 L. ed. 831, 834, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 471.

As to filling in between the rails, elsewhere than at the crossing streets, we have to do not merely with the necessities of drainage, but with the safety of persons crossing the railroad tracks midway of the respective street blocks. The power of the state to prescribe precautions with respect to the running of railroad trains so as to guard against injuries to the persons or property of others is not confined to the establishment of such precautions at highway crossings. State enactments requiring railroad corporations to maintain fences and cattle guards alongside the railroad have been repeatedly sustained. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 522, 29 L. ed. 463, 466, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26, 34, 32 L. ed. 585, 588, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Emmons, 149 U. S. 364, 366, 37 L. ed. 769, 771, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870. For the purposes of the argument it may be conceded that no person has the right, as against the railroad company, to pass over its tracks except at one of the street intersections; although this may not be entirely clear. But unless excluding fences be established adjacent to the railroad tracks (and this is not proposed nor even suggested as feasible), it is inevitable that many people, with or without right (children of tender years, among others), will cross at places other than the street intersections; and a police regulation intended to prevent injuries to persons thus crossing cannot be judicially denounced as arbitrary. Other grounds for sustaining § 5 might be mentioned; but we need not further particularize.

Digitized by Google

There remain only the limitation of car shifting and the prohibition of the standing of cars upon East and West [562] Center streets in the four blocks that lie between Spruce and Ash streets, in the heart of the city. As already pointed out, the state court construed "shifting" as applying only to the "cutting out and putting in" of cars in the making up of trains. This operation is not to be performed within the four blocks specified except during two hours in the morning and two hours in the afternoon of each day. The time limits were evidently adopted with regard to the necessities of the industries that are located along the railroad, and at the same time with a view to the necessities of general travel upon the streets. It was complained that the time allowed for shifting is inadequate; but there is nothing in the proof on this subject to overthrow the finding of the court that the ordinance is a reasonable exercise of the police power.

The prohibition against the standing of cars for a longer period than five minutes within the same four blocks is intended to prevent the loading and unloading of cars in the street, with the attendant use of wagons and drays for the purpose. In view of the obstruction to street travel that is naturally incident to such operations, the prohibition cannot be deemed wholly unreasonable. In effect it prevents ordinary travel upon the street from being thus obstructed, and requires that the loading and unloading of cars shall be done at the regular freight terminals.

The regulations in question are thus found to be fairly designed to promote the public health, safety, and welfare; the measures adopted appear to be reasonably suited to the purposes they are intended to accomplish; and we are unable to say that there is any unnecessary interference with the operations of the railroad, or with the property rights of plaintiff in error. Therefore, no violation of the "contract" or "due process" clauses is shown.

Judgment affirmed.

---

[563] CHARLES WILSON, alias Charles Willard, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES. (No. 168.)

CATHARINE WILSON, alias Zoe Willard, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES. (No. 169.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 563-571.)

Error to district court — jurisdiction — Federal question.

1. The jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court to review a judgment of a district court in a case in which the constitutionality of an act of Congress is drawn in question is not lost because the question has since been settled adversely to the plaintiff in error, but the court will retain jurisdiction for the purpose of passing upon the other questions in the record.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938-989, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Note.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of judgments of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741, and B. Altman & Co. v. United States, 56 L. ed. U. S. 894.

On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

On cross-examination of the defendant in criminal cases—see note to People v. Tice, 15 L.R.A. 669.

Generally as to scope and limits of cross-examination—see note to Rea v. Missouri, 21 L. ed. U. S. 707.

As to what constitutes a reasonable doubt in criminal cases—see note to Lovett v. State, 17 L.R.A. 705.

Digitized by Google

White slave trade — means of transportation.

2. Transportation by a common carrier is not essential to constitute the offense denounced by the white slave act of June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 825, chap. 395, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1343), as the transportation, or causing to be transported, or the obtaining, aiding, or assisting in, the transportation in interstate commerce of women or girls for the purpose of prostitution, debauchery, or other immoral purposes.

Commerce — power of Congress — white slave act.

3. A limitation of the means of prohibited transportation to common carriers need not be implied in order to sustain the validity of the white slave act of June 25, 1910, forbidding the transportation in interstate commerce of women or girls for the purpose of prostitution, debauchery, or other immoral purpose.

White slave trade — transportation for prostitution — direction as to choice of conveyance.

4. Defendants charged with causing and procuring the interstate transportation of girls for the purpose of prostitution, contrary to the white slave act of June 25, 1910, cannot escape conviction because they did not control or instruct in the choice of means of conveyance the agent employed by them to effect the transportation, and furnished by them with the money to cover the transportation expense.

Witnesses — cross-examination of accused — credibility.

5. The accused having admitted on cross-examination that she is addicted to the use of morphine, and stated that she last used it before coming into the court room, may be further asked how often she uses it, and whether she has with her the implements to take the dose, although she has not put her character in issue, since such evidence has a material bearing upon her reliability as a witness.

[For other cases, see Witnesses, V. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Witnesses — cross-examination of accused — relevancy to direct examination.

6. Cross-examination of the accused tending to show that she and her codefendant lived unhappily as husband and wife and were occasionally separated is entirely relevant to her testimony in chief, in which, after flatly denying the testimony of an alleged accomplice that he had met and talked with her at a certain point, conformably to her request to aid in a search for her husband, she added that she always knew where her husband was.

[For other cases, see Witnesses, V. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — rebuttal — prosecution under white slave act.

7. Evidence respecting entries made by husband and wife in their books of account, showing payments of money to certain police officers, and indicating friendly relations, if not co-operation, between them as keepers of a house of prostitution and members of the police force, is admissible on their trial for procuring the interstate transportation of girls for the purpose of prostitution, contrary to the white slave act of June 25, 1910, as tending to show the character of the house, and as tending to rebut evidence previously introduced by the defense to the effect that the wife had refused to harbor the girls for fear of police interference.

[For other cases, see Evidence, XI. l, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — instructions — reasonable doubt.

8. An instruction defining reasonable doubt as "that frame of mind which forbids you to say, all the evidence considered and weighed, 'I have an abiding conviction of the defendant's guilt,' or, as it has been expressed, 'I am convinced of the defendant's guilt to a moral certainty,'" and adding, "If you can say that you have such a conviction, then you have no reasonable doubt, and your verdict should be 'guilty.' On the contrary, if that is your frame of mind, if you are in the frame of mind where, if it was a matter of importance to you in your own affairs, away from here, you would pause and hesitate before acting, then you have a reasonable doubt," is sufficiently favorable to the accused.

[For other cases, see Trial, VII. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

White slave trade — when offense complete — abandonment of purpose.

9. The offense denounced by the white slave act of June 25, 1910, as the procuring of interstate transportation of women or girls for the purpose of prostitution, is complete when any such woman or girl shall have been transported in such commerce as a result of any of the criminal acts previously described. The statute does not contemplate a locus penitentiæ for one accused of violating its provisions after the woman or girl has reached the intended destination within the walls of a house of prostitution.

[Nos. 168 and 169.]

Submitted October 23, 1913. Decided February 24, 1914.

TWO WRITS OF ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois to review convictions of violations of the white slave act. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Elijah N. Zoline submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error:

Even though the constitutional question since the suing out of the writ of error has become a mere abstraction, this court will review the whole case.

Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S.

Digitized by Google

425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Burton v. United States, 196 U. S. 283, 49 L. ed. 482, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 266, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522.

Under the decision of this court in Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 230 U. S. 324, 57 L. ed. 1501, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 385, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890, a street railway is not such an agency of commerce as falls within the prohibition of the use of interstate commerce, though it may carry passengers across a state line; and if that be so, no offense was committed.

The court erred in permitting the cross-examination of plaintiff in error Catharine Wilson, as to whether or not she was addicted to the use of morphine or other drugs, and whether she then and there had with her instruments necessary for the administration of such drugs; also in permitting the district attorney to make the statement that said Catharine Wilson was using said instrument every few minutes to stimulate herself with opium or morphine.

3 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 110; 11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 519; Kolb v. Union R. Co. 23 R. I. 72, 54 L.R.A. 646, 91 Am. St. Rep. 614, 49 Atl. 392; State v. King, 88 Minn. 175, 92 N. W. 965; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 461a; 29 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 804, 806; Wharton, Ev. 3d ed. § 541; Rapalje, Witnesses, § 197; Thomp. Trials, §§ 524, 525; Com. v. Churchill, 11 Met. 538, 45 Am. Dec. 229; State v. Smith, 7 Vt. 141; Spears v. Forrest, 15 Vt. 437; Gilchrist v. M'Kee, 4 Watts. 380, 28 Am. Dec. 721; State v. Carson, 66 Me. 116, 2 Am. Crim. Rep. 58; Rudsdill v. Slingerland, 18 Minn. 380, Gil. 342; Atwood v. Impson, 20 N. J. Eq. 157; Bucklin v. State, 20 Ohio, 18; Muetze v. Tuteur, 77 Wis. 243, 9 L.R.A. 86, 20 Am. St. Rep. 115, 46 N. W. 123; Dimick v. Downs, 82 Ill. 570; Moore v. Moore, 73 Tex. 382, 11 S. W. 396.

The court unduly limited the doctrine of "presumption of innocence" and "reasonable doubt."

Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 39 L. ed. 481, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394; Com. v. Webster, 5 Cush. 295, 52 Am. Dec. 711; Miles v. United States, 103 U. S. 304, 316, 26 L. ed. 481, 485; Burt v. State, 72 Miss. 408, 48 Am. St. Rep. 563, 16 So. 342; Frazier v. State, 117 Tenn. 458, 100 S. W. 94; Brown v. State, 72 Miss. 95, 16 So. 202; Johnson v. State, — Miss. —, 16 So. 494.

The court erred in excluding from his charge the principle of locus penitentiæ.

Whart. Crim. Law, 9th ed. § 187; Stephens v. State, 107 Ind. 185, 8 N. E. 94; Pinkard v. State, 30 Ga. 757; State v. Baller, 26 W. Va. 90, 53 Am. Rep. 66; Cox v. People, 82 Ill. 191, 2 Am. Crim. Rep. 329; Thompson v. People, 96 Ill. 158; United States v. Stephens, 8 Sawy. 116, 12 Fed. 52; Stabler v. Com. 95 Pa. 318, 40 Am. Rep. 653; State v. Hurley, 79 Vt. 28, 6 L.R.A. (N.S.) 804, 118 Am. St. Rep. 934, 64 Atl. 78; Keck v. United States, 172 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 510, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254; People v. Murray, 14 Cal. 159.

Assistant Attorney General Denison submitted the cause for the United States:

Even in the cases that hold it error to show a witness to be generally a drug fiend, it has always been recognized as permissible to show that she was under the influence while on the witness stand.

People v. Webster, 139 N. Y. 86, 34 N. E. 730; State v. Gleim, 17 Mont. 31, 31 L.R.A. 294, 52 Am. St. Rep. 655, 41 Pac. 998, 10 Am. Crim. Rep. 46; State v. White, 10 Wash. 613, 39 Pac. 160, 41 Pac. 442; Williams v. United States, 6 Ind. Terr. 14, 88 S. W. 334; Eldridge v. State, 27 Fla. 185, 9 So. 448; McDowell v. Preston, 26 Ga. 535; Anderson v. State, — Tex. Crim. Rep. —, 144 S. W. 281; 30 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 1096; 2 Wigmore, Ev. §§ 934, 1005e; 1 Whart. Crim. Ev. 10th ed. § 384a; 1 Rice, Ev. 625.

The fact that the house had nothing to fear from the police was a relevant circumstance and proper cross-examination. Great latitude is allowed in admitting such circumstantial evidence.

Moore v. United States, 150 U. S. 57, 37 L. ed. 996, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; Thiede v. Utah, 159 U. S. 510, 517, 40 L. ed. 237, 241, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Castle v. Bullard, 23 How. 172, 16 L. ed. 424.

And a trial judge has a reasonable discretion as to cross-examination.

Blitz v. United States, 153 U. S. 308, 312, 38 L. ed. 725, 726, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 924.

The government's case was "as well without it."

Cooper v. Coates, 21 Wall. 105, 111, 22 L. ed. 481, 482.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes here upon two separate writs of error allowed upon the same record, to review judgments of the district court imposing fine and imprisonment upon each of the plaintiffs in error, upon their conviction on an indictment founded upon the act of Congress of June 25, 1910, commonly known as the white slave act (36 Stat. at L. 825, chap. 395, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1343).

The case was brought directly to this court, because the constitutionality of the statute was drawn in question. This question has since been settled adversely to plaintiffs in error. Hoke v. United States, 227 U. S. 308, 57 L. ed. 523, 43 L.R.A. (N.S.) 906, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 905. Nevertheless, we must retain jurisdiction for the purpose of passing upon the other questions in the record. Horner v. [566] United States, 143 U. S. 570, 576, 36 L. ed. 266, 268, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Burton v. United States, 196 U. S. 283, 295, 49 L. ed. 482, 485, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 432, 52 L. ed. 278, 284, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

Digitized by Google

There were numerous counts in the indictment, and a general verdict of guilty. The substance of the charge was that defendants caused and procured two girls to be transported in interstate commerce from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, to Chicago, Illinois, for the purpose of prostitution. There was also a count charging a conspiracy to commit the same offense. The theory of the government, sufficiently stated in the indictment and supported by evidence at the trial, was that, in pursuance of an understanding between defendants and a man named Corder, they gave him $11 in money, with instructions to proceed from Chicago to Milwaukee, induce one or both of the girls to return with him to Chicago, paying their transportation and other expenses out of the $11, and bring them to a house of prostitution in the latter city, kept by the defendants; and that Corder carried out these instructions to the letter, bringing both girls over an interstate electric railway line and escorting them to the defendants' house for the purpose of prostitution.

Of the questions of law that are raised, only the following seem to require mention:

1. It is insisted that the offense was not fully proved because there was nothing to show that defendants either directed or knew how the girls were to come from Milwaukee to Chicago, whether in a private vehicle or through the instrumentality of a common carrier. But, in our opinion, in order to constitute an offense under the act it is not essential that the transportation be by common carrier. The statute reads: "That any person who shall knowingly transport or cause to be transported, or aid or assist in obtaining transportation for, or in transporting, in interstate or foreign commerce, . . . any woman or girl for the purpose of prostitution or debauchery, or [567] for any other immoral purpose, . . . or who shall knowingly procure or obtain, or cause to be procured or obtained, or aid or assist in procuring or obtaining, any ticket or tickets, or any form of transportation or evidence of the right thereto, to be used by any woman or girl in interstate or foreign commerce, . . . in going to any place for the purpose of prostitution or debauchery, or for any other immoral purpose, . . . whereby any such woman or girl shall be transported in interstate or foreign commerce, . . . shall be deemed guilty of a felony," etc.

The prohibition is not in terms confined to transportation by common carrier, nor need such a limitation be implied in order to sustain the constitutionality of the enactment. As has already been decided, it has the quality of a police regulation, although enacted in the exercise of the power to regulate interstate commerce (Hoke v. United States, 227 U. S. 308, 323, 57 L. ed. 523, 527, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 906, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281, Ann. Cas. 1913 E, 905; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 215, 29 L. ed. 158, 166, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826); and since this power is complete in itself, it was discretionary with Congress whether the prohibition should be extended to transportation by others than common carriers.

The contention that defendants were not within the prohibition of the act because they did not control or instruct Corder in the choice of means of conveyance is not worthy of serious consideration. According to the government's evidence, Corder was employed by defendants as their agent, and furnished by them with money sufficient for the expenses of the transportation, but without definite instructions as to what mode should be employed. A natural inference was that he should decide upon the mode and select the route; and that such selection was within the scope of his agency.

2. The female defendant offered herself as a witness, and in the course of her cross-examination was asked whether she was addicted to the use of morphine. Having [568] admitted this, and stated that she had last used it before coming into the court room that morning at 10 o'clock, she was asked how often she used it, and whether she had with her the "implements" with which to "take the dose." She replied in the affirmative. This line of examination was excepted to, and is assigned for error on the ground that she had not put her character at issue. But as we read the record, the evidence was not offered or admitted for its bearing upon her character, but rather to show that she was so much addicted to the use of the drug that the question whether, at the moment of testifying, she was under its influence, or had recovered from the effects of its last administration, had a material bearing upon her reliability as a witness. It seems to us that in this aspect the evidence was admissible. People v. Webster, 139 N. Y. 73, 87, 34 N. E. 730; State v. White, 10 Wash. 611, 613, 39 Pac. 160, 41 Pac. 442.

Digitized by Google

3. Error is assigned upon certain rulings of the trial court permitting cross-examination of the same witness, tending to show that she and the other defendant lived unhappily as husband and wife, were occasionally separated, and (as is said) that they at times indulged in the use of pistols. No evidence was in fact offered or admitted tending to show that weapons had been used, if we except an obscure allusion to "pistols" in a letter that had been written by a person in New York city to the female defendant in Chicago. The use made of this letter was permissible for other reasons. The evidence as to the quarrels and separation was plainly admissible. The government's case depended mainly upon the testimony of Corder. He appeared to have been an accomplice, hence circumstantial corroboration of his story was especially material. He had testified that Mrs. Wilson asked him to go to Milwaukee for the purpose of getting the two girls, and had mentioned as a circumstance that this conversation took place at the Union Depot in Chicago, where he had met Mrs. Wilson at her request [569] to aid her in a search for her husband. On her direct examination she flatly denied this, saying: "I did not take him and he never accompanied me on any trip to hunt for Mr. Wilson; I always knew where Mr. Wilson was." The cross-examination under consideration was entirely relevant to this part of the testimony in chief.

4. It is assigned for error that the court permitted the government to cross-examine the defendant, Charles Wilson, respecting entries made by him and his wife in their books of account, showing payments of money to certain police officers, and indicating friendly relations, if not co-operation, between defendants, as keepers of a house of prostitution, and members of the police force. This was not objected to as exceeding the limits of proper cross-examination, but only as being "incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial." We think it was admissible as tending to show the character of the house, and as tending to rebut evidence previously introduced by the defense to the effect that Mrs. Wilson had refused to harbor the girls for fear of police interference.

5. Error is assigned upon the instructions of the trial court to the jury respecting the presumption of innocence, and the definition of reasonable doubt. Counsel for defendants preferred no request upon either subject previous to the delivery of the charge. The court instructed the jury in substance that the arrest of defendants, their indictment by the grand jury, and their arraignment, were no evidence whatever of their guilt; that the presumption of innocence meant that at the beginning of the trial they were as innocent of the charges as any man in the jury box; that this presumption continued to abide with the defendants as a complete protection, unless and until it gave way because inconsistent with the existence of a situation proved by the evidence in the case beyond all reasonable doubt; that by that [reasonable doubt] was meant, not the frame of mind of a man endeavoring to [570] find a way out for somebody accused of crime, not a mere capricious doubt, not a frame of mind suggested by something occurring in the trial of the case or in the argument of counsel not based on evidence in the case; but that "reasonable doubt is that frame of mind which forbids you to say, all the evidence considered and weighed, 'I have an abiding conviction of the defendants' guilt;' or, as it has been expressed, 'I am convinced of the defendants' guilt to a moral certainty.' If you can say that you have such a conviction, then you have no reasonable doubt, and your verdict should be 'guilty.' On the contrary, if that is your frame of mind, if you are in the frame of mind where, if it was a matter of importance to you in your own affairs, away from here, you would pause and hesitate before acting, then you have a reasonable doubt." At the conclusion of the charge counsel for defendants said: "I should like that the court say a little more on the reasonable doubt, as I believe it was limited only to a moral certainty. That is the only sentence I heard about that." The argument here is that the instruction as given is faulty, because the court did not tell the jury that the government must prove its case against defendants beyond a reasonable doubt. As we read the charge, it meant nothing less than that, and was sufficiently favorable to defendants. Miles v. United States, 103 U. S. 304, 309, 312, 26 L. ed. 481, 483, 484; Hopt v. Utah, 120 U. S. 430, 439, 440, 30 L. ed. 708, 711, 712, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 199, 39 L. ed. 390, 395, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 460, 39 L. ed. 481, 493, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394; Cochran v. United States, 157 U. S. 286, 299, 39 L. ed. 704, 708, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 487, 40 L. ed. 499, 505, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Allen v. United States, 164 U. S. 492, 500, 41 L. ed. 528, 530, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Dunlop v. United States, 165 U. S. 486, 502, 41 L. ed. 799, 804, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375.

Digitized by Google

6. Error is assigned because the court refused to charge the jury, as requested, to the effect that if they should believe from the evidence that defendants, after the girls came to Chicago from Milwaukee, refused to accept them, and voluntarily abandoned their evil intention and refused [571] to carry out the illegal purpose, no offense against the laws of the United States was committed. It is argued that the end and object of the act is to prevent immorality and trafficking in girls, and not the mere act of transportation. But we think that by the plain language of the statute, the offense is complete when "any such woman or girl shall be transported in interstate or foreign commerce, or in any territory or the District of Columbia" as a result of any of the criminal acts previously described. The suggestion that the law contemplates a locus penitentiæ for defendant, after the journey is ended and the woman or girl has been brought to the intended destination within the walls of a house of prostitution, is obviously untenable.

We find no error in the record.

Judgments affirmed.

JACOB WEINMAN and Joseph Barnett, and Ivan Grunsfeld and M. W. Flournoy, Their Sureties, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

RICHARD DE PALMA and Bernard Ruppe.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 571–576.)

Joint tort feasors — adjoining owners —construction of party wall — damage to tenant.

1. A contract between the owner of demised premises and an adjoining owner for the construction of a party wall, which cannot be carried out according to its terms without entry upon the demised premises and an undermining of the tenant's wall, is evidential of the landlord's command or approval of the trespass upon the tenant's possession, committed by the adjoining owner or his servants in the performance of the contract, so as to render the landlord liable severally or jointly with the adjoining owner in an action by the tenant for the resulting damage.

[For other cases, see Joint Creditors and Debtors, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Damages — trespass — future profits.

2. Loss of future profits (these being reasonably certain and proved with reasonable exactitude) forms a proper element for consideration in awarding compensatory damages for a trespass resulting in the destruction of a building, with consequent interruption of a going business.

[For other cases, see Damages, VI. t, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Master and servant — liability of master to third person — independent contractor.

3. A general contractor engaged in building a party wall under the direction of an agent of one of the adjoining owners is not an independent contractor, for whose negligence the owners would not be responsible.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Master and servant — liability of master to third person — independent contractor.

4. The doctrine which relieves the owner from liability for negligence of an independent contractor does not apply where the work that the contractor is to do of itself amounts to a nuisance, or necessarily operates to injure or destroy the property of a third person.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 173.]

Argued January 20, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico to review a judgment which, on a third appeal, affirmed, with a slight modification, a judgment of the District Court of Bernalillo County, in that territory, in favor of plaintiffs in a negligence suit. Affirmed.

See same case below, first appeal, 13 N. M. 226, 82 Pac. 360; second appeal, 15 N. M. 68, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 423, 103 Pac. 782; third appeal, 16 N. M. 302, 121 Pac. 38.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Neill B. Field argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The bill of particulars used to refresh the memory of a witness failed to meet the requirements established by the decisions of this and other courts and by elementary writers on the law of evidence.

1 Greenl. Ev. § 436; 1 Phillipps, Ev. 289;

NOTE.—On the liability of landlord where tenant's property is damaged through interference with party wall by adjoining owner under agreement with landlord—see note to the above case in the New Mexico supreme court as reported in 24 L.R.A. (N.S.) 424.

On damages for tort as affected by loss of profits—see note to Wallace v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 52 L.R.A. 33.

As to who is an independent contractor—see notes to Richmond v. Sitterding, 65 L.R.A. 445, Knicely v. West Virginia Midland R. Co. 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 371.

As to liability of employer for acts of independent contractor where injury is direct result of work contracted for—see note to Thomas v. Harrington, 65 L.R.A. 750.

Digitized by Google

1 Wigmore, Ev. §§ 744, 763; Insurance Cos. v. Weides, 14 Wall. 375, 20 L. ed. 894; Bates v. Preble, 151 U. S. 149, 38 L. ed. 106, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Norwalk ex rel. Fawcett v. Ireland, 68 Conn. 1, 35 Atl. 804; Curtis v. Bradley, 65 Conn. 99, 28 L. R. A. 143, 48 Am. St. Rep. 177, 31 Atl. 591; Peterson Bros. v. Mineral King Fruit Co. 140 Cal. 624, 74 Pac. 162.

There is a reasonable probability that the evidence of damage to goods not entirely destroyed tainted the entire verdict.

Hopt v. Utah, 120 U. S. 431, 438, 30 L. ed. 709, 711, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614; Waldron v. Waldron, 156 U. S. 361, 384, 39 L. ed. 453, 459, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Throckmorton v. Holt, 180 U. S. 552, 568, 45 L. ed. 663, 671, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474.

It is not without significance that the cash book is offered as original evidence to corroborate the testimony of the witness Ruppe that during six and one-half months of his occupation of the Weinman building his total cash receipts were $14,186.31, and that his gross profit on those sales was $5,674.52, and that from a stock of merchandise returned for taxation under oath by Father Di Palma which gave the average value of merchandise during the year at $1,200.

Giaccomini v. Bulkeley, 51 Cal. 260; Paola Gas Co. v. Paola Glass Co. 56 Kan. 614, 54 Am. St. Rep. 598, 44 Pac. 621; Boston & A. R. Co. v. O'Reilly, 158 U. S. 334, 39 L. ed. 1006, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 830; Miller v. Wilkes-Barre Gas Co. 206 Pa. 254, 55 Atl. 974.

A partnership may not ignore the requirements of the statute in keeping a record of its transactions, and then be permitted to use as evidence a record which falls short of such requirements.

Deserant v. Cerillos Coal R. Co. 178 U. S. 409, 44 L. ed. 1127, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 967, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 573.

Damages must be proved, and not left to conjecture by the jury.

Central Coal & Coke Co. v. Hartman, 49 C. C. A. 244, 111 Fed. 102; Bristol Belt Line R. Co. v. Bullock Electric Mfg. Co. 101 Va. 652, 44 S. E. 893; McSherry Mfg. Co. v. Dowagiac Mfg. Co. 89 C. C. A. 26, 160 Fed. 952; Philp v. Nock, 17 Wall. 462, 21 L. ed. 679; Seymour v. McCormick, 16 How. 480, 489, 490, 14 L. ed. 1024, 1028.

Assuming Mr. Ruppe to be the most upright and conscientious of men, is it safe to establish a rule of evidence which would open the way for the perpetration of frauds such as would be possible of accomplishment by a dishonest man in his situation?

2 Wigmore, Ev. §§ 1198 et seq.; Broadwell v. Stiles, 8 N. J. L. 58; The Count Joannes v. Bennett, 5 Allen, 169, 81 Am. Dec. 738; Parker v. Kane, 4 Wis. 1, 65 Am. Dec. 283; Wallace v. Harmstad, 44 Pa. 492; Riggs v. Tayloe, 9 Wheat. 483, 6 L. ed. 140; Price v. Tallman, 1 N. J. L. 447; Wyckoff v. Wyckoff, 16 N. J. Eq. 401; Wilke v. Wilke, 28 Wis. 298; Bagley v. McMickle, 9 Cal. 430; Gugins v. Van Gorder, 10 Mich. 523, 82 Am. Dec. 55.

There was no suggestion of any right to punitive damages in the case, and therefore the effort to create this impression was unjustifiable and prejudicial.

4 Sutherland, Damages, 1030, 1033; 3 Wigmore, Ev. § 1725.

The evidence of Mr. Ruppe's efforts to find another location was intended to fortify the claim for loss of profit, but the effect of it was to permit Mr. Ruppe to express his opinion upon various matters as to which opinion evidence was not admissible, and to put before the jury Mr. Ruppe's views with reference to collateral matters which the jury could not properly consider, and which were of no probative value. If the loss of profits depended upon proof of these matters, upon which Mr. Ruppe was permitted to express an opinion, then such lost profits were not recoverable because they are too speculative, uncertain, and too remote, and depend upon proof of things which are not susceptible of proof.

Karbach v. Fogel, 63 Neb. 601, 88 N. W. 660.

The admissibility of these opinions must be determined upon the principles applicable to the admissibility of the opinions of nonprofessional witnesses, rather than upon those which govern the admissibility of testimony of experts, but it is perfectly clear that they were not admissible under either, and that the trial court was not at liberty to say, as a matter of law, that Mr. Ruppe, or any other witness, could give his opinion about such matters.

3 Wigmore, Ev. §§ 1917 et seq.; Rogers, Expert Testimony, §§ 1 et seq.; Ferguson v. Hubbell, 97 N. Y. 507, 49 Am. Rep. 544; Pearson v. Alaska Pacific S. S. Co. 51 Wash. 560, 130 Am. St. Rep. 1117, 99 Pac. 753; Schmieder v. Barney, 113 U. S. 645, 28 L. ed. 1130, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624; Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 24 L. ed. 256; Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Gruver, 100 Pa. 266.

Counsel was also permitted, over the objection of plaintiffs in error, presistently to propound question to the witness Ruppe which suggested the answers desired, and which violated settled principles to such a degree as amounted to an abuse of discretion by the trial judge.

1 Wigmore, Ev. §§ 768 et seq.; Southwestern Brewery & Ice Co. v. Schmidt, 226 U. S. 162, 57 L. ed. 170, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68.

Digitized by Google

The construction of the party wall did not necessarily involve a trespass.

Ridge v. Railroad Transfer Co. 56 Mo. App. 138; Northern Trust Co. v. Palmer, 171 Ill. 383, 49 N. E. 555; 1 Taylor, Land. & T. § 174; Proud v. Hollis, 1 Barn. & C. 8; Penley v. Watts, 7 Mees. & W. 601, 10 L. J. Exch. N. S. 229; Shaw v. Cummiskey, 7 Pick. 76; Peterson v. Edmonson, 5 Harr. (Del.) 378.

There is such a conflict in the various parts of the charge as renders it practically certain that the jury did not understand and could not extract from the charge any definite rule with reference to the measure of damages.

Karbach v. Fogel, 63 Neb. 601, 88 N. W. 660; Hayden v. Florence Sewing Mach. Co. 54 N. Y. 225; Howard v. Stillwell & B. Mfg. Co. 139 U. S. 206, 35 L. ed. 150, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; 3 Sutherland, Damages, 3d ed. § 864; Shafer v. Wilson, 44 Md. 268; Casper v. Klippen, 61 Minn. 353, 52 Am. St. Rep. 604, 63 N. W. 737; Des Allemands Lumber Co. v. Morgan City Timber Co. 117 La. 1, 41 So. 332; Silurian Mineral Springs Co. v. Kuhn, 65 Neb. 646, 91 N. W. 508; Douglass v. Ohio River R. Co. 51 W. Va. 523, 41 S. E. 911; Paquin v. St. Louis & S. R. Co. 90 Mo. App. 118; Griffin v. Colver, 16 N. Y. 489, 69 Am. Dec. 718; Butler v. Collins, 12 Cal. 457; Ft. Pitt Gas Co. v. Evansville Contract Co. 59 C. C. A. 281, 123 Fed. 63; Wehle v. Haviland, 69 N. Y. 448; 1 Sedgw. Damages, 7th ed. 128; Cincinnati Siemens-Lungren Gas Illuminating Co. v. Western Siemens-Lungren Co. 152 U. S. 200, 38 L. ed. 411, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523; Central Trust Co. v. Clark, 34 C. C. A. 354, 92 Fed. 293; Dietrich v. Rumsey, 45 Ill. 209.

As between defendants in error and plaintiff in error Weinman, defendants in error had a right to sue in contract for a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment which is implied by the law from the relation of landlord and tenant, or to sue in tort as they did, but in either case the measure of damage was the same, and as it will hardly be contended that Barnett could be properly joined as a defendant in a suit on the covenants of a lease to which he was not a party, it must follow that the bringing of this suit was an election by the defendants in error to waive the breach of their contract rights. The great weight of authority supports the contention that, by the eviction relied on, the relation of landlord and tenant ceased to exist and the rights of the parties became immediately fixed.

Skally v. Shute, 132 Mass. 370; International Trust Co. v. Schumann, 158 Mass. 291, 33 N. E. 509; 3 Sutherland Damages, 3d ed. § 864.

The giving of two or more instructions which are inconsistent with each other is calculated to mislead the jury and leave them in doubt as to the law.

Brown v. McAllister, 39 Cal. 577; Hoben v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 20 Iowa, 567; Haight v. Vallet, 89 Cal. 245, 23 Am. St. Rep. 465, 26 Pac. 897; Bank of Metropolis v. New England Bank, 6 How. 212, 12 L. ed. 409.

The court should have given the cautionary instruction requested with reference to the testimony of Mr. Ruppe.

Ward v. Brown, 53 W. Va. 227, 44 S. E. 488; Whiteford v. Burckmyer, 1 Gill, 127, 39 Am. Dec. 640; Harrison v. Rowan, 3 Wash. C. C. 580, Fed. Cas. No. 6,141; Beurmann v. Van Buren, 44 Mich. 496, 7 N. W. 62.

Plaintiffs in error are not liable for the defective execution of the party-wall agreement. Grande was an independent contractor.

Casement v. Brown, 148 U. S. 615, 37 L. ed. 582, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672; Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black, 418, 17 L. ed. 298; Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635, 25 L. ed. 336; Sulzbacher v. Dickie, 51 How. Pr. 500; Norwalk Gaslight Co. v. Norwalk, 63 Conn. 495, 28 Atl. 32; Conners v. Hennessey, 112 Mass. 96; Engel v. Eureka Club, 137 N. Y. 100, 33 Am. St. Rep. 693, 32 N. E. 1052; Dillon v. Hunt, 105 Mo. 154, 24 Am. St. Rep. 374, 16 S. W. 516; Charless v. Rankin, 66 Am. Dec. 642, note; Gilmore v. Driscoll, 122 Mass. 199, 23 Am. Rep. 312, 14 Mor. Min. Rep. 37.

Mr. F. E. Wood argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Owen N. Marron and A. B. McMillen, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The owner of leased premises, contracting with a stranger to undermine the tenant's wall, becomes liable equally with the stranger to the tenant for resulting damages.

Wertheimer v. Saunders, 95 Wis. 573, 37 L.R.A. 149, 70 N. W. 824, 2 Am. Neg. Rep. 480; Ellis v. Sheffield Gas Consumers' Co. 2 El. & Bl. 767, 2 C. L. R. 249, 23 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 42, 18 Jur. 146, 2 Week. Rep. 19, 19 Eng. Rul. Cas. 180; Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. 679, 18 L. ed. 432; St. Paul Water Co. v. Ware, 16 Wall. 576, 21 L. ed. 488; Dalton v. Angus, L. R. 6 App. Cas. 829, 50 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 689, 44 L. T. N. S. 844, 30 Week. Rep. 191, 14 Eng. Rul. Cas. 769.

Where a trespass results in the destruction of a building and consequent interruption of a going business, future profits thus lost may be recovered as an element of damages.

Wicker v. Hoppock, 6 Wall. 99, 18 L. ed. 753; Allison v. Chandler, 11 Mich. 542; Snow v. Pulitzer, 142 N. Y. 270,

Digitized by Google

36 N. E. 1059; 3 Sutherland, Damages, 154; 1 Sedgw. Damages, 8th ed. § 182; Chapman v. Kirby, 49 Ill. 219; Wood, Land. & T. 782; Shaw v. Hoffman, 25 Mich. 162; Hawthorne v. Siegel, 88 Cal. 159, 22 Am. St. Rep. 291; Anvil Min. Co. v. Humble, 153 U. S. 549, 38 L. ed. 817, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 98; Shafer v. Wilson, 44 Md. 268; Scyfert v. Bean, 83 Pa. 450; Glass v. Garber, 55 Ind. 336; Gibson v. Fischer, 68 Iowa, 29, 25 N. W. 914; Goebel v. Hough, 26 Minn. 252, 2 N. W. 847.

No question relating to the sufficiency of the books of account as evidence is before this court for review.

Southwestern Brewery & Ice Co. v. Schmidt, 226 U. S. 162, 57 L. ed. 170, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68; Santa Fe County v. New Mexico, 215 U. S. 296, 54 L. ed. 202, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

In November, 1901, Weinman, one of the plaintiffs in error, being the owner of a building and lot of land in Albuquerque, New Mexico, leased them to defendants in error for a term of two years, to commence in December, following. They entered into possession, and occupied and used the building in their business of prescription and retail druggists. Plaintiff in error Barnett was the owner of an adjoining lot and building. Some time in May or June, 1902, while the Weinman building was occupied by defendants in error, Barnett took down and removed his building, including the wall adjacent to the Weinman building. The east wall of the latter was an old adobe wall that stood close to, but perhaps a few inches away from, the easterly boundary line of the lot. In May, 1902, Weinman and Barnett entered into an agreement in writing, whereby Barnett was to construct a party wall, [573] to stand one half of its full thickness upon each lot; the footing course to be 40 inches wide; the foundation wall to be 18 inches thick from the top of the footing to its full height, where it was to receive the first floor joints; the wall above that to be of less thickness. It was stipulated that Barnett should be permitted to take down any part of the east wall of the Weinman building as might be necessary in order to locate the new wall centrally over the property line, and if, through his fault, damage should be done to the Weinman building, he was to make it good. In the execution of this agreement, it was necessary to undermine the east wall of the Weinman building. Barnett made an agreement with one Grande, a general contractor, by which the latter was to do the excavation and stone work according to plans and specifications, and as directed by La Driere, a superintendent who was in Barnett's employ. Grande proceeded under La Driere's direction to do the work. It would seem that the purpose was to excavate for the party wall in sections, so that support for the Weinman building should not at any time be entirely lacking. On or about June 30th, the contractor having excavated for a space about 5 feet in length along the line between the two lots at the northeast corner of the Weinman building, and extending under the east wall of that building for approximately 12 inches, the wall fell, damaging the stock-in-trade and fixtures of defendants in error, and rendering the building untenantable. They removed what remained of their stock and fixtures to another and less desirable location, and carried on their business there, up to the time their lease of the Weinman lot and building would have expired by its terms. After the wall fell, Weinman made demand for the rent payable by the lease for the month of July, 1902, and, defendants in error having refused to pay it, Weinman took possession.

Defendants in error brought suit against both Weinman [574] and Barnett in the district court of one of the counties of the then territory of New Mexico. The action was in the nature of an action of trespass, and damages were claimed for the destruction of parts and injury to other parts of the stock-in-trade and fixtures, for the being compelled to remove to a less favorable location at considerable expense, and for the loss of profits in the business. (There was also a claim of damages for eviction and the loss of the leasehold, but this was afterwards abandoned.)

Answers were filed, and there were subsequent amendments to the pleadings, but it is not necessary to recite them.

The action has been at least three times tried by jury, and three times reviewed by the supreme court of New Mexico. Upon the first trial a verdict was directed in favor of defendants, and the supreme court reversed the judgment and remanded the cause for a new trial. 13 N. M. 226, 82 Pac. 360. The second trial resulted in a verdict and judgment for plaintiffs, which was reversed because compensation for loss of profits and for goods injured was included without sufficient evidence to sustain this part of the recovery. 15 N. M. 68, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 423, 103 Pac. 782. At the last trial, the proof was to some extent supplemented, and there was a judgment in favor of plaintiffs for $7,738, based upon the verdict of a jury for that amount. On appeal, the supreme court found error only with respect to the proof as to damaged goods, and required plaintiffs to elect whether they would file a remittitur of $770 on this account, or submit to a new trial. 16 N. M. 302, 121 Pac. 38. They chose the former alternative, and the judgment was affirmed for the reduced amount. The present writ of error was then sued out.

Digitized by Google

The record is voluminous. In the territorial supreme court, 105 assignments of error were filed in behalf of Barnett and 68 in behalf of Weinman. In this court the assignments of error are 110 in number. We shall make no [575] effort to deal with them in detail. The points that seem to require mention are the following:

We agree with the supreme court of New Mexico that where the owner of demised premises makes a contract with an adjoining owner for the construction of a party wall, which contract cannot be carried out according to its terms without entry upon the demised premises and an undermining of the tenant's wall, and the adjoining owner or his servants, in the performance of the contract, do commit such a trespass upon the tenant's possession and undermine the wall, the contract is evidential of a command or approval of the trespass by the landlord, such as to render him liable severally, or jointly with the adjoining owner, in an action by the tenant for the resulting damages. Lovejoy v. Murray, 3 Wall, 1, 9, 18 L. ed. 129, 131; Northern Trust Co. v. Palmer, 171 Ill. 383, 388, 49 N. E. 553; Collins v. Lewis, 53 Minn. 78, 83, 19 L.R.A. 822, 54 N. W. 1056; Snow v. Pulitzer, 142 N. Y. 263, 268, 36 N. E. 1059.

In our opinion, the court correctly held that where a trespass results in the destruction of a building, with consequent interruption of a going business, the loss of future profits (these being reasonably certain and proved with reasonable exactitude) forms a proper element for consideration in awarding compensatory damages. Allison v. Chandler, 11 Mich. 543, 550; Schile v. Brokhahus, 80 N. Y. 614, 620; Snow v. Pulitzer, 142 N. Y. 263, 270, 36 N. E. 1059; Chapman v. Kirby, 49 Ill. 211, 219; Terre Haute v. Hudnut, 112 Ind. 542, 552, 13 N. E. 686; National Fibre Board Co. v. Lewiston & A. Electric Light Co. 95 Me. 318, 327, 49 Atl. 1075. And see Anvil Min. Co. v. Humble, 153 U. S. 540, 549, 38 L. ed. 814, 817, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 98; Brown v. Honiss, 74 N. J. L. 501, 514, 68 Atl. 150.

We agree also with the court below that upon the last trial there was legitimate evidence upon which to base an allowance of damages for loss of profits, and no substantial error in the rulings on evidence or in the instructions to the jury upon the subject.

It is contended that plaintiffs in error are not responsible [576] for what was done by Grande in building the party wall because he was an independent contractor.

But the evidence showed that he was required to follow the instructions of La Driere, who was Barnett's agent, and that La Driere was in fact in charge of the work. For this reason it was properly held that Grande was not an independent contractor. New Orleans, M. & C. R. Co. v. Hanning, 15 Wall. 649, 657, 21 L. ed. 220, 223, 7 Am. Neg. Cas. 309; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Rahn, 132 U. S. 518, 523, 33 L. ed. 440, 442, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 175.

Nor does the "independent contractor" doctrine apply where the work that the contractor is to do of itself amounts to a nuisance or necessarily operates to injure or destroy the property of plaintiff. Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black, 418, 426, 17 L. ed. 298, 303; Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. 657, 678, 18 L. ed. 427, 432.

The other points that are raised have been examined, and we find no material error. They have been sufficiently discussed in the court below, and require no particular mention here.

Judgment affirmed.

OHIO TAX CASES.

OHIO RIVER & WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

ROBERT M. DITTEY, Frank E. Munn, and Christian Pabst, as the Tax Commission of Ohio, and the Tax Commission of Ohio. (No. 642).

MARIETTA, COLUMBUS, & CLEVELAND RAILROAD COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

DAVID S. CREAMER, Treasurer of State of the State of Ohio; Edward M. Fullington, Auditor of State of the State of Ohio; Timothy S. Hogan, Attorney General of the State of Ohio; Robert M. Dittey, Frank E. Munn, and Christian Pabst, as the Tax Commission of Ohio, and the Tax Commission of Ohio. (No. 643).

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 576-594.)

Constitutional law — confiscation — privilege tax.

1. A law imposing a tax upon privileges and franchises is not repugnant to the NOTE.—On taxation of corporate franchises—see note to Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Com. 57 L.R.A. 33.

On constitutional equality in relation to

Digitized by Google

Ohio Constitution as being confiscatory and oppressive merely because in isolated cases such law may impose a hardship.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — privilege tax.

2. Railway franchises cannot be said to be valueless, so as to make the tax imposed by 102 Ohio Laws, 224, upon gross earnings, invalid as confiscatory and taking property without due process of law, merely because the present earnings of the railways are not sufficient to pay more than can be derived from legitimate high grade investment securities readily available on the market, or may even not be sufficient to pay operating expenses.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — discrimination — excise tax — classification.

3. Railway companies doing business in the state are not arbitrarily discriminated against, contrary to the uniformity and equality provisions of the Ohio Constitution, or the equal protection of the laws clause of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, by the excise tax imposed upon gross earnings by 102 Ohio Laws, 224, because it does not include all other public utilities carrying on business within the state, or because those public utilities which it does include are not all taxed at the same rate.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state taxation — railway earnings.

4. An intention to tax the receipts from foreign commerce will not be imputed by the Federal courts to the Ohio legislature when enacting 102 Ohio Laws, 224, imposing an excise tax upon the gross receipts of railway companies, because such commerce is not expressly excepted by the provisions of §§ 83, 88, which provide for ascertaining the railway earnings "from whatever source derived, for business done within this state, excluding therefrom all earnings derived wholly from interstate business, or business done for the Federal government," in view of the intent indicated in § 97, to take into consideration, for the purpose of measuring the tax, only the earnings upon intrastate business, and of the absence of any decision of the Ohio courts calling for a different construction.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III. d, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state taxation — gross railway receipts.

5. Amending a state law imposing an excise tax on gross railway earnings so as to exclude interstate earnings from the computation, while making a corresponding increase in the tax decimal, is not of itself sufficient evidence of an unlawful effort to burden a privilege that is not a proper subject of state taxation.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III. d, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxes — uniformity — double taxation.

6. The exaction from railway companies by 102 Ohio Laws, 224, of an excise tax of 4 per cent on their gross intrastate earnings in addition to the taxation of their property is not lacking in the uniformity required by the state Constitution, as being double taxation.

[For other cases, see Taxes, I. b, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statute — when invalidity may be assailed — invalid in part.

7. The possible unconstitutionality of the penalties imposed by 102 Ohio Laws, 224, for withholding the excise tax levied by that statute upon gross railway earnings, will not be considered in actions which do not involve any present attempt to enforce such penalties,—especially in view of the declaration of § 160 as to the severability of the various sections and parts of sections of that act.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d, 3; I. d, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 642 and 643.]

Argued January 7, 1914. Decided February 24, 1914.

TWO APPEALS from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio to review decrees refusing to enjoin the collection of an excise tax upon gross railway earnings. Affirmed.

See same case below, 203 Fed. 537.

Statement by Mr. Justice Pitney:

These suits were brought in the United States district court for the southern district of Ohio (eastern division) by appellants, which are Ohio railroad corporations, to enjoin the certification and collection by appellees of a tax which the state was seeking to enforce upon the privilege of carrying on business in that state. This tax appellants claimed to be in violation of the due process and equal protection clauses of the 14th Amendment, and of the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, and also of the preamble and §§ 2 and 19 of the Ohio Constitution.

A restraining order was allowed by the district court, and afterwards appellants' motions for temporary injunctions came on for hearing before three judges, of whom one was a circuit judge, pursuant to § 266 taxation—see note to Bacon v. State Tax Comrs. 60 L.R.A. 341.

---

On corporate taxation and the commerce clause—see note to Sandford v. Poe, 60 L.R.A. 641.

Generally, on statutes part valid and part invalid—see notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. 1 L.R.A. 363; and Fayette County v. People's & D. Bank, 10 L.R.A. 196.

Digitized by Google

of the Judicial Code (36 Stat. at L. 1162, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 236), which went into effect shortly after the bills were filed. The two cases were argued and considered together, upon the facts averred in the bills, which were, for the purposes of the motions, conceded to be true by appellees, and, after consideration, the temporary injunctions were refused. 203 Fed. 537.

Appellants come direct to this court, under the same section of the Code.

The tax law in question, the validity of which is attacked generally, and also specially in its application to appellants, was enacted in its present form May 31, 1911. 102 Ohio Laws, 224.

It created a tax commission, with defined powers, and prescribed various taxes, some upon property and others upon franchises and privileges, with sundry provisions, penal and otherwise, for the collection thereof. Some of [579] these taxes were new in Ohio law, others were carried over from previously existing statutes.

The tax here in question is limited in its operation to certain lines of quasi public business, specifically named in the act and therein referred to as "public utilities," including railroads.

As applied to railroads, the act requires the filing with the tax commission, by each railroad doing business in the state, of a statement, on or before September 1, setting forth, among other things, its "entire gross earnings, including all sums earned or charged, whether actually received or not, for the year ending on the 30th day of June next preceding, from whatever source derived, for business done within this state, excluding therefrom all earnings derived wholly from interstate business or business done for the Federal government. Such statement shall also contain the total gross earnings of such company for such period in this state from business done within this state." Sections 81 and 83 of act; §§ 5470 and 5472, General Code of Ohio.

It is further provided that on the first Monday of October the commission "shall ascertain and determine the gross earnings as herein provided, of each railroad company whose line is wholly or partially within this state, for the year ending on the 30th day of June next preceding, excluding therefrom all earnings derived wholly from interstate business or business done for the Federal government. The amount so ascertained by the commission shall be the gross earnings of such railroad company for such year." Section 88 of act; § 5477, Gen. Code.

The act further provides that on the first Monday of November the commission shall certify to the auditor of state the amount of the "gross earnings so determined" (§ 93 of act; § 5482, Gen. Code), and that—"in the month of November, the auditor of state shall charge for [580] collection, from each railroad company, a sum in the nature of an excise tax, for the privilege of carrying on its intrastate business, to be computed on the amount so fixed and reported to him by the commission, as the gross earnings of such company on its intrastate business for the year . . . by taking 4 per cent of all such gross earnings." Section 97 of act; § 5486, Gen. Code. The tax is imposed equally and alike on corporations, partnerships, and individuals. Section 39 of act; § 5415, Gen. Code.

Messrs. Robert J. King and F. A. Durban argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

The equity jurisdiction rests upon prevention of cloud upon real estate title, inadequacy of legal remedies, threatened irreparable damage, and prevention of multiplicity of suits.

Cooley, Taxn. p. 536; Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108, 112, 20 L. ed. 65, 67; Shelton v. Platt, 139 U. S. 591, 35 L. ed. 273, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764.

Under the Constitution of Ohio, as construed by the Ohio supreme court in the case of Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 64 N. E. 564, the legislature is without power to impose a privilege tax which is in excess of the value of the privilege taxed, and inasmuch as the admitted facts show the present tax upon appellants to wholly exceed such value, its exaction as to them violates the state Constitution, and amounts to confiscation and a taking of their property without due process of law.

Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539, 9 N. E. 672; Barnes v. Brown, 130 N. Y. 372, 29 N. E. 760; Allegheny v. Western Pennsylvania R. Co. 138 Pa. 383, 21 Atl. 763; Dillon v. Anderson, 43 N. Y. 231; Erickson v. Cass County, 11 N. D. 494, 92 N. W. 841; Galigher v. Jones, 129 U. S. 193, 32 L. ed. 658, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 223-226, 52 L. ed. 1036, 1037, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Gray, Limitations of Taxing Power, §§ 47a, 1317; Hagerty v. State, 55 Ohio St. 613, 45 N. E. 1046; Hartford v. West Middle Dist. 45 Conn. 462, 29 Am. Rep. 687; Martin v. District of Columbia, 205 U. S. 135, 51 L. ed. 743, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440; Northern P. R. Co. v. North Dakota, 216 U. S. 579, 54 L. ed. 624, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269,

Digitized by Google

43 L. ed. 443, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; O'Brien v. Wheelock, 184 U. S. 450, 46 L. ed. 636, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Ohio River & W. R. Co. v. Dittey, 203 Fed. 541; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688–697, 39 L. ed. 311–316, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360; Shoemaker v. United States, 147 U. S. 282, 37 L. ed. 170, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361; Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 64 N. E. 564; State ex rel. Taylor v. Guilbert, 70 Ohio St. 229, 71 N. E. 636, 1 Ann. Cas. 25; State ex rel. Schwartz v. Ferris, 53 Ohio St. 314, 30 L.R.A. 218, 41 N. E. 579; State R. Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575–606, 23 L. ed. 663–670; Sutherland, Damages, §§ 88, 89, 657, 692; Walsh v. Barron, 61 Ohio St. 15, 76 Am. St. Rep. 354, 55 N. E. 164; Warren v. Stoddart, 105 U. S. 224, 26 L. ed. 1117; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Wright, 107 C. C. A. 356, 185 Fed. 257; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Mayer, 28 Ohio St. 521; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1134, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

The tax in question is not a tax upon corporate franchises or privileges, as such, and cannot be saved on that theory.

Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539, 9 N. E. 672; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; State ex rel. Steubenville Gas & Electric Co. v. Taylor, 55 Ohio St. 61, 44 N. E. 513.

The tax cannot be regarded as an exercise of the police power, for the purpose of meeting expenses incident to the regulation of railroads and other utilities.

Adler v. Whitbeck, supra; Tennessee v. Whitworth, 117 U. S. 129, 29 L. ed. 830, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645.

The value limitation, as laid down in the case of Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, supra, is for the protection of the individual and his property.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 65; Missouri Rate Cases (Knott v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co.) 230 U. S. 474–508, 57 L. ed. 1571–1594, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 975; Walsh v. Barron, 61 Ohio St. 15, 76 Am. St. Rep. 354, 55 N. E. 164.

The tax makes an arbitrary and discriminatory classification.

Athens v. New York & P. Teleg. & Teleph. Co. 9 Pa. Dist. R. 253; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Beckett v. Savannah, 118 Ga. 58, 44 S. E. 819; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Cache County ex rel. Matthews v. Jensen, 21 Utah, 207, 61 Pac. 303; Clark v. Titusville, 184 U. S. 329, 46 L. ed. 569, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 382; Findlay v. Frey, 51 Ohio St. 390, 38 N. E. 114; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150–165, 41 L. ed. 666–671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 594, 33 L. ed. 1025, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593; Jaeger v. Burr, 36 Ohio St. 164; Juniata Limestone Co. v. Fagley, 187 Pa. 193, 42 L.R.A. 442, 67 Am. St. Rep. 579, 40 Atl. 977; Kentucky R. Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26, 32 L. ed. 585, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Peoria v. Gugenheim, 61 Ill. App. 374; Northern Indiana R. Co. v. Connelly, 10 Ohio St. 159; Cincinnati G. & P. R. Co. v. Poland, 10 Ohio N. P. N. S. 617; State v. Hinman, 65 N. H. 103, 23 Am. St. Rep. 22, 18 Atl. 194; State v. Moore, 113 N. C. 697, 22 L.R.A. 472, 18 S. E. 342; State v. Whitcom, 122 Wis. 110, 99 N. W. 468; Upington v. Oviatt, 24 Ohio St. 232; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Wright, 107 C. C. A. 356, 185 Fed. 250; State ex rel. Wyatt v. Ashbrook, 154 Mo. 375, 48 L.R.A. 265, 77 Am. St. Rep. 765, 55 S. W. 627; Wyman, Pub. Service Corp. §§ 39–106.

The 4 per cent tax, in the case of railroads, was imposed because of their being extensively engaged in interstate commerce, and was intended to be and is a burden upon interstate commerce, in violation of the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 I. C. R. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, 223 U. S. 335–341, 56 L. ed. 459–463, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211.

Should it be claimed that the privilege of carrying on appellants' business has a value, if considered as property, sufficient to meet the requirements of the value limitation in the Laylin Case, the result would be a double tax on property.

Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305, on rehearing 166 U. S. 185, 41 L. ed. 965, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604.

The tax is based upon all gross earnings, excepting only such as are derived wholly from interstate business and business for the Federal government. The failure to exclude also earnings from foreign commerce, in which appellants are engaged, renders the act invalid under the commerce clause.

Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, 46 L. ed. 697, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Hepburn v.

Digitized by Google

Ellzey, 2 Cranch, 445, 2 L. ed. 332; Lord v. Goodall, N. & P. S. S. Co. 102 U. S. 541, 26 L. ed. 224; Meyer v. Wells, F. & Co. 223 U. S. 298, 302, 56 L. ed. 445, 448, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218; Veazie v. Moor, 14 How. 568–573, 14 L. ed. 545–547.

The act is unconstitutional because of its effort to prevent judicial inquiry and force obedience to its terms and to administrative acts thereunder, irrespective of their validity. It thereby denies due process and equal protection.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Goldberg, B. & Co. v. Stablemen's Union Local No. 8760, 149 Cal. 429, 8 L.R.A.(N.S.) 460, 117 Am. St. Rep. 145, 86 Pac. 806, 9 Ann. Cas. 1219; Jones v. Davis, 35 Ohio St. 474; Pierce v. Stablemen's Union Local No. 8760, 156 Cal. 70, 103 Pac. 324; Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 64 N. E. 564; State ex rel. Poe v. Jones, 51 Ohio St. 516, 37 N. E. 945; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764.

Messrs. Frank Davis, Jr., and Clarence D. Laylin argued the cause, and, with Mr. Timothy S. Hogan, Attorney General of Ohio, filed a brief for appellees:

The entire system of taxation of the state applicable to railroad companies must be examined in order to determine the validity and effect of the tax involved in the cases at bar.

Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 226, 52 L. ed. 1031, 1037, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. ed. 294, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 807, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121, 163; United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, 223 U. S. 335, 56 L. ed. 459, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211.

Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 64 N. E. 564, decides:

1. The general assembly of Ohio, by reason of the grant to it of the legislative power of sovereignty, possesses the general taxing power of the state, which is restrained by article 12, § 2, and similar provisions of the Constitution of Ohio, with respect only to the taxation of property.

2. The exercise of the taxing power in the exaction of contributions from privileges and franchises owing their existence to a grant of the sovereignty itself is limited by certain constitutional provisions to taxing a sum not in excess of the value of the privilege thus conferred or its continuing annual value thereafter.

3. But (the question being as to the state's power to tax corporations as such) the state may, in addition to a franchise tax, levy an excise tax on the privilege of doing business as a corporation under what may perhaps be called the police power of the state; the subject of taxation, in such cases, being the burdens imposed upon the state and the public by reason of the aggregation of capital in the hands of those subject to limited liability. This ground of taxation is separate and apart from the state-created franchise as such, and the exercise of this power is not necessarily subject to the value limitations to which the exercise of the other is subject.

4. The tax exacted by the law in the cases before the court, and measured by a certain proportion of the issued and outstanding capital stock of domestic corporations, was a tax on the state-created franchise, and as such subject to the value limitation.

5. The amount of the tax imposed by the law before the court was considered, in connection with the value limitations imposed by the court's opinion, and was found not to violate that limitation. The consideration thus given was with a view to the effect of the tax upon corporations generally, and not with a view to its effect upon any individual corporation.

Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539, 9 N. E. 672; Ashley v. Ryan, 49 Ohio St. 504, 31 N. E. 721, 153 U. S. 436, 38 L. ed. 773, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 664, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Adams Exp. Co. v. State, 55 Ohio St. 69, 44 N. E. 506; Hagerty v. State, 55 Ohio St. 613, 45 N. E. 1046; Ohio River & W. R. Co. v. Dittey, 203 Fed. 537; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Mayer, 28 Ohio St. 521; State ex rel. Schwartz v. Ferris, 53 Ohio St. 314, 30 L.R.A. 218, 41 N. E. 579.

The privilege taxed by the law involved in Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin was the privilege of corporate existence, as distinguished from the privilege of doing business as a corporation; the tax being one on the franchise, as distinguished from an excise occupation tax.

1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. pp. 31, 37; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 64 N. E. 564.

The privilege taxed by the law involved in the cases at bar, being described but not defined in the statute, may be resolved into at least three elements, viz.:

1. The element of natural monopoly, which is common to all the utilities taxed, and constitutes them such.

Cincinnati Gaslight & Coke Co. v. State, 18 Ohio St. 243; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 126, 24 L. ed. 77, 84; 1 Wyman, Pub. Service Corp. §§ 1, 50, 90; Zanesville v. Zanesville Gaslight Co. 47 Ohio St. 33, 23 N. E. 55.

Digitized by Google

2. The burdens imposed upon the state and the public by the conduct of the business taxed.

Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539, 9 N. E. 672; United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, 223 U. S. 335, 56 L. ed. 459, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Ohio River & W. R. Co. v. Dittey, 203 Fed. 537; Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 64 N. E. 564.

3. As to corporate public utilities, the corporate franchise itself.

Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 185, 223, 41 L. ed. 965, 978, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604; United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, 223 U. S. 335, 56 L. ed. 459, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; People ex rel. Interborough Rapid Transit Co. v. Williams, 200 N. Y. 93, 93 N. E. 505; Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 64 N. E. 564; State v. Cleveland & P. R. Co. 13 Ohio N. P. N. S. 671; State v. Ohio Traction Co. — Ohio —; State ex rel. Steubenville Gas & Electric Co. v. Taylor, 55 Ohio St. 61, 44 N. E. 513; State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts, 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. ed. 164.

The so-called "value limitation" referred to in Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 64 N. E. 564, was not intended to be and cannot be applied to the taxation of the privilege reached by the law involved in the cases at bar.

Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539, 9 N. E. 672.

Even if the said "value limitation" could be applied generally to the imposition of the tax involved in the cases at bar, it cannot be invoked by an individual taxpayer to relieve him from the burden of the tax on a showing that his business is unprofitable.

Ashley v. Ryan, 49 Ohio St. 525, 31 N. E. 721; Baker v. Cincinnati, 11 Ohio St. 539; Cincinnati Gaslight & Coke Co. v. State, 18 Ohio St. 238; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 587, 588, 598, 606–608, 611, 613; 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 3, 9, 31, 84, 181, 192, 225, 254, 390, 391, 684, 2 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 1153; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 108, 151, 55 L. ed. 389, 413, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; Lander v. Burke, 65 Ohio St. 542, 63 N. E. 69; Lewis v. State, 69 Ohio St. 479, 69 N. E. 1135; Citizens' Sav. & L. Asso. v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655, 664, 22 L. ed. 455, 461; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 428, 4 L. ed. 579, 606; McNeill v. Hagerty, 51 Ohio St. 265, 23 L.R.A. 628, 37 N. E. 526; Marmet v. State, 45 Ohio St. 69, 12 N. E. 463; Missouri Rate Cases (Knott v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co.) 230 U. S. 474, 508, 57 L. ed. 1571, 1594, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 975; Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 52 L. ed. 551, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, 13 Ann. Cas. 957; Northern P. R. Co. v. North Dakota, 216 U. S. 579, 54 L. ed. 624, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Ohio River & W. R. Co. v. Dittey, 203 Fed. 537; Shotwell v. Moore, 45 Ohio St. 646, 16 N. E. 470; Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 64 N. E. 564; State ex rel. Schwartz v. Ferris, 53 Ohio St. 326, 30 L.R.A. 218, 41 N. E. 579; State ex rel. Taylor v. Guilbert, 70 Ohio St. 253, 71 N. E. 636, 1 Ann. Cas. 25; State R. Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. ed. 663; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1134, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

Excise taxation in the pure sense is distinguished from taxation of franchises as such.

Century Dict.; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 108, 151, 55 L. ed. 389, 413, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; Missouri Rate Cases (Knott v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co.) 230 U. S. 474, 508, 57 L. ed. 1571, 1594, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 975; Thomas v. United States, 192 U. S. 370, 48 L. ed. 483, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305.

The Federal question sought to be raised by appellants depends upon their interpretation of Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, supra; they do not and cannot claim under the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, independently of that decision.

1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 55 et seq.; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 78, 26 L. ed. 658; McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 49 L. ed. 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, 1 Ann. Cas. 561; Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 64 N. E. 564.

The equal protection of the laws of Ohio is not denied by the legislation involved in the cases at bar because of its alleged failure to apply to all "public utilities."

American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy, 200 U. S. 226, 50 L. ed. 451, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Brown-Forman Co. v. Kentucky, 217 U. S. 563, 54 L. ed. 883, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 594, 33 L. ed. 1025, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593; Kentucky R. Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Southwestern Oil Co. v. Texas, 217 U. S. 114, 54 L. ed. 688, 30 Sup. Ct.

Digitized by Google

Rep. 496; State ex rel. Schwartz v. Ferris, 53 Ohio St. 341, 30 L.R.A. 218, 41 N. E. 579; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 45 L. ed. 619, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

The Ohio law does not deny the equal protection of the laws of the state because of the differences in the rates imposed by it upon different public utilities.

Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 47 L. ed. 669, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. ed. 1035, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Cincinnati, G. & P. R. Co. v. Poland, 10 Ohio N. P. N. S. 617; Savannah, T. & I. of H. R. Co. v. Savannah, 198 U. S. 392, 49 L. ed. 1097, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690.

The act does not deny the equal protection of the laws of Ohio because of its failure to classify railroads for excise tax purposes according to any alleged notorious differences among them.

Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. ed. 439, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d. ed. 390, 391; Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 52 L. ed. 551, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, 13 Ann. Cas. 957.

The readjustment of rates of excise taxation made by the Ohio legislature, following the decision in Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638, does not disclose an intention indirectly to burden or to continue to burden interstate commerce as such.

1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 41, 411; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; People ex rel. Griffin v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 426, 55 Am. Dec. 266; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 I. C. R. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127.

The tax imposed by the Ohio law is not in effect an additional tax upon property.

Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539, 9 N. E. 672; Anderson v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 576, 9 N. E. 683; Ashley v. Ryan, 49 Ohio St. 504, 31 N. E. 721; Adams Exp. Co. v. State, 55 Ohio St. 69, 44 N. E. 506; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 64 N. E. 564; State ex rel. Schwartz v. Ferris, 53 Ohio St. 314, 30 L.R.A. 218, 41 N. E. 579; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Mayer, 28 Ohio St. 521.

Foreign commerce is not burdened by the act.

Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 424, 425, 32 L. ed. 232, 233, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127.

The alleged coercive sections of the Ohio law, properly interpreted, violate no constitutional limitation; but even if regarded as unconstitutional, their invalidity does not affect the substantive provisions of the act; nor can their validity be questioned in these cases.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 177, 55 L. ed. 423, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 48 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Ohio River & W. R. Co. v. Dittey, 203 Fed. 537; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 53, 54, 53 L. ed. 400, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1134, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764.

Mr. Justice Pitney, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

These two cases depend upon practically identical facts, and present the same questions of law.

The Federal jurisdiction arose because of the Federal questions presented in the record, and did not depend upon diversity of citizenship; and it extends, of course, to [587] the determination of all the questions presented, irrespective of the disposition that may be made of the Federal questions. Siler v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 213 U. S. 175, 191, 53 L. ed. 753, 757, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Vreeland, 227 U. S. 59, 63, 57 L. ed. 417, 419, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192.

The right to invoke the equity jurisdiction is clear; for the act specifically makes the tax a lien upon the real estate of appellants, from the cloud of which they sought to free it by the bringing of these actions (§ 117 of act; § 5506, Gen. Code); and the bills alleged threatened irreparable injury through the enforcement of the penalties and coercive features of the act. Shelton v. Platt, 139 U. S. 591, 598, 35 L. ed. 273, 277, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764.

The following are the questions to be disposed of:

First, it is insisted by appellants that under the state Constitution, as construed by the Ohio supreme court in Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 64 N. E. 564, the legislature is without power to impose a privilege tax which is in excess of the value of the privilege; that the admitted facts show the present tax upon appellants respectively to be in excess of such value; and that therefore as to them its exaction violates the state Constitution, and amounts to confiscation, and a taking of property without due process of law.

Digitized by Google

As to the facts upon which this contention is based, the bill of complaint of the Marietta, Columbus, & Cleveland Railroad Company shows that the tax charged against it for the year 1911 amounts to $2,301.24; that the capital of the company is all, or practically all, invested in its railroad; that this investment was and is a reasonable and proper one; that due care and prudence have been used in the construction, maintenance, and operation of the property and the conduct of the business; that the greatest economy has been and is being practised in the effort to make the railroad yield a fair return upon the investment; but that, notwithstanding these efforts, it has [588] never been able to earn, and is not now able to earn from interstate or intrastate business, or both combined, after paying necessary and proper expenses, including taxes other than the excise tax, a return on the investment in its railroad, or on the value thereof, equal to the current rate of return on legitimate high-grade investments at all times readily available in the market; nor have its intrastate earnings, after deducting operating expenses properly attributable thereto, been sufficient to yield a return on that portion of its investment properly attributable to intrastate operations, equal to the current rate of return on legitimate high-grade investments; that, on the contrary, the gross earnings have not been and are not sufficient to pay actual operating expenses, and that this condition will continue to exist during the year which the excise tax is intended to cover.

The bill of complaint of the Ohio River & Western Railway Company contains similar averments, except as to its inability to pay actual operating expenses. Its tax amounts to $6,653.60.

The case referred to, Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, supra, dealt with an act of April 11, 1902, known as the Willis law. The court held it to be an excise or franchise tax, not a property tax, and therefore not subject to the express limitations imposed by the state Constitution upon taxes of the latter kind, but only to such limitations as were to be implied from certain other provisions of the Constitution, respecting which the court said (p. 594):

"The Constitution was established to 'promote our common welfare.' Preamble to the Constitution. Government is instituted for the equal protection and benefit of the people. Section 2 of the Bill of Rights. Private property shall ever be held inviolate, but subservient to the public welfare. Section 19 of the Bill of Rights. These provisions of the Constitution are implied limitations upon the power of taxation of privileges [589] and franchises, and limit such taxation to the reasonable value of the privilege or franchise conferred originally, or to its continued value from year to year. Ashley v. Ryan, 49 Ohio St. 504, 31 N. E. 721; State ex rel. Schwartz v. Ferris, 53 Ohio St. 314, 30 L.R.A. 218, 41 N. E. 579; and Hagerty v. State, 55 Ohio St. 613, 45 N. E. 1046, are examples of taxing the privilege or franchise conferred; while Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Mayer, 28 Ohio St. 521, and Adams Exp. Co. v. State, 55 Ohio St. 69, 44 N. E. 506, are examples of taxing the continued value of the existing privilege or franchise from year to year. These limitations prevent confiscation and oppression under the guise of taxation, and the power of such taxation cannot extend beyond what is for the common or public welfare, and the equal protection and benefit of the people; but the ascertaining and fixing of such values rests largely in the general assembly, but finally in the courts."

This proposition is carried into the syllabus, which, under the rules of practice of the supreme court, is to be prepared by the judge assigned to prepare the opinion, is to be confined to the points of law arising from the facts of the cause that have been determined by the court, is to be submitted to the judges concurring therein for revisal before its publication, and is to be inserted in the book of reports.

An examination of the state decisions cited in the Laylin Case, with others referred to in the opinion of the district court and in the briefs of counsel, convinces us that the district court was correct in its conclusion that the state court, in the Laylin Case, dealt with a general law and its operation on all corporations of given classes throughout the state, and not with its effect upon specific financially weak corporations; that it was not intended to hold that the courts as final arbiters might overthrow a law imposing a tax on privileges and franchises merely because in isolated cases such law might impose a hardship, but only that those excise laws whose general operation is confiscatory and oppressive are unconstitutional.

[590] Nor do we think that from the facts of the present case it is to be inferred that the franchises of plaintiffs in error are valueless merely because it appears that the present earnings of the railroads are not sufficient to pay more than can be derived from legitimate high-grade investment securities that are readily available on the market, or (in the case of one of the roads) are not even sufficient to pay operating expenses. Upon this point we are content to refer to, without repeating, the language employed by Mr. Justice Miller, speaking for this court in State R. Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 606, 23 L. ed. 663, 670.

Digitized by Google

Secondly, it is contended that the act arbitrarily discriminates against plaintiffs in error and other railroad companies in that (a), it does not include all other public utilities carrying on business within the state; those omitted, as is said, being grain elevators, stock yards, ferries, bridge companies, and innkeepers; and (b), the law does not operate uniformly among the utilities that are taxed, since, on electric light, gas, natural gas, water works, telephone, messenger or signal, union depot, heating, coaling, and water transportation companies, the tax amounts to 1.2 per cent of gross intrastate receipts, as to suburban and interurban railroads it is fixed at 1.2 per cent of gross intrastate earnings, and on express and telegraph companies, it is 2 per cent; while on railroads, including plaintiffs in error, it is 4 per cent of such earnings, and the same on pipe line companies.

Both of these contentions turn upon the familiar question of classification, concerning which so much has been written. We agree with the court below that whether the question be considered in view of the uniformity and equality provisions of the Ohio Constitution, or of the "equal protection" clause of the 14th Amendment, the result is the same; it cannot be said that the classification rests upon no reasonable and sufficient basis of distinction. State ex rel. Taylor v. Guilbert, 70 Ohio St. 253, 71 N. E. 636, 1 Ann. Cas. 25; Kentucky [591] R. Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 337, 29 L. ed. 414, 419, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 237, 33 L. ed. 892, 895, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 293, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1042, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Southwestern Oil Co. v. Texas, 217 U. S. 114, 121, et seq. 54 L. ed. 688, 692, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496.

In the third place, it is insisted that the act, as applied to railroads, is a burden upon their foreign commerce.

This contention is rested in part upon the language of §§ 83 and 88, which in terms provide for ascertaining the earnings of the railroad "from whatever source derived, for business done within this state, excluding therefrom all earnings derived wholly from interstate business or business done for the Federal government." This, it is argued, has the effect of imposing a tax with respect to the gross receipts from foreign commerce, because such commerce is not expressly excepted. Section 97, however, indicates an intent to take into consideration for the purpose of measuring the excise tax only the earnings upon intrastate business, and it seems clear enough that in the former sections the word "interstate" was used as meaning "not intrastate," rather than in its technically correct signification. Certainly, in the absence of a construction by the state court of last resort to the effect that the receipts from foreign commerce are to be included, and without any attempt on the part of the taxing authorities to include them, the Federal courts ought not to place a construction upon the act that would render it unconstitutional.

Fourthly, it is contended that the history of the legislation upon the subject shows that the act of May 31, 1911, was really contrived to impose upon the railroad companies a franchise tax proportionate to their interstate commerce, and that such is its actual as well as intended effect.

It is said that the present act is a reenactment, without material change so far as present purposes are concerned, of an act of March 10, 1910; that prior to the latter act [592] a law known as the Cole law was in force, under which each railroad was compelled to pay a tax equal to 1 per centum of its entire gross earnings, computed by multiplying the average gross earnings per mile over the entire system by the number of miles in Ohio; that this act was obnoxious to the "commerce clause" of the Federal Constitution, for the reasons that entered into the decision of this court in Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; that after the decision of this case in May, 1908, it was anticipated that the Cole law would probably be held unconstitutional (as it has since been held by an inferior state court in Ohio), and so the legislature contrived the act of March 10, 1910, for the purpose of imposing a tax upon the railroads as heavy as that imposed by the Cole law, while avoiding the form of that enactment; and that for this reason the act of March 10, 1910, increased the percentages in accordance with which the taxes were to be severally determined as follows: Railroads and pipe line companies from 1 to 4 per cent; express and telegraph companies from 1 to 2 per cent; all other utilities from 1 to 1 1-5 per cent; but that instead of taking all the gross earnings, the new percentages were to be applied only to intrastate earnings. It is contended that the increase in the percentages as to railroad and pipe line companies was due to the fact that it was conceived that about three fourths of their business was interstate, and that therefore a tax of 4 per cent on the intrastate earnings would be about equal to a tax of 1 per cent on the total: in other words, that the tax rate was increased fourfold because such utilities were engaged in interstate commerce.

Digitized by Google

The tax is, however, in substance as well as in form, an excise or privilege tax. Its reasonableness, unless some Federal right be violated, is within the discretion of the state legislature. We have seen that the classification adopted cannot be deemed illusory; that is, there is no [593] apparent violation of the equality provisions of the state Constitution or of the "equal protection" clause of the 14th Amendment, although railroad and pipe line companies are required to pay at the rate of 4 per cent of the annual intrastate earnings, while other public-service corporations pay a less percentage. It is, of course, entirely settled that a state cannot, consistently with the Federal control of interstate commerce, lay such taxes, either upon property rights or upon franchises or privileges, as in effect to burden such commerce. But the line is not always easily drawn, as recent cases sufficiently show. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 225, 229, 52 L. ed. 1031, 1036, 1038, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, 223 U. S. 335, 344, 56 L. ed. 459, 464, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Williams v. Talladega, 226 U. S. 404, 416, 57 L. ed. 275, 280, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116; Baltic Min. Co. v. Massachusetts, 231 U. S. 68, 82, ante, 127, 132, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 15.

The present act does not on its face manifest a purpose to interfere with interstate commerce, and we are unable to accept the historical facts alluded to as sufficient evidence of a sinister purpose, such as would justify this court in striking down the law. We could not do this without in effect denouncing the legislature of the state as guilty of a conscious attempt to evade the obligations of the Federal Constitution. Assuming the law was changed in 1910 because of a fear that the Cole law would be held unconstitutional, the mere fact that, while excluding interstate earnings from the multiplicand, the multiplier was increased, is not of itself deemed sufficient evidence of an unlawful effort to burden a privilege that is not a proper subject of state taxation.

Fifthly, it is contended that the act is in effect a double tax upon property, and hence lacking in the uniformity required by the state Constitution. But, as was pointed out by the district court, the exaction of 4 per cent of the gross intrastate earnings is not a property tax, but an excise tax, whose amount is fixed and measured by such earnings; and double taxation in a legal sense does not [594] exist unless the double tax is levied upon the same property within the same jurisdiction. Plaintiffs in error pay one tax with respect to property, another with respect to the privilege or occupation; hence the taxation is not double. Bradley v. Bauder, 36 Ohio St. 28, 35, 38 Am. Rep. 547; Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 596, 64 N. E. 564.

The so-called double tax is also laid hold of as a ground for the contention that there is a denial of equal protection within the meaning of the 14th Amendment. This, however, is but another form of the objection to the classification, which has already been disposed of.

Finally, it is contended that the act is unconstitutional because of the severity of the penalties imposed for withholding the tax. But these actions do not involve any present attempt to enforce the penalties; and the act contains a section (160) which in terms declares: "The sections of this act, and every part of such sections, are hereby declared to be independent sections and parts of sections, and the holding of any section or part thereof to be void or ineffective shall not affect any other section or part thereof." The penalty clauses, if themselves unconstitutional, are severable, and there is therefore no present occasion to pass upon their validity. Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53, 54, 53 L. ed. 382, 400, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1134, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 177, 55 L. ed. 389, 423, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Michigan R. Commission, 231 U. S. 457, 473, ante, 310, 319, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152.

Decrees affirmed.

Mr. Justice Day took no part in the decision of these cases.

---

[595] WILLIAM A. PAINE, Herbert I. Foster, Thomas S. Dee, and Leonard D. Draper, Copartners, Doing Business under the Name and Style of Paine, Webber, & Company, Appts.,

v.

COPPER BELLE MINING COMPANY of Arizona.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 595–597.)

Appeal — review of facts — concurrent findings below.

A concurrent finding of the two lower

NOTE.—As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

Digitized by Google

courts that certain "advances" by a stockholder in a mining corporation, under his written agreement to get the company out of bankruptcy and into the possession of its supposedly valuable properties, were made in consideration of receiving 50 per cent of the capital stock of such company, and not by way of loan, will not be disturbed by the Federal Supreme Court on appeal unless clearly wrong.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. 1, 5, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 181.]

Submitted January 21, 1914. Decided March 2, 1914.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court of Pima County, in that state, in favor of intervening minority stockholders in a suit on a note given by the corporation. Affirmed.

See same case below, 13 Ariz. 406, 114 Pac. 964.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Walter Bennett submitted the cause for appellants.

Mr. James F. Mack submitted the cause for appellees. Mr. John B. Wright was on the brief.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action brought by the appellants upon a promissory note for $265,416.72, made by the appellee. The defense is want of consideration, and depends upon the question whether certain payments made by one Moneuse were made by way of loan or for the purchase of stock; the note having been issued as for a loan to the company. The material facts are few. An earlier company, into the shoes of which the appellee has stepped, was in bankruptcy, and Moneuse, a stockholder, was suing certain others for the return to the company of a large part of the stock. On June 4, 1903, a compromise was made, reciting as one ground that the company owned mining claims which in the opinion of all the parties, were of great value, but which the company was in great danger [596] of losing unless money was raised to work them. Moneuse agreed to "provide and supply" enough money to "pay off and discharge" the company's debts, and to work the company's mines for not more than three years until they paid for working themselves. He was to get the company out of bankruptcy and into possession of its property, subject to certain mortgages. The others were to get 50 per cent of the authorized stock into the treasury, and this amount, less what already was held by Moneuse, the company was to issue and deliver to him "in consideration of the advance by [him] of the moneys which are to be paid and advanced by him, as above provided for, and without further consideration whatsoever." Moneuse also was to have control.

This agreement was carried out and the total disbursements of Moneuse were more than the amount of the note. Nine months after the compromise a stockholders' meeting authorized a transfer of the company's property to the appellee on the condition, among others, that it should "assume and discharge the indebtedness of this company to Elie J. Moneuse;" but on February 29, 1904, the characterization of the advance as a loan and the portion of the resolutions quoted were "withdrawn and rescinded" at the suggestion and with the concurrence and vote of Moneuse. Afterwards, on July 17, 1907, Moneuse being still in control of the company, the note in suit was issued. The case was tried on behalf of intervening minority stockholders without a jury. The trial court found for the defendant, and the judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory. 13 Ariz. 406, 114 Pac. 964.

It cannot be said that the finding was wrong as matter of law. It is true that the agreement speaks of the money that was to be furnished by Moneuse as an "advance" by him, but it was an advance to pay off the company's debts, not merely to change the creditor. The clause that throws the clearest light upon the meaning is the recitation [597] that the company's mining claims were of great value in the opinion of all the parties to the contract. That being so, it was natural that a stockholder who had the money should be willing to pay off certain debts (about $45,000) as a consideration for getting the greater part of the stock, and should be willing to work the mines for a time if he had the company and the duration of the experiment under his control. It would seem to have been less natural for the other stockholders to part with the larger share in the rights they deemed so valuable simply as a bonus to induce Moneuse to take the former creditors' place and try his hand at the work. There are set forth in the statement some facts that we have not reproduced, because we think it unnecessary, in view of the present position of the case. It is enough to say that, in our opinion, the appellants would not profit by a fuller consideration. The meaning of the arrangement, to which neither company was a party, seems to have been matter for a finding. Rankin v. Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. 189 U. S. 242, 252, 253, 47 L. ed. 792, 796, 797, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553. Macdonald v. Morrill, 154 Mass. 270, 272, 28 N. E. 259. The evidence is not reported, and the finding has the sanction of two courts. There is not enough before us to enable us to say that it was wrong.

Digitized by Google

Judgment affirmed.

---

[598] UNITED STATES OF AMERICA EX REL. ALPHEUS H. BROWN
v.
FRANKLIN K. LANE, Secretary of the Interior.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 598–602.)

Error to District of Columbia court of appeals — frivolousness of Federal question.

The contentions that the exercise by the Secretary of the Interior of his power under the act of June 28, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 545, chap. 3572), § 9, to remove any member of the Osage Indian tribal council created by that section "for good cause, to be by him determined," is conditioned upon the giving of notice or the affording of an opportunity to be heard and defend, and that if the statute does not require such notice or hearing, it conflicts with the due process of law clause of the 5th Amendment of the Federal Constitution, are so frivolous and wanting in merit as to afford no ground for the exercise by the Federal Supreme Court of its jurisdiction under the Judicial Code, § 250, to review decisions of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1057–1074; Constitutional Law; 764–773, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. —.]

Submitted February 24, 1914. Decided March 9, 1914.

APPLICATION for the allowance of a writ of error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, dismissing a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the Secretary of the Interior to revoke an order removing a member of the Osage Indian tribal council. Denied.

See same case below, 40 App. D. C. 533.

Mr. Andrew Wilson submitted the cause for petitioner. Messrs. Albert L. Wilson and James P. Schick were on the brief:

The Indians are entitled to have notice and be heard in their defense as well as other residents or citizens of the United States.

Choate v. Trapp, 224 U. S. 677, 56 L. ed. 946, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

In the government's dealings with the Indians, statutes should be liberally construed.

Choate v. Trapp, 224 U. S. 675, 56 L. ed. 945, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Kansas Indians (Blue Jacket v. Johnson County) 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. ed. 667; Case of Miamis (Wanzop-e-ah v. Miami County) 5 Wall. 760, 18 L. ed. 674; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

The members of the Osage Council and other officers referred to in the petition were elected by the Osage Indians for a definite term and were not appointed by the Secretary of the Interior. The right to the offices became vested and therefore valuable. It could not be devested except by due process of law.

United States ex rel. Turner v. Fisher, 222 U. S. 204–208, 56 L. ed. 165–168, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37; Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

In a case of this kind power of removal can only be exercised when charges are made against the accused, after notice, with a reasonable opportunity to be heard by the officer or body having power to remove.

Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 399, 409, 44 L. ed. 520, 524, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. 111 U. S. 701, 708, 28 L. ed. 569, 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 393, 40 L. ed. 467, 469, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409, 414, 42 L. ed. 215, 220, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; Shurtleff v. United States, 189 U. S. 311, 314, 47 L. ed. 828, 831, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535; Mechem, Pub. Off. § 454; State ex rel. Hitchcock v. Hewitt, 3 S. D. 187, 16 L.R.A. 417, 52 N. W. 875; State ex rel. Denison v. St. Louis, 90 Mo. 19, 1 S. W. 757; Hallgren v. Campbell, 82 Mich. 255, 9 L.R.A. 410, 21 Am. St. Rep. 557, 46 N. W. 381; Field v. Com. 32 Pa. 478; Ham v. Boston Bd. of Police, 142 Mass. 90, 7 N. E. 540; Denver v. Darrow, 13 Colo. 460, 16 Am. St. Rep. 215, 22 Pac. 784; Dullam v. Willson, 53 Mich. 393, 51 Am. Rep. 128, 19 N. W. 112; Biggs v. McBride, 17 Or. 640, 5 L.R.A. 117, 21 Pac. 878; Jacques v. Little, 51 Kan. 300, 20 L.R.A. 304, 33 Pac. 106; 2 Kent, Com. p. 298; State ex rel. Hamilton v. Grant, 14 Wyo. 41, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 589, 116 Am. St. Rep. 982, 81 Pac. 795, 82 Pac. 2; Williams v. Bagot, 3 Barn. & C. 785, 4 Dowl. & R. 315, 27 Revised Rep. 482; Capel

---

Note.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the District of Columbia courts—see note to United States ex rel. Taylor v. Taft, 51 L. ed. U. S. 269.

Digitized by Google

v. Child, 2 Cromp & J. 558, 2 Tyrw. 689, 1 L. J. Exch. N. S. 205; Ex parte Ramshay, 18 Q. B. 173, 21 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 238, 16 Jur. 684; Page v. Hardin, 8 B. Mon. 648; Com. ex rel. Bowman v. Slifer, 25 Pa. 23, 64 Am. Dec. 680.

Where the statute prescribes no preliminary proceedings, but authorizes a removal "for cause," there must be a notice and hearing, and in such cases the proceeding is judicial.

State v. Donovan, 89 Me. 451, 36 Atl. 982; Andrews v. Biddeford Police Board, 94 Me. 76, 46 Atl. 801; State ex rel. Reid v. Walbridge, 119 Mo. 383, 41 Am. St. Rep. 663, 24 S. W. 457; McGregor v. Gladwin County, 37 Mich. 389; Merrick v. Arbela Twp. 41 Mich. 630, 2 N. W. 922; Hayden v. Memphis, 100 Tenn. 582, 47 S. W. 182; State ex rel. Hart v. Duluth, 53 Minn. 242, 39 Am. St. Rep. 595, 55 N. W. 118; State, Markley, Prosecutor, v. Cape May Point, 55 N. J. L. 105, 25 Atl. 259; Bagg's Case, 11 Coke, 93b; Rex v. Richardson, 1 Burr. 540, 2 Ld. Kenyon, 85; State ex rel. Haight v. Love, 39 N. J. L. 14; State ex rel. Kennedy v. McGarry, 21 Wis. 496; State ex rel. Gill v. Watertown, 9 Wis. 254; People ex rel. Keech v. Thompson, 94 N. Y. 451; Dill. Mun. Corp. p. 255; Andrews v. King, 77 Me. 224.

No appearance for Franklin K. Lane.

[599] Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Chief Justice White:

The act of June 28, 1906, entitled, An Act for "the Division of the Lands and Funds of the Osage Indians in Oklahoma Territory, and for Other Purposes," in its 9th section provided, among other things, for a tribal council composed of eight persons. The members of this council were to be chosen at an election whose date was fixed, and which was to be conducted in the manner directed by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, provision being made for the biennial recurrence of such election, and consequently for a two years' term for the members of the council. The provision, however, creating the council, contained this express qualification: "And the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to remove from the council any member or members thereof for good cause, to be by him determined." 34 Stat. at L. 545, chap. 3572. On January 2d, 1913, the Secretary of the Interior, in the exertion of the power thus conferred, by a formal order removed "each and every member of the council." It was declared in the order that the power exercised was exerted for good cause, and this statement was followed by a specification of various acts of misfeasance or nonfeasance, which it was deemed rendered the removal necessary. Among those who were thus removed was A. H. Brown, the relator, who, shortly after the action of the Secretary that is, in February, 1913, commenced proceedings by mandamus to vacate the order on the ground that it had been made without previous notice, and without affording an opportunity to be heard and to defend and therefore was not authorized by the statute, and, if it was authorized, was void because repugnant to the due process clause of the 5th Amendment.

The trial court denied the relief, and the court of [600] appeals of the district, in affirming such action, held that the statute conferred upon the Secretary power to remove without necessity of notice or hearing; and moreover, that as so construed the statute was not in conflict with the Constitution (40 App. D. C. 533). This application for the allowance of a writ of error is before us because of the reference of the same to the court by the chief justice, to whom it was primarily presented.

The asserted right to the writ is based upon the third, fifth, and sixth paragraphs of § 250 of the Judicial Code: the third conferring the right to review "in cases involving the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States, or the constitutionality of any law of the United States;" the fifth giving such right "in cases in which the validity of any authority exercised under the United States, or the existence or scope of any power or duty of an officer of the United States, is drawn in question;" and the sixth also giving the right to review in cases "in which the construction of any law of the United States is drawn in question by the defendant." [36 Stat. at L. 1159, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 231.] On the face of the record from a merely formal point of view it is apparent that the case as presented is embraced within both the third and fifth paragraphs. But it is elementary that where the jurisdiction depends upon the presence of controversies of a particular character, or the existence of prescribed questions or conditions, that substance, and not mere form, is the test of power, and therefore even in a case where the requisite for jurisdiction formally exists, the right to review does not obtain where it is evident that the formal questions, as presented by the record, are so wanting in substance as to cause them to be frivolous and devoid of all merit. Consolidated Turnp. Co. v. Norfolk & O. V. R. Co. 228 U. S. 596, 600, 57 L. ed. 982, 983, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609, and cases cited. It is true that the doctrine has generally found expression in considering the right to review cases coming from state courts, but the principle is here directly and necessarily applicable [601] in consequence of the nature and character of the limitations imposed by the statute upon the right to review cases decided by the court of appeals of the District of Columbia. Coming to test the existence of jurisdiction to review the controversy, and consequently to determine whether the writ prayed for should be allowed, we are clear that the propositions upon which it is asserted jurisdiction to review exists are so wholly unsubstantial and frivolous and devoid of all merit as to afford no ground whatever for the exercise of jurisdiction and the consequent allowance of the writ.

Digitized by Google

This conclusion is reached because we are of the opinion that, on the face of the statute, it plainly vested the Secretary of the Interior with the power and discretion to remove without the necessity of giving notice or affording a hearing, and because we are unable to perceive any basis whatever for the contention that if the statute gives such power, it conflicts with the 5th Amendment. The right to membership in the council which the statute created, and the power to remove at discretion which it conferred on the Secretary of the Interior, were indissolubly united, and it is impossible to admit the existence of the one without recognizing the other, and therefore to adopt the premise upon which the proposition must rest would be but to destroy the right to continue in office which the proposition is urged to maintain, since the office may not be treated as existing free from the safeguards concerning the discharge of its duties which the statute provides. The argument is not strengthened by confounding the asserted right of the relator to continue to be a member of the tribal council, with rights of property assumed to exist in favor of the members of the tribe, and upon the resulting confusion to urge that the assumed rights of property will be taken without due process if the authority of the Secretary to remove a member of the tribal council without notice and hearing be upheld. On the contrary, if the [602] possession of the asserted property rights be assumed, it must follow that the power to remove, given by the statute, must be sustained. Considering the context of the act, the limitation which it imposes upon the members of the tribe and the tribe itself to contract, and the large administrative supervision over such subjects which the statute confers upon the Secretary, it is not disputable that the right to remove for "good cause to be by him determined" which the statute gives to the Secretary is but an appropriate means provided for the accomplishment of the duties cast upon him with reference to the subject-matters stated. Under these circumstances the proposition could not be maintained without holding that although the duty existed to protect by appropriate legislation the tribe and its members, such legislation, if enacted, would be repugnant to the Constitution.

Writ denied.

MARTHA S. YOUNG, Administratrix of the Estate of Peter B. Young, Deceased, Plff. in Err.,

v.

CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY OF NEW JERSEY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 602-604.)

Trial by jury — infringement of right — directing judgment non obstante veredicto.

A Federal circuit court of appeals denies the right of trial by jury guaranteed by the Federal Constitution where, upon reversing a judgment of the district court, entered on a general verdict in favor of plaintiff, because of the opinion that the evidence did not justify the submission of the case to the jury, it directs, in accordance with the state practice, that judgment be entered for defendant.

[For other cases, see Jury, I. d, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 389.]

Argued February 26, 1914. Decided March 9, 1914.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a judgment which, reversing a judgment of the District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania in favor of plaintiff in a negligence action, directed that judgment be entered in favor of defendant notwithstanding the verdict. Modified by eliminating the direction for the

---

NOTE.—On the right to judgment non obstante veredicto because of the failure of proof—see note to Kirk v. Salt Lake City, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1021.

As to the constitutional power of an appellate court, upon reversing a judgment for plaintiff, entered upon the verdict of a jury, to direct judgment for defendant without remanding case for new trial—see note to Gunn v. Union R. Co. 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 362.

Generally, on the right to jury trial—see notes to Justices of Supreme Ct. v. United States, 19 L. ed. U. S. 658; Eilenbecker v. District Ct. 33 L. ed. U. S. 801; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Shane, 39 L. ed. U. S. 727; and Perego v. Dodge, 41 L. ed. U. S. 113.

Digitized by Google

entry of judgment for defendant, and by substituting a direction for a new trial.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 118 C. C. A. 465, 200 Fed. 359.

Mr. Ulysses S. Koons argued the cause, and, with Mr. Vedantus B. Edwards, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Arthur G. Dickson argued the cause, and, with Mr. Arthur W. Rinke, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Chief Justice White:

As administratrix of the estate of her deceased husband, the plaintiff in error sued to recover for the loss occasioned by his death, alleged to have resulted from the negligence of the defendant railroad company. Over the objection of the defendant the case was submitted by the trial court to the jury, and from the judgment entered on the verdict rendered against the railroad company, error was by the company prosecuted from the circuit court of appeals. On the hearing that court, concluding that the evidence did not justify the submission of the case to the jury, reversed the judgment, and in passing upon a motion made by the railroad company in the trial court, pursuant to the Pennsylvania practice for judgment in its favor non obstante veredicto, it was held that the motion was well taken, and the case was remanded to the trial court, not for a new trial, but with directions to enter a judgment for the defendant. — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 118 C. C. A. 465, 200 Fed. 359. As the case as made by the pleadings depended not merely upon diverse citizenship, but was expressly based on the employers' liability act, error was prosecuted from this court.

We shall not undertake to analyze the evidence, or review the grounds which led the court below to conclude that error was committed in submitting the case to the jury, because we think it is adequate to say that after a careful examination of the record we see no reason for holding that the court below erred in so deciding. As regards, however, the ruling on the motion for judgment [604] non obstante veredicto, it is apparent, in view of the recent decision in Slocum v. New York L. Ins. Co. 228 U. S. 364, 57 L. ed. 879, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523, that error was committed. It follows that our duty is to affirm and modify; that is, to affirm the judgment of reversal, and to modify by reversing so much of the action of the court below as directed the entry of judgment in favor of the defendant. Conformably to this conclusion it is ordered that the judgment of reversal be, and the same is hereby, affirmed, and that the direction for entry of judgment in favor of defendant be reversed, and the case is remanded to the trial court, with directions to set aside its judgment and grant a new trial.

Affirmed and modified.

GEORGE E. PRIEST, Melvin W. Quick, and Charles M. Benjamin, Appts.,

v.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE TOWN OF LAS VEGAS, in the County of San Miguel, New Mexico.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 604–618.)

Appeal — from territorial supreme court — following decision below — impleading and suing unknown claimants.

1. The Federal Supreme Court will accept the ruling of the supreme court of the territory of New Mexico that the town of Las Vegas, to which the Las Vegas land grant was confirmed by the act of Congress of June 21, 1860 (12 Stat. at L. 71, chap. 167), was not properly impleaded nor properly served under the designation "unknown claimants of interests in the premises adverse to the plaintiff" in a subsequent suit to quiet title to land within the boundaries of the grant, brought under a New Mexico statute now appearing as N. M. Comp. Laws 1897, §§ 4010, 4011, which, although authorizing unknown claimants to be so designated, provides for making parties defendant "by their names, as near as the same can be ascertained," those who claim an interest adverse to plaintiff.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1; Courts, VII. d; Parties, II. a, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — conclusiveness — jurisdiction — collateral attack.

2. A decree in favor of plaintiff in a suit to quiet title to land within the boundaries of the Las Vegas land grant may be collaterally attacked because the town of Las Vegas was not made a party, unless embraced in the designation "unknown claimants of interests in the premises adverse to the plaintiff."

[For other cases, see Judgment, III. 1, 3, c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—As to review by United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

On conclusiveness of judgments generally —see notes to Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572; Bollong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank 3 L.R.A. 142; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 577; Morrill v. Morrill, 11 L.R.A. 155; Shores v. Hooper, 11 L.R.A. 308; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson Steel Street R. Co. v. Wharton, 38 L. ed. U. S. 429; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

Digitized by Google

Trial — issues — impleading and suing unknown claimants.

3. The question of the right to implead and serve the town of Las Vegas under the designation "unknown claimants" in a suit to quiet title to land within the boundaries of the Las Vegas land grant was not withdrawn from the consideration of the court in an action in mandamus to compel the town trustees to execute a conveyance to the successful plaintiff in the earlier suit by the averment in the answer that neither at the time of the confirmation of the grant, nor at any time subsequent thereto, did the town have a representative upon whom legal process could be served.

[For other cases, see Trial, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — conclusiveness — parties.

4. The town of Las Vegas, to which the Las Vegas land grant was confirmed by the act of Congress of June 21, 1860, was not bound by the decree in a suit against some of the inhabitants of the town to quiet title to lands within the boundaries of that grant.

[For other cases, see Judgment, III. k, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 218.]

Submitted January 28, 1914. Decided March 9, 1914.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of San Miguel County, in that territory, dismissing the petition in an action for mandamus to compel the trustees of the town of Las Vegas to execute a conveyance of land within the boundaries of the Las Vegas land grant. Affirmed.

See same case below, 16 N. M. 692, 120 Pac. 894.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John D. W. Veeder submitted the cause for appellants:

This, being a proceeding by mandamus to have the title decreed to appellants authenticated by a deed of conveyance, is obviously a collateral proceeding akin to enforcing satisfaction of a judgment, and appellees are therefore concluded by the decree.

Van Fleet, Collateral Attack, § 3; Rock Island County v. United States, 4 Wall. 435, 444, 18 L. ed. 419, 422; Davenport v. Lord, 9 Wall. 409, 19 L. ed. 704; Washington County v. Durant (Washington County v. United States) 9 Wall. 415, 417, 19 L. ed. 732, 733; Franklin County v. German Sav. Bank, 142 U. S. 93, 98–101, 35 L. ed. 948, 950, 951, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147.

And where, as here, the judgment quieting title discloses the fact that the matter of jurisdiction of the parties has been considered and determined by the court, such determination is as conclusive upon the parties in a collateral proceeding as any adjudication of the court can be.

Freeman, Judgm. 3d ed. § 130; 23 Cyc. 1084; Foster v. Givens, 14 C. C. A. 625, 31 U. S. App. 626, 67 Fed. 690; Scudder v. Cox, 35 Tex. Civ. App. 416, 80 S. W. 872; Brawley v. Ranney, 67 Mo. 280; Reedy v. Camfield, 159 Ill. 254, 42 N. E. 833; Cincinnati, S. & C. R. Co. v. Belle Centre, 48 Ohio St. 273, 27 N. E. 464; Winemiller v. Laughlin, 51 Ohio St. 421, 38 N. E. 111; McCauley v. Fulton, 44 Cal. 355; Bickerdike v. Allen, 157 Ill. 95, 29 L.R.A. 782, 41 N. E. 740; Re Harper, 133 Fed. 970.

The question of the jurisdiction of the defendants through service by publication, having been adjudicated in the decree of 1894, was likewise conclusive upon the court, and not subject to attack in this collateral proceeding, whether as matter of fact it was in issue or not.

Thompson v. Thompson, 226 U. S. 552, 57 L. ed. 347, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129.

The inhabitants of the town of Las Vegas and appellees are privies in estate, and are bound by the decree quieting title.

1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 189, 523, 536; Bigelow, Estoppel, pp. 88, 95.

Originally it was necessary to make the beneficiaries parties to all proceedings affecting their interest, and this rule still prevails where there is any doubt of the power of the trustees to represent the beneficiary and bind him both in what is done for him and what is done against him. The beneficiaries are the persons materially interested and can best represent their interest. Therefore, they ought to be parties in all cases unless there is a trustee fully empowered to represent them, when the court, in its discretion, may proceed without them.

Freeman, Judgm. §§ 162, 167, 173; Iowa County v. Mineral Point R. Co. 24 Wis. 126; Shaw v. Norfolk County R. Co. 5 Gray, 170; Willink v. Morris Canal & Bkg. Co. 4 N. J. Eq. 397; Van Vechten v. Terry, 2 Johns. Ch. 197; Vetterlein v. Barnes, 124 U. S. 169, 31 L. ed. 400, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Kerrison v. Stewart, 93 U. S. 155, 23 L. ed. 843.

It follows, we think, from the relation which the trustee sustains to the beneficiary, that of a mere representative of him, that the nonappointment of the trustee cannot operate to suspend either the institution or prosecution of legal proceedings against the trust estate, or to discharge either the trust estate or the beneficiaries from the effect of the judgment rendered, when the latter have been made parties and served with legal process.

Digitized by Google

Messrs. Charles A. Spiess and S. B. Davis, Jr., submitted the cause for appellee:

There is no proper statement of facts by the court below, and therefore nothing for review in this case.

Gray v. Howe, 108 U. S. 12, 27 L. ed. 634, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Bonnifield v. Price, 154 U. S. 672, 26 L. ed. 1022, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1194; Marshall v. Burtis, 172 U. S. 630, 43 L. ed. 579, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; Cohn v. Daley, 174 U. S. 539, 43 L. ed. 1077, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Armijo v. Armijo, 181 U. S. 561, 45 L. ed. 1002, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707.

The town of Las Vegas was not made a party to the suit of 1894 by designating as defendants the unknown claimants of interests adverse to the complainants.

Rodriguez v. La Cueva Ranch Co. 17 N. M. 246, 134 Pac. 228.

In the absence of manifest error this court will follow the decision of the territorial court.

Albright v. Sandoval, 216 U. S. 331, 54 L. ed. 502, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Santa Fé County v. New Mexico, 215 U. S. 296, 54 L. ed. 202, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Lewis v. Herrera, 208 U. S. 309, 52 L. ed. 506, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; Crary v. Dye, 208 U. S. 515, 52 L. ed. 595, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360; English v. Arizona, 214 U. S. 359, 53 L. ed. 1030, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658.

Artificial designations of defendants may be used only in case of necessity, and persons whose names are in fact known, or could with reasonable diligence be ascertained, may not be included among "unknown claimants."

Title & Document Restoration Co. v. Kerrigan, 150 Cal. 289, 8 L.R.A.(N.S.) 682, 119 Am. St. Rep. 199, 88 Pac. 356; American Land Co. v. Zeiss, 219 U. S. 47, 55 L. ed. 82, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Ware v. Easton, 46 Minn. 180, 48 N. W. 775; Gilbreath v. Teufel, 15 N. D. 152, 107 N. W. 49; Floto v. Floto, 213 Ill. 438, 72 N. E. 1092; Bear Lake County v. Budge, 9 Idaho, 703, 108 Am. St. Rep. 179, 75 Pac. 614; Hill v. Henry, 66 N. J. Eq. 150, 57 Atl. 554; Hancock v. First Nat. Bank, 93 N. Y. 82; Bardwell v. Collins (Bardwell v. Anderson) 44 Minn. 97, 9 L.R.A. 152, 20 Am. St. Rep. 547, 46 N. W. 315; Sheperd v. Ware, 46 Minn. 174, 24 Am. St. Rep. 212, 48 N. W. 773; Eayrs v. Nason, 54 Neb. 143, 74 N. W. 408; German Nat. Bank v. Kautter, 55 Neb. 103, 75 N. W. 566; Walter A. Wood Harvester Co. v. Dobry, 58 Neb. 590, 81 N. W. 611; Topliff v. Richardson, 76 Neb. 114, 107 N. W. 114; Bunker v. Taylor, 13 S. D. 433, 83 N. W. 555; Oziah v. Howard, 149 Iowa, 199, 128 N. W. 364.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action for mandamus brought by appellants in the district court of the county of San Miguel, then in the territory of New Mexico, against appellees as trustees of the town of Las Vegas, to require them to execute a deed or deeds to the property described in the petition. The appellees filed an answer to the petition and also a counterclaim. Those papers set out the history of the Las Vegas grant, preceding and subsequent to its confirmation by the act of Congress hereinafter referred to and the final patent to the town. Motions to strike them out were overruled, and demurrers to them were also overruled. An answer having been filed to the counterclaim by appellants, portions of which were struck out by the court [606] on motion of appellees, after hearing judgment was rendered dismissing the petition. The judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory.

The petition alleges appellants to be the owners in fee simple and holders of a perfect title to the land described therein, and that it lies within the boundaries of "the Las Vegas grant." That they acquired the title thereto between the 4th of October, 1888, and the 1st of July, 1894, by purchase from the then owners and occupants of the several portions comprising the tract, and obtained deeds of conveyance therefor, and afterwards instituted proceedings in the district court of San Miguel county against certain named persons "and all of the unknown claimants of interests in the lands and premises" adverse to appellants, to quiet their title to the lands, and that on September 15, 1894, a decree was duly entered in the cause confirming and establishing in them an estate in fee simple, absolute, against any and all and every adverse claim of all persons whomsoever, and quieting and setting at rest the title to the land against appellees. A copy of the decree is attached to the petition.

The petition also alleges that the Las Vegas grant was confirmed by act of Congress on June 21, 1860 [12 Stat. at L. 71, chap. 167], to the town of Las Vegas, and became thereby segregated from the public domain and the property of the grantee and its privies.

That Jefferson Reynolds, Eugenio Romero, Charles Ilfeld, Elisha V. Long, Isidor V. Gallegos, Felix Esquibel, and F. H. Pierce are the trustees of the town, duly appointed by the district court of San Miguel county under and by virtue of an act of the legislative assembly of the territory of New Mexico, entitled, "An Act to Provide for the Management of the Las Vegas Grant, and for Other Purposes," approved March 12, 1903, and that it was made the duty of the board of trustees to make, execute, and deliver deeds of conveyance to all persons who held a [607] title to any lands of the grant, which became or was perfect or entitled them to the possession thereof at the time of the acquisition of New Mexico, under the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, or at any time subsequent thereto.

Digitized by Google

That appellants made application to the board of trustees to execute and deliver a deed to them of the tract of land described, the title to which had become perfected by the decree hereinbefore specified, but the board declined to recognize the title of appellants and to issue the deed of conveyance asked for.

Mandamus, directed to the board, was prayed.

The ground of appellants' petition, therefore, is that they possess a perfect title established by the suit and decree referred to which entitled them to a deed from the trustees under the act of the legislative assembly of March 12, 1903. Laws of New Mexico, 1903, p. 72. That act becomes a factor for consideration. By it the district court of San Miguel county is vested with jurisdiction to manage, control, and administer the land grant. In the exercise of such jurisdiction power is conferred to appoint a board of trustees from among the residents upon the grant. Provision is made for their organization, and the court is empowered to exercise the same control over their acts as courts of equity exercise over receivers. And it is provided that "this act shall not interfere with or prejudice any vested rights in and to any of the lands embraced within the bounds of said Las Vegas grant, or preclude a judicial examination or adjustment thereof, and it is hereby made the duty of said board of trustees to make, execute, and deliver deeds of conveyance to any and all persons who hold a title to any such lands, which became or was perfect or entitled them to the possession thereof at the time of the acquisition of New Mexico, under the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo [9 Stat. at L. 922], or at any other time subsequent thereto."

By § 9 the board has power, under the direction of the [608] court, to lease, sell, or mortgage any part or parts of the grants, the proceeds to be used "for such purpose as said board and court may deem to be for the best interests of the community for the benefit of which such grant was made."

It will be seen, therefore, that the statute makes it the duty of the trustees, it may be under the direction of the court, to execute and deliver deeds of conveyance to anyone having the kind of title described; that is, which had become or was perfect, or entitled such person to land which he claimed at the time of the acquisition of New Mexico, under the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, or at any other time subsequent thereto. Appellants rely upon such title, as we have seen, as established by the suit to quiet title and the decree rendered therein. A consideration of this suit and decree, therefore, becomes necessary.

The suit was brought in the district court of San Miguel county, territory of New Mexico, by appellants against certain named defendants and "all unknown claimants of interests in the premises and lands" which were described. The complaint alleged that appellants were owners in fee simple and the occupants and possessors of the land, that it lay within the exterior boundaries of a grant of land made by the Mexican government to certain named parties in the year 1835 "for the use and benefit of the inhabitants and settlers of the town of Las Vegas;" that the grant was known in the archives of the surveyor general of New Mexico as private land claim number 20, and, as such, on June 21, 1860, duly confirmed by act of Congress of the United States to the town of Las Vegas, and thereby became segregated from the public domain. That the land described in the complaint as belonging to appellants was taken possession of by them and their grantors under and by virtue of the terms and provisions of the said Las Vegas grant, and the laws of the territory of New Mexico applicable thereto, more than [609] ten years prior to the commencement of the suit, and that they and their grantors from whom they claim title and from whom they have deeds of conveyance have been in the actual, exclusive, open, and uninterrupted adverse possession under claim of title, and have therefore a good and indefeasible title in fee simple to the land, and are entitled to occupy and hold possession thereof.

It was alleged that certain persons, naming them, made some claim adverse to the complainants in the suit (appellants here), but what the nature and extent of their claim was complainants were unable to state. And it was alleged that there were certain unknown successors of the Fairview Town Company who made some claim of interest in and title to the land, but the nature and extent of the claim were unknown.

Then the following was alleged: "That your orators are credibly informed and believe that certain unknown persons designated in this bill as 'unknown claimants of interests in the premises adverse to your orators' also make some claim of interest and title in and to the said tract of land adverse to the estate of your orators, but what the nature and extent of the said claim of said unknown persons in and to said tract of land is, is likewise to your orators unknown."

Digitized by Google

It was finally alleged that all of the claims and pretenses of the defendants in the suit, known and unknown, adverse to the estate of complainants, were of no avail against their title, and constituted a cloud upon it. It was prayed that the title of complainants be established against all of the defendants, and that it be forever quieted and set at rest, and process was prayed.

An affidavit for publication of process was filed in which it was recited, among other things, "that the place of residence is unknown and the whereabouts cannot be discovered of any and all of the defendants designated as unknown claimants of interest in the premises and lands [610] described in the bill of complaint, who claim adversely to the complainants, George E. Priest, Melvin W. Quick, and Charles M. Benjamin."

Publication was made. There was no appearance on the part of any of the defendants, and the bill of complaint was ordered to be taken as confessed; and it was decreed that all of the defendants were brought before the court by proper process, and that the court had jurisdiction of them, whether known or unknown, and jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the suit; that the land lay within the exterior boundaries of the Las Vegas grant, as described, was confirmed by Congress as alleged, and that in consequence of the grant and confirmation the land was segregated from the public domain and became and was the private property of the grantees and their privies. That the complainants in the suit and their grantors from whom they claimed and from whom they had deeds of conveyance were in the adverse possession of the land as alleged, and that as a consequence thereof complainants were entitled to the relief for which they prayed. And it was decreed that the right, title, and interest of complainants was an estate in fee simple absolute, and that the same be established in them, and that the defendants be barred and estopped from having or claiming or asserting any right, title, or interest whatsoever adverse to the complainants or any of them, and that their title to the land, and each and every part thereof, be forever quieted and set at rest.

It will be observed that the title set up by appellants in the suit to quiet title, and sustained by the decree, depended upon adverse possession,—in other words, upon the statute of limitations; and the trial court in the case at bar considered that aspect of the case and decree only, and found that the statute did not begin to run until after the passage of the act of 1903 and the appointment of the board of trustees; and that possession of appellants [611] and their predecessors in title for a period of ten years prior to the act and the appointment of the trustees could not ripen any title against appellees.

The court, therefore, adjudged that the decree in favor of appellants of September 15, 1894, quieting title in them, was not binding upon appellees, and the petition herein was dismissed.

The supreme court, however, considered this position untenable, saying that if "the court had jurisdiction, as against defendants, to render the decree of 1894, all the findings upon which that decree proceeds are likewise conclusive against it, and it avails nothing to inquire, as did the trial court, into whether such findings were as a matter of fact properly made." And the court said: "The whole question, therefore, is whether the proceedings of 1894 bind the present defendants," the board of trustees of the town of Las Vegas.

The court answered the question in the negative, basing the answer on the provisions of the laws of the territory. Sections 4010 and 4011 of the Compiled Laws of 1897 of the territory, the court said, provide for an action to quiet title to real property, and permit the complainant to make parties, "by their names as near as can be ascertained," those who claim an interest adverse to him, the unknown heirs of any deceased person who made claim in his lifetime, "and all unknown persons who may claim any interest or title adverse to plaintiff, . . . unknown heirs by the style of unknown heirs of such deceased person, and said unknown persons who may claim any interest or title adverse to plaintiff by the name and style of unknown claimants of interests in the premises adverse to the plaintiff, and the service of process on, and notice of said suit against, defendants, shall be made in the same manner as now provided by law in other civil [612] suits." Service by publication, the court said, is provided by § 2964, and may be ordered upon a sworn pleading or affidavit "showing that the defendant, or any one or more of them in said cause, resides or has gone out of the territory, has concealed himself within it, has avoided service of process on him, or is in any other manner so situated that process cannot be served upon him or them, or that his or their names, or place of residence, is unknown, or that his or their whereabouts cannot be discovered." [16 N. M. 695, 696, 120 Pac. 894.]

Digitized by Google

The provisions of these sections, appellants contended, were pursued by them in their suit to quiet title, and, after citing them, as we have said, and the allegations of the bill of complaint therein, the court considered the effect of the decree therein upon the board of trustees of the town of Las Vegas, appellees herein, and said: "The board was not eo nomine a party, nor indeed was it in existence in 1894. Any effect of the decree upon it must therefore result from its holding under some party to the cause. That it is not holding under any of the individuals named is conceded. That it is not affected by the futile provisions of the decree quieting title against 'any person whatsoever' is evident. The only remaining alternative is that it is bound because of the fact that 'all the unknown claimants of interests in the premises adverse to complainants' [are named in the complaint] were cited in the publication, and were decreed against in the court's disposition of the case, and that this was a binding adjudication against the defendant under § 4011, Comp. Laws above quoted. But in 1894, were the owners of the Las Vegas grant, whom defendant now represents, unknown owners? The complainants certainly knew the exact status of the matter, for their complaint, as we have seen, in terms alleged that the premises were a part of the Las Vegas grant 'on June 21, 1860, duly confirmed by act of Congress of the United States to the town of Las Vegas.'

[613] "The complainants thus knew that the town of Las Vegas was the confirmee of the grant, and that if complainants' title had, by adverse possession, been wrested from anyone, it was from such confirmee. Knowing this, we are of opinion that it was their duty to have made the town of Las Vegas a party, and that the term 'unknown owners' could not be utilized to devest title from what the act of Congress, no less than plaintiffs' conceded knowledge, told them was the true ownership of the property." The court commented upon the abuse which may be made of statutes providing for constructive service, and the necessity to so construe them as "to hold that where the real owner may be brought into court by name, his property may not be taken by an advertisement against unknown owners," and that where, "as in this case, the locus of the title is definitely declared of record, and such is confessedly known to the complainant, it is but an exaction of good faith that the holder of such title should be summoned by name in order that he may appear and defend. To exact less is to open the doors wide to insidious attacks upon property rights, and, indeed, to ignore the statute which in terms provides (Comp. Laws, § 4011) that persons claiming interests 'may be made parties defendant by their names, as near as the same can be ascertained.'"

To the contention that the designation of ownership of the Las Vegas grant as "unknown claimants" was justified because the town of Las Vegas, as used in the act of confirmation, was a mere aggregation of people without corporate organization, and that the suit became one practically against the individuals residing on the grant, and that as to these the designation of unknown owners was necessary and proper, the court said it was not impressed, nor by the other contention that there was no officer upon whom process could have been served, and replied to the first contention, as it said it was replied in [614] Maese v. Herman, 183 U. S. 572, 46 L. ed. 335, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91, that "the town and its inhabitants were certainly substantial entities in fact, and were recognized by Congress as having rights, and directed such rights to be authenticated by a patent of the United States." To the second contention the obvious answer was that under § 2964, supra, then in force, service by publication could have been made, "since in that event the defendant 'was so situated that process could not otherwise be served upon it.'"

We have quoted thus at length from the opinion of the supreme court because necessarily the contention of appellants that the town was properly impleaded and properly served under the designation of "unknown claimants of interests" depends upon the local statutes, to the construction of which by the supreme court we have repeatedly decided we refer. In this case the deference is the more justified, if indeed it is not compelled, by the subsequent construction of the statutes in the same way by the supreme court of the state in Rodriguez v. La Cueva Ranch Co. 17 N. M. 246, 134 Pac. 228, in which case § 3181 of the Compiled Laws of New Mexico was considered. By that section it is provided that in suits for partition all persons interested in the premises "whose names are unknown may be made parties to such partition by the name and description of unknown owners or proprietors of the premises, or as unknown heirs of any person who may have been interested in the same." Persons who were in actual possession had not been made parties by name, and the question was whether they were made parties under the designation of "unknown owners." The question was determined in the negative, the court holding "that it was not the intention of the legislature to provide for the making of parties by the name of unknown owners, and for the service of process upon them by publication, when they in fact were in the open and notorious adverse possession of a part of the [615] premises." The court further said that the complainants in the suit had the means and it was their duty to ascertain the names of all persons actually holding adverse possession, and that it was not the intention of the legislature to allow the rights of claimants to land in such circumstances "to be foreclosed of their rights by a proceeding in which they are not named, and in which the only service obtained upon them was by publication." The court cited the decision in the case at bar in support of its conclusion, saying, after noting certain differences which strengthened that decision: "In principle we can see no difference between the two cases. In that case the court was construing the statutes of the territory in regard to proceedings to quiet title, which are in substance and effect the same as the partition statute in regard to proceedings against unknown owners, and held that such statutes must be strictly construed, and that the decree in that case was unavailing as against the town of Las Vegas." Other cases were cited, among them being American Land Co. v. Zeiss, 219 U. S. 48, 55 L. ed. 83, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200. It is not necessary to review them, as the construction of the court of the local statute is that it requires the parties defendant in an action to quiet title to be designated "by their names, as near as they can be ascertained," and permits parties defendant to be designated as "unknown claimants" only when their names cannot be ascertained. In other words, requires them to be unknown in fact, not merely in designation. Any other conclusion would make the statute not a facility for removing clouds from titles, but for putting clouds upon them; and the accommodation of the law of its process to an exceptional condition could be perverted, and rights devested by a semblance of notice of adverse claims to them.

Digitized by Google

It is contended, however, that the distinction which the supreme court of the territory made between the findings of the trial court in the proceedings of 1894, as to [616] jurisdiction, and findings as to other matters in issue, is without foundation, and that "the question of the jurisdiction of the defendants through service by publication having been adjudicated in the decree of 1894" is conclusive, "and not subject to attack in this collateral proceeding, whether as a matter of fact it was in issue or not." To sustain the contention Thompson v. Thompson, 226 U. S. 552, 57 L. ed. 348, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129, is cited. The case was concerned with the faith and credit to be given to a decree of divorce rendered upon service by publication. The publication was attacked because based on an affidavit made on information and belief, and it was hence contended that the court had not acquired jurisdiction. The contention was held untenable, the court saying that if the affidavit could be regarded as defective, it was not in the omission to state a material fact, but in the degree of proof; and that therefore the resulting judgment could not be said to be void on its face. The principle was declared, however, to be established that the full faith and credit clause and the statute enacted thereunder do not apply to judgments rendered by a court having no jurisdiction of the parties or subject-matter, or of the res in proceedings in rem.

The case at bar is therefore clearly distinct from that case. The town of Las Vegas at the time of the institution of the suit to quiet title and of the publication of process was, whether regarded as an entity separate from its inhabitants, or collectively, as composed of them, either not intended to be made a party under the designation "unknown claimants of interest," or the designation was untrue.

But it is further contended that service by publication was not an issue in this case, the pleadings and the decision of the trial court being based upon the view "that the status of the town was such that no rights by limitation could be adjudicated against it, because of the impossibility of serving it with legal process" and that the supreme court having found against appellants on that [617] contention, there was nothing left but to reverse the judgment of the trial court and remand the cause, with instructions to grant the writ prayed for. The supreme court could not, it was further contended, go outside of the record, and of its own motion raise the issue as to the sufficiency of the service upon the defendants, that issue being in express language excluded by appellees from the court's consideration. The answer is immediate. We know of no rule which precludes an appellate court deciding a case for other reasons than those expressed by the trial court, and the contention that the sufficiency of the service was withdrawn from the consideration of the court by appellees is not justified. It is based upon the averment of the town that neither at the time of the confirmation of the grant nor at any time subsequent thereto did it have a representative upon whom legal process could have been served, until the 9th of December, 1902, when the board of trustees was appointed.

Digitized by Google

The supreme court dealt with the fact, and, as we have seen, ascribed a different effect to it than that ascribed by the trial court. The supreme court said, there being no officer of the town upon whom process could have been served, service by publication could have been made, "since in that event the defendant 'was so situated that process could not otherwise be served upon it.'" But the court was of the view, as we have seen, that such fact did not authorize the town to be made defendant under the name of "unknown claimants," or cited as such by publication, and the town having been so named, the decree of 1894 was not binding upon it.

The next contention of appellants is that the inhabitants of the town and appellees are privies in estate, and are bound by the decree quieting title. In other words, that there was such identity of interest between the defendants in the suit to quiet title and the present appellees, the board of trustees, that the latter is bound by the decree. [618] The argument is that the town was the mere representative of the inhabitants, and that the nonappointment of someone to represent it "cannot operate to suspend either the institution or prosecution of legal proceedings against the trust estate, or to discharge either the trust estate or the beneficiaries from the effect of the judgment rendered, when the latter have been made parties and served with legal process." In other words, if we understand the contention, it is that the proceedings of 1894, being against some of the inhabitants of the town, bind all of the other inhabitants, considered as an entity or collectively. We need not pause to consider the soundness of the contention. If justified at all, it would seem to make necessary the present petition. It puts out of view besides the effect of the confirmation to the town. We said, in Maese v. Herman, 183 U. S. 572, 46 L. ed. 335, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91: "The town and its inhabitants were certainly substantial entities in fact, and were recognized by Congress as having rights, and directed such rights to be authenticated by a patent of the United States." The town was the confirmee and represented, it may be, individual interests, but collective interests as well. It was because of the grant to the town that the act of March 12, 1903, supra, was enacted, giving the district court of San Miguel county, "jurisdiction to manage, control, and administer" the grant. It was in the execution of this jurisdiction that the appellees, trustees of the town, were appointed and given the power to make conveyances to individuals if they had the character of title described.

But the town also had rights, and, as we have seen, by § 9 of the act of March 12, 1903, the trustees were given power "to lease, sell, or mortgage any part or parts of the grant." See, as to rights which towns had under the Mexican law, United States v. Pico, 5 Wall. 536, 18 L. ed. 695; Townsend v. Greeley, 5 Wall. 326, 18 L. ed. 547; United States v. Santa Fé, 165 U. S. 675, 41 L. ed. 874, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472.

Judgment affirmed.

---

[619] MARGARET H. WILLIAMSON v. KATHERINE OSENTON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 619-626.)

Federal courts — jurisdiction — diversity of citizenship — change of domicil.

1. A change of domicil is effected by removal from one state to another with the intention of making a home there for an indefinite time, i. e., for a time to which no ending is then contemplated, although the bringing of suit in a Federal court on grounds of diverse citizenship is the motive for the change.

[For other cases, see Courts, 691-694; Domicil, 6-12, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — jurisdiction — diverse citizenship — change of wife's domicil.

2. The wife of a citizen who has justifiably left her husband and removed to another state, with no intention of living elsewhere, thereby acquires a domicil in the latter state so that she may maintain an action in the Federal courts against a citizen of the state in which her husband resides.

[For other cases, see Courts, 691-694; Domicil, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 634.]

Submitted February 24, 1914. Decided March 9, 1914.

NOTE.—Generally, as to diverse citizenship as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see notes to Seddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L.R.A. 108; Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. 11 L.R.A. 216; Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579; Emory v. Greenough, 1 L. ed. U. S. 640; Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 2 L. ed. U. S. 435; and M'Donald v. Smalley, 7 L. ed. U. S. 287.

On the right of wife to acquire a separate domicil for the purpose of a divorce suit—see notes to Benton's Succession, 59 L.R.A. 146, and Carty v. Carty, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 297.

Digitized by Google

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit presenting the question as to whether a wife who has justifiably left her husband and removed to another state may maintain an action in the Federal courts against a citizen of the state in which her husband resides. Answered in the affirmative.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. E. Chilton submitted the cause for Margaret H. Williamson. Messrs. A. O. Bacon and S. W. Walker were on the brief:

A wife can acquire a domicil separate from that of her husband for divorce purposes, and even if separated without judicial decree, the courts of her actual residence, if in New Hampshire and New York, can administer on her estate.

Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 16 L. ed. 226; Bennett v. Bennett, Deady, 299, Fed. Cas. No. 1,318; Ditson v. Ditson, 4 R. I. 87; Harteau v. Harteau, 14 Pick. 181, 25 Am. Dec. 372; Atherton v. Atherton, 155 N. Y. 129, 40 L.R.A. 291, 63 Am. St. Rep. 650, 49 N. E. 933; Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. Y. 217, 28 Am. Rep. 129; White v. White, 18 R. I. 292, 27 Atl. 506; Smith v. Smith, 43 La. Ann. 1140, 10 So. 248; Irby v. Wilson, 21 N. C. (1 Dev. & B. Eq.) 582; Colvin v. Reed, 55 Pa. 379; Anderson v. Watt, 138 U. S. 694, 34 L. ed. 1078, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; Cheely v. Clayton, 110 U. S. 706, 28 L. ed. 300, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 328; Loker v. Gerald, 157 Mass. 42, 16 L.R.A. 497, 34 Am. St. Rep. 252, 31 N. E. 709; Re Florance, 54 Hun, 328, 7 N. Y. Supp. 578; Rundle v. Van Inwegan, 9 N. Y. Civ. Proc. Rep. 330; Lyon v. Lyon, 30 Hun, 455; Shute v. Sargent, 67 N. H. 305, 36 Atl. 282; Re Wickes, 128 Cal. 270, 49 L.R.A. 138, 60 Pac. 867.

With the exception of a few probate cases, all the decisions, including those of the United States Supreme Court, hold that a wife who is not judicially separated from her husband can acquire a domicil separate from him only for the purpose of proceeding against him either for divorce or to recover something due from him. For all other purposes she remains his wife and he can only institute legal proceedings as a citizen of his jurisdiction.

Harteau v. Harteau, 14 Pick. 181, 25 Am. Dec. 372; Anderson v. Watt, 138 U. S. 694–706, 34 L. ed. 1078–1082, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; Thompson v. Stalmann, 139 Fed. 93; Nichols v. Nichols, 92 Fed. 1.

The record does not show that the plaintiff, at the time of the institution of this suit, was a citizen of Virginia.

The Frances, 8 Cranch, 353, 3 L. ed. 587; Morris v. Gilmer, 129 U. S. 328, 32 L. ed. 694, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Case v. Clarke, 5 Mason, 70, Fed. Cas. No. 2,490; Mitchell v. United States, 21 Wall, 350, 22 L. ed. 584; Desmare v. United States, 93 U. S. 605, 23 L. ed. 959; Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 400, 14 L. ed. 472; Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Carroll, 28 C. C. A. 207, 52 U. S. App. 442, 84 Fed. 772; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Ohle, 117 U. S. 123, 29 L. ed. 837, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; Watertown v. Greaves, 56 L.R.A. 865, 50 C. C. A. 172, 112 Fed. 183; Allen v. Southern California R. Co. 70 Fed. 370; Loomis v. Rosenthal, 67 Fed. 370; Kingman v. Holthaus, 59 Fed. 305.

The following adjudications of this court show how careful it has been to confine its jurisdiction in cases of this kind to those which arise between actual citizens of different states:

Bernards Twp. v. Stebbins, 109 U. S. 341, 27 L. ed. 956, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Eberly v. Moore, 24 How. 147, 16 L. ed. 612; Williams v. Nottawa, 104 U. S. 209, 26 L. ed. 719; Hawes v. Oakland Co. (Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co.) 104 U. S. 450, 26 L. ed. 827; Detroit v. Dean, 106 U. S. 537, 27 L. ed. 300, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Hayden v. Manning, 106 U. S. 586, 27 L. ed. 306, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Farmington v. Pillsbury, 114 U. S. 138, 29 L. ed. 114, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807; Cashman v. Amador & S. Canal Co. 118 U S. 58, 30 L. ed. 72, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 926; Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 596, 30 L. ed. 269, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 32; Quincy v. Steel, 120 U. S. 241, 30 L. ed. 624, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; Morris v. Gilmer, 129 U. S. 315, 32 L. ed. 690, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Shreveport v. Cole, 129 U. S. 36, 32 L. ed. 589, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Nashua & L. R. Corp. v. Boston & L. R. Corp. 136 U. S. 356, 34 L. ed. 363, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004; Lehigh Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Kelly, 160 U. S. 327, 40 L. ed. 444, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307; Lake County v. Dudley, 173 U. S. 243, 43 L. ed. 684, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; Corbus v. Alaska Treadwell Gold Min. Co. 187 U. S. 455, 47 L. ed. 256, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157; Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund, S. D. Title & T. Co. 197 U. S. 178, 49 L. ed. 713, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420; Jones v. League, 18 How. 76, 15 L. ed. 263; Anderson v. Watt, 138 U. S. 694, 34 L. ed. 1078, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449.

Messrs. R. G. Linn and C. Beverley Broun submitted the cause for Katherine Osenton. Mr. Connor Hall was on the brief:

Under the common-law cases the rule is that the wife cannot establish a separate domicil for herself. But even at common law, in its strictest days, the rule was not an invariable formula, but admitted of qualifications and exceptions. The rule that the domicil follows that of the husband was based upon the legal unity of the two. This legal unity was not an inflexible or irrefragable bond even in the mind of Coke and other champions of logical uniformity.

Digitized by Google

Cooley's Bl. Com. 443, 4 Wigmore Ev. § 2239, pp. 3056 et seq.; Ringstead v. Lanesborough, 3 Dougl. K. B. 197; Corbett v. Poelnitz, 1 T. R. 7; Compton v. Collinson, 1 H. Bl. 339, 2 Revised Rep. 786; De Gaillon v. L'Aigle, 1 Bos. & P. 359; Marshall v. Rutton, 8 T. R. 545; Carrol v. Blencow, 4 Esp. 27; Tovey v. Lindsay, 1 Dow, P. C. 138.

Recent utterances of English judges show that the courts of that country could not be induced by any argument to enforce in its supposed ancient strictness the fiction of the unity of husband and wife.

Dolphin v. Robins, 7 H. L. Cas. 390, 3 Macq. H. L. Cas. 563, 29 L. J. Prob. N. S. 11, 5 Jur. N. S. 1271, 7 Week. Rep. 674, 9 Eng. Rul. Cas. 714; LeSueur v. LeSueur, L. R. 1 Prob. Div. 139, 45 L. J. Prob. N. S. 73, 34 L. T. N. S. 511, 24 Week. Rep. 616.

In America at an early day it was recognized that the unity of husband and wife was a mere fiction, to be adhered to in ordinary cases, but to be freely departed from whenever the cause of justice in any way demanded it.

Rhea v. Rhenner, 1 Pet. 105, 107, 7 L. ed. 72, 73; Gregory v. Paul, 15 Mass. 31; Clark v. Valentino, 41 Ga. 143; Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 589, 16 L. ed. 226, 228; M'Arthur v. Bloom, 2 Duer, 151; Abbot v. Bayley, 6 Pick. 89.

According to the weight of modern authority in America, the wife has, upon the commission by her husband of an offense entitling her to a divorce, an undoubted right to leave him and establish a domicil for herself for all purposes; certainly for all purposes which are requisite or proper for the protection of any of her rights.

Dutcher v. Dutcher, 39 Wis. 651; Derby v. Derby, 14 Ill. App. 647; Haddock v. Haddock, 201 U. S. 562, 50 L. ed. 867, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525, 5 Ann. Cas. 1; Re Florance, 54 Hun, 330, 7 N. Y. Supp. 578; Prater v. Prater, 87 Tenn. 78, 10 Am. St. Rep. 623, 9 S. W. 361; Re Colebrook, 26 Misc. 139, 55 N. Y. Supp. 861; Buchholz v. Buchholz, 63 Wash. 213, 115 Pac. 88, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 395; Saperstone v. Saperstone, 73 Misc. 631, 131 N. Y. Supp. 241; White v. White, 18 R. I. 292, 27 Atl. 506; Shute v. Sargent, 67 N. H. 306, 36 Atl. 282; Gordon v. Yost, 140 Fed. 80; Watertown v. Greaves, 56 L.R.A. 865, 50 C. C. A. 172, 112 Fed. 183; Whart. Confl. L. § 46, pp. 105–107.

Having seen that the defendant in error had the capacity to acquire a separate domicil for herself, it is easily seen upon the agreed statement of facts submitted that she had in fact done so.

Mitchell v. United States, 21 Wall. 350, 352, 22 L. ed. 584, 587; White v. Brown, 1 Wall. Jr. 217, Fed. Cas. No. 17,538; Young v. Pollak, 85 Ala. 439, 5 So. 279; Salem v. Lyme, 29 Conn. 80; Smith v. Croom, 7 Fla. 152; Verret v. Donvillain, 33 La. Ann. 1307; Church v. Rowell, 49 Me. 367; Wilton v. Falmouth, 15 Me. 481; Wilbraham v. Ludlow, 99 Mass. 591; McConnell v. Kelley, 138 Mass. 372; Whitney v. Sherborn, 12 Allen, 113; Concord v. Rumney, 45 N. H. 427; Valentine v. Valentine, 61 N. J. Eq. 407, 48 Atl. 593; Hegeman v. Fox, 31 Barb. 475; Kellar v. Baird, 5 Heisk. 46; Ex parte Blumer, 27 Tex. 738; State v. De Casinova, 1 Tex. 401; Frame v. Thormann, 102 Wis. 656, 79 N. W. 39; Brittenham v. Robinson, 18 Ind. App. 502, 48 N. E. 616; Anderson v. Anderson, 42 Vt. 350, 1 Am. Rep. 336; Doucet v. Geohegan, L. R. 9 Ch. Div. 444, 26 Week. Rep. 825; Haldane v. Eckford, L. R. 8 Eq. 640, 21 L. T. N. S. 87, 17 Week. Rep. 1059; Loustalan v. Loustalan [1900] P. 231, 69 L. J. Prob. N. S. 75, 48 Week. Rep. 509, 82 L. T. N. S. 807, 16 Times L. R. 354; Jacobs, Domicil, § 67; Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 400, 423, 14 L. ed. 472, 482; Morris v. Gilmer, 129 U. S. 315, 328, 32 L. ed. 690, 694, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Greene v. Windham, 13 Me. 228; Thorndike v. Boston, 1 Met. 246; Re Austen, 13 App. Div. 247, 42 N. Y. Supp. 1097; Sullivan v. Detroit, Y. & A. A. R. Co. 135 Mich. 661, 64 L.R.A. 673, 106 Am. St. Rep. 403, 98 N. W. 756; Dale v. Irwin, 78 Ill. 170; The Venus, 8 Cranch, 253, 279, 3 L. ed. 553, 562; Story, Confl. L. 8th ed. §§ 41, 43, 46, pp. 43, 50; Guier v. O'Daniel, 1 Binn. 349, note; Phillimore, Domicil, 15; also 4 Int. Law, No. 49; Whart. Confl. L. § 21, pp. 77, 82; White v. Tennant, 31 W. Va. 790, 13 Am. St. Rep. 898, 8 S. E. 596; Johnson v. Smith, 43 Mo. 501, 591; Dicey, Confl. L. pp. 82, 108, Rule 7, 111; Putnam v. Johnson, 10 Mass. 501; Fry's Election Case, 71 Pa. 307, 10 Am. Rep. 698; Thomas v. Warner, 83 Md. 14, 34 Atl. 830; Warren v. Thomaston, 43 Me. 418, 69 Am. Dec. 69; Thayer v. Boston, 124 Mass. 132, 26 Am. Rep. 650; Dean v. Cannon, 37 W. Va. 127, 16 S. E. 444; Hart v. Horn, 4 Kan. 238; Smith v. Croom, 7 Fla. 153; Jefferson v. Washington, 19 Me. 301; King v. King, 155 Mo. 406, 56 S. W. 534; Foss v. Foss, 58 N. H. 283; Wood v. Roeder, 45 Neb. 315, 63 N. W. 853; Venable v. Paulding, 19 Minn. 492, Gil. 422; Krone v. Cooper, 43 Ark. 549; No. 17,538, Re Craignish [1892] 3 Ch. 192, 67 L. T. N. S. 689; Dicey, Domicil, pp. 42–55; Berry

Digitized by Google

v. Wilcox, 44 Neb. 82, 48 Am. St. Rep. 706, 62 N. W. 249; Moffett v. Hill, 131 Ill. 239, 22 N. E. 821; Hairston v. Hairston, 27 Miss. 718, 61 Am. Dec. 530; Hart v. Lindsey, 17 N. H. 242, 43 Am. Dec. 597; Horne v. Horne, 31 N. C. (9 Ired. L.) 107; Dickerman v. Northern Trust Co. 176 U. S. 181, 191, 192, 44 L. ed. 423, 430, 431, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes here upon the certified question whether the plaintiff, when she began this suit, was a citizen of Virginia in such sense as to be entitled to maintain her action in the district court of the United States for the southern district of West Virginia. The plaintiff (the defendant in error) at that time was the wife of a citizen of West Virginia, but, in consequence of his adultery, as she alleged, had separated from him and had gone to Virginia. Before bringing this action she had brought a suit in West Virginia for divorce, and pending the present proceeding obtained a divorce a vinculo. This action is for damages, alleging the defendant to have been a party to the adultery. The defendant pleaded to the jurisdiction, setting up the plaintiff's marriage and the residence of her husband in West Virginia; in other words, that the requisite diversity of citizenship did not exist. The plea seems to have been heard upon a written statement of facts in which it was agreed that the plaintiff went to Virginia "with the intention of making her home in that state for an indefinite time in order that she might institute this suit against the defendant in the United States court," together with the facts already stated. The plea was overruled, there was a trial on the merits, at which the [624] plaintiff got a verdict for $35,000, and thereupon the case was taken to the circuit court of appeals, from which the certified question comes.

On these facts the question certified is divided into two by the argument: first, whether, if able so to do, the plaintiff had changed her domicil from West Virginia to Virginia in fact; and, second, supposing that she had changed it so far as to have enabled her to proceed against her husband in Virginia had she been so minded, whether for other purposes her domicil did not remain that of her husband until the divorce was obtained, which was after the beginning of the present suit. Premising that if the plaintiff was domiciled in Virginia when this suit was begun, she was a citizen of that state within the meaning of the Constitution, art. 3, § 2, and the Judicial Code of March 3, 1911, chap. 231, 36 Stat. at L. 1087, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 128 (Gassies v. Ballon, 6 Pet. 761, 8 L. ed. 573; Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 161, 36 L. ed. 103, 109, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 162, 22 L. ed. 627), we will take these questions up in turn.

The essential fact that raises a change of abode to a change of domicil is the absence of any intention to live elsewhere (Story, Conflict of Laws, § 43); or, as Mr. Dicey puts it in his admirable book, "the absence of any present intention of not residing permanently or indefinitely in" the new abode. Confl. L. 2d ed. 111. We may admit that if this case had been before a jury on testimony merely that the plaintiff intended to live in Virginia for an indefinite time, it might have been argued that the motive assigned for the change, the bringing of this action, showed that the plaintiff, even if telling the literal truth, only meant that she could not tell when the lawsuit would end. It is to be noticed also that the divorce proceedings were carried through in West Virginia, though it is fair to assume that they were begun before the plaintiff moved. But the case was submitted to the court upon a written statement, upon which we presume both sides expected the court to rule. To give the supposed ambiguous [625] meaning to the words "for an indefinite time" in that statement would be to assume that the parties were trying to get the better of each other by a quibble. We must take them to mean: for a time to which the plaintiff did not then contemplate an end. If that is their meaning, the motive for the change was immaterial; for, subject to the second question to be discussed, the plaintiff had a right to select her domicil for any reason that seemed good to her. With possible irrelevant exceptions the motive has a bearing only when there is an issue open on the intent. Cheever v. Wilson, 9 Wall. 108, 123, 19 L. ed. 604, 608; Dickerman v. Northern Trust Co. 176 U. S. 181, 191, 192, 44 L. ed. 423, 430, 431, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311. With that established as agreed, there is no doubt that it was sufficient to work the change. Mitchell v. United States, 21 Wall. 350, 352, 22 L. ed. 584, 587; Dicey, Confl. L. 2d ed. 108, 113, 114.

The second subdivision of the question may be answered with even less doubt than the first. The very meaning of domicil is the technically pre-eminent headquarters that every person is compelled to have in order that certain rights and duties that have been attached to it by the law may be determined. Bergner & E. Brewing Co. v. Dreyfus, 172 Mass. 154, 157, 70 Am. St. Rep. 251, 51 N. E. 531. In its nature it is one; and if in any case two are recognized for different purposes, it is a doubtful anomaly. Dicey, Confl. L. 2d ed. 98. The only reason that could be offered for not recognizing the fact of the plaintiff's actual change, if justified, is the now vanishing fiction of identity of person. But if that fiction does not prevail over the fact in the relation for which the fiction was created there is no reason in the world why it should be given effect in any other. However it may be in England, that in this country a wife in the plaintiff's circumstances may get a different domicil from that of her husband for purposes of divorce is not disputed and is not open to dispute. Haddock v. Haddock, 201 U. S. 562, 571, 572, 50 L. ed. 867, 870, 871, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525, 5 Ann. Cas. 1. This she may do without necessity and simply from choice, as the cases [626] show, and the change that is good as against her husband ought to be good as against all. In the later decisions the right to change and the effect of the change are laid down in absolute terms. Gordon v. Yost, 140 Fed. 79; Watertown v. Greaves, 56 L.R.A. 865, 50 C. C. A. 172, 112 Fed. 183; Shute v. Sargent, 67 N. H. 305, 36 Atl. 282; Buchholz v. Buchholz, 63 Wash. 213, 115 Pac. 88, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 395. See Haddock v. Haddock, supra; Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 588, 597, 598, 16 L. ed. 226, 228, 231, 232. We see no reason why the wife who justifiably has left her husband should not have the same choice of domicil for an action for damages that she has against her husband for a divorce. We answer the question, Yes.

Digitized by Google

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE, & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err., v. C. B. KENNEDY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 626, 627.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — penalizing refusal to pay claim.

The exaction of a double liability from a railway company failing to pay, within sixty days, a claim for the damage caused by fire set by a locomotive, as is done by S. D. Laws 1907, chap. 215, except where the owner recovers a less sum as damages than the amount of any tender by the railway company, in which case the latter is to recover its costs, is a taking of the company's property without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 246.]

Submitted March 9, 1914. Decided March 16, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of South Dakota to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Lincoln County, in that state, awarding double damages in a suit against a railway company for loss of property caused by a fire set by a locomotive. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 28 S. D. 94, 132 N. W. 802.

Messrs. Burton Hanson and William G. Porter submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Ed. L. Grantham was on the brief:

The law is unconstitutional in that it imposes a penalty for delinquency in payment of a debt.

Union P. R. Co. v. De Busk, 12 Colo. 294, 3 L.R.A. 350, 13 Am. St. Rep. 221, 20 Pac. 752; Wadsworth v. Union P. R. Co. 18 Colo. 600, 23 L.R.A. 812, 36 Am. St. Rep. 309, 33 Pac. 515; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Outcalt, 2 Colo. App. 395, 31 Pac. 177; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 535, 537, 28 L. ed. 238, 239, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Wynne, 224 U. S. 354, 56 L. ed. 799, 42 L.R.A. (N.S.) 102, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Seegers, 207 U. S. 73, 52 L. ed. 108, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Jolliffe v. Brown, 14 Wash. 155, 53 Am. St. Rep. 868, 44 Pac. 149; Black v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 122 Iowa, 32, 96 N. W. 984; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Grand Island & W. C. R. Co. v. Swinbank, 51 Neb. 521, 71 N. W. 48; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Stupeck v. Union P. R. Co. 200 Fed. 192; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Merrill, 40 Kan. 404, 19 Pac. 793; San Mateo County v. Southern P. R. Co. 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722.

It discriminates against one class of litigants in favor of another, denying to plaintiff in error the equal protection of the laws.

Jolliffe v. Brown, 14 Wash. 155, 53 Am. St. Rep. 868, 44 Pac. 149; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Outcalt, 2 Colo. App. 395, 31 Pac. 177; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Moss, 60 Miss. 641; Wilder v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 70 Mich. 382, 38 N. W. 289; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co.

NOTE.—On constitutionality of statute imposing penalty or added liability for failure of railroad company to pay claim—see note to St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Wynne, 42 L.R.A. (N.S.) 102.

Digitized by Google

(Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Hocking Valley Coal Co. v. Rosser, 53 Ohio St. 12, 29 L.R.A. 386, 53 Am. St. Rep. 622, 41 N. E. 263; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 387, 388, 1 L. ed. 648, 649; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Builders' Supply Depot v. O'Connor, 150 Cal. 265, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 909, 119 Am. St. Rep. 193, 88 Pac. 982, 11 Ann. Cas. 712; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 193; Williamson v. Liverpool L. & G. Ins. Co. 105 Fed. 31.

No brief was filed for defendant in error.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court by Mr. Chief Justice White:

The ground upon which it is asserted in this case that the statute of the state of South Dakota, upon which the judgment of the court below here under review was based, is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, was considered and held to be well taken in a case decided this term. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Polt, 232 U. S. 165, ante, 554, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301. As that decision is conclusive upon all the issues here presented, and establishes that the statute in question is inconsistent with the Constitution and void, it results that, for the reasons stated in the case referred to, the judgment in this case must be reversed, and the case remanded to the court below for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

PEOPLE OF PORTO RICO, Plff. in Err.,
v.
BONOCIO RAMOS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 627–633.)

Porto Rico — immunity from suit — consent.

1. Porto Rico cannot invoke its immunity from suit without its consent to defeat jurisdiction of an action in which, through its attorney general, it voluntarily petitioned, after due deliberation, to be made a party defendant, asserting rights to the property in dispute, and in which it was made such party against the plaintiff's opposition.

Courts — jurisdiction — diverse citizenship — coming in of new party.

2. The jurisdiction of the Federal district court for Porto Rico of an action in ejectment brought by a citizen of Porto Rico against a subject of Great Britain in possession of the land was not ousted because Porto Rico subsequently became, with its consent, the sole party defendant.

[For other cases, see Courts, 718–720, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 390.]

Submitted February 25, 1914. Decided March 16, 1914.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Felix Frankfurter submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Frank Antonsanti and Frederick S. Tyler submitted the cause for defendant in error:

In the law of escheat, while there is some conflict of authority, the general rule seems to be clear that the state takes escheated property charged with all of the valid debts and liabilities of the intestate, and creditors may enforce such claims against the property in the hands of the state, provided they are presented before being barred by the statutes of limitation.

Congregational Church v. Morris, 8 Ala. 182; Mooers v. White, 6 Johns. Ch. 360; Watson v. Lyle, 4 Leigh, 236.

The state takes only the title which the intestate had and in the same condition, with all of the privileges and appurtenances, and subject to all liens and encumbrances.

Casey v. Inloes, 1 Gill, 430, 39 Am. Dec. 658; 4 Kent, Com. 427; 3 Washb. Real Prop. 6th ed. 64.

In the present case, therefore, the right of the people of Porto Rico to the escheated estate of Eliza Kortright is necessarily subject to this suit, as the people of Porto Rico took only such title as Eliza Kortright had; and if her title to the land which is the subject-matter of this suit was bad, and was subject to ejectment by Ramos, the title that the state now claims is bad, and is subject to the same ejectment.

3 Washb. Real Prop. 64; 4 Kent, Com. 427; Hamilton v. Brown, 161 U. S. 256, 40 L. ed. 691, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

We contend that the very act of the state in receiving and accepting the assets of Eliza Kortright in itself is a consent that creditors or adverse claimants may sue the state, if necessary, to enforce their rights against the escheated assets.

If, when this suit was brought, the court acquired jurisdiction of the parties, no subsequent change of the parties can affect that jurisdiction.

Clarke v. Mathewson, 12 Pet. 164, 9

Digitized by Google

L. ed. 1041; Morgan v. Morgan, 2 Wheat. 290-297, 4 L. ed. 242-244; Phelps v. Oaks, 117 U. S. 236, 29 L. ed. 888, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Hardenbergh v. Ray, 151 U. S. 112, 38 L. ed. 93, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Mollan v. Torrance, 9 Wheat. 537, 6 L. ed. 154; Dunn v. Clarke, 8 Pet. 1, 8 L. ed. 845; Conolly v. Taylor, 2 Pet. 556, 7 L. ed. 518.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action in ejectment for certain described lands in Porto Rico, brought by defendant in error, a citizen of Porto Rico, against Eduardo Wood, a subject of Great Britain.

Defendant in error alleged in his complaint that he was the owner, possessed and entitled to the possession of the lands, and that Wood, claiming that the property belonged to the estate of Eliza Kortright, of which he was the duly appointed administrator, without right or title entered upon the lands and ejected defendant in error therefrom. Restitution of the lands was prayed and damages in the sum of $5,000.

The complaint was filed November 12, 1909, and process duly issued thereon. On November 19, 1909, the defendant, Wood, filed a paper entitled, "Motion to make the People of Porto Rico a Party Defendant, and for an [629] Extension of Time to Plead." It was alleged in the motion that the people of Porto Rico had been declared and adjudged to be the sole heir of Eliza Kortright by an order made by the district court in and for the judicial district of San Juan, she having died intestate and without leaving any legal heirs.

That the people of Porto Rico, by virtue of such declaration of heirship, have an interest in the result of the suit, and ought to be joined as codefendants.

That the defendant desired an extension of time to file a demurrer or answer to the complaint, as he might be advised, to the 2d of December, 1909.

An order was prayed making the people of Porto Rico a party, for service upon them, and that time for pleading be extended.

Subsequently defendant filed an answer denying each and every material allegation of the complaint, and prayed a dismissal of the action.

The case, by consent, was subsequently set for trial and a jury empaneled. Thereupon Harvey M. Hutchinson, representing the attorney general of Porto Rico, petitioned the court for a continuance of the trial for time to enable him to ascertain if the people of Porto Rico should be made a party defendant to the cause. In pursuance of the petition the court continued the case. Upon the date to which the cause was continued, Hutchinson again, as representing the attorney general of Porto Rico, appeared in behalf of the people of Porto Rico, and represented to the court that the people of Porto Rico were interested parties to the action. The court thereupon ordered the people of Porto Rico to be made a party. The jury was excused, the cause continued, and the plaintiff (defendant in error) was "directed to amend his complaint so as to show the people of Porto Rico to be a party defendant."

An amended complaint was filed December 15, 1910. [630] It alleged the plaintiff to be a citizen of Porto Rico and the defendant "a body politic created by the Congress of the United States, being a citizen thereof." That plaintiff was the owner of a "rustic estate," describing it, and in possession thereof, and that one Eliza Kortright, since deceased, ejected plaintiff therefrom and continued in possession thereof up to her death. That therefore her estate was placed under judicial administration under the direction of Eduardo Wood, as judicial administrator, which judicial administration ceased during the month of November, 1910, and the administrator discharged. That therefore the defendant, the People of Porto Rico, was adjudged by the district court of San Juan the only heir to the estate of Eliza Kortright, as she left no heirs. That the people of Porto Rico, as such heir, continues to possess the land without right or title thereto, against the will of plaintiff, and to his damage in the sum of $6,000, which sum was prayed as rents and profits, together with restitution of the land.

Upon motion of the attorney general of Porto Rico, his name was entered as counsel for the people of Porto Rico, and leave granted to file a demurrer.

The demurrer recited that the attorney general appeared specially for the sole purpose of challenging the jurisdiction of the court in the case, and demurred to the amended complaint for the following reasons: (1) Because the suit was one between plaintiff, a citizen of Porto Rico, and the people of Porto Rico as sole defendant, and that both plaintiff and defendant, being citizens of Porto Rico within the meaning of the act of Congress conferring jurisdiction on the court, the court had no jurisdiction. (2) Because the people of Porto Rico, as a recognized entity, was so far a sovereign as to be exempt from suit at the instance of private individuals.

The demurrer was overruled and on the 11th of January, 1911, an answer was filed in which defendant insisted [631] and pleaded that it "had such attributes of sovereignty" as exempted it from suit. The rest of the answer denied the allegations of the complaint, and set up judgments obtained in two separate suits brought by Eliza Kortright against defendant in error, in which it was adjudged against him that she was the owner of the lands sued for by plaintiff in the present action.

Digitized by Google

The action was tried to a jury which found for plaintiff (defendant in error) and assessed damages at $6,000, in accordance with which judgment was entered. A new trial was moved and denied, and this writ of error granted.

But one contention is argued, that is, that the district court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit against Porto Rico "without its consent and against its active opposition." Porto Rico v. Rosaly y Castillo, 227 U. S. 270, 57 L. ed. 507, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 352, is cited to sustain the contention. It was said in that case that the government "established in Porto Rico is of such a nature as to come within the general rule exempting a government sovereign in its attributes from suit without its consent." This case, however, is not within the rule. In that case Porto Rico was a defendant in the first instance. In this case it voluntarily petitioned to be made a party, asserting rights to the property in controversy, and, against the opposition of the plaintiff (defendant in error), it was made a party defendant. And this action was not improvident. Its attorney general took time to consider. He applied for and obtained a continuance of the case to determine the best course to secure the interests of the people of Porto Rico,—whether to assert its rights in the then litigation, or attempt to keep them under the immunity of its sovereignty from attack. His decision had the support of substantial reasons. The property came to Porto Rico as an escheat, and came therefore as it was held by Eliza Kortright and Wood. If held in wrong by them, it was held in wrong by it, and the attorney general may have considered it well worth [632] while to face the controversy rather than remit it to some other proceeding that the plaintiff might institute, fortified, perhaps, by a decision in his favor. United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 27 L. ed. 171, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Stanley v. Schwalby, 147 U. S. 508, 37 L. ed. 259, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418. But, whatever his reasons, he certainly asked for time, as we have seen, "to enable him to ascertain if the people of Porto Rico should be made a party defendant" in the cause; and having been granted the time, he appeared again in the cause and represented to the court that Porto Rico was an interested party to the action, and the court, having heard the arguments of opposing counsel, ordered Porto Rico to be made a party, and directed plaintiff to amend his complaint in execution of the order. Porto Rico, therefore, through its attorney general, not only gave its consent to be a party to the cause, but invoked and obtained the ruling of the court against the resistance of the plaintiff to make it a party to the cause.

The complaint having been amended as moved and directed, and nearly a year having elapsed, there came a change of view; but the immunity of sovereignty from suit without its consent cannot be carried so far as to permit it to reverse the action invoked by it, and to come in and go out of court at its will, the other party having no right of resistance to either step.

In placing our decision upon the consent of Porto Rico to be made a party defendant under the circumstances presented by this case, we do not wish to imply that Porto Rico could not have been made a party without its consent, the property being an escheat. As to that we express no opinion.

There is an assignment of error based on the proposition that by the amendment of the complaint the plaintiff and Porto Rico became the sole parties to the action, and they, being citizens of Porto Rico, the court lost jurisdiction of it. The proposition is not urged by plaintiff in error in its brief, and if the proposition did not raise a question of [633] jurisdiction, we might pass it without comment. It is, however, enough to say of it that the original defendant, Wood, was properly sued, he then being a subject of Great Britain, and in possession of the land. Porto Rico, subsequently becoming a party, did not oust the jurisdiction. Phelps v. Oaks, 117 U. S. 236, 29 L. ed. 888, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Hardenbergh v. Ray, 151 U. S. 112, 38 L. ed. 93, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305.

Judgment affirmed.

SAMUEL W. CURRIDEN, Appt.,
v.
FRANK L. MIDDLETON, Henry S. Blackmore, and William G. Orr.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 633-636.)

Equity — jurisdiction — recovery of damages — discovery.

1. A suit, the object of which is the recovery of the damages sustained as the result of an alleged conspiracy to defraud, is justiciable at law, and not in equity, although the bill, in addition to the prayer for final relief, asks for a discovery.

NOTE.—Generally, on the jurisdiction of equity where remedy at law exists—see notes to Meldrum v. Meldrum, 11 L.R.A. 65; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards & Transit Co. 6 L.R.A. 855; and Tyler v. Savage, 36 L. ed. U. S. 83.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Equity, 63-70, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Equity — jurisdiction — complicated facts — difficulty of proof.

2. Mere complication of facts alone and difficulty of proof are not a basis of equity jurisdiction.

[For other cases, see Equity, I. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Equity — jurisdiction — transfer to law side.

3. Equity rule 22 for the transfer of an action at law erroneously begun as a suit in equity cannot be successfully invoked on an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, which affirmed a decree of the supreme court of the District, sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing the bill.

[For other cases, see Equity, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 152.]

Submitted March 4, 1914. Decided March 16, 1914.

APPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District, sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing the bill in a suit based upon an alleged conspiracy to defraud. Affirmed.

See same case below, 37 App. D. C. 568.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Lorenzo A. Bailey, William E. Chandler, and William L. Chambers submitted the cause for appellant:

Equity has jurisdiction in cases of complicated fraud.

1 Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 184, 437, 439, pp. 466, 468; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1265, p. 698; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 179, 186; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 955, 957, note, 963, note 7 (g); Smith v. Kay, 7 H. L. Cas. 750, 30 L. J. Ch. N. S. 45; 17 Harvard, L. Rev. p. 201; Re Hirth [1899] 1 Q. B. 612, 68 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 287, 47 Week. Rep. 243, 80 L. T. N. S. 63, 15 Times L. R. 153, 6 Mason, 10; Re Slobodinsky [1903] 2 K. B. 517, 72 L. J. K. B. N. S. 883, 89 L. T. N. S. 190, 19 Times L. R. 616, 52 Week. Rep. 156, 10 Manson, 341; Treasury Branch Div. 1889, pp. 612, 618, 624.

The details of fraud are not necessary to be stated in the bill.

Harrison v. Nixon, 9 Pet. 483, 9 L. ed. 201; Nesmith v. Calvert, 1 Woodb. & M. 34, Fed. Cas. No. 10,123; 1 Loveland, Forms of Fed. Pr. p. 237.

The need of discovery is a ground of jurisdiction.

1 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 223, 299, 314; Reynolds v. Burgess Sulphite Fiber Co. 71 N. H. 332, 57 L.R.A. 949, 93 Am. St. Rep. 535, 51 Atl. 1075.

Jurisdiction is taken in order to secure an adequate accounting. 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 186, 319; 4 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 1420, 1421; Badger v. McNamara, 123 Mass. 117.

Equitable jurisdiction is not lost because only money relief is demanded.

1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 178, p. 214, 4 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 416, 5 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 11; Tyler v. Savage, 143 U. S. 79, 36 L. ed. 82, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 64 K. 67, 184, 191; Jones v. Bolles, 9 Wall. 364, 19 L. ed. 734, 5 Mor. Min. Rep. 444.

The remedy at law, in order to exclude equity, must be as practical and as efficient to the ends of justice and its prompt administration as the remedy in equity.

Boyce v. Grundy, 3 Pet. 210, 7 L. ed. 655; Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 20 L. ed. 501.

Mr. E. Hilton Jackson submitted the cause for appellees:

There is an adequate remedy at law as to the substantial relief sought.

Buzard v. Houston, 119 U. S. 347, 351, 352, 30 L. ed. 451–453, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Parkersburg v. Brown, 106 U. S. 487, 500, 27 L. ed. 238, 243, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442; Litchfield v. Ballou, 114 U. S. 190, 29 L. ed. 132, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Ambler v. Choteau, 107 U. S. 590, 27 L. ed. 324, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556; United States v. Bitter Root Development Co. 200 U. S. 472, 50 L. ed. 560, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Hipp v. Babin, 19 How. 271, 278, 15 L. ed. 633, 635; Kramer v. Cohn, 119 U. S. 355, 357, 30 L. ed. 439, 440, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Whitehead v. Shattuck, 138 U. S. 146, 34 L. ed. 873, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; Scott v. Neely, 140 U. S. 106, 110, 35 L. ed. 358, 360, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712; Cates v. Allen, 149 U. S. 451, 459, 37 L. ed. 804, 808, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 883, 977.

The bill cannot be maintained for discovery only.

United States v. Bitter Root Development Co. 200 U. S. 472, 50 L. ed. 560, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Gelston v. Hoyt, 1 Johns. Ch. 543; Bank of United States v. Biddle, 2 Pars. Sel. Eq. Cas. 31; Lyons v. Miller, 6 Gratt. 428, 52 Am. Dec. 129.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill in equity against the defendant Middleton and two others not served, to which Middleton demurred. The demurrer was sustained and the bill dismissed by the supreme court of the District, and the decree was affirmed by the court of appeals. 37 App. D. C. 568. The allegations in brief are that Middleton was a patent lawyer and personal friend of the plaintiff, that he brought to the plaintiff's attention a patent fluid and apparatus, representing them to be valuable, with details of fact confirming the statement, and representing that Middleton was acting as agent of the patentees; that the plaintiff, relying upon the representations, paid money and incurred obligations, amounting in all to some $40,000, all he had, for purchase of the patent rights, with an agreement that a company should be formed to work them; that a company was formed, but that it turned out that the fluid and apparatus were worthless, that Middleton was interested in the patent, and that his representations were false. It is alleged further that Middleton got complete control of the company, that an arrangement was made with it by which the company was to assume and pay outstanding notes of the plaintiff, but that it failed to do so, and is now [636] hopelessly insolvent; that all Middleton's acts were parts of a conspiracy to defraud the plaintiff, and that Middleton has all the books and papers of the company needed to prove the fraud. The prayers are for discovery and a decree that the defendants "shall make due restitution [of his property] to the complainant by paying to him the amounts of money by him paid out as aforesaid," and for general relief.

Digitized by Google

As there is a prayer for final relief, the prayer for discovery must stand or fall with that; at least, in a case like the present; there is no need to consider whether or how far bills for discovery alone have been displaced by the powers now given in actions at law. The relief sought is simply a decree for damages,—for a large part of the moneys paid and obligations incurred were paid and incurred to others than Middleton, so that although the word "restitution" is used, there is no attempt to rescind, to follow a specific fund, or to establish a trust. Being a suit for damages, the proper remedy is an action at law, as was held below. Buzard v. Houston, 119 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 451, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249. It is said that the facts are complicated, but they are not so on the allegations of the bill, which merely disclose a series of acts alleged to have been parts of the plan to deceive; and further, mere complication of facts alone and difficulty of proof are not a basis of equity jurisdiction. See United States v. Bitter Root Development Co. 200 U. S. 451, 472, 50 L. ed. 550, 560, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318. It now is asked that if the suit cannot be maintained in equity, it may be transferred to the law side, and under equity rule 22; but that rule has no application to the case. Rev. Stat. § 913, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 683; D. C. Code (act of March 3, 1901, chap. 854), § 85, 31 Stat. at L. 1189, 1202.

Decree affirmed.

---

[637] GEORGE H. HOLT, Doing Business as George H. Holt & Company, Appt.

v.

NORVELL L. HENLEY, Trustee; Peninsula Bank of Williamsburg, Va., et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 637-641.)

Conditional sale — registration — validity as against trustee in bankruptcy — retroactive statute.

1. A retrospective effect will not be given to the provision of the act of June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 838, chap. 412, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1500), § 8, amending the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418), § 47a, subdiv. 2, by giving the trustee in bankruptcy, as to all property coming into the custody of the bankruptcy court, the rights of a creditor holding a lien, so as to defeat the title of the bankrupt's conditional vendor under a pre-existing contract of sale, which, because unregistered, was, under Va. Code, § 2462, void as to lien creditors and purchasers without notice, although for a month or two after the amendment was passed the vendor might have registered the contract.

[For other cases, see Sale, I. d; Statutes, II. v. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mortgage — lien — priority — after-acquired property — conditional sale — fixtures.

2. The lien of a mortgage covering an existing manufacturing plant and that "which may be acquired and placed upon the said premises during the continuance of this trust" does not extend to an automatic sprinkler system subsequently installed under a conditional contract of sale, which, because unregistered, was, under Va. Code, § 2462, void as to lien creditors and purchasers for value without notice, where such system, although attached to the free-

---

NOTE.—On the right of seller of chattel retaining title or lien as against purchaser of realty to which it is affixed by owner—see note to Lawton Pressed Brick & Tile Co. v. Ross-Kellar Triple Pressure Brick Mach. Co. 49 L.R.A.(N.S.) 396.

On the rights of seller of chattel retaining title thereto or a lien thereon as against existing mortgagees of the realty to which it is affixed by the owner—see note to Tippett v. Barham, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 119.

On the rights of seller of fixtures retaining title or lien as against purchasers or encumbrancers of realty—see note to Reynolds v. Ashby, 1 B. R. C. 664.

Digitized by Google

hold by bolts and screws, was, until paid for, by the express terms of the contract of sale, to remain personal property.

[For other cases, see Mortgage, I. d, 2; III.; Fixtures, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 229.]

Argued March 5, 1914. Decided March 16, 1914.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, holding invalid as against a trustee in bankruptcy the lien of a conditional vendor under an unregistered contract of sale. Reversed.

See same case below, 113 C. C. A. 87, 193 Fed. 1020.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. S. O. Bland argued the cause, and, with Mr. R. T. Armistead, filed a brief for appellant:

The law in Virginia undoubtedly is that, as between themselves, the parties can fix the status of property to the extent that property otherwise realty will remain personalty.

Shelton v. Ficklin, 32 Gratt. 727; Tunis Lumber Co. v. Dennis Lumber Co. 97 Va. 682, 34 S. E. 613; Auditor v. Andrews, 28 Gratt. 115; Monarch Laundry v. Westbrook, 109 Va. 382, 63 S. E. 1070; 1 Minor, Real Prop. §§ 27, 36.

The reservation of title was good in Virginia.

Monarch Laundry v. Westbrook, 109 Va. 382, 63 S. E. 1070.

States regulate property transfers.

Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 15 L. ed. 691; Arndt v. Griggs, 134 U. S. 316, 38 L. ed. 918, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; Walworth v. Harris, 129 U. S. 355, 32 L. ed. 712, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Cunnius v. Reading School Dist. 198 U. S. 458, 49 L. ed. 1125, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721, 3 Ann. Cas. 1121; Green v. Van Buskirk, 5 Wall. 307, 18 L. ed. 599; Hervey v. Rhode Island Locomotive Works, 93 U. S. 664, 23 L. ed. 1003; Brown v. Smart, 145 U. S. 454, 36 L. ed. 773, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958; Bryant v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co. 214 U. S. 279, 53 L. ed. 997, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Holt v. Crucible Steel Co. 224 U. S. 262, 56 L. ed. 756, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 414; Etheridge v. Sperry, 139 U. S. 266, 35 L. ed. 171, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Re A. B. Baxter & Co. 83 C. C. A. 106, 154 Fed. 22.

The weight of authority sustains Holt's claim.

Reynolds v. Ashby, 1 B. R. C. 678, note; Tippett v. Barham, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 119, note; Hurxthal v. Hurxthal, 45 W. Va. 584, 32 S. E. 237; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. George, 77 Minn. 319, 79 N. W. 1028, 1064; Campbell v. Roddy, 44 N. J. Eq. 244, 6 Am. St. Rep. 889, 14 Atl. 279; Cox v. New Bern Lighting & Fuel Co. 151 N. C. 62, 134 Am. St. Rep. 966, 65 S. E. 648, 18 Ann. Cas. 936; Davis v. Bliss, 187 N. Y. 78, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 458, 79 N. E. 851; Tifft v. Horton, 53 N. Y. 377, 13 Am. Rep. 537; Arctic Ice Mach. Co. v. Armstrong County Trust Co. 112 C. C. A. 458, 192 Fed. 114; Fred W. Wolf Co. v. Hermann Sav. Bank, 168 Mo. App. 549, 153 S. W. 1094; Re Sunflower State Ref. Co. 115 C. C. A. 132, 195 Fed. 180; Roberts v. Caple, 8 Ala. App. 444, 62 So. 343; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; New Chester Water Co. v. Holly Mfg. Co. 3 C. C. A. 399, 3 U. S. App. 264, 53 Fed. 19; Manhattan Trust Co. v. Sioux City Cable R. Co. 76 Fed. 658; Warren v. Liddell, 110 Ala. 232, 20 So. 89; Wood v. Holly Mfg. Co. 100 Ala. 326, 46 Am. St. Rep. 56, 13 So. 948; Hendy v. Dinkerhoff, 57 Cal. 3, 40 Am. Rep. 107; Schumacker v. Edward P. Allis Co. 70 Ill. App. 556; Ellison v. Salem Coal & Min. Co. 43 Ill. App. 120; Andrews v. Chandler, 27 Ill. App. 103; First Nat. Bank v. Elmore, 52 Iowa, 541, 3 N. W. 547; Anderson v. Creamery Package Mfg. Co. 8 Idaho, 200, 56 L.R.A. 554, 101 Am. St. Rep. 188, 67 Pac. 493; Binkley v. Forkner, 117 Ind. 176, 3 L.R.A. 33, 19 N. E. 753; Baldwin v. Young, 47 La. Ann. 1466, 17 So. 883; Harris v. Hackley, 127 Mich. 46, 86 N. W. 389; Crippen v. Morrison, 13 Mich. 23; Pioneer Sav. & L. Co. v. Fuller, 57 Minn. 60, 58 N. W. 831; Defiance Mach. Works v. Trisler, 21 Mo. App. 69; Edwards & B. Lumber Co. v. Rank, 57 Neb. 323, 73 Am. St. Rep. 514, 77 N. W. 765; Langdon v. Buchanan, 62 N. H. 657; Cochran v. Flint, 57 N. H. 514; General Electric Co. v. Transit Equipment Co. 57 N. J. Eq. 460, 42 Atl. 101; Campbell v. Roddy, 44 N. J. Eq. 244, 6 Am. St. Rep. 889, 14 Atl. 279; Duffus v. Howard Furnace Co. 8 App. Div. 567, 40 N. Y. Supp. 925; Condit v. Godwin, 108 App. Div. 360, 95 N. Y. Supp. 1122; Nichols v. Potts, 35 Misc. 273, 71 N. Y. Supp. 765; Blanchard v. Eureka Planing Mill Co. 58 Or. 37, 37 L.R.A. (N.S.) 133, 113 Pac. 55; Padgett v. Cleveland, 33 S. C. 339, 11 S. E. 1069; Willis v. Munger Improved Cotton Mach. Mfg. Co. 13 Tex. Civ. App. 677, 36 S. W. 1010; Page v. Edwards, 64 Vt. 124, 23 Atl. 917; Davenport v. Shants, 43 Vt. 546; German Sav. & L. Soc. v. Weber, 16 Wash. 95, 38 L.R.A. 267, 47 Pac. 224; Monarch Laundry Co. v. Westbrook, 109 Va. 382, 63 S. E. 1070.

Digitized by Google

Does the after-acquired-property clause in the mortgage entitle the bank to the sprinkler system as against appellant's claim?

Fosdick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 235, 25 L. ed. 339; Myer v. Western Car Co. 102 U. S. 1, 26 L. ed. 59; Evans v. Kister, 35 C. C. A. 28, 92 Fed. 828; Blanchard v. Eureka Planing Mill Co. 58 Or. 37, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 133, 113 Pac. 55; Chase v. Tacoma Box Co. 11 Wash. 377, 39 Pac. 639; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; United States v. New Orleans & O. R. Co. (New Orleans & O. R. Co. v. Mellen) 12 Wall. 362, 20 L. ed. 434; Murray v. Farmville & P. R. Co. 101 Va. 262, 43 S. E. 553; First Nat. Bank v. Turnbull, 32 Gratt. 695, 34 Am. Rep. 791; General Electric Co. v. Transit Equipment Co. 57 N. J. Eq. 471, 42 Atl. 101; Cox v. New Bern Lighting & Fuel Co. 151 N. C. 62, 134 Am. St. Rep. 966, 65 S. E. 648, 18 Ann. Cas. 936; Hickson Lumber Co. v. Gay Lumber Co. 150 N. C. 282, 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 843, 63 S. E. 1045; Binkley v. Forkner, 117 Ind. 176, 3 L.R.A. 33, 19 N. E. 753; Beall v. White, 94 U. S. 382, 24 L. ed. 173; Pennock v. Coe, 23 How. 117, 16 L. ed. 436; Story, Eq. Jur. 9th ed. § 1040; Dunham v. Cincinnati, P. & C. R. Co. 1 Wall. 254, 17 L. ed. 584.

Concerning the future accessions, the deed of trust is plain. The property must be subsequently "acquired and placed" upon the premises. Under the authorities the sprinkler system was not "acquired."

York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; United States v. New Orleans & O. R. Co. (New Orleans & O. R. Co. v. Mellen) 12 Wall. 362, 20 L. ed. 434; General Electric Co. v. Transit Equipment Co. 57 N. J. Eq. 471, 42 Atl. 104.

The creditors referred to in the Virginia statute are lien creditors, and not general creditors, or persons holding unsecured claims.

McCandlish v. Keen, 13 Gratt. 638; Dulaney v. Willis, 95 Va. 606, 64 Am. St. Rep. 815, 29 S. E. 324; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 351, 50 L. ed. 782, 784, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Jones, Chat. Mortg. 4th ed. § 245.

A retroactive effect should not be given to the act of June 25, 1910, amending the bankrupt act.

Arctic Ice Mach. Co. v. Armstrong County Trust Co. 112 C. C. A. 458, 192 Fed. 114; Winfree v. Northern P. R. Co. 227 U. S. 296, 57 L. ed. 518, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Davidson Bros. Marble Co. v. United States, 213 U. S. 10, 53 L. ed. 675, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 306, 52 L. ed. 804, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537; Southwestern Coal & Improv. Co. v. McBride, 185 U. S. 499, 503, 46 L. ed. 1010, 1012, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 763; De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 1, 199, 45 L. ed. 1041, 1057, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 29 L. ed. 620, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; Chew Heong v. United States, 112 U. S. 536, 538, 557, 28 L. ed. 770, 771, 778, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Auffm'ordt v. Rasin, 102 U. S. 620, 26 L. ed. 262; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. ed. 793; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 548, 18 L. ed. 403, 408; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 450, 457, 17 L. ed. 805, 807; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 1 L. ed. 648; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Carlisle v. United States, 16 Wall. 147, 21 L. ed. 426; United States v. Kirby, 7 Wall. 482, 19 L. ed. 278; United States v. American Sugar Ref. Co. 202 U. S. 564, 50 L. ed. 1149, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717; United States v. Burr, 159 U. S. 78, 40 L. ed. 82, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1002; Twenty Per Cent Cases, 20 Wall. 179, 185, 22 L. ed. 339, 341; Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. 447, 5 Am. Dec. 308; Rhodes v. Sperry & H. Co. 193 N. Y. 223, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1143, 127 Am. St. Rep. 945, 85 N. E. 1097, 220 U. S. 502, 55 L. ed. 561, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; Richmond v. Henrico County, 83 Va. 212, 2 S. E. 26; Campbell & Co. v. Nonpareil Fire Brick & Kaolin Co. 75 Va. 291; Peters v. Auditor, 33 Gratt. 368; Price v. Harrison, 31 Gratt. 114; Stewart v. Vandervort, 12 L.R.A. 50, note; Varick v. Briggs, 6 Paige, 332; Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 580; Duval v. Malone, 14 Gratt. 24.

The law was ineffective so far as existing rights were concerned.

Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 27 L. ed. 808, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 854; Turner v. New York, 168 U. S. 91, 42 L. ed. 392, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38; Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 245, 255, 34 L. ed. 659, 663, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, 705, 34 L. ed. 304, 317, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972; Parmenter v. State, 135 N. Y. 154, 31 N. E. 1035.

Mr. Norvell L. Henley argued the cause and filed a brief for the Peninsula Bank and Norvell L. Henley, trustee:

The sprinkler system is a fixture, and passes under the deed of trust to Henley, trustee.

Union Trust Co. v. Southern Sawmills & Lumber Co. 92 C. C. A. 101, 166 Fed. 193; Tippett v. Barham, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 119, 103 C. C. A. 430, 180 Fed. 76; Green v. Phillips, 26 Gratt. 752, 21 Am. Rep. 323; Morotock Ins. Co. v. Rodefer Bros. 92 Va. 747, 53 Am. St. Rep. 848, 24 S. E. 393; Shelton v. Ficklin, 32 Gratt. 727; Haskin

Digitized by Google

Wood Vulcanizing Co. v. Cleveland Ship-Building Co. 94 Va. 439, 26 S. E. 878; Evans v. Kister, 35 C. C. A. 28, 92 Fed. 828; Kane v. Virginia Coal & I. Co. 97 Va. 329, 33 S. E. 627; Phœnix Iron Works Co. v. New York Secur. & T. Co. 28 C. C. A. 76, 54 U. S. App. 408, 83 Fed. 758; Kinkead v. United States, 150 U. S. 485, 37 L. ed. 1153, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 172; Van Ness v. Pacard, 2 Pet. 137, 7 L. ed. 374.

In the construction of written instruments the intention of the parties is to be sought and enforced; and in ascertaining this intention, the position of the parties, the nature of the agreement and subject-matter, as well as all the circumstances surrounding the transaction, are material and pertinent facts entitled to great consideration.

Southern R. Co. v. Franklin & P. R. Co. 96 Va. 696, 44 L.R.A. 297, 32 S. E. 485; Albert v. Tidewater R. Co. 107 Va. 256, 58 S. E. 575.

A reservation of title is not good in Virginia, except as between the parties thereto, unless docketed as required by the statute law of Virginia.

Arbuckle Bros. v. Gates, 95 Va. 802, 30 S. E. 496. See also Re Nelson, 191 Fed. 236.

Regardless of the question of fixtures, Holt's claim is not valid, and the weight of authority is against it.

Kesner v. Trigg, 98 U. S. 50, 53, 25 L. ed. 83; Wickham v. Martin, 13 Gratt. 427; Evans v. Kister, 35 C. C. A. 28, 92 Fed. 828; Monarch Laundry v. Westbrook, 109 Va. 382, 63 S. E. 1070; Hash v. Lore, 88 Va. 716, 14 S. E. 365; Brown v. Grand Rapids Parlor Furniture Co. 22 L.R.A. 817, 7 C. C. A. 225, 16 U. S. App. 221, 58 Fed. 286; Murray v. Farmville & P. R. Co. 101 Va. 262, 43 S. E. 553; Arbuckle Bros. v. Gates, 95 Va. 802, 30 S. E. 496; Chapman v. Chapman, 91 Va. 400, 50 Am. St. Rep. 846, 21 S. E. 813; Vest v. Michie, 31 Gratt. 149, 31 Am. Rep. 722; Johnson v. National Exch. Bank, 33 Gratt. 473; Morrison v. Bausemer, 32 Gratt. 225; Kinkead v. United States, 150 U. S. 485, 37 L. ed. 1153, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 172; Van Ness v. Pacard, 2 Pet. 137, 7 L. ed. 374; New Orleans Canal & Bkg. Co. v. Montgomery, 95 U. S. 16, 24 L. ed. 346; Wickham v. Martin, 13 Gratt. 436.

The after-acquired property clause in the deed of trust to Henley, trustee, is sufficiently full to cover the property in question, irrespective of whether it is a fixture or whether it remained personalty.

Tippett v. Barham, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 119, 103 C. C. A. 430, 180 Fed. 76; Arbuckle Bros. v. Gates, 95 Va. 802, 30 S. E. 496; Hart v. Haynes, 1 Va. Dec. 201; United Lines Teleg. Co. v. Boston Safe Deposit & T. Co. 147 U. S. 431, 37 L. ed. 231, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Pennock v. Coe, 23 How. 117, 16 L. ed. 436; Bear Lake & River Waterworks & Irrig. Co. v. Garland, 164 U. S. 1, 15, 41 L. ed. 327, 333, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7; Benjamin, Sales, 2d ed. p. 99; Weil v. State, 46 Ohio St. 450, 21 N. E. 643; Speyer v. Baker, 59 Ohio St. 11, 51 N. E. 442; Collins v. Wilhoit, 108 Mo. 451, 18 S. W. 839; S. H. Sheldon Co. v. Mayers, 81 Wis. 627, 51 N. W. 1082; Vorse v. Loomis, 86 Iowa, 522, 53 N. W. 314; National Cash Register Co. v. Schwab, 111 Iowa, 605, 82 N. W. 1011; Moline Plow Co. v. Witham, 52 Kan. 185, 34 Pac. 751; Knowles Loom Works v. Vacher, 57 N. J. L. 490, 33 L.R.A. 305, 31 Atl. 306; Woolley v. Geneva Wagon Co. 59 N. J. L. 278, 35 Atl. 789; D. M. Osborne Co. v. Plano Mfg. Co. 51 Neb. 502, 70 N. W. 1124; Dorntee Casket Co. v. Gunnison, 69 N. H. 297, 45 Atl. 318; Davis v. Osgood, 69 N. H. 427, 44 Atl. 432; Re Wilcox & H. Co. 70 Conn. 220, 39 Atl. 163; Hirsch v. Graves Elevator Co. 24 Misc. 472, 53 N. Y. Supp. 664; H. H. Babcock Co. v. Williams, 75 Minn. 147, 77 N. W. 791; Brandon Printing Co. v. Bostick, 126 Ala. 247, 28 So. 705; Winchester Wagon Works Mfg. Co. v. Carman, 109 Ind. 31, 58 Am. Rep. 382, 9 N. E. 707; Steele v. Aspy, 128 Ind. 367, 27 N. E. 739.

Where vendor, upon a conditional sale, has delivered specific goods, and vendee has taken possession and used them in all respects as his own, the vendor retaining title until full purchase price is paid, the vendee has an interest which he can convey, and one attachable by his creditors. The vendee incurs an absolute obligation to pay, and he is responsible for goods in the event they are destroyed by fire while in his possession.

Tufts v. Griffin, 107 N. C. 47, 10 L.R.A. 526, 22 Am. St. Rep. 866, 12 S. E. 68.

A vendor under a conditional contract, not recorded, loses his claim against the trustees in bankruptcy under the amendment of 1910.

Re Calhoun Supply Co. 189 Fed. 537; Re Hartdagen, 189 Fed. 547.

It is a principle of real-estate law that permanent improvements placed upon land become a part of the realty, and the owner must take notice that all liens which rest upon the fee will necessarily attach to such permanent structures as he may choose to erect.

1 Minor, Real Prop. §§ 17, 23; Nixdorf v. Blount, 111 Va. 127, 68 S. E. 258.

Mr. O. D. Batchelor argued the cause and filed a brief for the trustees in bankruptcy:

One of the familiar rules governing the construction of a remedial statute is that the mischief which it was designed to correct must be looked to in determining its meaning.

Digitized by Google

York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 352, 50 L. ed. 785, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481.

Every trustee in bankruptcy appointed since June 25, 1910, becomes vested with all the rights and remedies of a judgment and execution creditor of the bankrupt as of the date of the adjudication.

3 Remington, Bankr. 331; Collier, Bankr. 1912, pp. 660, 661; Re Bazemore, 189 Fed. 236; Re Nelson, 191 Fed. 233; Re Gehris-Herbine Co. 188 Fed. 502; Re Calhoun Supply Co. 189 Fed. 537; Re Farmers' Supply Co. 196 Fed. 990; Re Kreuger, 199 Fed. 367; Re Franklin Lumber Co. 187 Fed. 281; Re Gaglione, 200 Fed. 81; Re Farmers' Co-op. Co. 202 Fed. 1008; Re Osborn, 116 C. C. A. 59, 196 Fed. 257; Arctic Ice Mach. Co. v. Armstrong County Trust Co. 112 C. C. A. 458, 192 Fed. 114; Re Hartdagen, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 532; Sturdivant Bank v. Schade, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; Re Calhoun Supply Co. 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528; Re Sterne, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540; Re Hammond, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 336.

The amendment was intended to apply to every bankruptcy, the petition in which was filed after its passage.

Re Farmers' Co-op. Co. 202 Fed. 1010.

The mortgagee, by virtue of the after-acquired-property clause, takes such title only to after-acquired property as the mortgagor has.

Fosdick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 235, 25 L. ed. 329.

Virginia Code, § 2462, manifestly contemplated subsequent purchasers, for it obviously relates to a purchase of the subject of the conditional sale.

Monarch Laundry v. Westbrook, 109 Va. 384, 63 S. E. 1070.

Is the sprinkler system a permanent fixture?

Green v. Phillips, 26 Gratt. 759, 21 Am. Rep. 323; Monarch Laundry v. Westbrook, supra; Haskin Wood Vulcanizing Co. v. Cleveland Ship-Building Co. 94 Va. 439, 26 S. E. 878.

The local law of Virginia will be followed by the Federal courts in determining whether the sprinkler equipment in question is a fixture.

New York L. Ins. Co. v. Allison, 46 C. C. A. 229, 107 Fed. 179.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition to the district court, sitting in bankruptcy for leave to remove an automatic sprinkler system and equipment from the premises of the bankrupt, the Williamsburg Knitting Mill Company. It is opposed by the trustee of a mortgage of the plant of the company and the holder of the mortgage notes, and by the trustee in bankruptcy, both of which parties claim the property. The referee, the district court, and the circuit court of appeals, decided in favor of the latter claims. 190 Fed. 871, 113 C. C. A. 87, 193 Fed. 1020. The petitioner, Holt, appeals. The facts are as follows: An agreement to install the sprinkler was signed by Holt on August 28, 1909, and by the bankrupt on October 14, 1909. The installation was begun about December 6, 1909, and finished in the latter part of March, 1910, the equipment consisting of a 50,000-gallon tank on a steel tower, bolted to a concrete foundation, pipes connecting the tank with the mill. By the agreement the system was to remain Holt's property until paid for, and Holt was to have a right to enter and remove it upon a failure to pay as agreed. It also was to be personal property during the same time. A large part of the price has not been paid. But by the Code of Virginia, § 2462, unless registered as therein provided, which this was not, such sales are void [639] as to creditors (construed by the Virginia courts to mean lien creditors only), and as to purchasers for value without notice from the vendee. On November 23, 1909, the mortgage deed was executed, covering the plant on the premises, and that "which may be acquired and placed upon the said premises during the continuance of this trust." The mortgagees claim the system by virtue of this clause and the fact that it had been attached to the soil. As bearing on this last it should be added that there now is a smaller tank on the same steel tower, that supplies the mill for domestic purposes, but this was not put there by Holt.

The trustees in bankruptcy join with Holt in disputing the claim of the mortgagees, but set up one of their own, which we will deal with before discussing that of the mortgagees. They rely upon the act of June 25, 1910, chap. 412, § 8, 36 Stat. at L. 838, 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1500, amending § 47a (2) of the bankruptcy act [30 Stat. at L. 557, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3438], and giving them, as to all property coming into the custody of the bankruptcy court, the rights of a creditor holding a lien. Before that amendment, Holt had a better title than the trustees would have got. York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481. We are of opinion that the act should not be construed to impair it. We do not need to consider whether or how far in any event the constitutional power of Congress would have been limited. It is enough that the reasonable and usual interpretation of such statutes is to confine their effect, so far as may be, to property rights established after they were passed. If, as they sometimes do, the registry statute had fixed a time within which the registration must take place, and the time had elapsed, we think it clear that the amendment would not be read as attempting to diminish Holt's rights. But the most obvious, if not the only, way of reaching that result, would be by taking the amendment to affect subsequently established rights alone. That is a familiar and natural mode of interpretation, whereas it [640] would be highly artificial to say that it affected existing rights that still might be secured, but not those for which the chance had been lost. Therefore we think it immaterial if true, that for a month or two after the amendment was passed Holt might have docketed a memorandum, as provided by the Virginia act. The retention of title by him, and his refraining from recording it, both were perfectly lawful. His continuing title simply was postponed to purchasers without notice and creditors getting a lien. We are of opinion that it was not affected by the enactment of later date than the conditional sale. The opposite construction would not simply extend a remedy, but would impute to the act of Congress an intent to take away rights lawfully retained, and unimpeachable at the moment when they took their start. We agree with the decision in Arctic Ice Mach. Co. v. Armstrong County Trust Co. 112 C. C. A. 458, 192 Fed. 114; Re Schneider, 203 Fed. 589. See also Southwestern Coal & Improv. Co. v. McBride, 185 U. S. 499, 503, 46 L. ed. 1010, 1012, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 763.

Digitized by Google

We turn now to the claim of the mortgagees. This is based upon the clause extending the mortgage to plant that may be acquired and placed upon the premises while the mortgage is in force, coupled with the subsequent attachment of the system to the freehold. But the foundation upon which all their rights depend is the Virginia statute giving priority to purchasers for value without notice over Holt's unrecorded reservation of title; and as the mortgage deed was executed before the sprinkler system was put in, and the mortgagees made no advance on the faith of it, they were not purchasers for value as against Holt. York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 351, 352, 50 L. ed. 782, 784, 785, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481. There are no special facts to give them a better position in that regard. But that being so, what reason can be given for not respecting Holt's title as against them? The system was attached to the freehold, but it could be removed without any serious harm for which complaint [641] could be made against Holt, other than the loss of the system itself. Removal would not affect the integrity of the structure on which the mortgagees advanced. To hold that the mere fact of annexing the system to the freehold overrode the agreement that it should remain personalty and still belong to Holt would be to give a mystic importance to attachment by bolts and screws. For, as we have said, the mortgagees have no equity and do not bring themselves within the statutory provision. We believe the better rule in a case like this, and the one consistent with the Virginia decisions so far as they have gone, is that "the mortgagees take just such an interest in the property as the mortgagor acquired; no more, no less." Fosdick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 235, 25 L. ed. 339; Myer v. Western Car Co. 102 U. S. 1, 26 L. ed. 59; Monarch Laundry v. Westbrook, 109 Va. 382, 384, 385, 63 S. E. 1070; Hurxthal v. Hurxthal, 45 W. Va. 584, 32 S. E. 237; Campbell v. Roddy, 44 N. J. Eq. 244, 6 Am. St. Rep. 889, 14 Atl. 279; Davis v. Bliss, 187 N. Y. 77, 10 L.R.A. (N.S.) 458, 79 N. E. 851; Hendy v. Dinkerhoff, 57 Cal. 3, 40 Am. Rep. 107; Binkley v. Forkner, 117 Ind. 176, 3 L.R.A. 33, 19 N. E. 753; Cox v. New Bern Lighting & Fuel Co. 151 N. C. 62, 134 Am. St. Rep. 966, 65 S. E. 648, 18 Ann. Cas. 936; Baldwin v. Young, 47 La. Ann. 1466, 17 So. 883; Re Sunflower State Ref. Co. 115 C. C. A. 132, 139, 195 Fed. 180, 187. The case is not like those in which the addition was in its nature an essential indispensable part of the completed structure contemplated by the mortgage. The system, although useful and valuable, can be removed and the works still go on.

Decree reversed.

---

[642] WILLIAM H. GARLAND, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF WASHINGTON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 642-647.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — criminal case — necessity of arraignment and plea.

A conviction upon a second and amended information after a prior conviction under the original information had been set aside and a new trial granted was not wanting in

---

NOTE.—Necessity of arraignment or plea after amendment to indictment or information.

Whether or not it is necessary to arraign defendant and give him an opportunity to plead, after the indictment or information the due process of law guaranteed by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., because no arraignment or plea was had upon the second information, where, without raising that specific objection before trial, the accused had made certain objections to such information, and was put to a trial thereon before a jury in all respects as though he had entered a formal plea of not guilty.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 9, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 226.]

Submitted January 29, 1914. Decided March 16, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction of larceny in the Superior Court of King County in that state. Affirmed.

See same case below, 65 Wash. 666, 118 Pac. 907.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William H. Gorham submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. O. L. Willett and Frank Oleson were on the brief:

It was not due process of law to try, convict, and sentence plaintiff in error on an information on which he had never been arraigned and to which he had never pleaded.

Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 40 L. ed. 1097, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 952.

It is true that in the Crain Case the prosecution had been commenced in the Federal court, and therefore the ruling of the Crain Case is based on the due process of law clause of the 5th rather than the 14th Amendment; but it has been decided by this court that the due process of law clause of the 14th Amendment places the same inhibition on the states as does the 5th Amendment on the Federal government.

Hibben v. Smith, 191 U. S. 310, 48 L. ed. 195, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 88.

There cannot legally be two informations in the same case at the same time.

22 Cyc. 275, 276; Rice v. People, 15 Mich. 9.

The public has an interest in the accused's life and liberty. Neither can be lawfully taken except in the mode prescribed by law.

---

has been amended, usually depends upon the materiality of the amendment.

Thus, after an amendment to cure a defect in the information which placed the date of the commission of the crime subsequent to the date of the filing of the information, it is error to require the accused, over his objection, immediately to proceed to the trial without arraignment under a plea to such amended information. McKay v. State, 90 Neb. 63, 39 L.R.A. (N.S.) 714, 132 N. W. 741, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 1034, rehearing denied in 91 Neb. 281, 39 L.R.A.(N.S.) 720, 135 N. W. 1024, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 1039.

Where the information has been materially amended, it is reversible error to put the defendant on trial without arraigning him again and giving him an opportunity to plead. State v. Vaughn, 223 Mo. 149, 122 S. W. 677.

It is reversible error not to give the defendant the statutory time to plead, where the information has been materially changed by the amendment. State v. DeWolfe, 29 Mont. 415, 74 Pac. 1084.

The omission to have the defendant arraigned and called on to plead after an amendment was made to the information, which, before the amendment, stated no crime, was held error in People v. Moody, 69 Cal. 184, 10 Pac. 392.

Where there was no arraignment upon a second information, nor any plea by the defendant thereto, it was held, in State v. Hoffman, 70 Mo. App. 271, that the judgment must be reversed.

In McFadin v. State, 44 Tex. Crim. Rep. 471, 72 S. W. 172, where the original prosecution against the defendant was dismissed, and a new complaint and information were filed, it was held that a refusal to give the defendant the full statutory time to plead to the new information was error.

The mere correction of a clerical or other immaterial error in the indictment does not require a second arraignment and plea. State v. Sovern, 225 Mo. 580, 125 S. W. 769; State v. Dargatz, 244 Mo. 218, 148 S. W. 889; State v. Foley, 44 Mont. 311, 120 Pac. 225; Rasmussen v. State, 63 Wis. 1, 22 N. W. 835; State v. Speyer, 194 Mo. 459, 91 S. W. 1079.

Where an amendment was made to the information which was one of form only, and did not change the nature of the offense charged, nor in any way prejudice the rights of the defendant, it was held, in State v. Beatty, 45 Kan. 492, 25 Pac. 899, that a waiver of the arraignment and plea to the original information was sufficient to create the issue and support conviction. And to the same effect was State v. Bugg, 66 Kan. 668, 72 Pac. 236, 14 Am. Crim. Rep. 109.

In Territory v. Marshall, 13 Haw. 76, where it did not appear by the record that the defendant pleaded to an amended charge, it was held that the matter of a plea was a question of form, and in no wise would affect the proceedings unless it could be shown that it had in some wise been prejudicial to the defendant.

If the information has been lost and there is a substituted information, no second arraignment and plea are necessary. Goodman v. State, 161 Ind. 629, 69 N. E. 442.

Generally, upon the effect on conviction of failure to give accused an opportunity to plead, see notes to State v. Walton, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 811, and Hack v. State, 45 L.R.A.(N.S.) 664.

Digitized by Google

That which the law makes essential in proceedings involving the deprivation of life or liberty cannot be dispensed with or vacated by the consent of the accused; much less by his mere failure, when on trial and in custody, to object to unauthorized methods.

Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 417.

A crime is made up of acts and intent; and these must be set forth in the indictment, with reasonable particularity of time, place, and circumstances. It is a crime to steal goods and chattels, but an indictment would be bad that did not specify with some degree of certainty the articles stolen. This, because the accused must be advised of the essential particulars of the charge against him, and the court must be able to decide whether the property taken was such as was the subject of larceny. Therefore, the indictment should state the particulars, informing the court as well as the accused.

United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588.

Mr. Hugh M. Caldwell submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. John F. Murphy and H. B. Butler were on the brief:

The purpose of arraignment is to inform the accused what the charge against him is, and to obtain his answer thereto.

United States v. McKnight, 112 Fed. 982.

The formality of arraignment and plea may be waived either expressly or impliedly.

Hack v. State, 141 Wis. 346, 45 L.R.A. (N.S.) 664, 124 N. W. 492; State v. Straub, 16 Wash. 111, 47 Pac. 227; State v. Garland, 65 Wash. 666, 118 Pac. 907; Bassett v. State, 44 Fla. 12, 33 So. 262; Hudson v. State, 117 Ga. 704, 45 S. E. 66; Feriter v. State, 33 Ind. 283; Meyers v. State, 156 Ind. 388, 59 N. E. 1052; Gaines v. United States, 1 Ind. Terr. 296, 37 S. W. 98; Roper v. United States, 7 Ind. Terr. 185, 104 S. W. 584; Utterback v. Com. 105 Ky. 723, 88 Am. St. Rep. 329, 49 S. W. 479; State v. Rasberry, 113 La. 651, 37 So. 545; State v. Brock, 61 S. C. 141, 39 S. E. 359; McCampbell v. State, 116 Tenn. 98, 93 S. W. 100; United States v. Molloy, 31 Fed. 19; State v. Thompson, 95 Iowa, 464, 64 N. W. 419; State v. Glave, 51 Kan. 330, 33 Pac. 8; People v. Tower, 63 Hun, 624.

We agree that a state could not pass a law providing for trial without arraignment and plea, but do not believe that the Crain Case goes to the extent of holding that a state could not pass a law providing that a defendant had the right to and could waive such formality if he saw fit. In fact, such laws have been passed in some states and their validity has never been questioned.

Hudson v. State, 117 Ga. 704, 45 S. E. 66; Gaines v. United States, 1 Ind. Terr. 296, 37 S. W. 98; Utterback v. Com. 105 Ky. 723, 88 Am. St. Rep. 329, 49 S. W. 479.

The question of filing one or more informations against a defendant, charging the same offense, is a matter of state regulation.

Brannon, 14th Amend. 417; New York v. Eno, 155 U. S. 89, 39 L. ed. 80, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error was convicted in the superior court of King county, Washington, upon an information charging him with larceny of "a check payable for the sum of $1,000 in money." Upon appeal the conviction was affirmed by the supreme court of Washington (65 Wash. 666, 118 Pac. 907), and the case comes here upon writ of error.

It appears that a previous information had charged the accused with the larceny of "one thousand dollars ($1,000) in lawful money of the United States." Upon that information he was arraigned, entered a plea of not guilty, was tried and convicted. A new trial was awarded, and [644] thereafter the second information was filed, making the charge as above stated. Before trial the plaintiff in error filed a "motion directed to second information," containing a motion to quash, a motion to strike out, and a motion to make more definite and certain, all of which were denied. No arraignment or plea was had upon that information. The case having been called for trial and the jury having been impaneled, the plaintiff in error, by his counsel, objected to the introduction of any evidence upon the ground that the state had no right to try the plaintiff in error on the information then before the court. This general objection was overruled. No specific objection was taken before the trial to the want of formal arraignment upon the second information. The jury, at the conclusion of the trial upon the second information, returned a verdict of guilty, and sentence was passed upon the plaintiff in error.

It is apparent that the accused was tried and convicted upon an information charging an offense against the law; that he had a jury trial, with full opportunity to be heard, and that he was in fact deprived of no right or privilege in the making of his defense, unless such deprivation arises from the fact that he was not arraigned and required to plead to the second information before trial. The object of arraignment being to inform the accused of the charge against him and obtain an answer from him was fully subserved in this case, for the accused had taken objections to the second information, and was put to trial before a jury upon that information in all respects as though he had entered a formal plea of not guilty. In this view, the supreme court of Washington, following its former decisions, held that the failure to enter the plea had deprived the accused of no substantial right, and that having failed to make objection upon that ground before trial, it was waived and could not be subsequently taken. This ruling, it is contended, deprived the plaintiff in error of his liberty [645] without due process of law within the meaning of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution.

Digitized by Google

Due process of law, this court has held, does not require the state to adopt any particular form of procedure, so long as it appears that the accused has had sufficient notice of the accusation and an adequate opportunity to defend himself in the prosecution. Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 435, 50 L. ed. 256, 260, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87, and previous cases in this court there cited. Tried by this test it cannot for a moment be maintained that the want of formal arraignment deprived the accused of any substantial right, or in any wise changed the course of trial to his disadvantage. All requirements of due process of law in criminal trials in a state, as laid down in the repeated decisions of this court, were fully met by the proceedings had against the accused in the trial court. The objection was merely a formal one, was not included in the general language in which the objection to the introduction of evidence was interposed before the trial, and was evidently reserved with a view to the use which is now made of it, in an attempt to gain a new trial for want of compliance with what in this case could have been no more than a mere formality.

It is insisted, however, that this court in the case of Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 40 L. ed. 1097, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 952, held the contrary. In that case the question was specifically made as to the necessity of a plea before trial, duly entered of record. The learned justice who spoke for the majority of the court announced its conclusion approving a number of early cases in the state courts which had held that such form of arraignment entered of record was essential to a legal trial, and holding that in a Federal court no valid trial could be had without the requisite arraignment and plea, and that such must be shown by the record of conviction. If a legal trial cannot be had without a plea to the indictment, duly entered of record before trial, it would follow that such omission in the present case requires a reversal [646] of the judgment of conviction, because the prisoner has been deprived of due process of law.

Technical objections of this character were undoubtedly given much more weight formerly than they are now. Such rulings originated in that period of English history when the accused was entitled to few rights in the presentation of his defense, when he could not be represented by counsel, nor heard upon his own oath, and when the punishment of offenses, even of a trivial character, was of a severe and often of a shocking nature. Under that system the courts were disposed to require that the technical forms and methods of procedure should be fully complied with. But with improved methods of procedure and greater privileges to the accused, any reason for such strict adherence to the mere formalities of trial would seem to have passed away, and we think that the better opinion, when applied to a situation such as now confronts us, was expressed in the dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Peckham, speaking for the minority of the court in the Crain Case, when he said (p. 649):

"Here the defendant could not have been injured by an inadvertence of that nature. He ought to be held to have waived that which, under the circumstances, would have been a wholly unimportant formality. A waiver ought to be conclusively implied where the parties had proceeded as if defendant had been duly arraigned, and a formal plea of not guilty had been interposed, and where there was no objection made on account of its absence until, as in this case, the record was brought to this court for review. It would be inconsistent with the due administration of justice to permit a defendant under such circumstances to lie by, say nothing as to such an objection, and then for the first time urge it in this court."

Holding this view, notwithstanding our reluctance to overrule former decisions of this court, we now are constrained to hold that the technical enforcement of formal [647] rights in criminal procedure sustained in the Crain Case is no longer required in the prosecution of offenses under present systems of law, and so far as that case is not in accord with the views herein expressed, it is necessarily overruled.

The other objection to the procedure in the state court which it is alleged deprived the plaintiff in error of due process of law upon his trial, rests in the contention that he was put to trial upon two informations, containing different charges, without notice as to which charge he would be required to meet, and sentenced upon a general verdict of guilty. We think that the record discloses that there is nothing in this objection of substantial merit, and that it appears that the accused was put to trial and convicted upon the second information, with every opportunity to defend himself against the offense therein charged.

Digitized by Google

Judgment of the Supreme Court of Washington is accordingly affirmed.

GRANT BROTHERS CONSTRUCTION COMPANY et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 647–665.)

Appeal — scope of review — question not raised in intermediate appellate court.

1. Errors not involving anything fundamental or jurisdictional will not be considered by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a territorial supreme court, where they were not brought to the notice of the latter court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Action — civil or criminal — suit for penalty — depositions — reasonable doubt.

2. An action of debt brought by the United States to recover the prescribed penalty for violations of the contract labor provisions of the alien immigration act of February 20, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 898, chap. 1134, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 499), § 4, is civil, and not criminal, in character, so that the trial court may permit the government to read in evidence the depositions of absent witnesses, and may instruct the jury to return a verdict for the government, if the evidence reasonably preponderates in its favor, and in other ways treat the case as civil in substance as well as in form.

[For other cases, see Action or Suit, 7-9; Criminal Law, 108-111; Depositions, 73-84; Evidence, 2552-2554, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — sufficiency of pleading — first raising question in appellate court.

3. The omission from the petition, in an action of debt brought by the United States to recover the prescribed penalty for violations of the contract labor provisions of the alien immigration act of February 20, 1907, § 4, of any allegation that the acts charged against the defendant were knowingly done, is not ground for reversal of a judgment entered upon a verdict in favor of the government, where such defect was not pointed out in the trial court, but, on the contrary, the case was tried as if the omitted allegations were in the petition, and the jury were instructed that the defendant's knowledge was an essential factor in the case.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. j, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Depositions — suppression — errors in notice.

4. Depositions taken by the plaintiff need not be suppressed because the preliminary notice described the case as pending in the district in which it was originally brought, instead of in the district to which the case had been transferred at the defendant's instance, after the notice and the accompanying interrogatories were prepared, but before they were served, where no cross interrogatories were filed in either district, and after the expiration of the time allowed for them the clerk of the district in which the case was pending issued the commission, since counsel for the defendant could not have been misled or confused by the error in the notice.

[For other cases, see Depositions, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — judgment — admissibility against stranger — alienage.

5. A determination by an immigration board that certain persons brought before the board were aliens is admissible in an action of debt brought by the United States to recover the prescribed penalty for violating the contract labor provisions of the alien immigration act of February 20, 1907, § 4, by aiding or inducing the migration or importation of such persons, as furnishing prima facie, though not conclusive, evidence of their alienage.

[For other cases, see Evidence, IV. k, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Aliens — immigration — contract labor — number of penalties.

6. A separate penalty is incurred for each of a number of aliens whose simultaneous migration or importation is knowingly assisted, encouraged, or solicited contrary to the contract labor provisions of the alien immigration act of February 20, 1907, § 4, such statute declaring in § 5 that "separate suits may be brought for each alien thus promised labor or service."

[For other cases, see Aliens, VI. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Costs — against defendant in suit for penalty.

7. Costs are properly awarded to the government against the unsuccessful defendants in an action of debt brought by the United States to recover the penalties prescribed for violations of the provisions of the alien immigration act of February 20, 1907, § 4, directed against the importation of alien contract labor.

[For other cases, see Costs, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

On suit for statutory penalty as a civil or criminal prosecution—see note to Hepner v. United States, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 739.

On depositions in the Federal courts—see note to Winans v. New York & E. R. Co.

Digitized by Google

Argued January 21 and 22, 1914. Decided March 16, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of the First Judicial District in such territory in favor of the United States in a suit to recover the prescribed penalties for violations of the contract labor provisions of the alien immigration act. Affirmed.

See same case below, 13 Ariz. 388, 114 Pac. 955.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Isidore B. Dockweiler argued the cause, and, with Messrs. A. C. Baker and Robert B. Murphey, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The statute imposing this penalty is highly penal, and must be strictly construed so as to bring within its condemnation only those who are shown by direct and positive averments in the complaint to be embraced within the terms of the law.

United States v. Edgar, 45 Fed. 46, 1 C. C. A. 52, 4 U. S. App. 41, 48 Fed. 91; McElroy v. United States, 164 U. S. 76, 41 L. ed. 355, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31; United States v. Gay, 37 C. C. A. 46, 95 Fed. 226; United States v. Tsokas, 163 Fed. 129; Regan v. United States, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1073, 105 C. C. A. 505, 183 Fed. 293; United States v. Regan, 121 C. C. A. 543, 203 Fed. 433; Lees v. United States, 150 U. S. 476, 478, 37 L. ed. 1150, 1151, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Hepner v. United States, 213 U. S. 103, 53 L. ed. 720, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 739, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474, 16 Ann. Cas. 960; United States v. Stevenson, 215 U. S. 190, 54 L. ed. 153, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35.

In order to incur the statutory penalty it is essential that the acts of assistance, encouragement, or solicitation be knowingly done, with knowledge that the person assisted, etc., is an alien contract laborer as defined by the statute.

2 Bishop, New Crim. Law, ¶¶ 504, 523–525; Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 39 L. ed. 390, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; United States v. Scott, 74 Fed. 213; United States v. Mitchell, 141 Fed. 666; State v. Williams, 139 Ind. 43, 47 Am. St. Rep. 255, 38 N. E. 339; State v. Waterbury, 133 Iowa, 137, 110 N. W. 328; People v. Root, 94 App. Div. 84, 87 N. Y. Supp. 962; Rex v. Lawley, 2 Strange, 904; Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 40 L. ed. 606, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434, 480, 1 Am. Crim. Rep. 251; Price v. United States, 165 U. S. 311, 41 L. ed. 727, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366; Verona Central Cheese Co. v. Murtaugh, 50 N. Y. 314; Driskill v. Parrish, 3 McLean, 631, Fed. Cas. No. 4,089; Darnborough v. Joseph Benn & Sons, 109 C. C. A. 270, 187 Fed. 580; United States v. Craig, 28 Fed. 795; United States v. Borneman, 41 Fed. 751; Lees v. United States, 150 U. S. 476, 37 L. ed. 1150, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Rex v. Hayes, 23 Can. Law Times Occ. N. 88, 5 Ont. L. Rep. 198; State v. Davis, 14 R. I. 284; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 209, 37 L. ed. 424, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; United States v. Terry, 42 Fed. 317; United States v. Kirby, 7 Wall. 482, 486, 19 L. ed. 278, 280; United States v. Claypool, 14 Fed. 127; United States v. Koplik, 155 Fed. 919; United States v. Highleyman, Fed. Cas. No. 15,361; United States v. Janke, 183 Fed. 277; First Nat. Bank v. Davis, 135 Ga. 687, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 134, 70 S. E. 246; Robinson v. State, 6 Ga. App. 696, 65 S. E. 792; State v. Bridgewater, 171 Ind. 1, 85 N. E. 715; State v. Smith, 18 N. H. 91; Verona Central Cheese Co. v. Murtaugh, 50 N. Y. 314, reversing 4 Lans. 17; Gregory v. United States, 17 Blatchf. 330, Fed. Cas. No. 5,803; Clark & M. Crimes, ¶ 55; McDonald v. Williams, 174 U. S. 397, 406, 43 L. ed. 1022, 1026, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; Felton v. United States, 96 U. S. 699, 24 L. ed. 875; Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 39 L. ed. 214, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 144; Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, 206 U. S. 158, 51 L. ed. 1002, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. United States, 94 C. C. A. 437, 169 Fed. 69; St. Joseph Stockyards Co. v. United States, 110 C. C. A. 432, 187 Fed. 104; United States v. Beaty, Hempst. 487, Fed. Cas. No. 14,555; State v. McBarron, 66 N. J. L. 680, 51 Atl. 146; Utley v. Hill, 155 Mo. 232, 49 L.R.A. 323, 78 Am. St. Rep. 569, 55 S. W. 1091; State v. Smith, 119 Tenn. 521, 105 S. W. 68.

None of the forty-five counts of the complaint contain any allegation that the defendant knowingly assisted, encouraged, or solicited the migration or importation to the United States of the person named in each count, or that the defendant knew at the time that such person was an "alien contract laborer," as defined by the statute.

Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 202, 37 L. ed. 419, 422, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; United States v. Gay, 37 C. C. A. 46, 95 Fed. 226; Moffitt v. United States, 63 C. C. A. 117, 128 Fed. 375; Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 606, 42 L. ed. 1162, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 774; United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 168, 174, 21 L. ed. 538, 539; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. ed. 588, 593; United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. ed. 1135, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 246; United States v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360, 24 L. ed. 819; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 31 L. ed. 516, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep.

Digitized by Google

571; Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584, 38 L. ed. 830, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 668; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 79, 52 L. ed. 693, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428.

Failure to allege an essential element of a statutory offense is fatal, can be taken advantage of at any time, and is not cured by verdict.

Supreme Lodge, K. P. v. McLennan, 171 Ill. 417, 49 N. E. 530, affirming 69 Ill. App. 599; Evans v. Gerken, 105 Cal. 311, 38 Pac. 725; Morris v. Courtney, 120 Cal. 63, 52 Pac. 129; United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611, 26 L. ed. 1135, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 246; 1 Bishop, New Crim. Proc. ¶ 123, subdiv. 3; Teal v. Walker, 111 U. S. 242, 28 L. ed. 415, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420; Kentucky Life & Acci. Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, 11 C. C. A. 42, 22 U. S. App. 386, 548, 63 Fed. 93; Slacum v. Pomery, 6 Cranch, 221, 3 L. ed. 205.

The hearing of the board of special inquiry was a star chamber proceeding.

United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 48 L. ed. 917, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621.

The functions of a board of special inquiry are not judicial, but are ministerial.

Pearson v. Williams, 202 U. S. 281, 50 L. ed. 1029, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 608.

The hearing of the board "shall be separate and apart from the public," but the determination of the board is not final, even if not appealed from, but subject to collateral attack by the United States, if favorable to the alien.

Li Sing v. United States, 180 U. S. 488, 45 L. ed. 635, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449.

The order of the special board of inquiry is not competent as a public record. It is in the same category as inquisitions of lunacy and coroners' verdicts as to the cause of death of deceased persons. In the following cases, the order of committal of persons to an asylum was excluded as incompetent:

Leggate v. Clark, 111 Mass. 310; Naanes v. State, 143 Ind. 299, 42 N. E. 609; Dewey v. Allgire, 37 Neb. 9, 40 Am. St. Rep. 468, 55 N. W. 276.

As to the competency of coroners' verdicts, they have been held to be incompetent in the following cases:

State v. Turner, Wright (Ohio) 20; Wheeler v. State, 34 Ohio St. 398, 32 Am. Rep. 372; Colquit v. State, 107 Tenn. 381, 64 S. W. 713; Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Womack, 84 Ala. 149, 4 So. 618; Hollister v. Cordero, 76 Cal. 649, 18 Pac. 855; Rowe v. Such, 134 Cal. 573, 66 Pac. 862, 67 Pac. 760; Germania L. Ins. Co. v. Ross Lewin, 24 Colo. 43, 65 Am. St. Rep. 215, 51 Pac. 488; Central R. Co. v. Moore, 61 Ga. 151; State use of Grice v. Cecil County, 54 Md. 426; Supreme Council, R. A. v. Brashears, 89 Md. 624, 73 Am. St. Rep. 244, 43 Atl. 866; Wasey v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 126 Mich. 119, 85 N. W. 459; Cox v. Royal Tribe, 42 Or. 365, 60 L.R.A. 620, 95 Am. St. Rep. 752, 71 Pac. 73.

An agency or the extent of an agency, or the authority of an agent, cannot be proven by the acts and declarations of the person professing authority to act as such agent; nor are the acts and declarations of such a person admissible as admissions against the principal until the authority to bind the principal is shown.

United States v. Boyd, 5 How. 29, 12 L. ed. 36; Regan v. United States, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1073, 105 C. C. A. 505, 183 Fed. 293.

A commission issued without notice having been served is void, for without such, the clerk would have no authority to issue the commission, and the officer taking the depositions likewise did so without authority.

Harris v. Wall, 7 How. 695, 12 L. ed. 875.

If the defendant thought the notice for the second judicial district court was bad, its course was to treat it as a nullity, which in fact it was, and move to suppress the depositions, if taken.

Kline Bros. & Co. v. Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. 184 Fed. 969.

A party who attempts to use a deposition of an absent witness must show that he has given his adversary an opportunity to cross-examine by a notice that is definite and certain.

Knode v. Williamson, 17 Wall. 587, 21 L. ed. 671.

Depositions taken after an adjournment of a week are not taken according to a notice that they will be taken upon a specified day, and, if not completed in one day, the commissioners will adjourn from day to day thereafter until finished.

Buddicum v. Kirk, 3 Cranch, 293, 2 L. ed. 444.

The authority to take depositions in this manner, in derogation of the common law, has always been construed strictly, and therefore it is necessary to establish that all the requisitions of the law have been complied with before such testimony is admissible.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Collins, 45 Kan. 94, 10 L.R.A. 515, 25 Pac. 187; Garner v. Cutler, 28 Tex. 183; Harris v. Wall, 7 How. 695, 12 L. ed. 875.

A notice that a party will, at a certain place and time, take a deposition, has been held insufficient to support a deposition taken at a different place, though next door, on the same street.

Indiana Baptist Pub. Co. v. Ayer, 34 Ind. App. 284, 72 N. E. 151.

The use of depositions in this case to recover a penalty as a punishment for a criminal act was improper, and infringed on the constitutional right to be confronted by the witnesses.

Digitized by Google

United States v. Stevenson, 215 U. S. 200, 54 L. ed. 157, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37; Lees v. United States, 150 U. S. 476, 480, 37 L. ed. 1150, 1151, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 634, 39 L. ed. 746, 753, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Regan v. United States, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1073, 105 C. C. A. 505, 183 Fed. 293, 121 C. C. A. 543, 203 Fed. 433, 232 U. S. 37, ante, 494, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Chaffee v. United States, 18 Wall. 518, 21 L. ed. 908; United States v. Shapleigh, 4 C. C. A. 237, 12 U. S. App. 26, 54 Fed. 126; Hepner v. United States, 213 U. S. 103, 53 L. ed. 720, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 739, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474, 16 Ann. Cas. 960; United States v. Zucker, 161 U. S. 475, 40 L. ed. 777, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; United States v. Chouteau, 102 U. S. 611, 26 L. ed. 249; Coffey v. United States, 116 U. S. 436, 29 L. ed. 684, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 664, 36 L. ed. 1127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

In any case where a verdict for one of the parties must have been set aside, as being without meritorious support in the evidence, it is proper for the trial court to direct a verdict.

Ryder v. Wombwell, L. R. 4 Exch. 39, 38 L. J. Exch. N. S. 8, 19 L. T. N. S. 491, 17 Week. Rep. 167; Giblin v. McMullen, L. R. 2 P. C. 335, 5 Moore, P. C. C. N. S. 434, 38 L. J. P. C. N. S. 25, 21 L. T. N. S. 214, 17 Week. Rep. 445; Schuylkill & D. Improv. & R. Co. v. Munson, 14 Wall. 448, 20 L. ed. 872; Parks v. Ross, 11 How. 373, 13 L. ed. 735; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. State Nat. Bank, 10 Wall. 637, 19 L. ed. 1015; Hickman v. Jones, 9 Wall. 201, 19 L. ed. 553; Re Morey, 147 Cal. 495, 82 Pac. 57.

Where but one reasonable inference or conclusion can be drawn from the evidence, it is the duty of the trial court to direct a verdict or set aside a verdict already rendered. An inference from circumstances of a material fact, which is opposed to facts established in the case beyond dispute, and which is opposed to all reasonable probabilities, does not raise a substantial conflict in the evidence, and does not prevent the court from directing a verdict, or from setting aside a verdict already rendered.

Badger v. Janesville Cotton Mills, 95 Wis. 590, 70 N. W. 687, 2 Am. Neg. Rep. 272; Flaherty v. Harrison, 98 Wis. 559, 74 N. W. 360; Vorbrich v. Geuder & P. Mfg. Co. 96 Wis. 277, 71 N. W. 434, 3 Am. Neg. Rep. 750; Cawley v. La Crosse City R. Co. 101 Wis. 145, 77 N. W. 179; O'Brien v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 102 Wis. 628, 78 N. W. 1084; Collins v. Janesville, 117 Wis. 415, 94 N. W. 309; Pleasants v. Fant, 22 Wall. 116, 22 L. ed. 780; Minahan v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co. 70 C. C. A. 463, 138 Fed. 37; Schaub v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 133 Mo. App. 444, 113 S. W. 1163.

The governing officers of the defendant corporation, and they only, should be regarded as the corporation in determining whether the defendant corporation knowingly assisted, encouraged, or solicited the migration or importation of any alien contract laborers.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Prentice, 147 U. S. 101, 37 L. ed. 97, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; Pollard v. Vinton, 105 U. S. 7, 26 L. ed. 998; Hindman v. First Nat. Bank, 48 L.R.A. 210, 39 C. C. A. 1, 98 Fed. 562; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Harris, 122 U. S. 597, 30 L. ed. 1146, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1286; Salt Lake City v. Hollister, 118 U. S. 256, 30 L. ed. 176, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1055; Philadelphia. W. & B. R. Co. v. Quigley, 21 How. 202, 16 L. ed. 73; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Prentice, 147 U. S. 108, 114, 37 L. ed. 101, 103, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; United States v. John Kelso Co. 86 Fed. 304; State v. Morris & E. R. Co. 23 N. J. L. 360; Reg. v. Great North of England R. Co. 9 Q. B. 315; Com. v. New Bedford Bridge, 2 Gray, 339.

The general rule is that a master or principal is not liable criminally for the criminal acts of his servant or agent unless he directed, assented to, or acquiesced in, such illegal acts.

Taylor v. Nixon [1910] 2 I. R. 94; Rex v. Huggins, 2 Ld. Raym. 1574; 2 Enc. L. & Pr. 834; 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 176; 26 Cyc. 1545; 1 Clark & M. Agency, p. 1140; Mechem, Agency, ¶ 746; Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Bradford, 88 Am. St. Rep. 797, note; Hoover v. Wise, 91 U. S. 311, 23 L. ed. 394; Whitton v. State, 37 Miss. 379; Anderson v. State, 22 Ohio St. 305; Com. v. Nichols, 10 Met. 259, 43 Am. Dec. 432; Com. v. Junkin, 170 Pa. 194, 31 L.R.A. 124, 32 Atl. 617; Cushing v. Dill, 2 Ill. 460; Cushman v. Oliver, 81 Ill. 444; Satterfield v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 23 Ill. App. 446; State v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 15 W. Va. 362, 36 Am. Rep. 803; Hall v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 44 W. Va. 36, 41 L.R.A. 669, 67 Am. St. Rep. 757, 28 S. E. 754; Williams v. Hendricks, 115 Ala. 277, 41 L.R.A. 650, 67 Am. St. Rep. 32, 22 So. 439; State v. Bacon, 40 Vt. 456; People v. Parks, 49 Mich. 333, 13 N. W. 618; Whitecraft v. Vandever, 12 Ill. 235; Nall v. State, 34 Ala. 262; Seibert v. State, 40 Ala. 60; Spokane v. Patterson, 46 Wash. 93, 8 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1104, 123 Am. St. Rep. 921, 89 Pac. 402, 13 Ann. Cas. 706; Hipp v. State, 5 Blackf. 149, 33 Am. Dec. 463; Hale, P. C. 114.

Digitized by Google

There is an exception to the general rule under statutes in cases where guilty knowledge or intent is not an essential element in the offense, and the act done is absolutely prohibited, whether done by master or servant wittingly or negligently or innocently; also, of course, under statute where the master is, by the express terms of the statute, made criminally liable for acts done.

Greenl. Ev. 16th ed. §§ 21, 26, and notes; State v. Kittelle, 110 N. C. 560, 15 L.R.A. 694, 28 Am. St. Rep. 698, 15 S. E. 103; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. United States, 220 U. S. 559, 579, 55 L. ed. 582, 590, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464; Delk v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 220 U. S. 580, 55 L. ed. 590, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 53 L. ed. 613, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 304; Robinson v. State, 38 Ark. 641; Com. v. Emmons, 98 Mass. 6; Hosford v. Mackey, [1897] 2 I. R. 292; Walters v. State, 174 Ind. 545, 92 N. E. 537; People v. Roby, 52 Mich. 577, 50 Am. Rep. 270, 18 N. W. 365; State v. Gilmore, 80 Vt. 514, 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 786, 68 Atl. 658, 13 Ann. Cas. 321; Nadorff Bros. v. Louisville, 144 Ky. 135, 137 S. W. 854; Olson v. State, 143 Wis. 413, 127 N. W. 975; Lehman v. District of Columbia, 19 App. D. C. 217; State v. Nichols, 67 W. Va. 659, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 419, 69 S. E. 304, 21 Ann. Cas. 184; State v. Tomasi, 67 Vt. 312, 31 Atl. 780; State v. Ackerly, 79 Vt. 69, 118 Am. St. Rep. 940, 64 Atl. 450, 8 Ann. Cas. 1103; Carroll v. State, 63 Md. 551, 3 Atl. 29; McCutcheon v. People, 69 Ill. 606, 1 Am. Crim. Rep. 471; Mogler v. State, 47 Ark. 110, 14 S. W. 473; Snider v. State, 81 Ga. 753, 12 Am. St. Rep. 350, 7 S. E. 631; Hall v. Passaic Water Co. 83 N. J. L. 771, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 753, 85 Atl. 349; Whitton v. State, 37 Miss. 379; O'Donnell v. Com. 108 Va. 882, 62 S. E. 373; Com. v. Uhrig, 138 Mass. 492, 5 Am. Crim. Rep. 323; People v. Blake, 52 Mich. 566, 18 N. W. 360; State v. O'Connor, 58 Minn. 193, 59 N. W. 999; Com. v. Warren, 160 Mass. 533, 36 N. E. 308; Brown v. Foot, 66 L. T. N. S. 649, 17 Cox, C. C. 509, 61 L. J. Mag. Cas. N. S. 110, 56 J. P. 581.

In the case at bar the guilty knowledge of the defendant company is an essential ingredient of the offense. The general rule applies that the master is not criminally responsible unless he participates in, authorizes, or consents to the unlawful act. The exception to the rule in cases where knowledge is not an essential element of the offense has no application to the present case.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. United States, 94 C. C. A. 437, 169 Fed. 69; Felton v. United States, 96 U. S. 699, 703, 24 L. ed. 875, 876; United States v. Beaty, Hempst. 487, Fed. Cas. No. 14,555; Chisholm v. Doulton, L. R. 22 Q. B. Div. 736, 58 L. J. Mag. Cas. N. S. 133, 60 L. T. N. S. 966, 37 Week. Rep. 749, 16 Cox, C. C. 675, 53 J. P. 550; Verona Central Cheese Co. v. Murtaugh, 50 N. Y. 314; Conlon v. Muldowney [1904] 2 I. R. 498; State v. Smith, 10 R. I. 258; State v. Hayes, 67 Iowa, 27, 24 N. W. 575, 6 Am. Crim. Rep. 335; Taylor v. Nixon [1910] 2 I. R. 94; Williams v. Hendricks, 115 Ala. 277, 41 L.R.A. 650, 67 Am. St. Rep. 32, 22 So. 439; Patterson v. State, 21 Ala. 571.

Every lawful instruction from principal to agent is to be considered as given in good faith until the contrary is shown.

Com. v. Johnston, 2 Pa. Super. Ct. 317; Hosford v. Mackey [1897] 2 I. R. 292.

Even if the defendant construction company had not positively forbidden Carney to employ or talk to any laborers in Mexico, no implied authority of Carney to do an illegal act can be presumed from his mere employment by the appellant.

Russell v. State, 71 Ala. 348; Sagers v. Nuckolls, 3 Colo. App. 95, 32 Pac. 187; Com. v. Stevens, 155 Mass. 291, 29 N. E. 508; Williams v. Hendricks, 115 Ala. 277, 41 L.R.A. 650, 67 Am. St. Rep. 32, 22 So. 439; Com. v. Nichols, 10 Met. 259, 43 Am. Dec. 432; Reg. v. Holbrook, L. R. 3 Q. B. Div. 60, 47 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 35, 37 L. T. N. S. 530, 26 Week. Rep. 144, 13 Cox, C. C. 650, 2 Am. Crim. Rep. 643; Washington Gaslight Co. v. Lansden, 172 U. S. 534, 43 L. ed. 543, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 296.

The knowledge contemplated by the statute, essential to be proven in the case at bar, is actual knowledge, and not constructive knowledge, or notice of facts which, upon inquiry, would lead to actual knowledge.

24 Cyc. 806; Webster's Dict.; Century Dict.; Wigmore, Ev. § 300.

If Congress had intended to make ignorance or failure to make inquiry, where inquiry seems called for, tantamount to actual knowledge itself, it would have so provided, and imposed a penalty upon all those who "knowingly violated the act, or, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, should have known of its violation;" but the statute is positive, clear, and unambiguous. It punishes only a knowing violation. The lower court has wrongfully extended the act of Congress beyond its plain meaning, and has judicially interpolated a limit in the statute which is wholly at variance with the great weight of authority on this subject.

Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, 206 U. S. 158, 179, 51 L. ed. 1002, 1015, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; McDonald v. Williams, 174 U. S. 397,

Digitized by Google

43 L. ed. 1022, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 446, 39 L. ed. 214, 217, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 144; Utley v. Hill, 155 Mo. 264, 49 L.R.A. 323, 78 Am. St. Rep. 569, 55 S. W. 1091; Felton v. United States, 96 U. S. 699, 24 L. ed. 875; State v. McBarron, 66 N. J. L. 680, 51 Atl. 146; Quinebaug Bank v. Brewster, 30 Conn. 559; Masterson v. West End Narrow-Gauge R. Co. 5 Mo. App. 64.

The jury were wrongfully instructed to find for the government and against the defendant if they were "satisfied," or if they "find," or if they "believe" from the evidence, or if they find some "circumstance which would warrant the inference" that the defendant company was guilty of the offense charged against it. The jury should have been instructed that the government must prove each and every essential element of its case "beyond a reasonable doubt."

United States v. Stevenson, 215 U. S. 190, 54 L. ed. 153, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; United States v. Chouteau, 102 U. S. 611, 26 L. ed. 249; Regan v. United States, 31 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1073, 105 C. C. A. 505, 183 Fed. 293, 121 C. C. A. 543, 203 Fed. 433; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Lees v. United States, 150 U. S. 476, 37 L. ed. 1150, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Com. 113 Ky. 126, 67 S. W. 388; Coffey v. United States, 116 U. S. 436, 29 L. ed. 684, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 265, 32 L. ed. 239, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1370; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. People, 227 Ill. 270, 81 N. E. 342; Riker v. Hooper, 35 Vt. 457, 82 Am. Dec. 646; White v. Comstock, 6 Vt. 405; Small & Co. v. Com. 134 Ky. 272, 120 S. W. 361; United States v. The Burdett, 9 Pet. 682, 9 L. ed. 273; Gilbert v. Bone, 79 Ill. 341.

Under the statute in this case one shipment of laborers constitutes but one misdemeanor, and but one penalty is incurred.

Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. United States, 220 U. S. 94, 55 L. ed. 384, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 90 C. C. A. 364, 164 Fed. 376.

The complaint contains no allegation of "knowledge" and the general denial raises no such issue. It is erroneous to submit a pretended issue to the jury not raised by the pleading.

11 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 159, and cases cited.

There can be no ratification of an act made a "misdemeanor" so as to make the person ratifying the same responsible for such act.

1 Clark & M. Agency, p. 1142; Morse v. State, 6 Conn. 9; Wilson v. Barber, 4 Barn. & Ad. 614, 1 Nev. & M. 409.

One cannot be said "to consent to an act of the commission of which he had no knowledge."

McDonald v. Williams, 174 U. S. 397, 406, 43 L. ed. 1022, 1026, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743.

In criminal proceedings costs are a creature of statute, and the court cannot award them unless some statute has conferred the power.

United States ex rel. Phillips v. Gaines, 131 U. S. clxix, appx. and 25 L. ed. 733; United States v. Ringgold, 8 Pet. 150, 8 L. ed. 899; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 27 L. ed. 468, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91.

If the defendant company had succeeded in securing a verdict in its favor, the court would have had no power to tax costs against the government. The rule should work both ways, and for that reason the government should not have any judgment against the defendant for costs, as the statute creating the penalty contains no such provision, and does not authorize the same.

United States v. Verdier, 164 U. S. 213, 41 L. ed. 407, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42; Pine River Lodging & Improv. Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 46 L. ed. 1164, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 920.

Assistant Attorney General Wallace argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

For lack of assignment of error below, only such as are mentioned and considered in the opinion of the territorial supreme court are open to review.

Gila Valley, G. & N. R. Co. v. Hall, 232 U. S. 94, ante, 521, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

Defendants below have estopped themselves from urging the objection that the complaint fails to state a cause of action because of lack of averments that the acts complained of were knowingly done:

(a) By suffering evidence as to their knowledge to be received without objection on the trial, and themselves introducing all their evidence to show lack of knowledge or connection with the unlawful acts of Carney et al. (which was their entire defense).

Renner v. Bank of Columbia, 9 Wheat. 581–596, 6 L. ed. 166–169; Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 266, 35 L. ed. 468, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773.

(b) By asking the court to charge that only when knowledge was proven could a verdict be returned for plaintiff, thereby admitting that with such evidence of knowledge a verdict for plaintiff could be properly returned.

Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 157 U. S. 72, 88, 39 L. ed. 624, 630, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491.

Digitized by Google

(c) By admitting in the territorial supreme court that Carney and his associates had violated the act, and that the only question as to the judgment of the trial court was whether it was sustained by evidence connecting them with such unlawful acts.

Bigelow, Estoppel, 5th ed. 717, 719, 720.

This case is not criminal in its nature.

United States v. Regan, 232 U. S. 37, ante, 494, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213.

Had the point been presented, the territorial supreme court could not properly (in the face of the allegation that the acts were done "in violation of the act," and the admission of all the evidence on the question of knowledge, both for the plaintiff and defendant, and the request for charge by defendant on the issue of knowledge; i. e., the complete trial on the theory that the issue was raised) have reversed the cause on such ground.

San Juan Light & T. Co. v. Requena, 224 U. S. 89, 56 L. ed. 680, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Campbell v. United States, 224 U. S. 99, 106, 56 L. ed. 684, 686, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; Pickett v. United States, 216 U. S. 456, 462, 54 L. ed. 566, 569, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Pico v. United States, 228 U. S. 225, 231, 232, 57 L. ed. 812, 814, 815, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 482; Western Stone Co. v. Whalen, 151 Ill. 472, 42 Am. St. Rep. 244, 38 N. E. 241; Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Connell, 74 Ill. App. 447; Morriss Bros. v. Bowers, 105 Tenn. 60, 58 S. W. 328.

The record of the board of special inquiry was properly admitted in evidence upon the issue of alienage.

Zakonaite v. Wolf, 226 U. S. 275, 57 L. ed. 220, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31.

When a cause is tried on the theory that certain facts exist, even though they are put in issue by the pleadings, their existence will be assumed on appeal.

21 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 667, 668; 17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 447, 448; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 157 U. S. 72, 88, 39 L. ed. 624, 630, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Davis v. Wakelee, 156 U. S. 680, 689, 39 L. ed. 578, 584, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555; The New Philadelphia (Camden & A. R. & Transp. Co. v. Brady) 1 Black, 62, 17 L. ed. 84; Canton Roll & Mach. Co. v. Rolling Mill Co. 155 Fed. 321; Brown v. Gurney, 201 U. S. 184, 190, 50 L. ed. 717, 720, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509.

And the court will resort to the record below to determine the position there taken.

21 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 669.

Where the question relates to the tendency of certain testimony to throw light upon a particular fact or to explain the conduct of a particular person, there is a certain discretion on the part of the trial judge which a court of errors will not interfere with, unless it manifestly appears that the testimony has no legitimate bearing upon the question at issue, and is calculated to prejudice the accused in the minds of the jurors.

Moore v. United States, 150 U. S. 57, 60, 37 L. ed. 996, 997, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; Clune v. United States, 159 U. S. 590, 593, 40 L. ed. 269, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 451, 52 L. ed. 278, 292, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

The irregularity in the depositions was a mere formal one and could not prejudice plaintiffs in error.

Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 44, 41 L. ed. 624, 627, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235.

Appellant waived the irregularity.

Killian v. Augusta & K. R. Co. 78 Ga. 752, 3 S. E. 621.

The importation of forty-five laborers incurred forty-five penalties.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 112, ante, 144, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

One who has taken a particular position deliberately in the course of a litigation must act consistently with it.

Bigelow, Estoppel, 5th ed. 717, 719, 720.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

In an action of debt, tried to the court and a jury, in one of the district courts of the territory of Arizona, the United States recovered a judgment against the Grant Brothers Construction Company, a California corporation, for the prescribed penalty of $1,000 for each of forty-five alleged violations of § 4 of the alien immigration act of February 20, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 898, chap. 1134, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 499); and upon an appeal to the supreme court of the territory, the judgment was affirmed. 13 Ariz. 388, 114 Pac. 955. The construction company and the surety upon its supersedeas bond then sued out this writ of error, claiming that divers errors had been committed by the trial court which should have been, but were not, corrected by the appellate court.

[657] The portions of the statute upon which the action was founded are as follows:

"Sec. 2. That the following classes of aliens shall be excluded from admission into the United States: . . . persons hereinafter called contract laborers, who have been induced or solicited to migrate to this country by offers or promises of employment, or in consequence of agreements, oral, written, or printed, express or implied, to perform labor in this country of any kind, skilled or unskilled; . . . And provided further, That skilled labor may be imported if labor of like kind unemployed cannot be found in this country: And provided further, That the provisions of this law applicable to contract labor shall not be held to exclude professional actors, artists, lecturers, singers, ministers of any religious denomination, professors for colleges or seminaries, persons belonging to any recognized learned profession, or persons employed strictly as personal or domestic servants.

Digitized by Google

. . . . . .

"Sec. 4. That it shall be a misdemeanor for any person, company, partnership, or corporation, in any manner whatsoever, to prepay the transportation or in any way to assist or encourage the importation or migration of any contract laborer or contract laborers into the United States, unless such contract laborer or contract laborers are exempted under the terms of the last two provisos contained in section two of this act.

"Sec. 5. That for every violation of any of the provisions of section four of this act the persons, partnership, company, or corporation violating the same, by knowingly assisting, encouraging, or soliciting the migration or importation of any contract laborer into the United States, shall forfeit and pay for every such offense the sum of one thousand dollars, which may be sued for and recovered by the United States, or by any person who shall first bring his action therefor in his own name and for his [658] own benefit, including any such alien thus promised labor or service of any kind as aforesaid, as debts of like amount are now recovered in the courts of the United States; and separate suits may be brought for each alien thus promised labor or service of any kind as aforesaid. And it shall be the duty of the district attorney of the proper district to prosecute every such suit when brought by the United States."

The petition contained forty-five counts, each charging, with considerable detail, that the defendant, by offers and promises of employment and by providing transportation and paying expenses, assisted, encouraged, and solicited the migration and importation into the United States from Mexico of a designated alien laborer who was not within the terms of either of the last two provisos in § 2 of the statute. A different alien laborer was named in each count, and the date of the offending act was given in all as October 29, 1909.

In a preliminary way, the evidence tended to show these facts: The construction company was building a line of railroad in southern Arizona, near Naco, a town on the international boundary. Laborers in large numbers were required for the work, and in August, 1909, the company employed one Carney to procure laborers for it and to take them to the vicinity of the work. For this he was to be paid $1 in gold for each laborer secured, and 20 cents for each meal provided while they were en route. It was contemplated that he would arrange with others to aid him, and he secured the assistance of Holler, Rupelius, and Randall, who, like himself, were located at Nogales, another boundary town. Under this employment Carney procured, and the company accepted, prior to the transaction in question, about 450 laborers, 95 per cent of whom were Mexicans. Many of these came across the line on their own initiative and were then engaged by Holler, but a substantial number were engaged in Mexico [659] by Rupelius, and then brought into the United States at Nogales. Only a few days before the transaction in question, Rupelius gathered together 80 or 90 in Mexico, and induced them to enter the United States at Nogales by promising that the construction company would employ them, which it did.

As respects the forty-five laborers named in the petition there was evidence tending to show the following: These men were citizens of Mexico, and were unskilled laborers who were not within the exemptions specified in the last two provisos in § 2 of the statute. They were secured at Hermosillo, Mexico, by Rupelius, October 28, 1909, were brought into the United States, at Naco, by Randall the next day, were there taken into custody by an immigration inspector, and were examined before a board of special inquiry. The board found that they were alien contract laborers, ordered that they be excluded, and notified them of the order and of their right to an appeal. After consulting with the Mexican consul at Naco they waived that right, and most of them were returned to Mexico, a few being detained as witnesses. Rupelius had induced them to leave Hermosillo and come into the United States by offers and promises of employment by the construction company. They were brought to Naco upon a railroad pass procured by Carney, and purporting to have been issued on account of the construction company, and their only meal en route was provided by Holler at Carney's suggestion. During the latter part of their journey they were in charge of Randall, who had been directed by Carney to deliver them to McDonald, an agent of the construction company, who was expected to be at Naco to receive them. McDonald was there, having come in from one of the company's camps that day. He endeavored to hasten the proceedings before the board of inquiry in order that he might get the men out to the camp that afternoon, and also provided a meal for them while the proceedings [660] were in progress. This was the first party of Mexicans that Carney had attempted to bring into the country at Naco. Others had been brought in at Nogales. According to his statement, the inspection officers at the latter place had been particularly liberal in admitting Mexican laborers procured for the construction company; and he suggested to the inspectors at Naco that like action on their part would be appreciated, but the suggestion did not find favor with them.

Digitized by Google

There were some direct contradictions in the evidence, different portions gave rise to opposing inferences, and parts of it were more or less improbable; but as it was the province of the jury to pass on such matters, which it did by the verdict, they require no other notice than they will receive presently.

As several of the alleged errors, not involving anything fundamental or jurisdictional, were not presented to the appellate court for consideration, they must be regarded as waived, and will be passed without further notice. Montana R. Co. v. Warren, 137 U. S. 348, 351, 34 L. ed. 681, 682, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Gila Valley, G. & N. R. Co. v. Hall, 232 U. S. 94, 98, ante, 521, 523, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

It is complained that the trial court permitted the government to read in evidence the depositions of absent witnesses, instructed the jury to return a verdict for the government if the evidence reasonably preponderated in its favor, and in other ways treated the case as civil in substance as well as in form. But the trial court was right. An action such as this is civil, and is attended with the usual incidents of a civil action. United States v. Regan, 232 U. S. 37, ante, 494, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213.

The petition did not allege that the acts charged against the construction company were knowingly done, and it is said that this operated to render the recovery erroneous. No doubt the petition was defective. A right to the penalty arises only where § 4 is violated "by knowingly assisting, encouraging, or soliciting the migration or importation" [661] of an alien contract laborer into the United States. Knowledge being an element of what is penalized, it must be included in the statement of a cause of action for the penalty. But there are reasons why the defect did not render the recovery erroneous. The defect was not pointed out in the trial court. On the contrary, the case was tried as if the omitted allegation were in the petition. Both parties introduced evidence bearing upon the company's knowledge, both presented requests for instructions treating it as an essential factor in the case, and the jury was instructed upon that theory. In its charge the court said that before any verdict could be returned for the government it must appear from the evidence that some representative of the defendant company, for whose act it would be responsible, "knowingly assisted, or knowingly encouraged, or knowingly solicited, or knowingly caused others to assist or encourage or solicit, the migration or importation of an alien Mexican contract laborer into the United States." And again: "Where knowledge is an essential ingredient of a cause of action, the existence of the knowledge becomes a question to be determined by the jury upon a consideration of all the facts and circumstances in the case." It is therefore quite plain that the jury found from the evidence that the acts charged against the defendant were knowingly done, and the petition may well be treated as amended to conform to the facts. Ariz. Rev. Stat. 1901, §§ 1288, 1293; Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 266, 35 L. ed. 464, 468, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773. The defendant was in no wise prejudiced by the defect, and to make it a ground for reversing the judgment, notwithstanding the theory upon which the trial proceeded, would be most unreasonable. San Juan Light & Transit Co. v. Requena, 224 U. S. 89, 96, 56 L. ed. 680, 683, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Campbell v. United States, 224 U. S. 99, 106, 56 L. ed. 684, 686, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398.

Complaint is made of the denial of a motion to suppress certain depositions, subsequently read in evidence, which the government had taken under a commission issued by [662] the clerk. The only ground for the motion to which our attention is invited is that the preliminary notice described the case as pending in the second district when it was pending in the first. The case had been brought in the former, and was transferred to the latter at the defendant's instance. The notice and accompanying interrogatories were prepared before and served after the transfer. The purpose of the notice was to inform defendant's counsel of the intended application for a commission, and of the proposed interrogatories, and to give opportunity for filing cross interrogatories. See Ariz. Rev. Stat. 1901, §§ 2507, 2513. No cross interrogatories were filed in either district, and after the expiration of the time allowed for them the clerk of the district in which the case was pending issued the commission. Counsel for the defendant could not have been misled or confused by the error in the notice, for they were fully informed of the transfer, having perfected it the day before the notice was served. In these circumstances the trial court, as also the supreme court of the territory, held that the error was inconsequential and did not require the suppression of the depositions. We perceive no reason for disturbing that conclusion. On the contrary, we think it was plainly correct.

Digitized by Google

Over the defendant's objection, the decision of the board of special inquiry was admitted in evidence as tending to prove that the forty-five men were aliens, and it is said that this was error because the defendant was not a party to the proceeding. One of the questions committed by law to the board for decision, subject to an appeal to the Secretary of Commerce, was whether the men were aliens. The document admitted in evidence disclosed that, after a hearing, the board determined that question in the affirmative, and that the men acquiesced by waiving their right to an appeal. In that way their status as aliens was conclusively established as between themselves and the United States. It is true that the defendant was not a [663] party to that proceeding, and that, as a general rule, a judgment binds only the parties and their privies. But it is equally true that a judgment in a prior action is admissible, even against a stranger, as prima facie, but not conclusive, proof of a fact which may be shown by evidence of general reputation, such as custom, pedigree, race, death, and the like, and this because the judgment is usually more persuasive than mere evidence of reputation. 1 Starkie, Ev. 380; 1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 139, 526, 555; Patterson v. Gaines, 6 How. 550, 599, 12 L. ed. 553, 573; Pile v. McBratney, 15 Ill. 314, 319; McCollum v. Fitzsimons, 1 Rich. L. 252. In principle, alienage is within the latter rule, and so the board's decision was properly admitted in evidence for the purpose stated.

Considerable evidence was admitted, over the defendant's objection, of the acts and declarations of Carney and his assistants while they were procuring laborers in Mexico and bringing them into the United States, and it is contended that this was violative of the rule that the acts and declarations of a professed agent are not admissible to prove the existence or extent of his agency. See United States v. Boyd, 5 How. 29, 50, 12 L. ed. 36, 45. But the contention rests upon a misconception of what the record discloses. This evidence was not admitted to establish the agency or its extent, but to show that the laborers came into the United States in circumstances which rendered their migration or importation unlawful. Whether the defendant was responsible for what was done was another question. The trial court recognized this, and expressly ruled that the agency must be otherwise shown, and we agree with the territorial courts in thinking there was other evidence tending to prove the agency, and that it embraced what was done.

The evidence disclosed that when the arrangement was made with Carney, and on one or two occasions thereafter, he was in terms instructed not to engage any laborer [664] in Mexico, and not to induce or assist any laborer to migrate thence into the United States, and because of this it is said that the evidence afforded no basis for holding the defendant responsible for the acts of Carney and his assistants in inducing and aiding the migration or importation of the laborers named in the petition. In dealing with this point the courts below held that under the evidence as a whole, it was an admissible conclusion that the instructions to Carney were not given in good faith, or were in effect abrogated by acquiescence in their nonobservance. An examination of the evidence as set forth in the record satisfies us that it afforded reasonable support for either of these conclusions, and therefore that the question was properly one for the jury. And upon looking at the court's charge as incorporated into the record we find that the matter was fairly and adequately submitted.

Although conceding that there was evidence that ten of the men were citizens of Mexico, the company claims that there was no evidence of the alienage of the other thirty-five. It must be held otherwise. Not only did the decision of the board of inquiry constitute such evidence, but it was distinctly testified by some of the men, who became witnesses at the trial, that "they were all Mexicans," meaning thereby, as the context shows, that they were all citizens of Mexico.

Still another contention is that, as all the men named in the petition were brought into the United States at one time, there was but a single violation of the statute, and only one penalty could be recovered. The statute declares that "separate suits may be brought for each alien thus promised labor or service," and this plainly means that a separate penalty shall be assessed in respect of each alien whose migration or importation is knowingly assisted, encouraged, or solicited in contravention of the statute. See Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. United States, 231 U. S. 112, ante, 144, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

[665] The action of the court in rendering judgment against the defendant for the costs is challenged, but this was so clearly right as to render discussion of it unnecessary. Ariz. Rev. Stat. 1901, §§ 1543, 2639; Kittredge v. Race, 92 U. S. 116, 121, 23

Digitized by Google

L. ed. 488, 490; United States v. Verdier, 164 U. S. 213, 219, 41 L. ed. 407, 409, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42.

As we find no prejudicial error in the record, the judgment is affirmed.

DAVID J. STEWART, Plff. in Err.,
v.
PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF MICHIGAN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 665–671.)

Commerce — state regulation — peddlers and drummers.

1. A state may not, consistently with the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, impose a license tax upon a nonresident merchant traveling from place to place within the state, and soliciting orders by sample, lists, and catalogues for goods which are afterwards shipped into the state in carload lots to his order, and which he delivers from the cars to the persons ordering them.

[For other cases, see Commerce, IV. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — Federal question — decision on non-Federal ground.

2. A conviction in a state court for peddling without a license cannot be deemed to rest upon a non-Federal ground adequate to sustain it, independently of the ruling adverse to rights asserted under the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, because there was evidence that the defendant made some sales from a railway car or storeroom not under previous orders, and not within the protection of the commerce clause, since peddling being the only charge made against defendant, this latter ground, if upheld, would amount to a condemnation without hearing, and therefore constitute a denial of due process of law.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1465–1528, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 239.]

Argued and submitted March 6, 1914. Decided March 23, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the Circuit Court of Berrien County, in that state, for peddling without a license. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 167 Mich. 417, 132 N. W. 1071.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George M. Valentine submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. G. W. Bridgman was on the brief:

The decisions of this court determine the case in favor of the plaintiff in error.

Asher v. Texas, 128 U. S. 129, 32 L. ed. 368, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 241, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 38 L. ed. 719, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 51 L. ed. 295, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Dozier v. Alabama, 218 U. S. 124, 54 L. ed. 965, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 264, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649; Crenshaw v. Arkansas, 227 U. S. 389, 57 L. ed. 565, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 294; Dill. Mun. Corp. 5th ed. p. 2328, § 1356.

Importation of goods from outside the state, as ordered by purchasers, is an act of interstate commerce, although the goods are shipped to a general agent in the state, who repacks them and sends them to subordinate agents, who deliver them to the purchasers.

Huntington v. Mahan, 142 Ind. 695, 51 Am. St. Rep. 200, 42 N. E. 463; Bloomington v. Bourland, 137 Ill. 534, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 667, 31 Am. St. Rep. 382, 27 N. E. 692; McLaughlin v. South Bend, 126 Ind. 471, 10 L.R.A. 357, 26 N. E. 185; Martin v. Rosedale, 130 Ind. 109, 29 N. E. 410; Carstairs v. O'Donnell, 154 Mass. 357, 28 N. E. 271; People v. Bunker, 128 Mich. 160, 87 N. W. 90; Stone v. State, 117 Ga. 292, 43 S. E. 740; Turner v. State, 41 Tex. Crim. Rep. 545, 55 S. W. 834; Re Spain, 14 L.R.A. 97, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 738, 47 Fed. 208; State v. Glasby, 50 Wash. 598, 21 L.R.A. (N.S.) 797, 97 Pac. 734.

NOTE.—On peddlers and drummers, as related to interstate commerce—see notes to Stockard v. Morgan, 46 L. ed. U. S. 785; Re Spain, 14 L.R.A. 97; State v. Bayer, 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 297; and Dozier v. State, 28 L.R.A(N.S.) 265.

On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Grant Fellows, Attorney General of Michigan, argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The state court found as a matter of fact that the plaintiff in error was not only engaged in interstate commerce, but that he was also engaged in domestic commerce. If he was maintaining a warehouse in the city of Benton Harbor, from which he filled orders and did business, he was engaged in intrastate commerce, and the case falls squarely within the holding of this court in American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 500, 48 L. ed. 538, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

See also Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 39 L. ed. 430, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

This court will not determine the question as to whether the findings of fact by the state court are supported by the evidence, but will take the findings of fact of the state court as conclusive.

Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 175 U. S. 639, 647, 44 L. ed. 305, 308, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Noble v. Mitchell, 164 U. S. 367, 41 L. ed. 472, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Gardner v. Bonestell, 180 U. S. 362, 370, 45 L. ed. 574, 577, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Chrisman v. Miller, 197 U. S. 313, 49 L. ed. 770, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468.

Neither will this court review the construction put upon a state statute by a state court upon error to that court.

Noble v. Mitchell, 164 U. S. 367, 41 L. ed. 472, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 187 U. S. 569, 584, 47 L. ed. 307, 313, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178; Gardner v. Bonestell, 180 U. S. 362, 370, 45 L. ed. 574, 577, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 500, 48 L. ed. 538, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Plaintiff in error was tried and convicted in a justice court upon a criminal information which charged that "one David J. Stewart did travel from place to place within the county of Berrien, state of Michigan, for the purpose of taking orders for the purchase of goods, ware, and merchandise, by sample, lists, and catalogues, without having then and there obtained a license as a hawker and peddler, as required and provided by chapter 136 of the Compiled Laws of Michigan of 1897, as amended." From that judgment an appeal was taken to the county court where the cause was tried de novo by a jury, resulting again in a conviction, and that judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the state (167 Mich. 417, 132 N. W. 1071). This writ of error was then prosecuted.

There are several assignments of error of a Federal nature, but the consideration of one—the asserted repugnancy of the statute upon which the warrant was based to the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States—will enable us to dispose of the case. The statute provides:

"No person shall be authorized to travel from place to place within this state, for the purpose of carrying to sell or exposing to sale any goods, wares, or merchandise, or to take orders for the purchase of goods, wares, or merchandise, by sample, lists, or catalogues, unless he shall have obtained a license as a hawker and peddler in the manner hereinafter directed." [Comp. Laws 1897, § 5324.]

Violation of the statute was made a misdemeanor punishable by fine or imprisonment.

Briefly stated, the material facts, which are uncontroverted, [668] are as follows: The defendant resided in the city of Chicago, where he was engaged in the general merchandise business, but much of his time was spent in the state of Michigan, soliciting orders for groceries and other merchandise to be shipped from his Chicago store. Duplicates of the orders secured were mailed by him to his manager in Chicago, and goods corresponding to the orders were shipped in carload lots from the Chicago store, consigned to the defendant at St. Joseph and other points in Berrien county, Michigan. Upon the arrival of the cars at St. Joseph the goods were delivered to the customers by draymen employed by the defendant, who filled the orders at the car by checking from the original orders, there being no identifying marks on the packages, except as to their contents. Customers living at a distance received notice by mail of the arrival of the cars, and called or sent for their goods. If for any reason any orders were undelivered, the goods corresponding to such orders were returned to the Chicago store, or placed in a storeroom which the defendant hired in Benton Harbor, Michigan, and there is some evidence tending to show that occasional sales were made by the defendant from the storeroom and from the car without previous solicitation.

Upon the above facts the trial court charged the jury as follows:

"In this case it is claimed by the defendant that he was engaged in interstate commerce, and that he was protected by the interstate commerce law.

"Now, it is true that a wholesale merchant or grocer, in the city of Chicago, for instance, can solicit orders through an agent in this state, and he can send an agent here to deliver the goods.

Digitized by Google

"The facts, however, in this case, are different. The goods were shipped here in a car consigned to the defendant himself. The goods were never consigned to the man who made the order, and when they got here they were [669] not the goods of the man who made the order, because if any of those men who had made an order had gone down to the car, they could not have claimed the goods that were there because they could not be identified. The packages were mixed promiscuously in boxes, and there were no names on the packages. Moreover, those goods were not shipped according to the usual course of business, promptly, but there was a delay of some two or three months in the shipment of those goods.

"I hold, gentlemen, that there was no sale ever consummated until the goods were actually delivered by the drayman at the house. Ordinarily the sale is consummated at Chicago (where goods are ordered from Chicago), and the sale is consummated the moment they are shipped at the city of Chicago, directed to the consignee. In this case no sale was consummated whatever until the goods were actually delivered at the house.

"So I hold, practically, that the car was a mere warehouse or place of doing business by the defendant, and it was there that he distributed the goods as he pleased. For that reason, gentlemen, I hold that the defendant comes within the law, and that he is what is called a hawker and peddler.

. . . . . .

"In this case, as it is only a matter of law, and there are no facts in dispute, it will be your duty of course, as a matter of form, to follow the direction of the court. I find, gentlemen of the jury, in this case, that the defendant, under the evidence and the law, is guilty of the charge. . . ."

And the correctness of the charge thus given was in terms sustained by the supreme court of the state in its opinion.

The charge as thus given and affirmed is clearly in conflict with the rule announced in Crenshaw v. Arkansas, 227 U. S. 389, 57 L. ed. 565, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 294, and the cases there reviewed. Indeed, [670] reference to authority is unnecessary, since it was admitted in the argument at bar that the judgment below, in so far as it affirmed the action of the trial court in holding that there could be a conviction because of the deliveries of merchandise from the cars to fill orders previously solicited and obtained, was erroneous because in conflict with the commerce clause of the Constitution. But it is said although there was manifestly reversible error from this point of view, nevertheless, as from another point of view there was a ground adequate to sustain the judgment, there should be an affirmance. The court below, it is said, not only placed its affirmance upon the erroneous ruling as to the sales made under orders, but also upon the ground that there was evidence showing some sales made from the car or storeroom not under previous orders, and as the latter sales were not within the shelter of the commerce clause, therefore the affirmance on that ground was an independent non-Federal conclusion sustaining the action of the court and calling for the duty of affirmance. But this proposition disregards the fact that the only charge made against the accused was for peddling, and that the instructions of the court and the whole course of the trial conclusively established that the sales made from the car, as the result of the orders solicited, formed the sole basis for the prosecution, and the conviction therefore related to that, and to that alone. If, then, it be admitted that the judgment below was placed upon two grounds, such admission would not establish that the judgment rested upon an independent state ground adequate to sustain it, since the first ground, it is admitted, was Federal and erroneous, and the second ground, if upheld, would amount to a condemnation without hearing, and therefore constitute a denial of due process of law. Thus the proposition, if sustained, would require us to hold that an admitted violation of one constitutional right must be left uncorrected because at the same time another and equally [671] fundamental constitutional right was disregarded; a conclusion which would give effect to both wrongs obviously demonstrates our plain duty to reverse and remand for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

RICHARD G. RILEY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 671-681.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — freedom to contract — hours of women employees.

1. The employment of women for more than ten hours in any one day, or more than

---

NOTE.—Constitutionality of statutes limiting hours of labor by women and children.

This question was discussed in a note to Atkin v. Kansas, 48 L. ed. U. S. 148, on Validity of legislation regulating hours of fifty-six hours a week, in any manufacturing or mechanical establishment, may be forbidden as is done by Mass. Laws 1909, chap. 514, § 48, which makes the exception that a different apportionment of the hours may be made for the sole purpose of making a shorter day's work for one day of the week, without infringing the liberty of contract assured by the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 605-607, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — freedom to contract — hours of women employees.

2. Forbidding the employment of women at a time other than is stated in the notice which the employer must post in a conspicuous place, as is done by Mass. Laws 1909, chap. 514, § 48, regulating the hours of labor for women, is not such an arbitrary and unreasonable provision as to be wanting in the due process of law secured by the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 605-607, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 228.]

Argued March 4 and 5, 1914. Decided March 23, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in and for the County of Bristol to review a judgment entered pursuant to the mandate of the Supreme Judicial Court of that state upon affirmance of a conviction in the Su-labor, and only cases reported since the publication of that note are here considered.

---

The police power of the state generally has been regarded by the courts as broad enough to sustain legislation limiting hours of labor by women and children as essential to their welfare, while recognizing that like legislation for men might not be necessary or valid.

The Illinois "woman's ten-hour law," providing that no female shall be employed in any mechanical establishment or factory or laundry more than ten hours during any one day, was upheld in W. C. Ritchie & Co. v. Wayman, 244 Ill. 509, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 904, 91 N. E. 695 (distinguishing Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L.R.A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454, where a similar eight-hour law had been held invalid), as a legitimate exercise of the police power, against the objections that it denied due process of law and was special legislation. In reply to the latter objection, the court said in effect that the peculiar physical structure and maternal functions of women, and the special pressure and spur to which employees in establishments like those named in the statute, whose product is produced by machinery, are subject, furnish a sufficient basis of classification, and justify confining the statute to women and to the kinds of establishments enumerated.

W. C. Ritchie & Co. v. Wayman, supra, was followed in People v. Bowes-Allegretti Co. 244 Ill. 557, 91 N. E. 701.

The daily hours of labor of women in hotels may be limited to ten. People v. Elerding, 254 Ill. 579, 40 L.R.A.(N.S.) 893, 98 N. E. 982.

The constitutionality of a statute making it a misdemeanor to require a female to work in any factory, laundry, or mechanical establishment more than ten hours a day was also upheld in State v. Muller, 48 Or. 252, 120 Am. St. Rep. 805, 85 Pac. 855, 11 Ann. Cas. 88, as a legitimate exercise of the police power, and against the objection that it unduly restricted the freedom of contract, and also against the objection of discrimination with respect to kinds of employment.

This case was affirmed by the United States Supreme Court (Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 52 L. ed. 551, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, 13 Ann. Cas. 957). The latter court said in effect that the inequality between men and women in respect of the struggle for existence places woman in a class by herself; and that legislation designed for her protection may be sustained, even when like legislation is not necessary for men, and could not be sustained. Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133, was distinguished on that ground.

Females over eighteen years of age may constitutionally be forbidden to work more than ten hours in any one day, or more than fifty-four hours in any one week, in or in connection with any factory, workshop, telephone or telegraph office, millinery or dressmaking establishment, restaurant, or in the distributing and transmission of messages. Ex parte Hawley, 12 Ohio N. P. N. S. 1.

The constitutionality of provisions prohibiting the employment of a child under sixteen years for longer than ten hours in any one day was upheld in State v. Shorey, 48 Or. 396, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1121, 86 Pac. 881.

The Indiana statute which in effect prohibits the employment of persons under sixteen years of age for more than sixty hours in any one week, and the employment of a child under fourteen years of age altogether, in any manufacturing or mercantile establishment, mine, quarry, laundry, renovating works, bakery, or printing office, was upheld in Inland Steel Co. v. Yedinak, 172 Ind. 423, 139 Am. St. Rep. 389, 87 N. E. 229, against the objections that it impaired the obligation of contracts (the statute being in force prior to the making of any contract involved in the action); that it abridged the privileges and immunities of the defendant as a citizen of the United States (the defendant being a corporation, and therefore not within the protection of that provision); that it denied defendant the equal protection of laws, and deprived it of property without due process of law (the legislation in question coming within the police perior Court for violating the state statute regulating the hours of women employees. Affirmed.

Digitized by Google

See same case below, 210 Mass. 387, 97 N. E. 367, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 388.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Andrew J. Jennings argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Israel Brayton and Edward T. Fenwick, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The plaintiff in error contends, in view of the language of this court in its decisions upon the question of the right of a state to restrict the employment of labor, that Mass. Laws 1909, chap. 514, § 48, is in violation of the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 589, 41 L. ed. 832, 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 52 L. ed. 551, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, 13 Ann. Cas. 957.

The state legislature virtually admits in the statute itself that it does not deem it necessary for a woman's health to limit her employment in laboring to ten hours a day, power); and that the statute was a species of class legislation (the classification being a natural, just, and reasonable one).

---

The limitation of the working hours of women in manufacturing and mercantile establishments to nine in every twenty-four does not deprive them of any right guaranteed to them by the 14th Amendment of the Federal Constitution. Withey v. Bloem, 163 Mich. 419, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 628, 128 N. W. 913.

Hours of labor by minors and women in factories may constitutionally be limited to nine hours a day and fifty-four hours a week. People ex rel. Hoelderlin v. Kane, 79 Misc. 140, 139 N. Y. Supp. 350.

A statute prohibiting the employment of any woman in any mechanical or mercantile establishment, laundry, hotel, or restaurant more than eight hours during the day is a valid exercise of the police power of the state, and does not deprive employers and employees in the enumerated factories and callings of their constitutional right to contract. State v. Somerville, 67 Wash. 638, 122 Pac. 324.

Forbidding the employment of women in certain specified establishments for more than eight hours in one day or forty-eight hours in one week, as is done by Cal. Stat. 1911, p. 437, does not, as applied to women employed in hotels, violate a constitutional prohibition against discrimination based on distinctions of sex. Nor does such statute unconstitutionally infringe upon the freedom of contract; nor is the statute invalid as special legislation because there may be other occupations followed by women which need similar protection and regulation. Re Miller, 162 Cal. 687, 124 Pac. 427.

That individual instances exist where women are not injured or overworked by being kept on duty for more than the prescribed period does not render the law invalid. People v. Elerding, 254 Ill. 579, 40 L.R.A.(N.S.) 893, 98 N. E. 982.

Nor does the fact that a particular factory is modern, well equipped, sanitary, and healthful, and that the labor performed by the women employees therein is light and harmless, and that they could be thus employed for nine hours per day without endangering or impairing their health or physical condition, render invalid, as an unreasonable, arbitrary, and unwarranted exercise of the police power, a statute prohibiting the employment of any woman in any mechanical or mercantile establishment, laundry, hotel, or restaurant more than eight hours during any day. State v. Somerville, supra.

The state may forbid women employed in hotels from working more than a prescribed number of hours without imposing a similar restriction upon women employed in lodging and boarding houses. People v. Elerding and Re Miller, supra.

Express exemptions of certain employments from the operation of such legislation have uniformly been sustained.

Unconstitutional class legislation does not result from excepting from the operation of a law limiting the hours of woman's labor persons engaged in preserving perishable goods in fruit and vegetable canning establishments. Withey v. Bloem, supra.

Exempting persons employed in harvesting, curing, canning, or drying perishable fruits or vegetables from the operation of Cal. Stat. 1911, p. 437, forbidding the employment of women in certain specified establishments for more than eight hours in one week, does not render the statute unconstitutionally discriminatory. Re Miller, supra.

Exempting women employed in harvesting, packing, curing, canning, or drying any variety of perishable fruit or vegetable, or in canning fish or shellfish, from the operation of a statute prohibiting the employment of any women in any mechanical or mercantile establishment, laundry, hotel, or restaurant more than eight hours during any day, does not render the statute invalid as denying the equal protection of the laws, or as granting special privileges and immunities. State v. Somerville, supra.

Exempting work in canning factories from June 15 to October 15 from the operation of the provision of the New York labor law, § 77, limiting the hours of labor by women and minors in factories to nine hours a day and fifty-four hours a week, does not render the law unconstitutional as denying the equal protection of the laws. People ex rel. Hoelderlin v. Kane, supra.

The Ohio statute is not invalid because it exempts from its operation work in can-

Digitized by Google

and it gives to every different employer the right, by posting a printed notice, to employ a woman in laboring eleven hours a day on five days in the week, provided he employs the woman such a number of hours on the sixth day as not to exceed fifty-six hours in the whole week. If it be claimed that such a notice must first be approved by the attorney general of the state, our reply is that the statute says the form shall be approved; but if it is held that the attorney general is to approve the number of hours, and that the attorney general may say what the number of hours shall be, then he could approve or disapprove different notices stating different numbers of hours of employment by different employers. This seems to us to be a violation of the 14th Amendment as denying equal protection of the laws.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 369, 30 L. ed. 220, 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

The law is to be judged not by what may be done, but by what can be done, under it.

Curtin v. Benson, 222 U. S. 78, 56 L. ed. 102, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31.

The state statute is not only a denial of the equal protection of the laws, but it is unreasonable and arbitrary in forbidding the employment of women more than ten neries or establishments engaged in preparing perishable goods for use. Ex parte Hawley, 12 Ohio N. P. N. S. 1.

---

The validity of legislation prohibiting employment during certain hours of the day is not so clear. As applied to children such laws are probably valid.

Such was the opinion expressed in Re Spencer, 149 Cal. 396, 117 Am. St. Rep. 137, 86 Pac. 896, 9 Ann. Cas. 1105, where the court held that provisions of a statute to the effect that no minor under sixteen years of age shall work in any mercantile institution, office, laundry, any manufacturing establishment, or workshop between 10 o'clock in the evening and 6 o'clock in the morning, and that no child under sixteen years of age shall work at any gainful occupation during the hours that the public schools are in session, unless such child can read English at sight and write simple English sentences, or is attending night school, —were not so indispensable to the integrity of the statute as a whole that, if unconstitutional, they would invalidate the other provisions entirely prohibiting the employment of children under certain ages in certain kinds of employment.

And in State v. Shorey, 48 Or. 396, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1121, 86 Pac. 881, the court, while declining to pass upon the constitutionality of provisions forbidding the employment of such a child at any work before the hour of 7 in the morning or after the hour of 6 at night, for the reason that the appellant had not been convicted of a violation of such provision, said that laws regulating the right of minors to contract do not come within the principle applicable to adults. They are not sui juris, and can only contract to a limited extent. They are wards of the state and subject to its control. As to them the state stands in the position of parens patriæ, and may exercise unlimited supervision and control over their contracts, occupation, and conduct, and the liberty and right of those who assume to deal with them.

But, as applied to adult females, the provision of N. Y. labor law, § 77, that minors and females shall not be employed or permitted or suffered to work in a factory before 6 o'clock in the morning, or after 9 o'clock in the evening, has been held to be invalid as discriminatory and as an invasion of the constitutional freedom to contract. People v. Williams, 189 N. Y. 131, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1130, 121 Am. St. Rep. 854, 81 N. E. 778, 12 Ann. Cas. 798. "If this enactment is to be sustained," said Gray, J., "then an adult woman, although a citizen, and entitled as such to all the rights of citizenship under our laws, may not be employed nor contract to work in any factory for any period of time, no matter how short, if it is within the prohibited hours; and this, too, without any regard to the healthfulness of the employment. It is clear, as it seems to me, that this legislation cannot, and should not, be upheld as a proper exercise of the police power. It is certainly discriminative against female citizens in denying to them equal rights with men in the same pursuit. The courts have gone very far in upholding legislative enactments framed clearly for the welfare, comfort, and health of the community; and that a wide range in the exercise of the police power of the state should be conceded I do not deny; but when it is sought, under the guise of a labor law, arbitrarily, as here, to prevent an adult female citizen from working at any time of the day that suits her, I think it is time to call a halt. It arbitrarily deprives citizens of their right to contract with each other. The tendency of legislatures, in the form of regulatory measures, to interfere with the lawful pursuits of citizens, is becoming a marked one in this country, and it behooves the courts firmly and fearlessly to interpose the barriers of their judgments when invoked to protect against legislative acts plainly transcending the powers conferred by the Constitution upon the legislative body. In this section of the labor law it will be observed that women are classed with minors under the age of eighteen years, for which there is no reason. The right of the state as parens patriæ to restrict or to regulate the labor and employment of children is unquestionable; but an adult female is not to be regarded as a ward of the state, or in any other light than the man is regarded when the question relates to the business pursuit or calling. She is no more a ward of the state than is the man. She is entitled to enjoy, unmolested, her liberty of person hours in any one day or fifty-six hours a week in any mechanical and manufacturing establishment.

Digitized by Google

Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 52 L. ed. 551, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, 13 Ann. Cas. 957; People v. Williams, 116 App. Div. 379, 101 N. Y. Supp. 562.

The clause prohibiting the employment of women at a time other than as stated in the notice is clearly unconstitutional, and may be so declared without affecting the two prohibitions of the statute forbidding the employment of women more than ten hours a day and more than fifty-six hours a week.

Edwards v. Bruorton, 184 Mass. 529, 69 N. E. 328; Huntington v. Worthen, 120 U. S. 97, 101, 30 L. ed. 588, 589, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 696, 36 L. ed. 294, 311, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495.

The court will give the law a constitutional construction if possible.

Newburyport v. Essex County, 12 Met. 211; Com. v. Anthes, 5 Gray, 185; Opinion of Justices, 207 Mass. 604, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 604, 94 N. E. 558; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 52 L. ed. 551, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, 13 Ann. Cas. 957; Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U. S. 219, 55 L. ed. 191, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145.

There is nothing in the record to show that the work in which the woman was employed at the time stated in the complaint was or could be dangerous to the woman's health.

People v. Williams, 116 App. Div. 379, 101 N. Y. Supp. 562.

The clause, if regarded as evidential, is, we submit, an unjustifiable exercise of the police power of the state, which cannot do indirectly what it cannot do directly.

Huntington v. Worthen, 120 U. S. 97, 101, 30 L. ed. 588, 589, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469.

A state has no right to make an act, innocent in itself, and protected by the 14th Amendment, conclusive evidence of another act, properly forbidden or required, in another part of the statute.

Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U. S. 219, 238, 55 L. ed. 191, 200, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145.

The only way to make the clause a reasonable health regulation was for the state court to hold that it applied only to women who were working more than ten hours a day, under the rule that the court will give a statute a constitutional construction if possible. If the state court had given this clause such a construction, it seems to us that the court would have departed no and her freedom to work for whom she pleases, where she pleases, and as long as she pleases, within the general limits operative on all persons alike. And shall we say that this is valid legislation, which closes the doors of a factory to her before and after certain hours? I think not."

---

A few years after this decision, the New York legislature, in accordance with the recommendation of a factory investigation commission which had emphasized in its report the injurious physical and moral effect of night work, added the following section to the labor law:

"§ 93b. Period of rest at night for women. —In order to protect the health and morals of females employed in factories by providing an adequate period of rest at night, no woman shall be employed or permitted to work in any factory in this state before 6 o'clock in the morning or after 10 o'clock in the evening of any day." When the validity of this law came up for decision in the appellate division of the New York supreme court, a majority of the judges were of the opinion that People v. Williams, supra, was not controlling, and upheld the statute. People v. Charles Schweinler Press, 163 App. Div. 620, 148 N. Y. Supp. 725. Special importance was attached by the judges whose views prevailed to the observation of Judge Gray in People v. Williams, supra: "I find nothing in the language of the section which suggests the purpose of promoting health, except as it might be inferred that for a woman to work during the forbidden hours of night would be unhealthful." The difference in the language of the two statutes and the revelations of the factory investigation commission and others engaged in similar investigation work were held sufficient to distinguish the Williams Case. "If the facts as now presented are true," said Ingraham, P. J., "and they are based upon the official report of a commission authorized by law to investigate the subject, and if women who work in factories at night are exposed to dangers which affect them both physically and morally, and which justify, under the police power, legislation for their protection, this legislation is directed to accomplish that purpose. There is here disclosed, as the general result of a scientific investigation by the state into the conditions existing in the factories of the state, a condition which would subject a large proportion of the women of the state to both physical and moral danger from its continuance, and we have legislation directly enacted for the purpose of procuring, as to a large proportion of the people, the prevention of physical and moral impairment. Such legislation I conceive to be within the police power of the state." Two judges dissented on the ground that if the Williams Case is no longer an authority, it is for the court of appeals to say so.

In Stettler v. O'Hara, — Or. —, 139 Pac. 743, a statute creating an industrial welfare commission with power to fix the maxifarther from the literal meaning of the words of the clause than it did in deciding that the statute did not apply "to any except women employed permanently in labor for full working days, whatever the length may be;" and had the court so held, its construction would have been accepted by this court.

Digitized by Google

Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 55 L. ed. 369, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 160.

It must, of course, be conceded that there is a limit to the valid exercise of the police power by the state. Is this a fair, reasonable, and appropriate exercise of the police power of the state, or is it an unreasonable, unnecessary, and arbitrary interference with the right of the individual to his personal liberty, or to enter into these contracts in relation to labor which may seem to him appropriate or necessary for the support of himself and his family?

Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133.

Mr. James M. Swift argued the cause, and, with Mr. Thomas J. Boynton, Attorney General of Massachusetts, filed a brief for defendant in error:

In the exercise of the police power, the state may limit the right of contract or the use of private property within reasonable limits.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Williams v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 79, 54 L. ed. 673, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 18 Ann. Cas. 865; Schmidinger v. Chicago, 226 U. S. 578, 57 L. ed. 364, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182; Barrett v. Indiana, 229 U. S. 26, 57 L. ed. 1050, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692.

The mere failure to include within the operation of an act certain persons or classes to whom it might have applied will not render the legislation invalid as discriminatory. The classification of employment of women and children confined to manufacturing and mechanical establishments, such as a cotton factory, as here, is within the legislative power.

Com. v. Hamilton Mfg. Co. 120 Mass. 383; Griffith v. Connecticut, 218 U. S. 563, 54 L. ed. 1151, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 55 L. ed. 369, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 160; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Arkansas, 219 U. S. 453, 55 L. ed. 290, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Assaria State Bank v. Dolley, 219 U. S. 121, 55 L. ed. 123, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189; Com. v. Riley, 210 Mass. 387, 97 N. E. 367, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 388; Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 52 L. ed. 551, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, 13 Ann. Cas. 957.

---

mum hours of labor and minimum wage for women and children was held to be within the police power of the state, and therefore not to abridge the privileges of citizenship, nor interfere with the rights of liberty and property, and such statute was further held not to amount to an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power, and not to be discriminatory, although the order of the commission complained of applies to but one city in the state, there being nothing to indicate that the forbidden conditions exist elsewhere; nor is an employer deprived of his property without due process of law because he is denied the right to appeal from the findings of the commission if he has the right to a hearing before such commission.

An amendment seeking to enlarge the number of callings in which the hours of the employment of women are limited by a former act is not in conflict with a constitutional requirement that no act shall embrace more than one subject, which shall be expressed in its title, because the title merely recites that it is an act to amend certain sections of the former act and the title, while the amendment of the title appears as a section of the statute. People v. Chicago, 256 Ill. 558, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 954, 100 N. E. 194, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 305.

But the provisions of § 3 of the Colorado "women and children labor act" of 1903, to the effect that no woman of sixteen years of age or more shall be required to work or labor for more than eight hours in the twenty-four-hours day, in any mill, factory, manufacturing establishment, shop or store where such labor, work, or occupation, by its nature, requires the woman to stand or be upon her feet, were held in Burcher v. People, 41 Colo. 495, 124 Am. St. Rep. 143, 93 Pac. 14, not to be within the scope of the title of the act, "An Act to Prescribe and Regulate the Hours of Employment for Women and Children in Mills, Factories, Manufacturing Establishments, Shops, Stores, and Any Other Occupation which May Be Deemed Unhealthful or Dangerous." The decision was upon the ground that the title had to do with occupations which, in and of themselves, may be deemed unhealthful or dangerous, whereas the provisions in question treat of occupations which, for aught that is said therein to the contrary, are entirely safe and healthful, or refer only to labor that might inferentially be deemed injurious or unhealthful, so that they were not within the scope of the title, even assuming that it is competent for the legislature, under the "eight-hour" constitutional amendment, to regulate the hours of employment, not only where the occupation or branch of industry in itself is injurious or dangerous, but also where, though the particular occupation or place of work is perfectly safe and healthful, the labor performed is injurious or unhealthful.

Digitized by Google

The construction and interpretation given by the highest court of Massachusetts to the provisions of law in question are conclusive upon this court.

Hamilton Mfg. Co. v. Massachusetts, 6 Wall. 632, 18 L. ed. 904; Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 654, 41 L. ed. 586, 587, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 30, 46 L. ed. 785, 789, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Howard v. Kentucky, 200 U. S. 164, 173, 50 L. ed. 421, 425, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189; Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 90, 53 L. ed. 102, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Criminal complaint brought against plaintiff in error in the superior court within and for the county of Bristol, charging him with the violation of a statute of the state in that he, being superintendent of the Davol Mills, a corporation duly established by law, and conducting a mill for the manufacture of cotton goods, in which establishment women were employed, employed two women by the names of Annie Manning and Nora Callahan at a time other than the time which the statute required to be posted in a conspicuous place in the mill where women were required to work in laboring. The specific charge is that the women were employed at 5 minutes of 1 o'clock (12:55 P. M.) on the 24th of February, 1910, in a room wherein was posted a notice in which it was stated that the time of commencing work was 6:50 A. M., and of stopping work was 6 P. M., and that the time allowed for dinner began at 12 M., and ended at 1 P. M.

A demurrer and motion to quash were filed, alleging the unconstitutionality of the statute.

The charge was dismissed as to Annie Manning, and plaintiff in error was convicted as to the charge in regard to Nora Callahan, and sentenced to pay a fine of $50. The sentence was affirmed by the supreme judicial court, and its rescript having been sent to the trial court, this writ of error was sued out.

[679] The statute of the state which is assailed provides that no child or woman shall be employed in laboring in any manufacturing or mechanical establishment more than ten hours in any one day, except as hereinafter provided in this section, unless a different apportionment of the hours of labor is made for the sole purpose of making a shorter day's work for one day of the week, and in no case shall the hours of labor exceed fifty-six in a week. It is provided: "Every employer shall post in a conspicuous place in every room in which such persons are employed a printed notice stating the number of hours' work required of them on each day of the week, the hours of commencing and stopping work, and the hours when the time allowed for meals begins and ends. . . . The employment of such persons at any time other than as stated in said printed notice shall be deemed a violation of the provisions of this section," punishable by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $100.

The first contention of plaintiff in error is that the statute restricts the right to sell and buy labor, and therein infringes the liberty of contract assured by article 14 of the Amendments to the Constitution of the United States. The contention is untenable expressed in this generality. In Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 52 L. ed. 551, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, 13 Ann. Cas. 957, against a similar contention, a statute of Oregon was sustained which prohibited the employment of women in mechanical factories or laundries working more than ten hours during any one day, with power, as in the Massachusetts statute, to apportion the hours through the day.

But special objections are made which, it is contended, make Muller v. Oregon inapplicable. The prohibition of the statute under review, it is said, "is not restricted to times and places which relate to and naturally and logically affect a woman's health, safety, or morals, or the welfare of herself or the public." Such are the conditions necessary to the validity of a statute restricting employment, [680] it is contended, and that those conditions are not satisfied by the statute. Section 48, it is urged, not only prohibits the employment of women more than ten hours a day, but that (quoting the section) "the employment of such person [woman] at a time other than as stated in said printed notice, shall be deemed a violation of the provisions of this section."

The provision is arbitrary and unreasonable, it is insisted, in that it requires the employer to post a notice in a room in which women and minors are permanently employed in laboring only six hours a day, and makes it a crime if such person is allowed to work for five minutes at a time other than as stated in the notice. But if we might imagine that an employer would so enlarge the restrictions of the statute, or be charged with violating it if he did, we yet must remember that, as it was competent for the state to restrict the hours of employment, it is also competent for the state to provide administrative means against evasion of the restriction. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 55 L. ed. 328, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; St. John v. New York, 201 U. S. 633, 50 L. ed. 896, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554, 5 Ann. Cas. 909. Neither the wisdom nor the legality of such means can be judged by extreme instances of their operation. The provision of § 48 cannot be pronounced arbitrary. As said by the supreme judicial court, the statute "requires the hours of labor to be stipulated in advance, and then to be followed until a change is made. It does not by its terms establish a schedule of hours. This is left to the free action of the parties. Nor does it in the sections now under consideration restrict the right to labor to any particular hours. See People v. Williams, 189 N. Y. 131, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1130, 121 Am. St. Rep. 854, 81 N. E. 778, 12 Ann. Cas. 798. It simply makes imperative strict observance of any one table of hours of labor while it remains posted.

Digitized by Google

"The end of the statute is the protection of women within constitutional limits, and the requirement that the hours posted in the notice shall be followed is a means to [681] effectuate the attainment of that end." [210 Mass. 394, 97 N. E. 367, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 388.] In other words, the purpose of the posting of the hours of labor is to secure certainty in the observance of the law, and to prevent the defeat or circumvention of its purpose by artful practices.

There is a contention somewhat tentatively made by plaintiff in error that the statute offends the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment. It will be observed that § 48 provides that the printed form of the "notice shall be provided by the chief of the district police, after approval by the attorney general." And counsel say: "If it be claimed that such a notice must first be approved by the attorney general of the state, our reply is that the statute says the form shall be approved; but if it is held that the attorney general is to approve the number of hours, and that the attorney general may say what the number of hours shall be, then he could approve or disapprove different notices stating different numbers of hours of employment by different employers. This seems to us to be a violation of the 14th Amendment, as denying equal protection of the laws."

And again counsel say, as a specification of the unreasonableness of the statute as an exercise of the police power of the state: "By approval of different schedules by the attorney general, the law may operate unequally in different employments." This supposition is based on the other; that is, that something else than the form of notice is to be prescribed by the attorney general. But counsel assert that it is the form only which the attorney general is to approve, and the assertion is not denied. There is, therefore, nothing tangible in the contention. Besides, it has no justification in the opinion of the supreme judicial court.

Judgment affirmed.

---

[682] MISSOURI, KANSAS, & TEXAS RAILWAY COMPANY, National Surety Company, and American Surety Company of New York, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

IVOLUE B. WEST.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 682-693.)

Error to state court — Federal question — decision on facts.

A decision of a state court having substantial support in the record that the pleadings and evidence in an action for death against an interstate railway company demonstrate that the deceased was in the employ of an express company rather than of the railway company, and that therefore the defendant's liability was not controlled by the Federal employers' liability act of April 22, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322), involves no denial of any asserted Federal right, and is not reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1324-1326, 1596-1600, 2175-2208, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 696.]

Argued March 3, 1914. Decided March 23, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for the Third Judicial District in that state in favor of plaintiff in

---

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court t. state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On review of questions of fact on writ of error to a state court—see note to Smiley v. Kansas, 49 L. ed. U. S. 546.

Digitized by Google

an action for death. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 38 Okla. 581, 134 Pac. 655.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. R. Allen argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Clifford L. Jackson and Joseph M. Bryson, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

This court will examine the entire record, including the evidence, to determine whether what purports to be a finding upon questions of fact by the highest state court is so involved with and dependent upon questions of law as to be in substance and effect a decision of the latter, and if so, whether such questions of law, being Federal in character, were properly decided.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. McWhirter, 229 U. S. 265, 57 L. ed. 1179, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 858; Southern P. R. Co. v. Schuyler, 227 U. S. 601, 57 L. ed. 662, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 901, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. ed. 556, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316; Creswill v. Grand Lodge, K. P. 225 U. S. 246, 56 L. ed. 1074, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Washington ex rel. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Fairchild, 224 U. S. 510, 56 L. ed. 863, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535; Cedar Rapids Gaslight Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 223 U. S. 655, 56 L. ed. 594, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Graham v. Gill, 223 U. S. 643, 56 L. ed. 586, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

At the close of the evidence, a motion was made by counsel for the railway company for the court to instruct a verdict in its favor. This request for an instructed verdict is in itself sufficient, under the decisions of this court, to present the Federal question.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. McWhirter, supra; St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 57 L. ed. 1129, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

It was alleged by the defendant in error in her pleadings that the deceased was an employee of the railway company, and this fact was admitted by the pleadings of the railway company.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Reasor, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 302, 68 S. W. 332.

The evidence introduced is the controlling feature in determining whether the case is one within the Federal statute, rather than the pleadings.

St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, supra.

The evidence conclusively shows that the deceased was an employee of the railway company, and the record likewise shows that such was the understanding of the trial court and of all parties.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Blalack, 105 Tex. 296, 147 S. W. 559; Vary v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co. 42 Iowa, 246; Oliver v. Northern P. R. Co. 196 Fed. 435; Ringue v. Oregon Coal & Nav. Co. 44 Or. 407, 75 Pac. 703; Rummell v. Dilworth, P. & Co. 111 Pa. 343, 2 Atl. 355, 363; Goodrich v. Kansas City, C. & S. R. Co. 152 Mo. 222, 53 S. W. 917.

Mr. Charles H. Taylor argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Benjamin Martin, Jr., S. Grant Harris, and Thomas D. O'Brien, filed a brief for defendant in error:

On writ of error to the highest court of a state, nothing is removed for re-examination in this court but questions of law arising upon the record; and the findings of fact made by the supreme court of the state will be the basis of the decision of this court.

Thayer v. Spratt, 189 U. S. 346, 347, 47 L. ed. 845, 846, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 175 U. S. 639, 647, 44 L. ed. 305, 308, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245; Crary v. Devlin, 154 U. S. 619, 23 L. ed. 510, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1199; Wood v. Chesborough, 228 U. S. 672, 676, 57 L. ed. 1018, 1020, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 97, 53 L. ed. 417, 424, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; Chrisman v. Miller, 197 U. S. 313, 319, 49 L. ed. 770, 772, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Vandalia R. Co. v. Indiana, 207 U. S. 359, 367, 52 L. ed. 246, 248, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Kerfoot v. Farmer's & M. Bank, 218 U. S. 281, 288, 54 L. ed. 1042, 1043, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Mammoth Min. Co. v. Grand Central Min. Co. 213 U. S. 72, 77, 53 L. ed. 702, 706, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; Delmar Jockey Club v. Missouri, 210 U. S. 324, 335, 52 L. ed. 1080, 1084, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732; Clipper Min. Co. v. Eli Min. & Land Co. 194 U. S. 220, 222, 48 L. ed. 944, 948, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; Hedrick v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 167 U. S. 673, 677, 42 L. ed. 320, 321, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 922; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 189, 41 L. ed. 680, 681, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 663, 38 L. ed. 305, 307, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704.

If no Federal question were presented for decision in the state court, or if the decision of the Federal question presented was unnecessary to the determination of the case, or if it was not actually decided, or if it appeared that the judgment as rendered could have been given without deciding the Federal question, the Supreme Court has no jurisdiction to review the decision of the state court. In such cases, the writ of error should be dismissed.

Digitized by Google

Vandalia R. Co. v. Indiana, 207 U. S. 359, 368, 52 L. ed. 246, 249, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 576, 40 L. ed. 536, 540, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Duvall, 225 U. S. 477, 487, 56 L. ed. 1171, 1176, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; Johnson v. Risk, 137 U. S. 300, 307, 34 L. ed. 683, 686, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; DeSaussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216, 32 L. ed. 125, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1053; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 84, 35 L. ed. 943, 944, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 336, 36 L. ed. 450, 457, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693; Northern P. R. Co. v. Ellis, 144 U. S. 458, 36 L. ed. 504, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Davidson v. Connelly, 154 U. S. 580, 38 L. ed. 1088, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1200; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. 138 U. S. 635 34 L. ed. 1110, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 183, 184, 39 L. ed. 941–943, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777.

If the Federal question was raised in the state court, yet, if the case was decided on grounds broad enough in themselves to sustain the judgment without reference to the Federal question, the Supreme Court will not entertain jurisdiction.

Connecticut ex rel. New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Woodruff, 153 U. S. 689, 38 L. ed. 869, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 976; Sherman v. Grinnell, 144 U. S. 198, 202, 36 L. ed. 403, 405, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 574.

It has been held, it is true, by this court, that where a finding of fact of a state supreme court, which has the effect of denying a Federal question, has no support whatever in the record, or where a conclusion of a state supreme court is based upon facts in the record which will not, under any reasonable construction, support the conclusion of the state supreme court, then this court may still entertain jurisdiction.

St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 57 L. ed. 1129, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

But it has never been held by this court that where the findings of fact of a state supreme court (in effect, denying the existence of a Federal question, and hence the jurisdiction of this court) have any support in the record, under any reasonable construction of the pleadings and the evidence upon which the findings of fact are based, such findings can be questioned by this court by writ of error.

A motion to dismiss will be granted where it appears on the face of the opinion, when it forms a part of the record, that the decision of the state supreme court did not rest on a Federal question.

Jacks v. Helena, 115 U. S. 288, 29 L. ed. 392, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Kreiger v. Shelby R. Co. 125 U. S. 39, 44, 31 L. ed. 675, 677, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 752.

But assuming that the opinions of the highest court of the state of Oklahoma do not show conclusively on their face that the findings of fact as therein made with respect to the employment of West are supported by the record, nevertheless, this court, on motion to dismiss the writ of error or affirm the judgment, will look to the pleadings and evidence sufficiently to ascertain if the findings of fact of the state supreme court in that regard are supported.

Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 189, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Vandalia R. Co. v. Indiana, 207 U. S. 367, 52 L. ed. 248, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130.

The petition in the case at bar cannot be construed to allege any employment of West, the express messenger, by the railroad company.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Blalack, 105 Tex. 296, 147 S. W. 559.

Under the allegations of plaintiff in error, West, so far as the railroad company was concerned, was a passenger.

Ibid.; Fordyce v. Jackson, 56 Ark. 594, 20 S. W. 528, 597; Brewer v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 124 N. Y. 59, 11 L.R.A. 483, 21 Am. St. Rep. 647, 26 N. E. 324; Yoemans v. Contra Costa Steam Nav. Co. 44 Cal. 71, 9 Am. Neg. Cas. 78; Blair v. Erie R. Co. 66 N. Y. 313, 23 Am. Rep. 55; Jennings v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 15 Ont. App. Rep. 477; Foulkes v. Metropolitan Dist. R. Co. L. R. 5 C. P. Div. 157, 49 L. J. C. P. N. S. 361, 42 L. T. N. S. 345, 28 Week. Rep. 526; Southern R. Co. v. Harrington, 166 Ala. 630, 139 Am. St. Rep. 59, 52 So. 57; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wilson, 79 Tex. 371, 11 L.R.A. 486, 23 Am. St. Rep. 345, 15 S. W. 280; Davis v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 122 Ky. 528, 5 L.R.A.(N.S.) 458, 121 Am. St. Rep. 481, 92 S. W. 339, 12 Ann. Cas. 723; Voight v. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. 79 Fed. 566; Prince v. International & G. N. R. Co. 64 Tex. 144; Collett v. London & N. W. R. Co. 16 Q. B. 984, 20 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 411, 15 Jur. 1053; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Ketcham, 133 Ind. 346, 19 L.R.A. 339, 36 Am. St. Rep. 550, 33 N. E. 116; Jones v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. 125 Mo. 666, 26 L.R.A. 718, 46 Am. St. Rep. 514, 28 S. W. 883.

The mere fact that West might have been termed "a joint express messenger and baggage man," and that he did the work of both companies, clearly is not proof of employment by the railroad company, nor is it inconsistent with the allegation of the railroad company that, in handling the passenger baggage, West was doing so "under and by virtue of his employment by the American Express Company."

Digitized by Google

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Blalack, supra.

[683] Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action for damages, brought by defendant in error against plaintiff in error (herein called the railway company) for the death of William B. West, husband of the defendant in error, caused by the collision of two trains of the railway company. The case was tried to a jury and resulted in a verdict and judgment for defendant in error in the sum of $15,000. The judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the state, and error was prosecuted from this court.

There is no dispute about the collision, the cause of it, or that it resulted in the death of the deceased. He and the plaintiff below were residents of Kansas, and she brought the suit, as she alleged in her complaint, as his widow, and for the benefit of herself as such widow and their three minor children. No personal representative of his estate was appointed.

She alleged that the deceased at the time of his death was employed by the American Express Company as express messenger upon the express cars operated by the railway company over its line of railroad from Parsons, Kansas, through the state of Oklahoma, to points in the state of Texas. That in addition to his duties as express messenger he was also engaged in handling passenger baggage upon the express cars of the railway company. The plaintiff then alleged the deceased came to his death in the course of his employment while riding in the express car, by reason of a head-on collision of the train with a freight train between certain stations in Oklahoma.

A demurrer was filed which attacked the legal capacity of the plaintiff to sue for her minor children, and the sufficiency of the complaint, and alleged as well that there was a defect of parties. The demurrer was overruled, and the case put at final issue by a third amended answer [684] (amended again at the trial) filed by the railway company. It denied negligence on its part, and alleged negligence on the part of the deceased, and that it was engaged in moving interstate commerce. It alleged also that the deceased had made application to the American Express Company at Parsons, Kansas, for a position as a driver of one of its wagons, and was engaged by the express company in pursuance of a written application (copy of which was attached to the answer), that he was employed by the express company (a copy of the contract being attached to the answer), and in consideration of his employment he assumed all risk of accident and injury which he should meet with or sustain in the course of his employment, whether occasioned by or resulting from the gross or other negligence of any corporation or person engaged in any manner in operating any railroad or vessel or vehicle, or of any employee of any such corporation or person, or otherwise, and whether resulting in his death or otherwise. That in case of injury he would at once and without demand execute and deliver a good and sufficient release of all claims, demands, and causes of action arising out of such injury, or connected with or resulting therefrom. That by the terms of his contract he ratified all agreements made by the express company and any such corporation or person that its employees should have no cause of action for injuries sustained in the course of their employment, and agreed to be bound by such agreements as though he were a party thereto, and authorized the express company to contract for him that neither he nor any of his personal representatives, nor any person claiming under him, should claim compensation because of injury sustained by him, whether resulting from gross or other negligence of such corporations, persons, or employees. That such contract should enure to the benefit of any corporation or person over whose railroads or steamboat lines the express company should forward merchandise.[685] and this in consideration of his employment by the express company. That in pursuance of his contract of employment by the express company he was in the express car of the railway company, and that he was barred from maintaining the action.

The answer concluded with the following paragraph:

"Further answering, defendant admits that at and prior to the death of said William B. West, deceased, he was employed by the American Express Company as express messenger upon the express cars operated by the defendant railway company over its line of road . . . and admits that the deceased, William B. West, in addition to his employment as express messenger by the said American Express Company, was also engaged in handling passenger baggage upon the express car of said defendant railway company, and . . . in performing said duties in handling said baggage was doing so under and by virtue of his said employment by the said American Express Company, and that such handling of such baggage by said West was for and in behalf of and under the direction of said railway company."

Defendant in error filed a reply to the answer in which she affirmed the allegations of her complaint and denied those of the answer, and alleged besides that at the time the contracts set out in the answer were made and ever since the statutes of Kansas provided as follows:

Digitized by Google

"That railroads in this state shall be liable for all damages done to persons or property when done in consequence of any neglect on the part of the railroad company.

"Every railroad company organized and doing business in the state of Kansas shall be liable for all damages done to any employee of such company in consequence of any negligence of its agents, or by any mismanagement of its engineers or other employees, to any person sustaining such damage. Provided that notice in writing that an injury [686] has been sustained, stating the time and place thereof, shall have been given by or on behalf of the person injured to such railroad company within eight months after the occurrence of the injury."

A demurrer to the reply was overruled.

The simple question which is presented here is whether the deceased was employed at the time of his death by the railway company or by the American Express Company. On those alternates depends the jurisdiction of this court; and defendant in error, asserting that such employment was a question of fact decided by the state courts against the railway company, makes a motion to dismiss the writ of error.

There were two opinions delivered by the supreme court of the state. In its first opinion the court said that the railway company contended that the defendant's liability was controlled by the "employers' liability act" [35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322]; but the court, after quoting its provisions, decided that the pleadings and evidence demonstrated that the deceased was in the employment of the American Express Company at the time of his death, and that therefore the national act did not apply. The court also noticed the other rulings which were called to its attention; among others, one based on the action of the trial court refusing to admit in evidence the contracts attached to the answer. The court declined to consider the latter ruling, holding that, under the practice of the court, the error was not properly before it for review, and for the further reason that in the brief and argument of the railway company the ruling was "not attempted to be insisted upon or urged as error," citing Noble State Bank v. Haskell, 22 Okla. 48, 97 Pac. 590. And the court said the omission could not be cured by a reply brief when the same was not predicated upon a specification of error, permission not having been first obtained for the purpose of amending the specifications of error.

[687] The court was also of opinion that the contract of the deceased by which, it was contended, he assumed the risk of injuries, and released all rights of action for them, was "void as against public policy, on account of being in contravention of the laws of the state of Kansas, and against the public policy" of Oklahoma.

The second opinion was delivered upon a petition for rehearing in which the railway company earnestly combated the conclusions of the court, expressed in the first opinion, repeated its contentions, and insisted that the case was tried on the theory that the issue made by the pleadings was whether the deceased was an employee of the railway company, and that the evidence showed that he was such employee. The court rejected the contentions and decided that the pleadings alleged, and the evidence was consistent with the allegation, that West was employed by the express company.

There is, therefore, a sharp antagonism between the views of the court and of the railway company, and yet there is not much dispute over the elements of the controversy, but rather in the inferences from them.

The essential facts pleaded we have given. The allegation of the complaint is that West, "at and prior to the time" of his death, "was employed by the American Express Company as express messenger upon the express cars operated by said defendant company," and "that in addition to his duties and employment as messenger" he was "also engaged in handling passenger baggage upon" such cars, and "in the course of his employment . . . was riding in one of the express cars" of the railway company. The direct averment, therefore, is that West was employed by the express company, and that he handled baggage and was riding in the express cars in the course of this employment and as part of its duties. A relation with the railway company is, it is true, averred. He handled its baggage and rode in its cars. But this did not [688] make him its employee. If he was, such is not disclosed by the complaint, nor is it alleged in the answer of the railway company. Indeed, his employment by the express company is emphasized by the contracts attached to the answer, and a defense is based upon them. It is averred that West, by these contracts, assumed all the risks of his employment by the express company, ratified the contracts of the latter, authorized it in his name to release any demand he might have for injuries, agreed to be bound by whatever covenants the company should make, and that neither he nor any of his personal representatives would claim compensation for injuries, whether resulting from negligence or otherwise. These contracts are explicitly averred, as constituting the consideration for West's "employment by said express company;" and it is alleged that he was "being transported by this defendant . . . in pursuance of said contract, hereinbefore referred to as 'Exhibit B,'" and "that plaintiff is therefore now barred from maintaining this action."

Digitized by Google

These allegations do not deny, but rather aver, the employment of West by the express company, and were intended as a security to that company, and through it to any transportation company or person. Their basis distinctly is that injury might result to West in his employment, and they were intended to prevent legal liability for it. Whether they had that effect is not a Federal question.

The railway company, however, contends that the evidence conclusively shows that the deceased was an employee of the railway company, and that certainty of proof is no doubt asserted for it to countervail the combined judgments of the jury and of the trial and supreme courts. The latter court, in its second opinion, however, considering the effect of the contracts between the express company and the deceased, and the oral evidence upon which the railway company relied, said: "We therefore find with the court below that the pleadings and the evidence conclusively [689] show that the deceased suffered the injuries that resulted in his death while he was employed by the express company, and not while he was employed by the railway company in interstate commerce within the meaning of the Federal employers' liability act." The court hence decided that the action was governed by the statutes of Oklahoma.

What the pleadings alleged and what the contracts showed we have already adverted to. The testimony relied on is that of one of the superintendents of the express company, who, in testifying as to the relation between the deceased and the railway company, said that the deceased was "agent, messenger, and baggageman," and by this was meant that he "worked for both companies," and that the proportion of payment by the companies was an "equal division." That his duties were that he "received the baggage at the stations, made a record of it, and put it off at its destination in the same manner any baggageman did." The witness further said that the deceased knew that he was to handle the baggage of the railway company and act as joint employee of it and the express company, and was "told to post himself in the work of both companies." On cross-examination, however, the witness testified that all of the salary of the deceased "came from the express company." The railway company "paid us one half of his salary; we drew a bill against them in his name and the other baggageman."

Counsel for the railway company urge that the strength of this testimony is such that it needs no reinforcement from argument, and they say that it has confirmation besides in a circular letter addressed by the superintendent of the express company to all of the messengers of the company. The letter, however, was not admitted in evidence, and no error was assigned in the supreme court upon the ruling. We are unable, therefore, to consider it, notwithstanding counsel's plaint—often repeated—that [690] they were deceived by their conception, justified, it is insisted, that the case was tried upon the theory that the deceased was an employee of the railway company.

This theory the railway company makes a great deal of. It constituted the basis of the petition for rehearing, and, by disregarding it, it was contended and is contended, the court was led into error. The court, however, rejected the theory, deciding that it was not justified by the pleadings, complaint, or answer, nor by the evidence in the case.

The court grouped the contentions of the railway company under four heads: (1) Plaintiff in the action (defendant in error here) was not the proper party to maintain the action; (2) error in instructions; (3) error in excluding the three written contracts attached to the answer; (4) amount of damages.

The first contention is the determining one, as we have already said. Upon it depends the Federal question; that is, whether the laws of Oklahoma controlled the action or the employers' liability act. And this turns necessarily upon the other question, whether the deceased was employed by the railway company or by the express company,—a question of fact found in the first instance by the jury against the present contention of the railway company, and sustained by the trial court on motion for a new trial, and the supreme court in two opinions.

The finding having support in the record, it is contended that this court cannot question it, and that therefore the writ of error should be dismissed. The railway company cites in resistance the case of St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. McWhirter, 229 U. S. 265, 57 L. ed. 1170, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 858, and St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 57 L. ed. 1129, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651. The cited cases are not like the case at bar. In the McWhirter Case the action was in express terms based on a statute of the United States,—the hours of service act of 1907 [34 Stat. at L. 1415, chap. 2939, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1321]. It was contended that the pleadings embraced as well an action at common law, and that such cause of action was sustained and was [691] broad enough to support the judgment, irrespective of what may have been decided concerning the statute of the United States, and a motion to dismiss was made. The contention was rejected and the motion was denied. It was recognized that the case coming from a state court, the power to review was controlled by Revised Statutes, § 709 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), but it was said, however, that "where in a controversy of a purely Federal character the claim is made and denied that there was no evidence tending to show liability under the Federal law, such ruling, when duly excepted to, is reviewable, because inherently involving the operation and effect of the Federal law."

Digitized by Google

In the Seale Case the question was whether the plaintiff in error in the case (the railway company) was engaged in interstate commerce. There was no question of the employment by the railway company. The state court decided the question in the negative, holding that the evidence did not bring the case within the employers' liability act. The case was brought here by writ of error and jurisdiction entertained against a motion to dismiss, and, after examining the evidence, we reversed the ruling of the state court.

In the case under review the pleadings state a cause of action under the state law, and there is no question of the character of the commerce in which the railway company was engaged; the only question is whether the deceased was its employee or that of the express company. If the answer to the question depended upon evidence, it might be said that the cited cases are the same in principle, both the fact of interstate commerce and the fact of employment by the railway company of the deceased being conditions which would bring the case under the Federal enactment; or that such employment was one of those subsidiary or connecting facts into which this court will inquire as determining its jurisdiction, of which there are examples. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. C. H. Albert Commission Co. 223 [692] U. S. 573, 56 L. ed. 556, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316; Cedar Rapids Gaslight Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 223 U. S. 655, 56 L. ed. 594, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Brinkmeier v. Missouri P. R. Co. 224 U. S. 268, 56 L. ed. 758, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; Creswill v. Grand Lodge, K. P. 225 U. S. 246, 56 L. ed. 1074, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822. At any rate, we might, if the fact turned on the evidence, say that the Federal question asserted was not manifestly lacking in color of merit, and follow, therefore, the ruling in Swafford v. Templeton, 185 U. S. 487, 46 L. ed. 1005, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 783.

But the supreme court of the state rested its decision upon the allegation of fact of employment of the deceased by the express company, and the admission of the fact in the answer of the railway company, and held that there was nothing in the course of the trial which obviated the effect of the allegations and admissions of the pleadings. The court, after quoting the paragraph of the answer which we have given above, said that its "admissions are in entire harmony with the balance of the answer, which contains allegation after allegation positively stating that the deceased was employed by the express company continuously for a great many years prior to his death, and the contracts of employment between the express company and the deceased are attached to the answer and made a part thereof, and certain waivers contained therein are relied upon as a defense." And, further, "From the pleadings alone it is clear that the deceased suffered the injuries which resulted in his death while he was employed by the express company, and not while he was employed by the railway company; and that the parties did not attempt to join an issue of fact upon that question." The expression in the opinion was that if the evidence disclosed a case different from that alleged in the pleadings, the Federal statute would control and St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 57 L. ed. 1129, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651, would be applicable. But the court said that the testimony of Adams, the superintendent of the express company, relied on by the railway company, was "in no way inconsistent with the allegations of the petition and the admissions of the answer," because [693] "the witness merely drew erroneous conclusions from admitted facts, and that his testimony as a whole supplemented the allegations of the petition and the admissions of the answer by more fully disclosing the relations existing between the express company and the deceased, and the express company and the railway company, and made it more clearly apparent that the decedent was rightfully on the train." [134 Pac. 658.]

The court, therefore, considered the case distinguishable from the cases cited by the railway company (Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Reasor, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 302, 68 S. W. 332; Vary v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co. 42 Iowa, 246; Oliver v. Northern P. R.

Digitized by Google

Co. 196 Fed. 432), and made no comment upon them except to say that they in no way conflicted with the conclusion reached.

The state court having decided, with substantial grounds for the decision, that the pleadings and evidence show an action under the employment by the express company, no denial of Federal right is involved, and, therefore, motion to dismiss must be granted. And, as the action was brought under the state law, and not under the Federal law, it becomes unnecessary to notice errors assigned by the railway company, including that based on the instruction of the trial court that a verdict could be rendered by three fourths of the jury.

Dismissed.

---

[694] SANTA FE CENTRAL RAILWAY COMPANY and W. S. Hopewell and Thomas P. Gable, its Sureties, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

HARRY SLOCUM FRIDAY, by John H. Friday, His Next Friend.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 694–700.)

Territorial courts — jurisdiction — cases involving Federal question.

The jurisdiction of the territorial judicial district courts, which, under the New Mexico organic act of September 9, 1850 (9 Stat. at L. 446, chap. 49), § 10, was to be "as limited by law," was not withdrawn as to cases arising under the Federal Constitution and laws which that section made justiciable in those courts by N. M. Comp. Laws 1897, §§ 900, 901, giving the county district courts "exclusive original jurisdiction in all civil cases which shall not be cognizable before probate judges and justices of the peace," and "jurisdiction in all civil causes in said counties which, according to law, belong to the district courts," enacted in pursuance not only of the organic act, but of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1874, authorizing the judges of the territorial supreme courts to hold court in the counties of their respective districts "wherein, by the laws of the territory, courts have been or may be established, for the purpose of hearing and determining all matters and causes, except those in which the United States is a party."

[For other cases, see Courts, III. a, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 230.]

Submitted March 5, 1914. Decided March 23, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of the First Judicial District of that territory, in favor of plaintiff in a personal injury action. Affirmed.

See same case below, 16 N. M. 434, 120 Pac. 316.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. E. W. Dobson submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. T. B. Catron submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. George W. Prichard was on the brief.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for personal injuries, brought by the defendant in error against the railway company under the act of June 11, 1906, chap. 3073, 34 Stat. at L. 232, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1316, held valid for the territories in El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 87, 54 L. ed. 106, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21. The plaintiff got a verdict and judgment which the supreme court of the territory affirmed. 16 N. M. 434, 120 Pac. 316.

The only argument addressed to us is an attack upon the jurisdiction of the court that tried the case. That court was the district court, sitting for the trial of causes arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States in the first judicial district in the territory of New Mexico. The organic act of September 9, 1850, chap. 49, 9 Stat. at L. 446, provided in § 10 for three judicial districts, and for a district court to be held in each by a justice [699] of the supreme court, as should be prescribed by law. It further enacted that the jurisdiction of the several courts therein provided for "shall be as limited by law;" that "each of the said district courts shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction in all cases arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States as is vested in the circuit and district courts of the United States;" and that the first six days of every term, or so much of them as necessary, "shall be appropriated to the trial of causes arising under the said Constitution and laws." See also Rev. Stat. § 1910. The court where the trial was held was one of these district courts provided for by the organic act, and the case was one arising under the laws of the United States.

But it is said that the jurisdiction of these courts was to be "as limited by law;" that that means by territorial legislation, and that a territorial statute provided for the holding of district courts in the counties, and enacted that the district courts in the counties should have "exclusive original jurisdiction in all civil cases which shall not be cognizable before probate judges and justices of the peace." Comp.

Digitized by Google

Laws 1897, § 900. By a later territorial act the district courts in the various counties were given "jurisdiction in all civil causes in said counties which, according to law, belong to the district courts," id. § 901. And this was in pursuance not only of the organic act, but of another act of Congress of 1858 [11 Stat. at L. 366, chap. 166], afterwards Rev. Stat. § 1874, by which the judges of the supreme court were "authorized to hold court within their respective districts, in the counties wherein, by the laws of the territory, courts have been or may be established, for the purpose of hearing and determining all matters and causes, except those in which the United States is a party." Thus, it is argued, exclusive jurisdiction of cases like the present was transferred to the county district courts.

[700] But it has been held for many years that the purpose and effect of these statutes was to give the judges of the supreme court sitting in the county district courts authority to hear cases arising under territorial laws, and to make the jurisdiction over such cases exclusive in those courts. Lincoln-Lucky & L. Min. Co. v. District Ct. 7 N. M. 486, 490–501, 38 Pac. 580; Murphy v. Murphy, 4 Dak. 107, 25 N. W. 806. The statutes, we believe, have not been understood to attempt to withdraw from the courts of the larger districts the authority expressly conferred upon them by the Revised Statutes and the organic act,—a thing that, of course, territorial statutes could not do. See The City of Panama, 101 U. S. 453, 25 L. ed. 1061. We should not decide against the local understanding of a matter of purely local concern unless we thought it clearly wrong, instead of thinking it, as we do, plainly right. Phœnix R. Co. v. Landis, 231 U. S. 578, 579, ante, 377, 380, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179.

Judgment affirmed.

CARL EBERLE and Stephen H. Carroll, Plffs. in Err.,
v.
PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF MICHIGAN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 700–707.)

Statutes — validity — invalid amendments.

1. The validity of the original Michigan local option law (Mich. Pub. Acts 1889, act. No. 207) could not be impaired by the subsequent adoption of Pub. Acts 1899, act. No. 183, and Pub. Acts 1903, act. No. 170, enacting what in form were amendments, but which, in legal effect, because of their unlawfully discriminatory character, were nullities.

[Partial validity of statute, see Statutes, I. d. 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — scope of review — question of local law.

2. Whether or not an election at which a county went "dry" was void because the question apparently submitted was the adoption of the original Michigan local option law (Mich. Pub. Acts 1889, act. No. 207) with its amendments (Pub. Acts 1899, act. No. 183, and Pub. Acts 1903, act. No. 170) permitting the manufacture of wine and cider in dry counties, when in reality only the original law was submitted, the amendments being invalid, is for the state court to decide, and its conclusion cannot be revised by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2072–2226, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws.

3. Permitting the sale of intoxicating liquors by druggists for medicinal, art, scientific, and mechanical purposes, while forbidding its sale by merchants, as is done by the Michigan local option law (Mich. Pub. Acts 1889, act. No. 207, § 15), does not deny the equal protection of the laws.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 347–355, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — prohibitory law.

4. The subsequent manufacture of beer in a "dry" county for use in starting refermentation of other beer on hand when the Michigan local option law (Mich. Pub. Acts 1889, act. No. 207) became operative in that county as the result of a local election may be made a criminal offense, as is done by that statute, without depriving the brewers of their property without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 479–481, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 164.]

Argued January 16 and 19, 1914. Decided March 23, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the Circuit Court of Jackson County, in that state, for violating the local option law. Affirmed.

See same case below, 167 Mich. 477, 133 N. W. 519.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

Generally, on the validity of state regulation of sales of intoxicating liquors—see notes to Foster v. Kansas, 28 L. ed. U. S. 696, and Rhodes v. Iowa, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1089.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Richard Price argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The statute is unlawfully discriminatory in character.

Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446, 29 L. ed. 691, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; Eubank v. Richmond, 226 U. S. 137, 57 L. ed. 156, 42 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1123, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

The construction which the supreme court of the state of Michigan places upon the law is such as to forbid even the manufacture of a new brew of beer for the purpose of preserving the old beer which was on hand at the time the law took effect. This would lead to the destruction of the beer on hand at the time the law took effect, as the same could only be kept alive and in a marketable condition by inserting a new brew from time to time as occasion required. It is true that the courts have held that so far as the machinery, plant, and appliances of liquor and beer manufactories are concerned, the fact that the adoption of a prohibition law makes them practically useless does not make the law unconstitutional; but no case which I have found has yet gone to the extent of holding that the legislature of a state would have a right to pass a law, the effect of which would necessitate the destruction of the manufactured article in existence at the time the law took effect.

Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. 129, 21 L. ed. 929; Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 486; Kidd v. Pearson 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989.

Can the wine and cider clause be declared unconstitutional and the remainder of the act be saved?

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. pp. 246, 247, 249; State ex rel. Huston v. Perry County, 5 Ohio St. 497.

An amendment to a statute will generally be considered as a part of the original act, and the entire act as amended will be given the construction which would be given it if the amendment were a part of the original act.

People ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Michigan C. R. Co. 145 Mich. 140, 108 N. W. 772; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, §§ 44, 294; Black, Constr. & Interpretation of Laws, pp. 356, 357.

Where such a law creates a system, and the part which is legal cannot stand by itself without the aid of the rest, or is so much affected or disturbed by the rejection of the rest that it could not be supposed the legislature would have adopted it by itself, the whole shall be rejected, because the part cannot be regarded as the expression of the legislative will.

People ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Detroit, 29 Mich. 114.

The legislature of the state of Michigan having made a certain trade in liquor, including beer, lawful in dry counties, it could not make the manufacture of beer in those counties to supply that trade unlawful. It could not oblige the people to purchase elsewhere, nor deny them the right to supply a lawful trade. What the government of the state could not monopolize it could not turn over to, and create a monopoly of, in favor of the foreign manufacturer.

Herman v. State, 8 Ind. 545; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578–589, 41 L. ed. 832–835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 766, 28 L. ed. 585, 590, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652.

Mr. Grant Fellows, Attorney General of Michigan, argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The original act in question was a complete act in and of itself; it was capable of being executed independently of such amendment, and therefore it was not affected by the invalidity of such amendment.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. pp. 246, 247; Presser v. Illinois, 116 U. S. 252, 263, 29 L. ed. 615, 618, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580.

The fact that the plaintiffs in error were engaged in a business made unlawful by a valid section of this act does not render them immune from prosecution because of the invalidity of certain other provisions.

Tiernan v. Rinker, 102 U. S. 123, 26 L. ed. 103.

The plaintiffs in error have not been deprived of their property without due process of law and in violation of the 14th Amendment.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Rippey v. Texas, 193 U. S. 504, 48 L. ed. 767, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Ohio ex rel. Lloyd v. Dollison, 194 U. S. 445, 48 L. ed. 1062, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

The Michigan local option law of 1889 makes it unlawful to manufacture or sell malt, vinous, spirituous, or intoxicating liquors in any county where a majority of the electors vote in favor of prohibition.

The provisions of the law, however, do not (§ 1) apply to druggists selling such liquors in compliance with the restrictions imposed upon them by the general laws of this state. It was also provided (§ 15) that "nothing in this act shall be so construed as to prohibit the sale of wine for sacramental purposes, nor shall anything herein contained [703] prohibit druggists from selling pure alcohol for medicinal, art, scientific, and mechanical purposes." Pub. Acts (Mich.) 1889, pp. 287, 293.

Digitized by Google

By amendments passed in 1899 and 1903 (Acts of 1899, p. 280; Acts of 1903, p. 229), it was further provided that the act should not be construed to "prohibit the sale of wine or cider made from home-grown fruit in quantities of not less than 5 gallons, nor . . . to prohibit the manufacture of wine or cider, nor . . . to prohibit the sale at wholesale of wine or cider manufactured in said [dry] county to parties who reside outside of said county."

As a result of an election held April 13, 1909, the law became operative in Jackson county on May 1st, 1909. The defendants, who were officers of a brewing company, were charged with having thereafter manufactured beer in that county, in violation of the statute. They moved to quash the information, upon the ground that the act was void because it interfered with interstate commerce, took property without due process of law, and so discriminated against them and other manufacturers residing in dry counties as to deny them the equal protection of the law. These defenses were overruled. On the trial they offered evidence tending to show that the beer which they had manufactured had not been made for sale, but to be used in causing re-fermentation of 1,600 barrels of beer, worth $5 a barrel, which was on hand at the date of the election, with a view of making it salable, and thereby save themselves against loss. Under the charge of the court, the jury returned a verdict of guilty. The case was then taken to the supreme court of Michigan, which held (167 Mich. 477, 133 N. W. 519) that the amendments of 1899 and 1903 (permitting the manufacture and sale of wine and cider in dry counties) were void as an unlawful discrimination against the products and citizens of other states, and [704] a violation of the equal protection clause of the Constitution. The court, however, sustained the conviction and sentence of defendants upon the ground that the original local option act was constitutional and had not been rendered invalid by the void amendments of 1899 and 1903. The case was then brought here, where, in addition to the errors previously assigned, the plaintiffs in error—defendants in the trial court—insisted that the court erred in holding that the act could be valid if the amendments relative to wine and cider were stricken—said provisions "being a part of the act at the time the local option law was adopted in Jackson county, where defendants reside, and operating, together with the other provisions of the act, to bring about such adoption."

1. The argument here was principally directed to a discussion of this assignment of error,—the defendants contending that the discriminatory wine-and-cider amendments formed an integral part of the law (Endlich, Statutes, §§ 94, 294) which had been submitted to the voters, and which, when adopted, it was claimed, was adopted as a whole. It was insisted that the provisions permitting the manufacture and sale of wine and cider induced many to vote for the law as amended, and it was, in effect, argued that these amendments could not be treated as a part of the statute for the purpose of carrying the election, and then be held void in order to save the law from being set aside as discriminatory. In support of this contention, defendants relied on State ex rel. Huston v. Perry County, 5 Ohio St. 497, where the court was considering a local option statute, one section of which provided for an election to determine whether a county seat should be removed, and another (§ 5) contained unconstitutional provisions which were such "as would naturally influence the vote upon the adoption or rejection of the main section." It was held that "the provisions of both sections are made equally to depend upon [705] the result of the election. They were submitted by the legislature collectively to the voters, and could only be passed upon as a whole, and . . . must therefore stand or fall together." But in that case the valid and invalid provisions formed an inseparable part of a single act which was void as a whole, whether treated as having been adopted by the legislature or the people. On the other hand, in the case at bar the original local option law of 1889 had been held to be constitutional as a whole, and its validity could not be impaired by the subsequent adoption of what were in form amendments, but, in legal effect, were mere nullities.

2. It is true that the fact that these amendments were on the statute book may have influenced electors. Some may have voted for the law because of the supposed permission to make wine. Others may have opposed its adoption because of the supposed exemption of wine from the operation of the act. But in either event these void amendments were not a part of the law, but extraneous inducements which may or may not have determined the result. The attack, therefore, goes rather to the regularity of the adoption than to the constitutionality of the statute after it had been adopted for Jackson county. But it was for the state court to determine that matter, and to decide whether the election was void because the question apparently submitted was the adoption of the law and amendments, when, in reality, only the law itself was submitted. This court, on writ of error from a state court, cannot inquire into the motives or arguments which influence men to vote for or against a measure. Neither can we reverse the decision of the state court, and declare the act inoperative in Jackson county because the electors thereof may have voted under a misapprehension as to the matter submitted, any more than we could set aside a statute because it had been enacted contrary to parliamentary rules relating to the introduction, debate, and [706] passage of a bill. The original local option statute had been held to be constitutional, and prohibited, without discrimination, the manufacture of all liquors. That valid act the defendants violated, and their conviction cannot be set aside on the ground that some or all of the electors voted to make the law operative in Jackson county under the supposition that, as wine could be manufactured, the equal protection clause of the Constitution would make it likewise lawful to manufacture beer and other liquors.

Digitized by Google

3. Nor can the judgment be reversed because the original act, while prohibiting liquor to be sold by merchants, permitted it to be sold by druggists for medicinal, mechanical, or scientific purposes. The contention that this was an unlawful discrimination is answered by Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Rippey v. Texas, 193 U. S. 504, 48 L. ed. 767, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Ohio ex rel. Lloyd v. Dollison, 194 U. S. 447, 48 L. ed. 1065, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703. Those cases show that the state may prohibit the sale of liquor absolutely or conditionally; may prohibit the sale as a beverage, and permit the sale for medicinal and like purpose; that it may prohibit the sale by merchants and permit the sale by licensed druggists.

4. It was further contended that the act takes property without due process of law because it made no provision for the sale of liquor on hand at the time the law became operative. But the record does not call for a decision of that question, nor does it bring the case within the principle, suggested in Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. 129, 133, 21 L. ed. 929, 930, that a statute absolutely prohibiting the sale of property in existence at the time of the passage of the law would amount to confiscation and be void as depriving the owner of his property without due process of law. The defendants were not charged with selling property which was in their possession when the law went into effect in May, 1909, but with manufacturing beer in September, 1909, several months after its adoption. The fact that such beer may have been made for use in starting re-fermentation of [707] other beer that was on hand when the law became operative does not bring the case within the principle for which the decision is cited. For the right to manufacture beer to be utilized in giving value to an unfinished brew is no more protected by the Constitution than the right to manufacture beer in order to utilize the brewery, and thereby preserve the value of the plant as a going concern.

Liquor laws are enacted by virtue of the police power to protect the health, morals, and welfare of the public. Such laws may operate to depreciate the principal value of distilleries, breweries, and other property, in use and on hand when the law is passed, but it has been held in many cases that such depreciation is not the taking of property prohibited by the Constitution. Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273. There is nothing in the record calling for a discussion of the assignment of error relating to interstate commerce. The judgment must be affirmed.

SIDNEY S. SCHUYLER, John R. Chadwick, and Charles L. Burnham, Co-Partners, Trading under the Firm Name and Style of Schuyler, Chadwick, & Burnham, Appts.,

v.

CHARLES E. LITTLEFIELD, as Trustee in Bankruptcy of A. O. Brown & Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 707-713.)

Trusts — following trust property — bank deposits.

1. Trust funds deposited by a trustee in his individual bank account are dissipated if the mingled fund is at any time wholly depleted, and cannot be treated as reappearing in sums subsequently deposited to the same account.

[For other cases, see Trusts, V. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — burden of proof — identifying trust funds.

2. Persons seeking to recover trust funds which they claim to have traced into the possession of the trustee's trustee in bankruptcy are under the burden of proving their title, and if the evidence leaves the identification in doubt, that doubt must be resolved in favor of the trustee in bankruptcy.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Evidence, II. k; XII. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 213.]

Argued January 29, 1914. Decided March 23, 1914.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a decree which, reversing a decree of the District Court for the Southern District of New York, dismissed a claim to funds in the hands of a trustee in bankruptcy. Affirmed.

See same case below, 113 C. C. A. 348, 354, 193 Fed. 24, 30.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. Benton Crisp argued the cause, and, with Mr. Theodore M. Crisp, filed a brief for appellants:

The bankrupts commingled the proceeds of appellants' property with that of their own, and the combined or commingled funds having been traced into the Hanover National Bank funds, a part of which are now in the hands of the trustee, so long as any portion of said funds remained, the appellants were entitled to have their money paid out of them; and if said funds were used to release collateral in the bank, which collateral, or the proceeds of which collateral, went into the hands of the trustee, they should be impressed with a lien in favor of the appellants.

Gorman v. Littlefield, 229 U. S. 19, 57 L. ed. 1047, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 670, 693, 33 L. ed. 696, 704, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Frelinghuysen v. Nugent, 36 Fed. 239; Re Marsh, 116 Fed. 396; Erie R. Co. v. Dial, 72 C. C. A. 183, 140 Fed. 689; Re Royea, 143 Fed. 182; Smith v. Mottley, 80 C. C. A. 154, 150 Fed. 266; Smith v. Au Gres Twp. 9 L.R.A.(N.S.) 876, 80 C. C. A. 145, 150 Fed. 257; Re Stewart, 178 Fed. 463; Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 104 U. S. 54, 26 L. ed. 693; Cavin v. Gleason, 105 N. Y. 256, 11 N. E. 504; Knatchbull v. Hallett, L. R. 13 Ch. Div. 696, 49 L. J. Ch. N. S. 415, 42 L. T. N. S. 421, 28 Week. Rep. 732.

Every equity in this case is in favor of the appellants' position. They have been fraudulently deprived of their property, and if they are unable to obtain it in this proceeding, the general creditors of the bankrupts will profit by the fraudulent acts of the latter. This is not in keeping with the policy of the bankruptcy law.

Hurley v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 213 U. S. 126, 134, 53 L. ed. 729, 734, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Re Chase, 59 C. C. A. 629, 124 Fed. 753.

Mr. Edwin D. Hays argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Daniel P. Hays and Ralph Wolf, filed a brief for appellee:

The burden was on the appellants to show that their property, or the proceeds thereof, came into the hands of the trustee.

First Nat. Bank v. Littlefield, 226 U. S. 110, 57 L. ed. 145, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Re T. A. McIntyre & Co. 104 C. C. A. 424, 181 Fed. 960; American Can Co. v. Williams, 101 C. C. A. 634, 178 Fed. 420; Re Hicks, 170 N. Y. 195, 63 N. E. 276.

All trust funds deposited by the bankrupts in the Hanover National Bank prior to the certification on August 25 of the check of $146,600 to the order of A. H. Combs & Company were dissipated by the certification of said check, and no funds so deposited came into the hands of the receiver or trustee.

First Nat. Bank v. Littlefield, supra.

The contention of the appellants that the check of $266,600 helped to pay off on August 24 loans aggregating $285,000, and that therefore they are entitled to share in the securities which were held as collateral for the other loans, is without merit.

Ibid.

[710] Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

This record presents for determination another of the many questions arising out of the tangled and complicated affairs of Brown & Company, stockbrokers of New York city, who made an assignment on August 25th, 1908, and who were subsequently adjudged bankrupts. The proceeding is by Schuyler, Chadwick, & Burnham, to recover trust funds which they claim to have traced into the possession of Brown & Company's trustee in bankruptcy. The case involves an application of the rule that where one has deposited trust funds in his individual bank account, and the mingled fund is at any time wholly depleted, the trust fund is thereby dissipated, and cannot be treated as reappearing in sums subsequently deposited to the credit of the same account. Knatchbull v. Hallett, L. R. 13 Ch. Div. 696, 49 L. J. Ch. N. S. 415, 42 L. T. N. S. 421, 28 Week. Rep. 732; Peters v. Bain, 133 U. S. 671 (1), 693, 33 L. ed. 696, 704, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Crawford County v. Strawn, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1100, 84 C. C. A. 553, 157 Fed. 49, 54.

There is no controversy about the law, but a complete disagreement about matters of fact where it is necessary to decide with certainty, on the one hand, the exact time and order in which a series of checks were deposited; and, on the other, to determine, with equal certainty, the exact order in which a series of checks drawn on that account were paid and what use was made of the money so drawn. As the bankruptcy occurred on August 25, 1908, and as the testimony was taken several months later, it is not surprising that the witnesses were not able to establish definitely the order in which these transactions took place, nor that the referee, district judge, and court of appeals each differed from the other as to what had been proved. The referee found that Schuyler, Chadwick, & Burnham had traced their funds into the hands of the trustee, and were therefore entitled to recover. The district judge agreed with the referee in this conclusion, but disagreed with him as to some of the findings of fact [711] on which that conclusion was based. The circuit court of appeals disagreed with both, and held that the trust fund had not been traced into the hands of the trustee, and thereupon dismissed the complaint. The appeal from that degree involves a consideration of the facts, which may be thus briefly stated:

Digitized by Google

Brown & Company were brokers in New York city, and on August 24th, 1908, by false representations of solvency obtained from Schuyler, Chadwick, & Burnham, 300 shares of Interborough stock (worth $32 per share), agreeing at once to send in payment a check for $9,600, capable of certification. This was not done, and in spite of repeated demands the check was not delivered until after banking hours on August 24th, and too late to have it certified that day. In the meantime Brown & Company sold to Miller the

300 shares Interborough, for	$ 9,600
1000 shares Northern Pacific ..	143,000
1000 shares Great Northern	137,000
Total	$289,600

Miller thereupon gave Brown & Company a check for $266,600, which was deposited in the Hanover National Bank on August 24. Miller retained the balance of $23,000 on some claim which was not admitted by Brown & Company. They later that day obtained from Miller a check for $23,000, which was deposited in the bank the next morning, but after the bank had refused to pay or certify the Schuyler, Chadwick, & Burnham check for $9,600.

It thus appeared that the stock fraudulently obtained by Brown & Company had been sold by them, with other stock, to Miller, who paid for the whole in two checks,—one for $266,600 deposited to Brown & Company's account in the Hanover National Bank on August 24th, and another for $23,000, deposited in the same bank on August 25th.

1. If the trust fund of $9,600 was included in the check [712] for $266,600, then it was dissipated except to the extent of $6,180.17, which was the sum left to Brown & Company's credit at the close of business on August 24th. And inasmuch as all of that balance was paid out early the next day, the trust fund was thereby wholly dissipated so far as the bank account was concerned.

If, however, the trust fund of $9,600 is to be treated as having been included in Miller's check for $23,000, then a similar result follows, though on this point the evidence of the witnesses and the findings of the two courts are in conflict. The controlling question was whether the $23,000 had been deposited before or after the payment of a check for $146,000 which absorbed the whole amount then in bank. We see no reason to disturb the finding of the circuit court of appeals that the check for $23,000 was deposited soon after the bank opened on August 25th, and that it, with other money deposited during the morning, was used at about 11:30 A. M. to pay this check for $146,000 given by Brown & Company to Combs & Company. The payment of this large sum depleted the account and dissipated the trust fund in bank.

2. The appellants, however, presented their case in a double aspect. They contended that even if the trust fund of $9,600 was checked out of the bank, they are able to trace the fund into stocks that subsequently came into the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy. This was based on the claim that out of the proceeds of the Miller checks, Brown & Company had paid notes due to the bank, and thereby released collateral which ultimately came into the possession of the trustee.

But the record fails to show when the $266,600 was deposited, and it also fails to show with the requisite certainty the particular use made by Brown & Company of that money. The banking transactions on August 24th involved several millions of dollars. Money was deposited by Brown & Company in the bank, and money was borrowed by [713] Brown & Company from the bank. Part of the loans were deposited to their bank account, and a part, represented by cashier's checks, did not appear in that account. Money was paid by Brown & Company to outsiders and to the bank. Payments to the bank were made on account of notes, some of which represented loans appearing in the deposit account, and others represented loans which had not been so entered. Some of the loans were secured and others were unsecured, and whether the money received from Miller (which included the trust fund of $9,600) was used to pay the secured or unsecured loans does not appear with certainty.

Digitized by Google

It would serve no useful purpose to make a detailed statement of the testimony. The evidence has been fully discussed by the court of appeals (113 C. C. A. 348–357, 193 Fed. 24–33) in considering this claim of appellants along with that of several other parties seeking, on somewhat similar facts, to trace trust funds into the bank, and thence into collateral which ultimately came into the hands of the trustee. All these claims were disallowed because of the failure to make the requisite proof. Our investigation of the facts leads us to the same conclusion so far as concerns the appellants' claim. They were practically asserting title to $9,600, said to have been traced into stock in the possession of the trustee. Like all other persons similarly situated, they were under the burden of proving their title. If they were unable to carry the burden of identifying the fund as representing the proceeds of their Interborough stock, their claim must fail. If their evidence left the matter of identification in doubt, the doubt must be resolved in favor of the trustee, who represents all of the creditors of Brown & Company, some of whom appear to have suffered in the same way. Like them, the appellants must be remitted to the general fund.

The decree is affirmed.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

MEMORANDA

OF

CASES DISPOSED OF WITHOUT OPINIONS.

---

[714] STAR CHRONICLE PUBLISHING COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS. [No. 776.]

Error to circuit court of appeals—jurisdiction below.

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 122 C. C. A. 489, 204 Fed. 217.

Mr. Shepard Barclay for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Campbell Cummings for defendants in error.

January 12, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Omaha Electric Light & P. Co. v. Omaha, 230 U. S. 123, 57 L. ed. 1419, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; Shulthis v. McDougal, 225 U. S. 561, 56 L. ed. 1205, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 704; Chicago Junction R. Co. v. King, 222 U. S. 223, 56 L. ed. 174, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79; Re Metropolitan R. Receivership (Re Reisenberg) 208 U. S. 109, 52 L. ed. 412, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219.

LEON CARDENAS MARTINEZ, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF TEXAS. [No. 356.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Court of Criminal Appeals for the State of Texas.

See same case below, — Tex. Crim. Rep. —, 145 S. W. 959.

No counsel appeared for plaintiff in error.

Mr. B. F. Looney for defendant in error.

January 12, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 375, 25 L. ed. 717, 718; Ex parte Crouch, 112 U. S. 178, 28 L. ed. 690, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 39 L. ed. 422, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Barrington v. Missouri, 205 U. S. 483, 51 L. ed. 895, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Fullerton v. Texas, 196 U. S. 192, 49 L. ed. 443, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; McCorquodale v. Texas, 211 U. S. 432, 53 L. ed. 269, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 146.

CHARLES MAIBAUM, Appellant, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 4.]

Aliens—naturalization—impeaching certificate.

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois.

Messrs. Elijah N. Zoline and James Hamilton Lewis for appellant.

Mr. Assistant Attorney General Harr for appellee.

[715] January 19, 1914. Per Curiam: Decree affirmed on the authority of Johannessen v. United States, 225 U. S. 227, 56 L. ed. 1066, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613, and Luria v. United States, 231 U. S. 9, ante, 101, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

F. O. NORRIS et al., Appellants, v. J. E. JOHNSON et al. [No. 149.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—bankruptcy case.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 111 C. C. A. 291, 190 Fed. 459.

Mr. Thomas N. Kennerly for appellants.

Mr. Henry F. Ring for appellees.

January 19, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Holden v. Stratton, 191 U. S. 115, 48 L. ed. 116, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 198 U. S. 280, 288, 49 L. ed. 1051, 1054, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693; Hatch v. Ketcham, 198 U. S. 580, 49 L. ed. 1172, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 801; Duryea Power Co. v. Sternbergh, 218 U. S. 299, 301, 54 L. ed. 1047, 1048, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

Digitized by Google

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

See same case below, 161 Cal. 120, 118 Pac. 535.

Messrs. James F. Peck and Charles C. Boynton for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. William J. Hunsaker, E. W Britt, and Frank H. Short for defendants in error.

January 19, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction upon the authority of: First. Pomeroy v. State Bank, 1 Wall. 592, 597, 17 L. ed. 638, 640; New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. v. Jopes, 142 U. S. 18, 22, 35 L. ed. 919, 922, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Ward v. Joslin, 186 U. S. 142, 153, 46 L. ed. 1093, 1100, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807; Holt v. United States, 218 U. S. 245, 54 L. ed. 1021, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20, 20 Ann. Cas. 1138. Second. Arkansas Southern R. Co. v. German Nat. Bank, 207 U. S. 270, 52 L. ed. 201, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 112, 53 L. ed. 431, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227.

---

[716] Fred W. Lake et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. Superior Court of the State of California in and for the County of Kern. [No. 681.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

See same case below, 165 Cal. 182, 131 Pac. 371.

Messrs. James F. Peck and Charles C. Boynton for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. William J. Hunsaker, E. W. Brett, Frank H. Short, and D. S. Ewing for defendants in error.

January 19, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction upon the authority of Lake v. Bonynge, 232 U. S. 715, supra, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330.

Woodward Cotton Company, Appellant, v. City of Woodward et al. [No. 154.]

Constitutional law—impairing contract obligations — electric franchise — municipal competition.

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Oklahoma.

Mr. John Devereux for appellant.

[illegible] Charles A. Loomis and Webster [illegible]

[illegible] Curiam: Af-

Knoxville, [illegible]

Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Bien[illegible]

Co. v. Mobile, 175 U. S. 109, 44 L. [illegible]

20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

Cause remanded to the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Oklahoma.

District of Columbia, Plaintiff in Error, v. Philadelphia, Baltimore, & Washington Railroad Company. [No. 174.]

Error to District of Columbia courts—Federal question.

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia; petition for Writ of Certiorari.

See same case below, 38 App. D. C. 143.

Messrs. Conrad H. Syme and F. H. Stephens for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. F. D. McKenney and J. S. Flannery for defendant in error.

[717] January 26, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. American Security & T. Co. v. District of Columbia, 224 U. S. 491, 56 L. ed. 856, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.

The petition for a Writ of Certiorari is denied.

J. E. Arnott et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. Southern Railway Company. [No. 196.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Tennessee.

Mr. C. J. St. John for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. L. E. Jeffries for defendant in error.

February 2, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

S. W. Washington et al., Surviving Trustees, etc., Appellants, v. Joseph F. Tearney et al., Surviving Executors, etc. [No. 316.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals— jurisdiction.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 114 C. C. A. 534, 194 Fed. 830, on rehearing 117 C. C. A. 53, 197 Fed. 307.

Messrs. James M. Mason, Jr., and B. M. Ambler for appellants.

Messrs. Forrest W. Brown and R. T. Barton for appellees.

[illegible]

Digitized by Google

[718] CITY OF BLACKWELL, Plaintiff in Error, v. CITY OF NEWKIRK et al. [No. 214.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma.

See same case below, 31 Okla. 304, 121 Pac. 260, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 441.

Messrs. Frank Dale, A. G. C. Bierer, and J. W. Bailey for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. C. L. Pinkham and J. F. King for defendants in error.

February 2, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

ANNA HAWLEY, Plaintiff in Error, v. JOSEPH W. WALKER, Constable, etc. [No. 217.]

Constitutional law—regulating hours of women employees.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio.

See same case below in Ohio Court of Common Pleas, 22 Ohio S. & C. P. Dec. 39.

Mr. J. M. Sheets for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Clarence D. Laylin and Louis D. Brandeis for defendant in error.

February 24, 1914. Per Curiam: Judgment affirmed with costs upon the authority of Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 52 L. ed. 551, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, 13 Ann. Cas. 957; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 78, 79, 55 L. ed. 369, 377, 378, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 160.

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, Appellant, v. YORK SILK MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Bankrupt. [No. 200.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—bankruptcy case.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 112 C. C. A. 613, 192 Fed. 81.

Mr. Jackson H. Ralston for appellant.

Mr. Henry C. Niles for appellee.

March 2, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Holden v. Stratton, 191 U. S. 115, 48 L. ed. 116, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

---

[719] LOUIS ELIE JOSEPH HENRY DE GALARD DE BRASSAC DE BEARN, Count and Prince of Béarn and Chalais, Plaintiff in Error, v. ROSS R. WINANS and Ferdinand C. Latrobe, Trustees, et al. [No. 557.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of Maryland.

See same case below, 119 Md. 390, 86 Atl. 1044.

Mr. Maurice Léon for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. J. Kemp Bartlett, Edward Duffy, Edgar Allan Poe, Albert C. Ritchie, and Shirley Carter for defendants in error.

March 9, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. First Nat. Bank v. Estherville, 215 U. S. 341, 346, 54 L. ed. 223, 227, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Rogers v. Clark Iron Co. 217 U. S. 589, 54 L. ed. 895, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693. See De Bearn v. De Bearn, 225 U. S. 695, 56 L. ed. 1261, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 834; De Bearn v. De Bearn, 231 U. S. 741, ante, 462, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318.

C. H. ALBERS COMMISSION COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. MARY E. SPENCER and Harlow B. Spencer, Executrix and Executor of the Estate of Corwin H. Spencer, Deceased, et al. [No. 581.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri.

See same case below, 245 Mo. 368, 150 S. W. 712.

Messrs. Shepard Barclay, P. H. Cullen, and Thomas T. Faunleroy for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Frederick N. Judson and John F. Green for defendants in error.

March 9, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Kansas City Star Co. v. Julian, 215 U. S. 589, 590, 54 L. ed. 340, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Wood v. Chesborough, 228 U. S. 672, 57 L. ed. 1018, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706.

J. F. SHULTZ, Plaintiff in Error, v. FRED W. RITTERBUSCH, County Treasurer, etc., et al. [No. 817.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma.

See same case below, 34 Okla. 478, 134 Pac. 961.

Mr. Milton Brown for plaintiff in error.

Mr. D. C. Westenhaver for defendants in error.

[720] March 9, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. (1) Consolidated Turnp. Co. v. Norfolk & O. V. R. Co. 228 U. S. 596, 600, 57 L. ed. 982, 983, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609 and cases cited; (2) Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 197 U. S. 430, 434, 49 L. ed. 819, 821, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466, and cases cited.

Digitized by Google

/. SCHNEIDER WHOLESALE WINE & LIQUOR COMPANY, Appellant, v. AUGUST DIEDERICH. [No. 243.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—trademark case.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 115 C. C. A. 37, 195 Fed. 35.

Messrs. James Love Hopkins and Alphonso Howe for appellant.

Mr. James A. Carr for appellee.

March 16, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Street & Smith v. Atlas Mfg. Co. 231 U. S. 348, ante, 262, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73.

THOMAS MAY, JR., et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS FOR THE USE OF EDWARD GOBIN, etc. [No. 262.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois.

See same case below, 251 Ill. 54, 95 N. E. 999.

Mr. Fred B. Merrills for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Charles H. Burton and James M. Graham for defendant in error.

March 16, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Rogers v. Clark Iron Co. 217 U. S. 589, 54 L. ed. 895, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693; Preston v. Chicago, 226 U. S. 447, 450, 57 L. ed. 293, 295, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177.

MRS. CARMELITE PONS, wife of George A. Louque, Plaintiff in Error, v. YAZOO & MISSISSIPPI VALLEY RAILROAD COMPANY et al. [No. 341.]

Error to state court—final judgment.

In Error to the [721] Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana.

See same case below, 131 La. 313, 59 So. 721.

Messrs. Henry L. Lazarus and Edgar H. Farrar for plaintiff in error.

Messsr. Blewett Lee, Charles N. Burch. Hunter C. Leake, and Gustave Lemle for defendants in error.

March 16, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Louisiana Nav. Co. v. Oyster Commission, 226 U. S. 99, 57 L. ed. 138, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; [illegible] Beatty, 232 U. S. 463, ante,

EX PARTE: [illegible] GRIMSINGER, Petitioner. [illegible] nal.]

Motion for leave to file amended petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus.

Mr. George F. Curtis for petitioner.

The Solicitor General for respondent.

March 16, 1914. Denied.

STAR CHRONICLE PUBLISHING COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS. [No. 776.]

Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 122 C. C. A. 489, 204 Fed. 217.

Mr. Shepard Barclay for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Campbell Cummings for defendants in error.

January 12, 1914. Denied.

PROVIDENCE WASHINGTON INSURANCE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. HARVEY GRANGER and Charles E. [722] Lewis. [No. 791.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 119 C. C. A. 174, 200 Fed. 730.

Mr. Howard S. Harrington for petitioner.

Mr. Nelson Zabriskie for respondents.

January 12, 1914. Denied.

JEHEIL ROSEN, Petitioner, v. WILLIAM WILLIAMS, Commissioner of Immigration. [No. 820.]

Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 118 C. C. A. 632, 200 Fed. 538.

Mr. William S. Bennet for petitioner.

The Solicitor General and Assistant Attorney General Wallace for respondent.

January 12, 1914. Denied.

TOWN OF AURORA, Petitioner, v. MARTHA L. GATES [No. 846]; and TOWN OF AURORA, Petitioner, v. ROBERT P. WILDER [No. 847].

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below (No. 846), — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 208 Fed. 101.

Mr. William A. Bryans for petitioner.

Mr. Edward P. Costigan for respondent.

January 12, 1914. Denied.

Digitized by Google

THE STEAMSHIP GEORGE W. ELDER, etc., et al., Claimants, Petitioners, v. PORT OF PORTLAND. [No. 840.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 124 C. C. A. 336, 206 Fed. 272.

Mr. Arthur A. Birney for petitioners.

Mr. C. E. S. Wood for respondent.

January 19, 1914. Denied.

JOHN S. TALBOTT, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 819.]

Petition for a Writ [723] of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 208 Fed. 144.

Mr. Joseph U. Sweeney for petitioner.

The Attorney General for defendant in error.

January 26, 1914. Denied.

AMERICAN NATIONAL BANK OF MACON, GEORGIA, et al., Petitioners, v. S. H. STILL et al. [No. 860.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 209 Fed. 749.

Mr. George S. Jones for petitioners.

Messrs. Stanwix G. Mayfield, Charles Carroll Simms, and Alexander Akerman for respondents.

January 26, 1914. Denied.

F. O. NORRIS et al., Trustees, etc., et al., Petitioners, v. J. E. JOHNSON et al. [No. 348.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 111 C. C. A. 291, 190 Fed. 459.

Messrs. Thomas M. Kennerly and Charles T. Butler for petitioners.

Mr. Henry F. Ring for respondents.

February 2, 1914. Denied.

HOUSTON OIL COMPANY OF TEXAS et al., Petitioners, v. CAROLINE C. MIDDLESWORTH et al. [No. 844.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 119 C. C. A. 665, 201 Fed. 1020.

Messrs. Thomas M. Kennerly and Charles T. Butler for petitioners.

Mr. Thomas N. Hill for respondents.

February 2, 1914. Denied.

E. I. DU PONT DE NEMOURS POWDER COMPANY, Petitioner, v. THE STEAMSHIP "CHARLTON HALL," [724] etc. [No. 790.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 207 Fed. 343.

Mr. Howard S. Harrington for petitioner.

Mr. Charles C. Burlingham for respondent.

February 24, 1914. Denied.

THOMAS S. NOWELL et al., Petitioners, v. INTERNATIONAL TRUST COMPANY et al. [No. 881.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 121 C. C. A. 499, 203 Fed. 395.

Messrs. John P. Hartman and George M. Nowell for petitioners.

Messrs. L. P. Shackleford, A. B. Browne, Alex. Britton, and Evans Browne for respondents.

February 24, 1914. Denied.

STREET & SMITH, a Copartnership, Appellant, v. ATLAS MANUFACTURING COMPANY et al. [No. 618.]

Second Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1002, 122 C. C. A. 568, 204 Fed. 398.

Mr. Hugh K. Wagner for appellant.

Mr. James Love Hopkins for appellees.

March 2, 1914. Denied.

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, Appellant, v. YORK SILK MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Bankrupt. [No. 200.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari.

See same case below, 112 C. C. A. 613, 192 Fed. 81.

Mr. Jackson H. Ralston for appellant.

Mr. Henry C. Niles for appellee.

March 2, 1914. Denied.

WALTHAM WATCH COMPANY, Petitioner, v. CHARLES A. KEENE. [725] [No. 869.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 209 Fed. 1007.

Messrs. Nathan Matthews and Romney Spring for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

March 2, 1914. Denied.

Digitized by Google

KERSHAW OIL MILL et al., Petitioners, v. NATIONAL BANK OF SAVANNAH. [No. 884.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, first writ of error 120 C. C. A. 362, 202 Fed. 90, second writ of error 209 Fed. 835.

Messrs. Thomas J. Kirkland, E. D. Blakeney, and Thomas Ruffin for petitioners.

Messrs. William Garrard and Jos. A. McCullough for respondent.

March 2, 1914. Denied.

DAVID A. NEASE, Petitioner, v. COAL & COKE RAILWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 895.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 124 C. C. A. 507, 207 Fed. 237.

Messrs. W. E. Chilton and Charles D. Merrick for petitioner.

Mr. B. M. Ambler for respondents.

March 2, 1914. Denied.

ROBERT MOODY & SON, a Copartnership, etc., Appellant, v. CENTURY SAVINGS BANK. [No. 906.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari.

Mr. S. F. Prouty for appellant.

Messrs. Horatio F. Dale and Wm. G. Harrison for appellee.

March 2, 1914. Denied.

CITY OF CAMDEN, Petitioner, v. ARMSTRONG CORK COMPANY. [No. 880.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals [726] for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 210 Fed. 818.

Messrs. Edwin G. C. Bleakly and Henry F. Stockwell for petitioner.

Messrs. Norman Grey and F. Morse Archer for respondent.

March 9, 1914. Denied.

FRANK M. RYAN et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 882.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Messrs. Chester H. Krum and Elijah N. Zoline for petitioners.

The Attorney General for respondents.

March 9, 1914. Denied.

GODFREY M. HYAMS, Petitioner, v. OLD DOMINION COMPANY. [No. 919.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 209 Fed. 808.

Mr. Edward M. Colie for petitioner.

Messrs. Louis D. Brandeis and Edward F. McClennen for respondent.

March 9, 1914. Denied.

W. SCHNEIDER WHOLESALE WINE & LIQUOR COMPANY, Appellant, v. AUGUST DIEDERICH. [No. 243.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 115 C. C. A. 37, 195 Fed. 35.

Messrs. James Love Hopkins and Alphonso Howe for appellant.

Mr. James A. Carr for appellee.

March 10, 1914. Denied.

GEORGE W. NORTON, as Executor, etc., Appellant, v. ROBERT B. WHITESIDE et al. [No. 868.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari.

Mr. Evans Browne in behalf of [727] Mr. Jed L. Washburn for appellant and petitioner.

Messrs. Theodore T. Hudson, Luther C. Harris, and J. B. Richards for appellees and respondents.

March 16, 1914. Denied.

WILLIAM R. HOPKINS et al., Petitioners, v. A. LOUISA M. GILBERT et al. [No. 912.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 122 C. C. A. 432, 204 Fed. 196.

Messrs. Wade H. Ellis, C. B. Matthews, F. A. Sondley, and Theodore F. Davidson for petitioners.

Messrs. James H. Merrimon and Thomas S. Rollins for respondents.

March 16, 1914. Denied.

W. R. HOPKINS, Petitioner, v. A. LOUISA M. GILBERT et al. [No. 913.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 122 C. C. A. 440, 204 Fed. 204.

Messrs. Wade H. Ellis, C. B. Matthews, F. A. Sondley, and Theodore F. Davidson for petitioner.

Messrs. James H. Merrimon and Thomas S. Rollins for respondents.

March 16, 1914. Denied.

Digitized by Google

COMPAGNIE GÉNÉRALE TRANSATLANTIQUE, Petitioner, v. LAURA RIVERS. [No. 915.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 211 Fed. 294.

Mr. Joseph P. Nolan for petitioner.

Mr. Charles H. Tuttle for respondent.

March 16, 1914. Denied.

VICTOR-AMERICAN FUEL COMPANY, Petitioner, v. FRANK PECCARICH. [No. 917.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 209 Fed. 568.

Mr. Caldwell Geaman for petitioner.

Mr. George S. Keock for respondent.

March 16, 1914. Denied.

---

[728] SMITH INCANDESCENT LIGHT COMPANY, Petitioner, v. WELSBACH GAS LAMP COMPANY. [No. 931.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 210 Fed. 450.

Mr. Timothy D. Merwin for petitioner.

Mr. C. P. Byrnes for respondent.

March 23, 1914. Denied.

JULIAN MUNSURI, Appellant, v. C. O. LORD, Trustee, etc. [No. 477.]

On Writ of Certiorari to the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico.

Messrs. Frederic R. Coudert and Howard Thayer Kingsbury for appellant.

Messrs. N. B. K. Pettingill and William H. Hawkins for appellee.

January 7, 1914. Dismissed without costs to either party, per stipulation.

FREEMAN H. TILLOTSON, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF KANSAS. [No. 183.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas.

Messrs. W. L. Sturdevant and Clinton A. Welsh for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

January 20, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

JAMES P. ALLEN, Plaintiff in Error, v. H. H. OLIVER. [No. 193.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma.

Mr. S. T. Bledsoe for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

January 21, 1914. Dismissed with [729] costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

EDWARD A. ROEHRIG et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. FORD SMITH. [No. 194.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Nebraska.

Messrs. Alfred G. Ellick and Harrison C. Brome for plaintiffs in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

January 22, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

NOEL CONSTRUCTION COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. GEORGE W. SMITH & COMPANY, Incorporated. [No. 197.]

In Error to the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland.

Messrs. J. Kemp Bartlett and Edgar Allan Poe for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

January 22, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

REPUBLIC IRON & STEEL COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. HOWARD CARLTON. [No. 205.]

In Error to the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland.

Mr. J. Kemp Bartlett for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

January 26, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

CALDWELL & DRAKE, A Firm, etc., Plaintiffs in Error, v. JOHN R. JOBE, Auditor, etc. [No. 211.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas.

Mr. J. W. Blackwood for plaintiffs in error.

No counsel appeared for defendants in error.

[730] January 27, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. JOHN JACKSON et al. [No. 201.]

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 113 C. C. A. 576, 193 Fed. 948.

Mr. Charles Payne Fenner for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. George Whitfield Jack and W. P. Hall for defendants in error.

January 27, 1914. Dismissed, per stipulation.

Digitized by Google

St. Paul City Railway Company, Plaintiff in Error, v. State of Minnesota ex rel. City of St. Paul. [No. 277.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota.

Mr. N. M. Thygeson for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

February 24, 1914. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for plaintiff in error

---

Majestic Theater Company et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. City of Cedar Rapids et al. [No. 312.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa.

Mr. James H. Trewin for plaintiffs in error.

No counsel appeared for defendants in error.

February 24, 1914. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

Adams Express Company, Plaintiff in Error, v. Annie P. Mellichamp. [No. 371.]

In Error to the Court [731] of Appeals of the State of Georgia.

Mr. Robert C. Alston for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

February 24, 1914. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

Helene Marequa, Appellant, v. Samuel W. Backus, Commissioner of Immigration, etc. [No. 388.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of California.

Mr. Corry M. Stadden for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

February 24, 1914. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellant, and mandate granted.

Clarence B. Wood, Plaintiff in Error, v. United States. [No. 800.]

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Mr. G. A. Hanson for plaintiff in error.

The Attorney General for defendant in error.

February 24, 1914. Dismissed, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

Beaumont Rice Mills, a Copartnership, etc., et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. Port Arthur Rice Milling Company. [No. 504.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Texas.

See same case below, first opinion, — Tex. —, 143 S. W. 926, 2d opinion, — Tex. —, 148 S. W. 283, 3d opinion, — Tex. —, 150 S. W. 884, 4th opinion, — Tex. —, 152 S. W. 629.

Messrs. A. D. Lipscomb and Hannis Taylor for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. T. N. Hill for defendant in error.

February 26, 1914. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiffs in error.

United States, Appellant, v. Jane Leecy. [No. 248.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of [732] Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 254, 190 Fed. 289.

The Attorney General for appellant.

Mr. George B. Edgerton for appellee.

March 2, 1914. Dismissed, on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Davis for the appellant.

Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad Company, Plaintiff in Error, v. O. S. Burho. [No. 648.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota.

Messrs. W. H. Bremner and F. M. Miner for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. N. M. Thygeson and W. R. Duxbury for defendant in error.

March 2, 1914. Dismissed with costs, per stipulation.

Southern Railway Company, Appellant, v. Ephraim Simon. [No. 708.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. John K. Graves and J. Blanc Monroe for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

March 3, 1914. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellant.

Kansas City Gunning Advertising Company, Plaintiff in Error, v. Kansas City, Missouri, et al. [No. 235.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri.

Mr. John T. Harding for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendants in error.

March 5, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

Digitized by Google

KANSAS CITY GUNNING ADVERTISING COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. KANSAS CITY, Missouri, [733] et al. [No. 236.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri.

Mr. John T. Harding for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendants in error.

March 5, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

R. A. AITON, Appellant, v. BOARD OF MEDICAL EXAMINERS OF ARIZONA. [No. 237.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. C. F. Ainsworth for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

March 5, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

SUE M. ROGERS, as Executrix, etc., Appellant, v. OSAGE NATION OF INDIANS. [No. 238.]

Appeal from the Court of Claims.

Mr. John J. Hemphill for appellant.

Messrs. Charles J. Kappler, Charles H. Merillat, and Mr. Preston A. Shinn for appellees.

March 5, 1914. Dismissed pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

EDWARD A. MANN, Appellant, v. TERRITORY OF NEW MEXICO EX REL. GEORGE S. KLOCK. [No. 240.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico.

Mr. Edward W. Dobson for appellant.

Mr. George S. Klock, appellee, pro se.

March 6, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

BELT LINE RAILWAY COMPANY, Appellant, v. CITY OF MONTGOMERY et al. [No. 366.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Middle [734] District of Alabama.

See same case below, 201 Fed. 411.

Mr. Alexander Hamilton for appellant.

Mr. W. A. Gunter for appellees.

March 9, 1914. Decree reversed with costs upon confession of error, and cause remanded for further proceedings. Mandate granted.

HENRY MEYER, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF KANSAS. [No. 258.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas.

Mr. John W. Gerkes for plaintiff in error.

Mr. John S. Dawson for defendant in error.

March 10, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

W. S. RHEA, Appellant, v. JAMES A. PITCOCK, Warden, etc. [No. 321.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Arkansas.

Mr. Baldy Vinson for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

March 12, 1914. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellant.

J. FRANKLIN CUNNINGHAM et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. STATE OF LOUISIANA. [No. 283.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana.

Mr. Taliaferro Alexander for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. R. G. Pleasant for defendant in error.

March 12, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

YEE TING WOH, Appellant, v. A. J. HIRSTIUS, Sheriff. [No. 287.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio.

Mr. Francis J. Wing for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

March 13, 1914. [735] Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

CHOY GUM ALIAS LO KING, Appellant, v. SAMUEL W. BACKUS, Commissioner, etc. [No. 856.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of California.

Mr. Corry M. Stadden for appellant.

The Attorney General for appellee.

March 16, 1914. Dismissed with costs on motion of counsel for the appellant.

LEONG TOE, Appellant, v. SAMUEL W. BACKUS, Commissioner, etc. [No. 857.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of California.

Mr. Corry M. Stadden for appellant.

The Attorney General for appellee.

March 16 1914. Dismissed with costs on motion of counsel for the appellant.

Digitized by Google

Bluefields Steamship Company, Limited, et al., Appellants, v. Frederick M. Steele et al. [No. 296.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. Charles Payne Fenner, Edgar H. Farrar, and H. Generes Dufour for appellants.

Mr. William Lee Hughes for appellees.

March 16, 1914. Dismissed with costs on motion of counsel for the appellants.

Hyman, Hiller, & Company, Limited, Plaintiff in Error, v. Philip Veith. [No. 300.]

In Error to the Supreme [736] Court of the State of Louisiana.

Messrs. E. D. Saunders and Edgar H. Farrar for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Benjamin Rice Forman for defendant in error.

March 16, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

Margarita Oyanguren, Heirs, etc., Appellant, v. Ana Louisa and Ana Teresa Orama, etc., et al. [No. 811.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of Porto Rico.

Mr. Charles F. Carusi for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellees.

March 16, 1914. Dismissed with costs on motion of counsel for the appellant.

Southern Pacific Company et al., Appellants, v. United States et al. [No. 318.]

In Error to the United States Commerce Court.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts, H. A. Scandrett, Joseph Paxton Blair, Fred H. Wood, and A. A. Hoehling, Jr., for appellants.

The Attorney General and Mr. Patrick H. Farrell for appellees.

March 17, 1914. Dismissed on motion of counsel for the appellants.

Charles R. Fahringer, Plaintiff in Error, v. State of Wisconsin. [No. 310.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Wisconsin.

Mr. E. M. McVicker for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

March 17, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

Frank D. Bartlett, Appellant, v. W. A. Arnold, Sheriff, etc. [No. 315.]

Appeal from the District Court of [737] the United States for the Eastern District of Wisconsin.

Mr. Horace B. Walmsley for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

March 18, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, Plaintiffs in Error, v. Ohio Valley Tie Company. [No. 317.]

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky.

See same case below, 148 Ky. 718, 147 S. W. 421.

Mr. Helm Bruce for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Edward W. Hines for defendant in error.

March 18, 1914. Dismissed with costs on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

Lytle Logging & Mercantile Company, Plaintiff in Error, v. C. O. Sandberg. [No. 737.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington.

Mr. W. H. Abel for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

March 23, 1914. Dismissed per stipulation.

Digitized by Google

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COUR

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

Vol. 233.

58 L. ed.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES

DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,

OCTOBER TERM, 1913,

AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 233,

AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 233 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1	Miller v. United States	823
5–6	" "	824
6–8	" "	825
9–11	" "	826
11–14	" "	827
14–16	" "	828
16	Browning v. Waycross	828
19–20	" "	831
20–23	" "	832
23	" "	833
24	De Bearn v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co.	833
26–28	" "	834
28–31	" "	835
31–33	" "	836
33–35	" "	837
36	Metzger Motor Car Co. v. Parrott	837
40–42	" "	838
42	Grand Trunk Western R. Co. v. Lindsay	838
44–47	" "	841
47–49	" "	842
49–50	" "	843
51	Carlesi v. New York	843
55–57	" "	848
57–59	" "	849
60	Archer v. Greenville Sand & Gravel Co.	850
63–64	" "	851
64–67	" "	852
67–69	" "	853
69–70	" "	854
70	Herbert v. Bicknell	854
72–74	" "	856
74–75	" "	857
75	Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Kaw Valley Drainage Dist.	857
76–78	" "	858
78–80	" "	859
80	Southern Railway-Carolina Division v. Bennett	860
85	" "	862
85–87	" "	863

Off. Rep. 233 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
87	Arizona ex rel. Gaines v. Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co.	863
88–89	" "	864
89–92	" "	865
92–94	" "	866
94–97	" "	867
97	" "	868
97	Boston & M. R. Co. v. Hooker	868
106	" "	873
106–109	" "	874
109–111	" "	875
111–114	" "	876
114–117	" "	877
117–119	" "	878
119–122	" "	879
122–125	" "	880
125–127	" "	881
127–130	" "	882
130–132	" "	883
132–135	" "	884
135–137	" "	885
137–140	" "	886
140–142	" "	887
142–145	" "	888
145–147	" "	889
147–150	" "	890
150–152	" "	891
152–155	" "	892
155–157	" "	893
157	United States ex rel. Texas Portland Cement Co. v. McCord	893
158	" "	895
158–161	" "	896
161–163	" "	897
163–164	" "	898
165	Hollerbach v. United States	898
167–168	" "	899
168–170	" "	900
170–172	" "	901
173	Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Robinson	901
176–179	" "	904
179–181	" "	905
181–182	" "	906

Digitized by Google

Off. Rep. 223 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
182–183	Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Moore	906
184	Myers v. Pittsburgh Coal Co.	906
189	" "	909
189–192	" "	910
192–194	" "	911
194–195	" "	912
195	Russell v. Sebastian	912
197–198	" "	918
198–200	" "	919
200–203	" "	920
200–203	" "	921
200–203	" "	922
200–203	" "	923
210	" "	924
211	Union Lime Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co.	924
216–220	" "	929
220–221	" "	929
221–223	" "	930
223	United States v. Birdsall	930
227–228	" "	932
228–230	" "	933
230–233	" "	934
233–236	" "	935
235–236	" "	936
236	Diamond Coal & Coke Co. v. United States	939
237–240	" "	939
240–242	" "	940
242–245	" "	941
245–247	" "	942
247–249	" "	943
250	El Paso Brick Co. v. McKnight	943
251–253	" "	944
253–255	" "	945
255–256	" "	947
256–259	" "	948
259–260	" "	949
261	American Iron & Steel Mfg. Co. v. Seaboard Air Line Railway	949
261–263	" "	950
263–264	" "	952
264–266	" "	953
266–268	" "	954
268	Franklin v. Lynch	954
270–271	" "	956
271–273	" "	957
273	Tevis v. Ryan	957
274	" "	958
274–277	" "	959
277–279	" "	960
279–281	" "	963
281–284	" "	964
284–287	" "	965
287–289	" "	966
289–291	" "	967
291	Lewis v. Frick	967
293–294	" "	970
294–297	" "	971
297–299	" "	972
299–302	" "	973
302–304	" "	974
304	Singer Sewing Mach. Co. v. Brickell	974
305–306	" "	975
306–309	" "	976
309	" "	977
309–314	" "	978

Off. Rep. 223 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
314–316	Singer Sewing Mach. Co. v. Brickell	979
316–318	" "	980
318	O'Sullivan v. Felix	980
319–321	" "	981
321–324	" "	982
324–325	" "	983
325	Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Anderson	983
327–328	" "	984
328–330	" "	985
331	Hammond Packing Co. v. Montana	985
333–334	" "	987
334	Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Iowa	988
339–341	" "	991
341–343	" "	992
343–345	" "	993
346	White v. Island Transp. Co.	993
347	" "	994
347–350	" "	995
350–352	" "	996
352	Farrugia v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co.	996
353–354	" "	997
354	Tennessee Coal, I. & R. Co. v. George	997
358–359	" "	999
359–361	" "	1000
362	Carondelet Canal & Nav. Co. v. Louisiana	1001
370–371	" "	1004
372–374	" "	1005
374–377	" "	1006
377–379	" "	1007
379–382	" "	1008
382–385	" "	1009
385–387	" "	1010
387–388	" "	1011
389	German Alliance Ins. Co. v. Lewis	1011
390–392	" "	1012
392–395	" "	1013
395–398	" "	1014
398	" "	1015
404–406	" "	1019
406–409	" "	1020
409–411	" "	1021
411–414	" "	1022
414–416	" "	1023
416–419	" "	1024
419–422	" "	1025
422–424	" "	1026
424–427	" "	1027
427–429	" "	1028
429–432	" "	1032
432–434	" "	1039
434	Wheeler v. Schmer	1040
437–438	" "	1036
438–441	" "	1037
441–443	" "	1038
444–446	" "	1039
446–447	" "	1040
447	Nadal v. May	1040
450–452	" "	1040
452–454	" "	1041
454	San Joaquin & K. R. Canal & Irrig. Co. v. Stanislaus County	1041
458	" "	1045
459–461	" "	1046

Digitized by Google

Off. Rep. 233 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
461	Thaddeus Davids Co. v. Davids	1046
463–465	" "	1048
465–468	" "	1049
468–471	" "	1050
471–472	" "	1051
473	Illinois C. R. Co. v. Behrens	1051
475–477	" "	1054
477–478	" "	1055
479	Baer Bros. Mercantile Co. v. Denver & R. G. R. Co.	1055
480–482	" "	1056
482–484	" "	1057
486–487	" "	1060
487–490	" "	1061
490–491	" "	1062
492	Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Horton	1062
495–496	" "	1066
496–498	" "	1067
498–501	" "	1068
501–503	" "	1069
503–506	" "	1070
506–508	" "	1071
509	United States v. Vulte	1071
511–513	" "	1073
513–515	" "	1074
515	United States v. Foster	1074
518–519	" "	1076
519–521	" "	1077
521–524	" "	1078
524–526	" "	1079
526–527	" "	1080
528	Bowling v. United States	1080
532–533	" "	1082
533–536	" "	1083
536	Holden Land & Live Stock Co. v. Interstate Trading Co.	1083
537–540	" "	1085
540–542	" "	1086
542–545	" "	1087
545	" "	1088
546	Richards v. Washington Terminal Co.	1088
548–549	" "	1089
549–551	" "	1090
551–554	" "	1091
554–556	" "	1092
556–558	" "	1093
558	Green v. Menominee Tribe of Indians	1093
562–563	" "	1095
563–566	" "	1096
566–569	" "	1097
569–571	" "	1098
571	" "	1099
572	Southern R. Co. v. Gadd	1099
575–578	" "	1100
578–581	" "	1101
581	" "	1102
581–583	Itow v. United States	1102
583–586	" "	1103
586	" "	1104
587	Apapas v. United States	1104
588–590	" "	1105
590–592	" "	1106
593	Cornell Steamboat Co. v. Phœnix Constr. Co.	1107

Off. Rep. 233 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
595–598	Cornell Steamboat Co. v. Phœnix Constr. Co.	1109
598–600	" "	1110
601	Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Arizona & C. R. Co.	1111
602–603	" "	1114
603–604	" "	1115
604	Gompers v. United States	1115
605–607	" "	1118
607–610	" "	1119
610–612	" "	1120
612–613	" "	1121
613	Logan v. Davis	1121
614–616	" "	1122
616–619	" "	1123
619–621	" "	1124
623–624	" "	1126
624–626	" "	1127
626–629	" "	1128
629–630	" "	1129
630	Smith v. Texas	1129
635–637	" "	1132
637–639	" "	1133
639–642	" "	1134
642	" "	1135
642	Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Cade	1135
645–647	" "	1136
647–648	" "	1137
648–651	" "	1138
651–652	" "	1139
652	Ennis Waterworks v. Ennis	1139
654–657	" "	1140
657–658	" "	1141
658	Bowe v. Scott	1141
659–660	" "	1143
660–663	" "	1144
663–665	" "	1145
665	McDonald v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co.	1145
666–667	" "	1147
667–670	" "	1148
670	" "	1149
671	Erie R. Co. v. New York	1149
675–677	" "	1151
677–680	" "	1152
680–682	" "	1153
682–685	" "	1154
685	Erie R. Co. v. Williams	1155
687–688	" "	1155
688–691	" "	1156
691–692	" "	1157
697–699	" "	1160
699–702	" "	1161
702–704	" "	1162
704–705	" "	1163
705	Valdes v. Larrinaga	1163
708–709	" "	1165
709–711	" "	1166
712	Detroit Steel Cooperage Co. v. Sistersville Brewing Co.	1166
715–716	" "	1170
716–718	" "	1171
718	Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Mellor	1171
730–731	" "	1179
731–734	" "	1180
734	" "	1181

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

---

[1] JOHN MILLER, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-16.)

Postoffice — carrying mails — construction of contract — discontinuance.

1. The express authority to discontinue the execution of a contract to carry the mails upon payment of one month's extra pay, and after such discontinuance to make such contracts as are deemed best, which is given to the United States by the explicit terms of the proposal that led up to the contract, of the text of the contract itself, and of the postoffice rules and regulations which by the text were incorporated in and made a part of the contract, cannot be read out of such contract as inapplicable to the situation to which the contract relates, viz., the carriage of the mails over a designated route in Alaska, whatever may be the difficulties of performance.

[For other cases, see Postoffice, IV. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — review of discretion of Postmaster General — discontinuing contract for carrying mails.

2. The exercise by the Postmaster General of his authority to discontinue a contract for the carriage of the mails over a designated route in Alaska cannot be revised by the courts in the absence of the existence of a fraudulent motive or of bad faith.

[For other cases, see Courts, I. e, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 178.]

Argued January 19 and 20, 1914. Decided April 6, 1914.

NOTE.—On interference by courts with rulings of Postoffice Department—see note to National L. Ins. Co. v. National L. Ins. Co. 52 L. ed. U. S. 808.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing the petition in a suit to recover damages caused by the alleged unlawful discontinuance of a contract for the carriage of the mails. Affirmed.

See same case below, 47 Ct. Cl. 146.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Louis T. Michener argued the cause, and, with Mr. Perry G. Michener, filed a brief for appellant:

In the construction of the contract, or any particular clause or part of it, the court is to examine the entire contract, consider the relations of the parties, their connection with the subject-matter, the circumstances under which it was signed, the state of things existing at the time it was made, the nature of the obligations between the parties, and is to look carefully to the substance of the agreement as contradistinguished from its mere form, in order to give it a fair and just construction, and ascertain the substantial intent of the parties.

Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. v. Hill, 15 Wall. 94, 99-101, 21 L. ed. 64, 67, 68; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 143 U. S. 596, 609, 36 L. ed. 277, 281, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 479; Winona & St. P. Land Co. v. Minnesota, 159 U. S. 526, 531, 40 L. ed. 247, 249, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; United States v. Utah, N. & C. Stage Co. 199 U. S. 414, 423, 50 L. ed. 251, 255, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 69.

The discontinuance stipulation should be so construed as not to apply to a case in which the payment of one month's extra pay would be grossly inadequate as indemnity or compensation to the contractor.

United States v. Utah, N. & C. Stage Co. supra; Serralles v. Esbri, 200 U. S. 103, 113,

Digitized by Google

50 L. ed. 391, 395, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; Schuylkill Nav. Co. v. Moore, 2 Whart. 491.

This contract is not to be so construed as to give the officer the power to do arbitrary, capricious, oppressive, or unreasonable things, to the cost or damage of the contractor, for it is implied that the officer will do nothing of the kind.

United States v. North American Commercial Co. 74 Fed. 149; Lewman v. United States, 41 Ct. Cl. 478; Ripley v. United States, 223 U. S. 695, 701, 56 L. ed. 614, 617, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 352; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Hoyt, 149 U. S. 1, 15, 37 L. ed. 625, 630, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779; United States v. Utah, N. & C. Stage Co. 199 U. S. 414, 50 L. ed. 251, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 69.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

If the language is clear and unambiguous, it must be taken according to its plain meaning as expressive of the intention of the parties; and under settled principles of judicial decision should not be controlled by the supposed inconvenience or hardship that may follow such construction.

Loud v. Pomona Land & Water Co. 153 U. S. 576, 577, 38 L. ed. 827, 828, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 928.

Actual or constructive bad faith on the part of the Postmaster General must be alleged.

Hudson, Bldg. Contr. pp. 580, 596–598; Kihlberg v. United States, 97 U. S. 398, 24 L. ed. 1106; Martinsburg & P. R. Co. v. March, 114 U. S. 549–553, 29 L. ed. 255, 256, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1035; Chicago, S. F. & C. R. Co. v. Price, 138 U. S. 185–195, 34 L. ed. 917–919, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; United States v. Gleason, 175 U. S. 588, 44 L. ed. 284, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 228.

Since it is not alleged or claimed that there was actual or constructive bad faith on the part of the Postmaster General, it would appear that the charge of capricious or unreasonable conduct on his part would not vitiate his act.

United States v. Gleason, 175 U. S. 588–607, 44 L. ed. 284–291, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 228; McLaughlin v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 190.

The language of the contract making one month's extra pay "full indemnity" for all losses sustained by the contractor on account of the contract being terminated is too clear for argument.

Slavens v. United States, 196 U. S. 229, 49 L. ed. 457, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229, 38 Ct. Cl. 574; Garfielde v. United States, 93 U. S. 242, 23 L. ed. 779.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The petition claimed $51,736 because of an alleged violation of a contract to carry the mails over a mentioned route in Alaska. The United States demurred on the ground that no cause of action was stated, and the court having sustained the demurrer and dismissed the petition, the case is here. The text of the petition, therefore, is the matter we are called upon to consider. It covers sixteen pages of the printed record. We shall seek to rearrange its contents so as to enable us with accuracy and yet with brevity to state the substance of the petition in order to determine whether a cause of action was stated.

It was alleged that on September 15th, 1905, the United States advertised for proposals to carry the mails over a route in Alaska from Valdez to Eagle, a distance of 428 miles, and back. The advertisement conveyed information concerning the route and the duty which would rest upon the contractor, and contained the following:

"The Postmaster General may order an increase of service on a route by allowing therefor not to exceed a pro rata increase on the contract pay. He may change schedules of departure and arrivals in all cases, and particularly to make them conform to connections with railroads, without increase of pay, provided the running time be not abridged. The Postmaster General may also discontinue, change, or curtail the service in order to place on the route superior service, or whenever the public [6] interest, in his judgment, shall require such discontinuance, change, or curtailment for any other cause, he allowing as full indemnity to contractor one month's extra pay on the amount of service dispensed with, and not to exceed pro rata compensation for the amount of service retained and continued; but the Postmaster General reserves the right to rescind any acceptance of a proposal at any time before the signing on behalf of the United States of the formal contract, without the allowance of any indemnity to the accepted bidder."

Under this proposal the bid of John B. Crittenden to do the called-for work at $46,000 per annum was accepted, and on the 1st of February, 1906, a contract was entered into between the government and Crittenden and his sureties, John Miller and Charles H. Cramer, for performing the services for the sum of the bid for the period of four years from the 1st of July, 1906, to June 30th, 1910. The written contract contained specifications as to the character of the work, its requirements and the mode of its performance, which it is not here necessary to detail. Besides a full stipulation giving the Postmaster General authority to enforce the contract and all its provisions by imposing penalties and forfeitures, and by discontinuing the contract in case of nonperformance, as embodied by the provisions which are reproduced in the margin,† the contract contained the following:

Digitized by Google

[7] "It is hereby stipulated and agreed by the said contractor and his sureties that the Postmaster General may discontinue or extend this contract, change the schedule and termini of the route, and alter, increase, decrease, or extend the service, in accordance with law, by allowing not to exceed a pro rata increase of compensation for any additional service thereby required; and, in case of decrease, curtailment, or discontinuance of service, as a full indemnity to said contractor, one month's extra pay on the amount of service dispensed with, and not to exceed a pro rata compensation for the service retained; but no increase of compensation shall be allowed for a change of service not amounting to an increase, nor indemnity of month's extra pay for any change of service not involving a decrease of service."

In addition the statutory provisions governing the subject and the Postoffice regulations having the force of law which had been stated in the advertisement for proposals were by reference incorporated and made a part of the contract by the following provision:

"That this contract is further to be subject to all the conditions imposed by law, and by the several acts of Congress relating to postoffices and post roads, and to the conditions stated in the pamphlet advertisement of September 15, 1905."

It was averred that shortly after the making of the contract Miller, the petitioner, who was one of the sureties of [8] Crittenden, found that he was not able to supply the capital needed for the performance of the contract, and therefore he, Miller, as surety, was obliged to and did expend the moneys needed to buy "harness, sleds, horse feed, horses, and dogs to carry the mails" under the contract, so that by the 1st of July, 1906, the contractor was ready to perform and did commence the performance of his duties under the contract, and continued to perform them until the time when subsequently the contract was discontinued by the Postmaster General. It was averred that after thus advancing the money as surety of Crittenden, Miller, finding that further advances were necessary to enable Crittenden to go on with his work, formed a partnership with him, and under this partnership advanced large sums of money to meet the heavy expenses which were required, and continued to do so, during a period of nearly two years; that is, up to or on or about the 1st of May, 1908, when he was compelled, in order to protect himself and the United States, to take a transfer of the contract from Crittenden; that is, to become the sublessee of the contract, his written agreement dated the 1st of May, 1908, with Crittenden to that effect having been approved by the Postoffice authorities; indeed, it was alleged that such agreement was written by those authorities. This subletting contract which was set out in full in the petition bound Miller, the subcontractor, by all the obligations of the original contract, made him liable for all fines, forfeitures, etc., imposed under the original contract, and expressly subjected him to the risk of the power to change, increase, modify, or discontinue the service as provided in the original contract, the clauses covering these two latter subjects being in the margin.†

†And it is hereby further stipulated and agreed by the said contractor and his sureties that the Postmaster General may annul the contract or impose forfeitures in his discretion for repeated failures or for failure to perform service according to contract; for violating the postal laws or regulations; for disobeying the instructions of the Postoffice Department; for refusing to discharge a carrier, or any other person having charge of the mail by the contractor's direction, when required by the Department; for subletting service without the consent of the Postmaster General, or assigning or transferring this contract; for combining to prevent others from bidding for the performance of postal service; for transmitting commercial intelligence or matter which should go by mail, contrary to the stipulations herein; for transporting persons so engaged as aforesaid; or for the failure of the contractor to give his personal supervision to the performance of the service, and to reside upon or contiguous to the route; that the Postmaster General may annul the contract whenever the contractor shall become a postmaster, assistant postmaster, or member of Congress, or otherwise legally incompetent to be concerned in such contract; and whenever, in the opinion of the Postmaster General, the service cannot be safely continued, the revenues collected, or the laws maintained on the road or roads herein.

†And it is hereby further agreed that liability for all fines and deductions imposed upon a party of the first part by the Postmaster General, for failures and delinquencies in the performance of service under his contract, shall be assumed and borne by the party of the second part, and, if necessary, the Auditor for the Postoffice Department may enforce this agreement by proper deductions from any compensation

Digitized by Google

[9] It was alleged that the petitioner as sub-contractor performed the contract as long as he was permitted to do so by the United States; that on the 11th of August, 1908, the Postmaster General issued an order discontinuing the contract service over the route which the contract embraced, to take effect on the 30th of September, 1908, and this order was enforced at the time mentioned and an indemnity allowance of pay for one month only was made the contractor. The petition alleged that for many years "the regulations adopted and enforced by the Postoffice Department have authorized the Postmaster General to discontinue or curtail the service in whole or in part, in order to secure 'a better degree of service,' or 'superior service,' or whenever the public interest in his judgment should require its discontinuance or curtailment for any other cause, he allowing as a full indemnity to the contractor, one month's extra pay on the amount of service dispensed with and pro rata compensation for the amount of service retained and continued." The continuance of this regulation was alleged, and the various changes in the mere form in which it was expressed up to and including the time when the regulation then existing found statement in the contract and in the proposals subject to which, as we have seen, the contract was made. The petition, however, averred as follows:

[10] "The regulation, whatever its language or its number, was not drawn and promulgated with reference to the conditions existing in Alaska on Route No. 78,108 during the period covered by the contract sued on, but it was drawn and promulgated with reference to conditions existing within the limits of the United States and exclusive of that route in Alaska, and particularly without reference to the hereafter described conditions existing in that part of Alaska covered by the contract sued on.

"In the preparation of the forms of advertisement, proposal, and contract in suit, the government officials adopted the regulation in force, and such advertisement, proposal, and contract were drawn and printed for general use, and the proposal and contract were presented for execution without particular regard to the physical, climatic, or other conditions then existing or that might exist along the line of that route during the contract period of four years. At the execution of the proposal and contract, and of the subsequent contract of subletting, Crittenden and petitioner did not think or believe that the contract in suit would be discontinued or terminated in any manner or form, but, on the contrary, they believed that the contract in suit would be in full force and effect during the whole contract period, and they named the amount of annual compensation in that belief. They expected that they would encounter losses of profits in a portion of the contract period, but would earn good profits before the contract period ended and for the whole contract period. Had Crittenden and the petitioner believed otherwise than as above stated, they would not have executed either of the contracts for that annual compensation, nor would petitioner have made the arrangements and expenditures in the early part of 1903 (1908) hereinafter described. On the contrary, petitioner made such arrangements and expenditures in the belief that the contract would be in force for the full contract period. Petitioner [11] avers that if the government had asked bids for a two-year contract on that route, Crittenden would not have submitted a bid at all, and petitioner would not have become surety on any contract for less than $92,000 per annum, because the conditions were such that the expenses of carrying the mails on the route would be far heavier for carrying them in 1906 than in 1907, and in 1907 than in 1908, and in 1908 than in 1909. As an illustration, the petitioner avers that it cost, to wit: $151,169.55 to perform the contract until it was discontinued by order of the Postmaster General, that amount being to wit: $48,595.08 more than the total sum received from the government, but it would only have cost him, to wit: $43,390 to perform the contract for the remaining twenty-two months of the contract period, during which time he would have received, to wit: $84,326 for carrying the mails; a profit of, to wit: $40,936."

The petition moreover alleged that the conditions which existed at the time the contract was made in the region covered by the mail route which it embraced caused it to be extremely difficult and hazardous to human life and property to carry the mails over the route described and within the time specified in the contract. In many due the party of the second part for service performed under this subcontract.

---

And it is hereby further agreed that for any additional service required by the Postmaster General, and not hereinbefore expressly stipulated, the party of the second part shall be allowed not to exceed a pro rata increase of compensation; and, in case of decrease, curtailment, or discontinuance of service, as full indemnity a pro rata of the one month's extra pay allowed by the United States to the party of the first part, and, unless previously herein stipulated, not to exceed a pro rata compensation for the service retained.

Digitized by Google

places, it was averred, the government trails were not fit to be used because of their bad condition, and it became necessary to build new ones. With much amplitude, the petition described the almost insurmountable difficulties with which the performance of the contract was environed: the cutting of trails, the building or repairing of bridges, the erecting of sheds, the transporting at an enormous expense along the route of the means to sustain men and horses; the struggle in doing so in winter through ice and snow, and in spring and summer, the overcoming of obstacles resulting from flood and many other causes. Indeed, the facts detailed, being taken as true, establish that the performance of the contract was surrounded by difficulty of the [12] gravest character, to overcome which called for the manifestation on the part of the contractor of courage, the exertion of great energy, and a willingness to make sacrifices in order to discharge the duties imposed by the contract. It was alleged that the making of the strenuous exertion and the incurring of the hazards to life and property which, as we have stated, the petition described, were necessary, "as the government did not make allowance for delays, whether caused by snows, storms, blizzards, the freeze-up in the fall, the break-up in the spring, or any other consideration, but fines were charged at every opportunity."

It was alleged that counting on the fact that the contract would be allowed to go to its termination, after the petitioner became the sublessee he spent a large amount of money in putting the route in fair condition, in provisioning the same by shipping food for men and horses at freight rates which were enormous, all of which he would not have done had he been informed of the intention of the government to discontinue the contract before the end of the contract period. That upon the same reliance, as a means of utilizing his equipment, he bought out the rights and assumed the obligations of a contract which had been made by a firm known as Scott & Frase for carrying the mails from a point known as Tanana Crossing to Eagle, the place where the contract of which the petitioner was the subcontractor terminated.

It was alleged that although in September, 1908, the government discontinued the contract of petitioner, it did not discontinue the mail service to which that contract related, but only restricted it,—that is, cut out about 190 of the 428 miles between Valdes and Eagle, and in the balance had the mails carried by contracts exacting a less onerous and less frequent service, these contracts having been made as emergency contracts, without advertisement, without affording the petitioner any opportunity to bid [13] for them or to take them under the prior contract which was discontinued by the order of 1908. The sum which was claimed was the alleged loss resulting from having been obliged to discontinue the contract, the calculation in effect on the subject charging the amount spent under the contract as well as $41,129.52 as the result of the purchase of the Scott & Frase contract, and crediting the total amount received from the government.

These being the averments of the petition, it is obvious, the questions are as follows: First, did the contract confer the authority on the United States to discontinue its performance, and, if so, did it give power to the Postoffice authorities after the contract was discontinued to deal with the mail routes which the contract had previously embraced in such a manner as was found necessary to subserve the public interest; second, if yes, did the averments of the bill show such a state of facts as would justify the conclusion that the action of the Postoffice authorities in exerting the lawful power of discontinuance was so impelled by bad faith as to cause the exertion of the otherwise lawful power to be invalid and void?

That in explicit terms the express authority was given to the United States to discontinue the execution of the contract is so plainly the result of the proposal which led up to the contract, if the text of the contract itself, of the Postoffice rules and regulations which by the text were incorporated in and made a part of the contract, as to leave no room for discussion. Indeed, this result was in terms admitted by the allegations of the petition to which we have referred, and the challenge of the power to discontinue therein made conceded that the terms of the contract gave the power, but relied only upon the assertion that such terms, although express and positive, should be read out of the contract as inapplicable to the situation to which the contract related; that is, the carriage of the mail over the designated route in Alaska. [14] But we must be governed by the contract, and cannot, as we are asked to do, first destroy it in part and then enforce that which would remain, which would be the result of holding that the stipulations of the contract conferring power upon the government may be obliterated, and the contract, with those stipulations wiped out, be enforced as against the government for the benefit of the petitioner. And the absolutely conclusive force of this view, when considered as a general proposition, is at once additionally demonstrated by a particular consideration of the case in hand, since the reserve power on the part of the government to discontinue the contract which is here in question found its place in the proposal and contract in consequence of the postal regulations having the effect of law which had prevailed for many years, and which therefore caused the contract with the reservation of the right to discontinue to be but the expression of a rule of public policy limiting in the public interest the power to contract,—a limitation sanctioned over and over again at least by an unerring implication by statutory approval. Of course, under this condition of things, the suggestion that the contractor would not have bound himself to the government if he had considered that the unambiguous words of the contract would be enforced can be of no avail. And it is equally manifest that it is impossible to give any effect to the suggestion that the terms of the contract did not apply because of the place where the work covered by the contract was to be performed. The presumption is that whatever may have been the difficulties of performance, they were in the minds of the contracting parties, and were elements entering into the offer by the contractor to do the work for a stated compensation, and also constituted elements of danger against which the government protected itself by the express reservation of the right to discontinuance which was explicitly exerted. While it is not necessary to do so, we observe in passing that the averments [15] of the petition itself give rise to inferences sustaining this very natural conclusion.

Digitized by Google

That the power to discontinue the contract left the government free after such discontinuance to make such contracts as were deemed best is also the unambiguous result of the proposals submitted by the government, of the text of the contract itself, and of the context of the postal rules and regulations which by reference were incorporated into the contract. In fact, while the context establishes this result so clearly and so obviously as to leave no room for extraneous reasoning, if such were not the case, and purpose and intent required to be looked at, it is manifest that to deny that such power existed would be to set aside and frustrate the public policy upon which the right to discontinue rests. It would render the exertion of the power futile—or cause it to be inadequate to protect the public interest, since it would deprive of means of remedying the evil to cure which the right to discontinue was exerted. The irresistible force of the contract itself on the subject has been previously pointed out by this court in a case which was cited by the court below in its clear opinion. Slavens v. United States, 196 U. S. 229, 233, 236, 49 L. ed. 457, 459, 460, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

Making the assumption, for the sake of the argument only, that the existence of a fraudulent motive or of bad faith impelling the exercise by the Postmaster General of the authority conferred upon him to discontinue be a factor in determining whether an otherwise valid power had been lawfully exerted, such concession could have no possible reference to this case, since it is expressly conceded in the argument at bar that no such charge was made in the petition and none is relied upon, the only claim being that a power not conferred was exerted, or that, if one which was given was exercised, the circumstances disclosed were of such a character as to justify the legal conclusion that it was so grossly inequitable to bring [16] the power into play that its exertion ought not to receive judicial sanction. But this simply calls upon us to substitute judicial discretion for the discretion lodged by the law and the contract in the Postmaster General,—a power which, of course, it is beyond our competency to exercise. Let it be conceded that if the truth be admitted of all the facts as to the unforeseen difficulties, the stress of storm and blizzard and snow and ice and freshet, which prevailed as averred over the trackless wilderness through which the mail route extended, a case of great hardship would be established, the very truth of the averments referred to also naturally suggests the reasons which, in the exercise of a wise discretion, may have called into play the exertion of the power to discontinue the contract in the public interest and for the public benefit. As under the conditions stated the hardships alleged were but the result of a mistake of the petitioner in making an improvident contract, relief can only be obtained at the hands of Congress.

Affirmed.

E. A. BROWNING, Plff. in Err.,
v.
CITY OF WAYCROSS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 16–23.)

Commerce — state regulation — occupation tax — erecting lightning rods.

The business of erecting lightning rods within the corporate limits as the agent of

---

Note.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107, and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

Digitized by Google

a nonresident manufacturer on whose behalf such agent had solicited orders for the sale of such rods, and from whom he had received the rods when shipped into the state on such orders, may be subjected to a municipal license tax without violating the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, although the contracts under which the rods were shipped bound the seller at his own expense to attach them to the houses of the persons who ordered them.

[or other cases, see Commerce, IV. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 259.]

Argued and submitted March 11, 1914. Decided April 6, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Georgia to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the Superior Court of Ware County, in that state, of erecting lightning rods without paying an occupation tax. Affirmed.

See same case below, 11 Ga. App. 46, 74 S. E. 564.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Richard A. Jones argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. L. Sweat and Nathan Frank, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The sale and purchase of these lightning rods located in another state, to be transported in pursuance thereof in interstate traffic to the place of delivery in the state of Georgia, fixed under the terms of such contract of purchase, was a transaction coming within the description of commerce among the states.

Crenshaw v. Arkansas, 227 U. S. 389, 57 L. ed. 565, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 294; Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 51 L. ed. 295, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159.

It is established by the record that the erection of lightning rods by the plaintiff in error was in pursuance of and as a part of sale transactions constituting interstate commerce, and a necessary incident thereof, and the tax sought to be collected from him for the exercise of such function is within the prohibition against burdening commerce among the states by licenses, direct or indirect tax, or any system of state regulation.

Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 62, 35 L. ed. 649, 654, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 628, 47 L. ed. 336, 339, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Barrett v. New York City, 232 U. S. 14, ante, 483, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203.

Aside from such as may properly be put in effect in the exercise of its police power, any regulation or enactment of a state or political subdivision thereof, which tends to materially interfere with, hinder, or obstruct the making or performance of contracts for commerce among the states, or anything reasonably incident thereto, is a burden upon such commerce which may not be laid other than by authority of the national government. The character of the incidents allowed to constitute parts of such contracts within the protection of the commerce clause of the Constitution and of the acts which have been held to constitute unwarranted interference therewith are illustrated by the following cases:

Dozier v. Alabama, 218 U. S. 124, 54 L. ed. 965, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 264, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649; Barrett v. New York City, 232 U. S. 14, ante, 483, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 51 L. ed. 295, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 436, 444, 6 L. ed. 684, 687.

A license tax upon a vocation is a tax upon the object to which such vocation is applied.

Brown v. Maryland, supra.

Mr. Thomas S. Felder, Attorney General of Georgia, and Mr. W. W. Lambdin submitted the cause for defendant in error:

With reference to the facts involved in this case, interstate commerce may be defined to be the "negotiation in one state of sales of goods which are in another state, for the purpose of their introduction into the former state."

Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592: Williams v. Fears, 110

State licenses or taxes generally as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle, 9 L.R.A. 366; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 217; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311; and Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 538.

On peddlers and drummers as related to interstate commerce—see notes to Stockard v. Morgan, 46 L. ed. U. S. 785; Re Spain, 14 L.R.A. 97; State v. Bayer, 19 L.R.A. (N.S.) 297; and Dozier v. State, 28 L.R.A. (N.S.) 265.

On the validity of occupation tax under the commerce clause—see note to Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Taggart, 60 L.R.A. 691.

Digitized by Google

Ga. 590, 50 L.R.A. 685, 35 S. E. 699; 17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 65.

Defendant was not tried for taking orders or for selling the lightning rods, but was tried for exercising an entirely different and an independent vocation, to wit: putting up lightning rods—which vocation required him to sort out suitable lengths from the mass of materials sent him, and put them together and affix them to the houses of his customers. This work of erecting the lightning rods requires skill and considerable time, and is a work and a vocation carried on strictly within the state of Georgia, and is independent and separate from the sale of the goods, and consequently is subject to regulation by the state. Even if this license tax imposed by the city upon the erection of lightning rods could in the least degree affect the sale of same, its effect upon interstate commerce would be so incidental and remote as not to amount to a regulation of such commerce.

Ficklen v. Taxing Dist. 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 601, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 79, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810; State v. Gorham, 115 N. C. 721, 25 L.R.A. 810, 44 Am. St. Rep. 494, 20 S. E. 179; State v. Sheppard, 142 N. C. 586, 55 S. E. 146.

As well might tailors in Georgia claim that they were exempt from an occupation tax because their home office in another state shipped the cloth to them upon orders for suits given by their customers, and all they did in Georgia was to make and put together the garments out of this material.

Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 49 L. ed. 663, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Browning v. Waycross, 11 Ga. App. 46, 74 S. E. 564; State v. Gorham, 115 N. C. 721, 25 L.R.A. 810, 44 Am. St. Rep. 494, 20 S. E. 179; American Amusement Co. v. East Lake Chutes Co. 174 Ala. 526, 56 So. 961.

When the carload of materials reached Waycross and the bulk was broken, such materials being then the property of the shipper, and not dedicated to any particular purchaser, they became a part of the general property of the state, and were therefore subject to regulation by the state.

State v. Gorham, 115 N. C. 721, 25 L.R.A. 810, 44 Am. St. Rep. 494, 20 S. E. 179; General Oil Co. v. Crain, 209 U. S. 211, 52 L. ed. 754, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 39 L. ed. 430, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 500, 48 L. ed. 538, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Merchant's Transfer Co. v. Board of Review, 128 Iowa, 732, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 662, 105 N. W. 211, 5 Ann. Cas. 1016; Croy v. Obion County (Croy v. Epperson) 104 Tenn. 525, 51 L.R.A. 254, 78 Am. St. Rep. 931, 58 S. W. 235.

According to the form of the order set out in the record, the customer did not order rods at all, but only ordered materials, and did not even order any definite quantity of materials, but the same had to be measured up after the rods were affixed to his house. Therefore, in order to make the sale, everything pertaining thereto had to be done within the state of Georgia and in the city of Waycross; the materials had to be separated indiscriminately from the mass and suitable lengths selected and measured up in order to make the sale. Therefore, even the sale, under these circumstances, was intrastate, and not interstate, commerce.

35 Cyc. 281–286; Butler v. Lawshe, 74 Ga. 352; People v. Smith, 147 Mich. 391, 110 N. W. 1102; Muskegon v. Hanes, 149 Mich. 460, 112 N. W. 1077; Newcastle v. Cutler, 15 Pa. Super. Ct. 612; Kimmell v. State, 104 Tenn. 184, 56 S. W. 854; Croy v. Obion County (Croy v. Epperson) 104 Tenn. 525, 51 L.R.A. 354, 78 Am. St. Rep. 931, 58 S. W. 235; General Oil Co. v. Crain, 209 U. S. 211, 52 L. ed. 754, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 500, 48 L. ed. 538, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Merchant's Transfer Co. v. Board of Review, 128 Iowa, 732, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 662, 105 N. W. 211, 5 Ann. Cas. 1016.

The police power of the state is supreme, and reasonable exercise of it does not violate the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. State, 135 Ga. 545, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 20, 69 S. E. 725; State v. Harrington, 68 Vt. 622, 34 L.R.A. 100, 35 Atl. 515; State v. Wheelock, 95 Iowa, 577, 30 L.R.A. 429, 58 Am. St. Rep. 442, 64 N. W. 620; Com. v. Newhall, 164 Mass. 338, 41 N. E. 647; Kolb v. Boonton, 64 N. J. L. 163, 44 Atl. 873.

In State v. Smithson, 106 Mo. 149, 17 S. W. 221, it was held that a statute requiring persons dealing in the selling of patents, patent medicines, lightning rods, etc., to take out a license, was not obnoxious to the commerce clause of the United States Constitution.

The several states have the right to regulate persons and things within their own jurisdiction, under their police power, notwithstanding the regulation may have a bearing on interstate commerce, provided no discrimination is made against nonresidents.

Slaughter-house Cases, 16 Wall. 62, 21 L. ed. 404; Passenger Cases, 7 How. 548, 12 L. ed. 813; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S.

Digitized by Google

99, 23 L. ed. 819; Bartenmeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. 129, 138, 21 L. ed. 929, 932; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 39 L. ed. 430, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Howe Mach. Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676, 25 L. ed. 754.

Doubts are always resolved in favor of the constitutionality of a statute. The violation must be clear and palpable in order for the statute to be held unconstitutional.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. pp. 216, 220; Plumley v. Massachusets, 155 U. S. 461, 479, 480, 39 L. ed. 223, 229, 230, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Wellborn v. Estes, 70 Ga. 390; Howell v. State, 71 Ga. 224, 51 Am. Rep. 259; Scoville v. Calhoun, 76 Ga. 269.

Under the facts of the case as shown in the answer to the certiorari, the court could well have concluded that the plaintiff in error was conducting the business for himself, and was buying the materials from the St. Louis company. The form of the order tends to show this. Furthermore, it is significant that the plaintiff in error did not disclose the nature of his contract with the St. Louis company. The business was therefore not interstate commerce.

Banker Bros. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 222 U. S. 210, 56 L. ed. 168, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38; American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 521, 48 L. ed. 546, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Croy v. Obion County (Croy v. Epperson) 104 Tenn. 525, 51 L.R.A. 254, 78 Am. St. Rep. 931, 58 S. W. 235.

When one sought to be taxed under a municipal ordinance, for carrying on a particular business in a named city, seeks to set aside its provisions as to him because of the alleged unconstitutionality of such ordinance when applied to the business in which he is engaged, the burden is on him to show clearly and unmistakably the nature and character of his business, as well as his exemption from the tax imposed, before he will be entitled to an injunction to restrain its enforcement.

Price Co. v. Atlanta, 105 Ga. 358, 31 S. E. 619.

The burden of proof was clearly upon the plaintiff to show that the domestic business was a mere incident to the interstate business.

Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 69, 49 L. ed. 668, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

[19] Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error was charged in a municipal court with violating an ordinance which imposed an annual occupation tax of $25 upon "lightning rod agents or dealers engaged in putting up or erecting lightning rods within the corporate limits" of the city of Waycross. Although admitting that he had carried on the business, he pleaded not guilty, and defended upon the ground that he had done so as the agent of a St. Louis corporation on whose behalf he had solicited orders for the sale of lightning rods; had received the rods when shipped on such orders from St. Louis, and had erected them for the corporation, the price paid for the rods to the corporation including the duty to erect them without further charge. This it was asserted constituted the carrying on of interstate commerce which the city could not tax without violating the Constitution of the United States. Although the facts alleged were established without dispute, there was a conviction and sentence, and the same result followed from a trial de novo in the superior court of Ware county, where the case was carried by certiorari. On error to the court of appeals that judgment was affirmed, the court stating its reasons for doing so in a careful and discriminating opinion reviewing and adversely passing upon the defense under the Constitution of the United States (11 Ga. App. 46, 74 S. E. 564). From that judgment this writ of error is prosecuted because of the constitutional question, and because under the law of Georgia the court of appeals had final authority to conclude the issue.

The general principles by which it has been so frequently determined that a state may not burden by taxation or otherwise the taking of orders in one state for goods to be shipped from another, or the shipment of such goods in the channels of interstate commerce up [20] to and including the consummation by delivery of the goods at the point of shipment, have been so often stated as to cause them to be elementary, and as to now require nothing but a mere outline of the principle. The sole question, therefore, here, is whether carrying on the business of erecting lightning rods in the state, under the conditions established, was interstate commerce beyond the power of the state to regulate or directly burden. The solution of the inquiry will, we think, be most readily reached by briefly reviewing a few of the more recently decided cases which are relied upon to establish that although the interstate transit of the lightning rods had terminated and they had been delivered at the point of destination to the agent of the seller, the business of subsequently attaching them to the houses for which they were intended constituted the carrying on of interstate commerce. The cases relied on are Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 51 L. ed. 295, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep.

Digitized by Google

159; and Dozier v. Alabama, 218 U. S. 124, 54 L. ed. 965, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 264, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649.

Caldwell v. North Carolina concerned the validity of an ordinance of the village of Greensboro, imposing a tax upon the business of selling or delivering picture frames, photographs, etc. The question was whether Caldwell, the agent of an Illinois corporation, was liable for this tax, because in Greensboro he had taken from a railroad freight office certain packages of frames and pictures which were awaiting delivery, and which had been shipped to Greensboro by the selling corporation to its own order, for the purpose of filling orders previously obtained by its agents in North Carolina. After the packages of frames and pictures were received by Caldwell, in a room in a hotel, the pictures and frames were fitted together and were delivered to those who had ordered them. The assertion that there was liability for the tax was based on the contention that the act of Caldwell in receiving the pictures and frames and bringing them together was not under the [21] protection of the commerce clause, but was the transaction of local business after the termination of interstate commerce; especially because the pictures and frames had been shipped from Chicago in separate packages, and because the pictures and frames were incomplete on their arrival, and were made complete in the state by the union accomplished after the end of their movement in interstate commerce. Both of these propositions were decided to be unsound, and it was adjudged that as both the pictures and frames had been ordered from another state, and their shipment was the fulfilment of an interstate commerce transaction, the mere fact that they were shipped in separate packages and brought together at the termination of the transit did not amount to the transaction of business within North Carolina which the state could tax without placing a direct burden upon interstate commerce. In Rearick v. Pennsylvania, where the right to levy a tax was decided not to exist because to sustain it would be a direct burden upon interstate commerce, the only question was whether the form in which certain shipments of goods were made from Ohio into Pennsylvania to fill orders was of such a character as to cause the act of the agent of the shipper, who opened the packages for the purpose of distributing the goods to those for whom they were intended, to amount to the carrying on of business in the state of Pennsylvania. Dozier v. Alabama in substance concerned the principles applied in the two previous cases, with the modification that it was there held that because there was no binding obligation on a purchaser to accept the frame which was to accompany a picture ordered from another state, and transmitted through interstate commerce, did not take the case out of the previous ruling.

It is evident that these cases when rightly considered, instead of sustaining, serve to refute, the claim of protection under the interstate commerce clause which is here [22] relied upon, since the cases were concerned only with merchandise which had moved in interstate commerce, and where the transactions which it was asserted amounted to the doing of local business consisted only of acts concerning interstate commerce goods, dissociated from any attempt to connect them with or make them a part in the state of property which had not and could not have been the subject of interstate commerce. Thus, in Caldwell v. North Carolina, the court laid emphasis upon the fact that the shipment of the pictures in interstate commerce in one package and the frames in another was not essential but accidental, for the two could have been united at the point of shipment before interstate commerce began as well as be brought together after delivery at the point of destination. And this was also the condition in the Rearick Case. Indeed, it is apparent in all three cases that there was not the slightest purpose to enlarge the scope of interstate commerce so as to cause it to embrace acts and transactions theretofore confessedly local, but simply to prevent the recognized local limitations from being used to put the conceded interstate commerce power in a straight jacket so as to destroy the possibilities of its being adapted to meet mere changes in the form by which business of an inherently interstate commerce character could be carried on.

We are of the opinion that the court below was right in holding that the business of erecting lightning rods under the circumstances disclosed was within the regulating power of the state, and not the subject of interstate commerce, for the following reasons: (a) Because the affixing of lightning rods to houses was the carrying on of a business of a strictly local character, peculiarly within the exclusive control of state authority. (b) Because, besides, such business was wholly separate from interstate commerce, involved no question of the delivery of property shipped in interstate commerce, or of the right to complete [23] an interstate commerce transaction, but concerned merely the doing of a local act after interstate commerce had completely terminated. It is true that it was shown that the contract under which the rods were shipped bound the seller, at his own expense.

Digitized by Google

to attach the rods to the houses of the persons who ordered rods, but it was not within the power of the parties by the form of their contract to convert what was exclusively a local business, subject to state control, into an interstate commerce business, protected by the commerce clause. It is manifest that if the right here asserted were recognized, or the power to accomplish by contract what is here claimed were to be upheld, all lines of demarcation between national and state authority would become obliterated, since it would necessarily follow that every kind or form of material shipped from one state to the other, and intended to be used after delivery in the construction of buildings or in the making of improvements in any form, would or could be made interstate commerce.

Of course we are not called upon here to consider how far interstate commerce might be held to continue to apply to an article shipped from one state to another, after delivery and up to and including the time when the article was put together or made operative in the place of destination in a case where, because of some intrinsic and peculiar quality or inherent complexity of the article, the making of such agreement was essential to the accomplishment of the interstate transaction. In saying this we are not unmindful of the fact that some suggestion is here made that the putting up of the lighning rods after delivery by the agent of the seller was so vital and so essential as to render it impossible to contract without an agreement to that effect,—a suggestion, however, which we deem it unnecessary to do more than mention in order to refute it.

Affirmed.

---

[24] LOUIS ELIE JOSEPH HENRY DE GALARD DE BRASSAC DE BEARN, Count and Prince of Bearn and Chalais, Appt.,

v.

SAFE DEPOSIT & TRUST COMPANY OF BALTIMORE, American Bonding Company of Baltimore, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 24–35.)

Appeal — from district court — frivolousness of Federal question.

1. A direct appeal from a Federal district court to the Supreme Court may not be maintained on the theory that rights under the Federal Constitution were involved, where the supposed constitutional questions have already been twice decided by the Supreme Court to be so wanting in merit as not to afford ground for the exercise of jurisdiction to review the judgments of a state court of last resort.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938–989, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — due process of law — attachment of property of nonresident.

2. The attachment conformably to local law, at the instance of a foreign creditor, of bonds of a foreign corporation, for a debt of their nonresident owner, does not deny such owner either the equal protection of the laws or the due process of law guaranteed by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., where such bonds had been deposited with a custodian in the state, under the directions of the state court, in the exercise of admittedly lawful powers, and could not be removed therefrom without obtaining the authority of the state court,—an authority which was unaffected by the fact that the bonds were registered in the names of the attachment debtor's minor children, since they were so registered solely because of the previous action of the state court.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 7; IV. b, 8, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 301.]

Argued March 17 and 18, 1914. Decided April 6, 1914.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland to review a decree sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing the bill in a suit over the right of access to a safe deposit box. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 196 Fed. 981.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Maurice Léon and George C. Holt argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

Appellant was entitled to show in the Federal court below that a state court, sitting in the same state, had not acquired jurisdiction of the bonds, although the sheriff had filed a return stating that they had been seized.

Cooper v. Newell, 173 U. S. 555, 43 L. ed. 808, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

Upon the conceded facts the state court had not acquired prior jurisdiction over the bonds.

Bates v. New Orleans, J. & G. N. R. Co. 4 Abb. Pr. 72, 13 How. Pr. 516; Smith v. Kennebec & P. R. Co. 45 Me. 547; Bowker v. Hill, 60 Me. 172; Buck v. Beach, 206 U. S. 392, 51 L. ed. 1106, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712, 11 Ann. Cas. 732; Tweedy v. Bogart, 56

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of judgments of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741; B. Altman & Co. v. United States, 56 L. ed. U. S. 894.

Digitized by Google

Conn. 419, 15 Atl. 374; Ward v. Boyce, 152 N. Y. 191, 36 L.R.A. 549, 46 N. E. 180; Simpson v. Jersey City Contracting Co. 165 N. Y. 193, 55 L.R.A. 796, 58 N. E. 896.

Treating the bonds as capable of transfer by manual delivery, it is manifest upon the conceded facts that they have not been subjected to such proceedings as would bring them within the jurisdiction of the state court.

Cooper v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. 308, 19 L. ed. 931; Pelham v. Rose, 9 Wall. 103, 19 L. ed. 602; Pelham v. Way, 15 Wall. 196, 21 L. ed. 55; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 730, 24 L. ed. 565, 571.

The Federal court, having acquired prior jurisdiction by process served in personam on the lessor and on the nominal lessees of the box as parties defendant in an original suit to determine the status of the leasehold of the safe deposit box, should protect its jurisdiction to render a decree by preventing interference with the res.

Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 461, 16 L. ed. 749, 753; Rickey Land & Cattle Co. v. Miller & Lux, 218 U. S. 258, 54 L. ed. 1032, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 11; Helm v. Zarecor, 222 U. S. 32, 56 L. ed. 77, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

Mr. Charles McH. Howard argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Albert C. Ritchie and Edward Duffy, filed a brief for appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

In this case the court below sustained a demurrer to the complaint, and this direct appeal was then taken on the theory that rights under the Constitution of the United States were involved. To determine whether there is a constitutional question, and, if so, to decide it, requires a statement of the averments of the complaint.

The complainant was the appellant and the defendants were the Safe Deposit & Trust Company of Baltimore, American Bonding Company of Baltimore, Alexander Brown & Sons, a commercial firm established in Baltimore, and Theodore P. Weis, sheriff of the city of Baltimore. It was alleged that the complainant was the owner of coupon bonds of $29,000 issued by the New York Central & Hudson River R. R., and of $156,000 of bonds issued by the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, & Omaha Railway Company, [27] a specified amount of the bonds being registered in the name of a minor son and a stated amount being likewise registered in the name of a minor daughter of the complainant. It was averred that the bonds were in a safe deposit box in the vault of the defendant Safe Deposit & Trust Company, "where your orator, by means of a guardianship proceeding in the orphans' court of Baltimore, which has since been declared illegal and void, was induced to place said bonds, said box being rented and standing recorded on the books of the said Safe Deposit Company in the joint names of Messrs. Alexander Brown & Sons and the American Bonding Company; that for the purposes of such guardianship proceeding your orator had, in the year 1908, been required by the said American Bonding Company as surety on your orator's bond in said guardianship proceeding to agree not to remove the said bonds without the consent of said surety; and had further been required by said surety to consent that said surety and said Alexander Brown & Sons should only have joint access to said bonds and the same for the sole purpose of enabling said Alexander Brown & Sons to remove interest warrants from said bonds during the said guardianship, and forward the same for payment to the city of New York as they became due.

"That in December, 1909, the court of appeals of Maryland, by a decree founded upon personal jurisdiction over all the parties to said guardianship proceeding, declared the said guardianship and certain releases given by your orator in connection therewith null and void; that by said adjudication, the said suretyship of the said American Bonding Company of Baltimore was extinguished, and that neither said Bonding Company nor said Alexander Brown & Sons have, since said adjudication, had any right of access to or other right or control whatsoever in, over, or as to said safe deposit box and the contents of the same, and said adjudication has established the [28] lack of jurisdiction over said property on the part of the courts which had so undertaken to deal therewith.

"That your orator is entitled to the immediate possession of the said evidences of debt, to wit, registered bonds, for all purposes, and is in urgent need of them for the purpose of causing said debts to be transferred upon the books of the debtor corporations in the state of New York to the name of your orator, or at his option, of surrendering said bonds to the said corporations respectively in exchange for the issuance to your orator of other evidences of said debts, to take the place of said bonds now so registered, as he would have done in the year 1908 but for the illegal guardianship proceeding already referred to.

"That your orator has been, since the month of October, 1908, and still is, the true lessee of said box, the rental of which has been paid with funds furnished by your orator, and, as above shown, at all times owner of the contents thereof; that said Alexander Brown & Sons have not been and are not in any manner responsible either for said box or for the custody of the contents of the same, or in or for any matter growing out of the arrangement under which said box was rented and said registered bonds placed therein; that as to the American Bonding Company, it has had no connection with or interest in the rental of said box or the custody of the contents of the same except as surety of your orator upon his bond as guardian, which said suretyship was undertaken in the aforesaid illegal guardianship proceeding which has been declared void and set aside."

Digitized by Google

After reciting the provisions of a memorandum agreement between the plaintiff and defendant Brown & Sons and the Bonding Company by which the joint access to the box in which the bonds were deposited should be had for the purpose of cutting the coupons from the bonds and turning them over to the complainant, it was averred that neither the American Bonding Company nor Brown & [29] Sons set up any interest antagonistic to the complainant, but that he was unable to get access to the box where the bonds were deposited without a decree authorizing him to do so, and that such a decree was necessary for the protection of Brown & Sons and the Safe Deposit & Trust Company. It was then averred that the defendant sheriff of Baltimore county "has filed in the superior court of Baltimore, a court of law of the state of Maryland, returns to certain writs of attachment stating that he has seized the aforesaid particular debts under such writs issued out of said court in five suits brought by divers nonresidents of the state of Maryland against your orator upon the ground of your orator's nonresidence in said state, to recover upon divers claims alleged to have arisen out of said state; that the said proceedings of the said defendant sheriff under said writs, purporting under color of the attachment statutes of Maryland and of said writs to seize said debts which are owned by your orator in the state of New York, are illegal and void; that your orator has not been personally served with process in said suits; that said debts have not and cannot be seized under said writs, not being property in the state of Maryland; that the defendant sheriff by his said proceedings under said writs has attempted and is attempting to interfere with said box and its contents, and to encumber your orator's title to said particular debts, and has sought and is seeking to deprive your orator of his property and of the effective control thereof and of the use thereof without due process of law, and to deprive your orator of the equal protection of the laws, in violation of the Constitution of the United States, and particularly of § 1 of the 14th Amendment thereto; that said superior court of Baltimore city has no personal jurisdiction over your orator, and has not gained jurisdiction over the aforesaid box or its contents, or over the debts owned by your orator in the state of New York, and the said defendant sheriff [30] has no lawful authority to impede or seek to impede or hinder your orator in the premises, nor to do any act tending to defeat your orator's control of the said debts or the evidences thereof, or to prevent your orator from securing the relief applied for herein, and which this court has jurisdiction to grant your orator, and that the said unlawful proceedings of the said sheriff, under color of said writs, will, if persisted in, constitute an unlawful interference with the jurisdiction of this court in the premises."

The prayer was that the complainant be decreed to be the lessee of the safe deposit box, and entitled to access to the same, and to withdraw the contents, and that the sheriff be enjoined from in any way interfering with the accomplishment of these results.

The demurrers which were filed to this bill by the respective defendants were based first upon the absence of necessary parties; that is, those in whose behalf the attachments had been issued, as referred to in the bill, and second, because, as the bill discloses that the bonds referred to in the bill were under levy by attachment issued out of the state court, there was no power in the United States court to interfere. The court below rested its decree sustaining the demurrer and dismissing the bill on both these grounds. In disposing of the latter, the court said:

"This court may not take anything, be it safe deposit boxes, bonds, evidences of debt, or what not, out of the custody of a state court. The complainant does not question the general rule. He claims that it is not here applicable. He says that while the superior court has jurisdiction to issue writs of nonresident attachment, the things which its officer has sought to attach in this case are not attachable. It follows, he argues, that this court may and must, when properly applied to, altogether ignore such void proceedings.

"The court of appeals of Maryland has expressly decided [31] that a court of equity may not assume to declare such attachments altogether nugatory. De Bearn v. Winans, 115 Md. 139, 80 Atl. 730.

"See also: De Bearn v. Winans, 115 Md. 604, 80 Atl. 1071; De Bearn v. De Bearn, 115 Md. 668, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 421, 81 Atl. 223; De Bearn v. De Bearn, 115 Md. 685, 81 Atl. 222.

Digitized by Google

"It was there decided that such evidences of debt or bonds as are involved in the pending case may be attached in Maryland.

"Neither the superior court of Baltimore city nor this court have any control over the other. If it should be here held that the things in question were not attachable, that court would be under no obligation to subordinate its judgment to that of this court. A conflict of jurisdiction would follow. The rule that one court of concurrent jurisdiction may not attempt to exercise control over anything which has previously come into and still is in the control of the other court is intended to render such unseemly controversies impossible. The facts of this case bring it within both the letter and spirit of that rule."

After further pointing out that ample remedy would be afforded the complainant by asserting his constitutional rights, if any, in the state court where the attachments were pending, and, if such Federal rights were denied, by prosecuting error to this court, the court observed:

"Technically, as this is a hearing upon demurrer, this court may not be entitled to take judicial notice of the fact that to all the cases in 111 and 115 Md., cited in this opinion, the complainant was a party. The conclusions herein stated have been reached, therefore, without considering whether the question as to whether a court of equity may interfere with these attachment proceedings, and whether the evidences of debt are, under the circumstances of this case, attachable, have been decided contrary to the contention of the complainant in a case to which he was a party, and which had reference to the very attachment [32] proceedings which he seeks here to have declared invalid."

We are not constrained by the limitations which the lower court considered prevented it from taking notice of the judicial proceedings in the courts of Maryland in which the attachments issued. We say this because, as was declared in Bienville Water Supply Co. v. Mobile, 186 U. S. 212, 217, 46 L. ed. 1132, 1134, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820: "We take judicial notice of our own records, and, if not res judicata, we may, on the principle of stare decisis, rightfully examine and consider the decision in the former case as affecting the consideration of this;" and again, as further declared in Dimmick v. Tompkins, 194 U. S. 540, 548, 48 L. ed. 1110, 1113, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780: "The court has the right to examine its own records and take judicial notice thereof in regard to proceedings formerly had therein by one of the parties to the proceedings now before it." Availing of this power and making reference to the records of this court, it appears that the controversy as to the validity of the attachments with which the appeal before us is concerned has, on three different occasions, been here considered. De Bearn v. De Bearn, 225 U. S. 695, 56 L. ed. 1261, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 834; De Bearn v. De Bearn, 231 U. S. 741, ante, 462, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; De Bearn v. Winans, 232 U. S. 719, ante, 813, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601. In the first, an attempt to bring a controversy on the subject here was dismissed because of its prematurity. In the other two cases it appears that at the time the bill in this case was filed, the complainant was engaged in litigating in the courts of the state of Maryland the very grounds of opposition to the attachments which were made the basis of the bill in this case, and that after filing such bill he continued such litigation in the state courts, and when, after a full consideration of his grounds of complaint, both state and Federal, in the court of last resort of Maryland, there were decisions against him, error was prosecuted from this court because of the asserted existence of the Federal rights which were alleged in the bill now before us. The records disclose that in both cases motions to dismiss [33] for want of jurisdiction were sustained by per curiam opinions, reference being made in the one case (231 U. S. 741) to authorities upholding the doctrine that no power to review exists in a case where, although there is a Federal question, the conclusion of the court below rests upon a non-Federal or state ground completely adequate to sustain it, and in the other case (232 U. S. 719) the motion to dismiss was sustained by authorities to the same effect, and additionally upon authorities establishing the rule that a wholly frivolous and unsubstantial Federal question was not adequate to give jurisdiction.

Indeed, the record in the case last cited establishes that in that proceeding the appellant filed a pleading in which he expressly set up the pendency of the bill in the United States court which is now before us, and urged the supposed Federal rights upon which the bill was rested as a basis for relief.

From these considerations it obviously comes to pass that the supposed constitutional questions upon which our right to directly review the action of the court below can alone rest have been already here twice decided to be so wanting in merit as not to afford ground for jurisdiction. It is true that the cases referred to involved the jurisdiction to review the judgments of the court of last resort of the state of Maryland under § 237 of the Judicial Code [36 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 231. U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227] out that difference affords no reason for distinguishing this case from the previous cases, since it is impossible to conceive that the assertion of an alleged constitutional right which was decided to be so unsubstantial and frivolous as to afford no ground to review the action of the state court of Maryland concerning the attachments should yet now be held to be of sufficient merit to give jurisdiction to directly review the action of the court below in refusing to interfere with the same attachments. Applying the previous cases, therefore, it plainly follows that we have no jurisdiction on this writ of error, and therefore [34] our duty is to dismiss. Before, however, discharging that duty without going into the labyrinth of pleadings, of motions, of supplementary papers, etc., etc., with which this and the previous records before us abound, and by the use of which this case has been taken many times to the court of last resort of Maryland, and is here now for the fourth time, as it is in the "interest of the Republic that litigation should come to an end," we pause to say that considering again the whole field, and weighing every Federal right asserted, we see no ground for doubting the correctness of the conclusions which constrained us to hold that the controversies presented in the previous cases were beyond our cognizance. Briefly speaking, it is to be observed that the error which in this and the previous cases underlies all the assumptions of Federal right arises from disregarding the distinction between a controversy as to whether the attachments were authorized by the law of the state and the contention as to the power in the state to have given authority to its courts to issue such attachments. The two are widely different, the one being concerned with what state action has been taken and the other with the power of the state to confer authority to take such action. Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229. As to the first, there is no room for controversy, since the decisions of the Maryland court of last resort have explicitly declared not only that the attachments were authorized by the state law, but that as the result of the authority to issue them there was imposed upon the state courts the duty under the facts disclosed by the record to exert their authority to the full extent required to protect the rights of the attaching creditors by seeing to it that the property attached, which was in the custody of the court and subject to its control, be not permitted to be removed or taken out of the reach of that authority for the purpose of frustrating the rights arising from the attachments. The second, the question of power of the [35] state of Maryland to authorize its courts to perform the duty thus cast upon them, would seem to be free from all possible doubt in view of the following facts: (a) that the coupon bonds were in the state, deposited under the directions of the state court in the exercise of admittedly lawful powers; (b), that in that situation it was impossible to remove them from the state without obtaining the authority of the state courts,—an authority which was unaffected by the fact that the bonds were registered, since they were so registered solely because of the previous action of the state court,—an action which the court of last resort of Maryland decided was no obstacle to the attachments of the bonds, since the effect of the state law empowering the attachments was to impose upon the court the duty of seeing to it that this registry should be removed to the extent necessary to protect the rights of attaching creditors. And the force of these suggestions is illustrated by bearing in mind that the denial of all judicial power by the state over the bonds by way of attachment is asserted by the appellant in a proceeding in which he is the actor, invoking the exertion of the state judicial power for the purpose of enabling him to obtain possession of the bonds and do away with the effect of the previous state decree concerning the deposit and registry of the same.

Digitized by Google

Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

---

[36] METZGER MOTOR CAR COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
JOHN W. PARROTT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 36-42.)

Appeal — matters arising after decision below — state statute held invalid pending appeal.

A judgment of a Federal district court based solely upon a state statute creating the cause of action, which otherwise would not exist, will be reversed by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error, where, since the trial of the case, the statute has been held by the highest state court to violate the Constitution.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. n, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 309.]

Argued March 18 and 19, 1914. Decided April 6, 1914.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Michigan to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in a personal-injury action. Reversed.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Henry L. Lyster argued the cause, and, with Mr. John C. Donnelly, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Silas B. Spier argued the cause, and, with Mr. Thomas A. E. Weadock, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court, by Mr. Chief Justice White:

This action, brought in the state court to recover for personal injuries and other damages, was removed by the defendant to the circuit court of the United States on the ground of adverse citizenship, and there tried, resulting in a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff. Direct error is prosecuted to that court (now the district court) because of the asserted repugnancy of the following statute of the state upon which the recovery was based, to the due process clause of the 14th Amendment:

"The owner of a motor vehicle shall be liable for any injury occasioned by the negligent operation by any person of such motor vehicle, whether such negligence consists in violations of the provision of a statute of this state, or in the failure to observe such ordinary care in such operation as the rules of the common law require; but such owner shall not be so liable in case such motor vehicle shall have been stolen." [2 How. Anno. Stat. 1913, § 2496.]

The injuries complained of were caused by the negligence [41] of a chauffeur in operating an automobile owned by the defendant company, resulting in a collision on the highway with plaintiff's horses and the cart in which he, with two others, was riding. Although the driver of the automobile was in the employ of the defendant company as a car tester and chauffeur, he was not at the time of the accident (about midnight) engaged in the company's business, but had taken the car without the knowledge or consent of the company, and in violation of its rules, for the purpose of pleasure-riding with his friends. Under these facts, aside from the statute, the court below charged the jury, and it is not here disputed, that the plaintiff could not recover under the law of Michigan for the injuries suffered, and hence that his right to recover, if any, was exclusively under the statute.

The duty of considering the contention here urged, the unconstitutionality of the statute, is rendered unnecessary by decisions of the supreme court of the state since the trial of this case, in which the statute was held void because in conflict with both the state and the United States Constitutions. Daugherty v. Thomas, 174 Mich. 371, 45 L.R.A.(N.S.) 699, 140 N. W. 615; Barry v. Metzger Motor Car Co. 175 Mich. 466, 141 N. W. 529. We say this because while it is undoubtedly our duty to decide for ourselves whether the statute is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, we must accept the ruling of the state court as to the repugnancy of the statute to the state Constitution. As the effect of the state decision on that subject is to determine that ab initio the statute was void, and as there was admittedly no right to recover in the absence of a valid statute, the obvious duty to reverse results.

There is a suggestion in the argument that prior to the decisions of the state court to which we have referred, which expressly held the statute to be unconstitutional, there had been a ruling of that court deciding it not to be repugnant to the state Constitution. Johnson v. Sergeant, 168 Mich. 444, 134 N. W. 468, 2 N. C. C. A. 334. [42] But it is to be observed that as to that ruling the court in the Daugherty Case declared that the statement as to the constitutionality of the statute made in the Johnson Case was merely obiter. Even, however, if this were not the case, we cannot now treat as existing a statute which the court of last resort of the state declares cannot be enforced compatibly with the state Constitution. And as here there is no claim of rights acquired under contract in the light of a settled rule of state interpretation of a state law or Constitution, there is no foundation whatever for upholding assumed rights which can alone rest upon the existence of a state statute when the state court of last resort has held there is no valid statute to sustain them.

Reversed.

GRAND TRUNK WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

GEORGE LINDSAY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 42–50.)

Pleading — necessity of invoking statute — employers' liability.

1. A case which, by allegations and proof, is brought within the Federal Employers' liability act of April 22, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322), is controlled by that act, although its provisions may not have been referred to in express terms in the pleadings or pressed at the trial.

[For other cases, see Pleading, II; Evidence, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Note.—On the constitutionality, application, and effect of the Federal employers' liability act—see note to Lamphere v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 38.

Digitized by Google

Trial — refusing requested instructions — contributory negligence — employers' liability act.

2. A request to charge as a matter of law that a switchman whose arm was crushed between two cars moving in interstate commerce could not recover from the carrier if he gave the "come ahead" signal as he entered between the cars to examine the defective coupling mechanism is properly refused as incompatible with the provisions of the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, establishing the rule of comparative negligence.

[For other cases, see Trial, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Master and servant — contributory negligence — employers' liability act.

3. The contributory negligence of a switchman whose arm was crushed between two cars moving in interstate commerce while he was examining the defective coupling mechanism which had several times refused to work automatically by impact, as required by the Federal safety appliance act, does not operate even to diminish his recovery, in view of the proviso to the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, § 3, establishing the rule of comparative negligence, that "no such employee who may be injured or killed shall be held to have been guilty of contributory negligence in any case where the violation by such common carrier of any statute enacted for the safety of employees contributed to the injury or death of such employee."

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 425.]

Argued and submitted February 27, 1914.
Decided April 6, 1914.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Illinois in favor of plaintiff in a personal-injury action brought by an employee against a carrier. Affirmed.

See same case below, 120 C. C. A. 166, 201 Fed. 836.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George W. Kretzinger, Jr., argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Plain error was committed by the lower courts within the meaning of the rulings of this court in Chicago Junction R. Co. v. King, 222 U. S. 222, 56 L. ed. 173, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Brown, 229 U. S. 317, 37 L. ed. 1204, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840, 3 N. C. C. A. 826.

The judgment against defendant, having been obtained upon the trial by plaintiff upon the theory of a violation by defendant of the safety appliance act, cannot be sustained upon appeal upon a different theory, —one which defendant was not called upon to defend.

Hatcher v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co. 106 C. C. A. 225, 184 Fed. 23; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Estill, 147 U. S. 592, 37 L. ed. 292, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444; San Juan Light & Transit Co. v. Requena, 224 U. S. 97, 56 L. ed. 683, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Greenwood Grocery Co. 227 U. S. 1, 3, 57 L. ed. 389, 391, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Hesterly, 228 U. S. 702, 57 L. ed. 1031, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703.

It is the duty of the court, upon proper request, to give the jury a statement of any distinct doctrine or proposition which is fairly and justly applicable to the issues or to an important phase of the case.

Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Wilson, 22 C. C. A. 101, 46 U. S. App. 214, 76 Fed. 127.

If it be considered, as held by the court of appeals, that plaintiff's act in giving the signal was contributory negligence alone, still contributory negligence is a complete defense to the action under the safety appliance act.

Delk v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 220 U. S. 580, 55 L. ed. 590, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 220 U. S. 590, 55 L. ed. 596, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561.

Signals were given by the plaintiff and obeyed by the engineer, and the cars were moved under plaintiff's orders. If the plaintiff gave the "come ahead" signal and then went between the cars, whether for the purpose of adjusting the coupler or crossing to the other side of the track, or if he gave the "come ahead" signal for any purpose and then went between the cars, his act was the sole and moving cause of his injury. Clearly the engineer was not guilty of any negligence in obeying plaintiff's signal. The moving and proximate cause was therefore plaintiff's own act.

Thornton, Federal Employers' Liability & Safety Appliance Acts, p. 104, § 72a.

It is not necessary that the proximate cause of an injury be necessarily a negligent act. Any act or omission which is the direct cause of an injury, or the last conscious agent in producing it, is the proximate cause thereof.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Calhoun, 213 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 671, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Mealer, 1 C. C. A. 633, 6 U. S. App. 86, 50 Fed. 725; Miner v. McNamara, 81 Conn. 690, 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 477, 72 Atl. 138; Scheffer v. Washington City, V. M. & G. S. R. Co. 105 U. S. 249, 26 L. ed. 1070; Union P. R. Co. v. Callaghan, 6 C. C. A. 205, 12

Digitized by Google

U. S. App. 541, 56 Fed. 988; Cooley, Torts, 3d ed. 99.

It will be noted that the plaintiff was injured, not by negligence in whole or in part of defendant's officers, agents, or employees, but, as he contends, by reason of a defect in the automatic coupling apparatus of one of its cars. This distinction was lost sight of by the court of appeals in its opinion in this case, and we think in this respect error was committed by the court of appeals.

Chicago & R. I. R. Co. v. McKean, 40 Ill. 229; Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Blackman, 63 Ill. 117; Caswell v. Worth, 5 El. & Bl. 849, 25 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 121, 2 Jur. N. S. 116, 4 Week. Rep. 231.

The court erred in refusing the instruction requested by defendant as to the weight to be attributed to the testimony of the car inspector.

Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 249, 177 Fed. 630.

Mr. James C. McShane submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The first count is clearly based upon both the safety appliance act and the Federal employers' liability act.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Brown, 107 C. C. A. 301, 185 Fed. 80, 229 U. S. 317, 57 L. ed. 1204, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840, 3 N. C. C. A. 826; Johnson v. Great Northern R. Co. 102 C. C. A. 89, 178 Fed. 643.

The safety appliance act merely prescribes the carrier's duty, and it is settled that the breach of such duty is negligence per se.

Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 14, 51 L. ed. 687, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407.

The allegations that plaintiff was in the exercise of ordinary care were inserted so as to make the counts good in the event that the employers' liability act should be declared invalid, but since the act has been sustained these allegations may be treated as surplusage.

Lucas v. Peoria & E. R. Co. 171 Ill. App. 1; Carterville Coal Co. v. Abbott, 181 Ill. 495, 55 N. E. 131, 7 Am. Neg. Rep. 40.

What is the proximate cause of an injury is ordinarily a question for the jury. It is not a question of science or of legal knowledge. It is to be determined as a fact, in view of the circumstances of fact attending it.

Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 24 L. ed. 256.

It is evident that, as plaintiff's contributory negligence would not defeat recovery, defendant is seeking to defeat plaintiff's action merely by referring to his alleged conduct by another name. This it cannot do.

Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Chicago Junction R. Co. v. King, 94 C. C. A. 657, 169 Fed. 372; Southern P. R. Co. v. Allen, 48 Tex. Civ. App. 66, 106 S. W. 441.

In cases like this, where a statute relieves the injured servant from the charge of contributory negligence, his conduct, so far as the question of proximate cause is concerned, is treated the same as the conduct of a stranger.

Brunnworth v. Kerens-Donnewald Coal Co. 260 Ill. 215, 13 N. E. 178; Freeman v. Swan, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 143 S. W. 724.

The intervening act of an employee in going between the cars to operate defective couplers is but a result or consequence of the defective condition of the couplers, and it is such a result or consequence as the carrier might reasonably anticipate would follow from the use of defective or inoperative couplers, and hence such conduct upon the part of the employee does not break the causal connection between the defective and inoperative condition of the coupler and his injury.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Siler, 229 Ill. 390, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 819, 82 N. E. 362, 11 Ann. Cas. 368.

A trial court is not bound to submit any question to the jury, if, notwithstanding the verdict, it would be compelled to set aside the finding, as not being supported by substantial evidence.

Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. Price, 38 C. C. A. 243, 97 Fed. 423.

The great preponderance, if not all, of the evidence, showed that defendant was guilty of a violation of the safety appliance act; and the clear preponderance, if not all, of the evidence, showed that plaintiff did not give the "come ahead" signal, which was the only conduct upon his part complained of; and in view of the evidence, and of the jury's general verdict and special findings, it is practically certain that the modification of the requested instruction did not affect the result, and that therefore the error, if any, was harmless. Judgments should not be reversed for alleged errors of this kind.

United States Smelting Co. v. Parry, 92 C. C. A. 165, 166 Fed. 407; Press Pub. Co. v. Monteith, 103 C. C. A. 508, 180 Fed. 356.

It was a question for the jury to determine as to whether negative evidence was entitled to the same consideration as positive testimony, and it was not the right or duty of the court to so declare as a matter of law.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Feehan, 149 Ill. 212, 36 N. E. 1036.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The right of the plaintiff, who is defendant in error here, to recover for an alleged personal injury, was stated in two counts. In both, the wrong was alleged to have been occasioned by the negligence of the railway company, while it was engaged in carrying on interstate commerce, and while the plaintiff was employed by it in such commerce. In the first count, however, the act of Congress known as the safety appliance act [27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174] was expressly declared on. For the purposes of the writ of error which was prosecuted by the railroad company from the circuit court of appeals, numerous assignments of error were made and were all disposed of by the court in a full opinion. 120 C. C. A. 166, 201 Fed. 836. In view of the complexion of the case as here presented we need address ourselves to only one of such assignments, and to state the facts only so far as essential to its consideration.

The proof showed that the plaintiff was one of a crew working a switch engine, and that in a yard near Chicago such engine, coupled with four loaded freight cars, moving [45] in interstate commerce, were held in order to make a coupling with a number of other loaded freight cars moving in interstate commerce, to the end that an interstate train bound eastward might be made up and depart. When by impact it was attempted to make the coupling, the cars failed to couple automatically, and after several efforts to cause them to do so, the plaintiff as switchman walked along beside the end of the car as it approached again the point of coupling, signaled to the engineer to stand fast, and entered between the cars for the purpose of ascertaining and remedying if possible the cause of the trouble. While between the cars and engaged in handling the coupler, the cars were pushed up and he was caught and his arm crushed. There was some proof tending to show that the switchman stepped in before the moving cars had entirely stopped, and some that he gave a signal to come ahead as he stepped in; but there was evidence tending to show to the contrary, and to support the inference that the act of the engineer in moving up was the result of a signal with a lantern, for it was dark, mistakenly given by some other employee in the vicinity, or a mistake of the engineer in misconceiving the movement of a lantern in the hands of some of those who were standing around. There was evidence tending to show that the coupler had been inspected shortly before the accident and no defect was observed by the inspector, but it was shown without dispute that it was defective at the time of the accident, and would not couple automatically because of a bent pin.

Among the errors assigned in the court below was the refusal of the trial court to give an instruction relating to the action of the switchman in entering between the cars and his supposed giving of the come-ahead signal. This instruction, while leaving to the jury the determination of whether the switchman, in going between the cars to examine the coupling mechanism, gave a come-ahead signal, [46] nevertheless asked the court to instruct as a matter of law that if he had done so, his act was the proximate cause of his injury, and therefore he could not recover. Instead of giving this instruction the court modified it by leaving it to the jury to determine whether, under all the circumstances, the action of the switchman had been reasonably careful. The court, in its general charge on this subject, said:

"If, after he started to go between the cars, he has done something which was carelessly done, or which you can say from a preponderance of the evidence contributed approximately to the accident, then he cannot recover. . . . If there be contributory negligence at all, it depends not upon his assuming the risk under the circumstances in evidence in this case, but upon the care with which he acted while in the performance of the work which he assumed.

"You are further instructed that if you believe from the preponderance of the evidence that the plaintiff gave a 'come-ahead' signal to the switchman or engineer,—one or both,—and after that went between the cars and was injured, then you have a right to consider whether the giving of the 'come-ahead' signal by the plaintiff was the proximate cause of the injury as distinguished from the condition of the coupler, and if you find that, under the circumstances, the 'come-ahead' signal was the proximate cause of the injury, then your verdict must be for the defendant.

"You are also instructed that where there is a safe and a dangerous way of doing an act, and the servant uses a dangerous way and is injured thereby, he is charged with negligence on his part and may not recover."

The court below disposed of the refusal of the trial court to charge as a matter of law that there was no right to recover if the proof showed that the switchman had given the "come-ahead" signal, upon the ground that there [47] was no foundation for giving it, as there was no evidence whatever tending to show that such signal was given by the switchman. A petition for rehearing was, however, granted, and after a reargument, the particular objection concerning the charge referred to, as well as other matters, was disposed of in an additional opinion. As to the charge referred to, the court held that a mistake had been committed in the first opinion in saying that there was not any evidence tending to show that the switchman had given the "come-ahead" signal as he entered, and therefore the ground upon which the previous ruling had been based was inadequate. It was nevertheless held that the ruling as previously made was right, because the request to charge as a matter of law that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover if it was found that he had given the "come-ahead" signal as he entered to examine the mechanism was incompatible with the rule of comparative negligence established by the employers' liability act. [35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 911, p. 1322]. On this subject the court said:

Digitized by Google

"If, under the employers' liability act, plaintiff's negligence, contributing with defendant's negligence to the production of the injury, does not defeat the cause of action, but only lessens the damages, and if the cause of action is established by showing that the injury resulted 'in whole or in part' from defendant's negligence, the statute would be nullified by calling plaintiff's act the proximate cause and then defeating him, when he could not be defeated by calling his act contributory negligence. For his act was the same act, by whatever name it be called. It is only when plaintiff's act is the sole cause—when defendant's act is no part of the causation—that defendant is free from liability under the act."

As in the argument at bar reliance is solely placed, except in one particular, upon error which is assumed to have arisen from the refusal of the trial court to give the charge previously referred to, and the judgment of the court [48] below in approving this action of the trial court upon the theory that it was right in view of the provisions of the employers' liability act, we come to consider this subject.

(a) In the trial court it is insisted the operation and effect of the employers' liability act upon the rights of the parties was not involved because that act was not in express terms referred to in the pleadings or pressed at the trial, and was hence not considered by the court in acting upon the requested charge, and therefore, it is urged, it was error in the reviewing court to test the correctness of the ruling of the trial court by the provisions of the employers' liability act instead of confining the subject exclusively to the safety appliance law and the rules of the common law governing negligence. But the want of foundation for this contention becomes apparent when it is considered that in the complaint it was expressly alleged and in the proof it was clearly established that the injury complained of was suffered in the course of the operation of interstate commerce, thus bringing the case within the employers' liability act. It is true that to avoid the irresistible consequences arising from this situation it is insisted in argument that as no express claim was made under the employers' liability act, therefore there was no right in the plaintiff to avail of the benefits of its provisions, or in the court to apply them to the case before it. But this simply amounts to saying that the employers' liability act may not be applied to a situation which is within its provisions unless in express terms the provisions of the act be formally invoked. Aside from its manifest unsoundness, considered as an original proposition, the contention is not open, as it was expressly foreclosed in Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Duvall, 225 U. S. 477, 482, 56 L. ed. 1171, 1174, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790.

(b) Coming to consider the proposition that although the case be governed by the employers' liability act error [49] was nevertheless committed in sustaining the action of the trial court in refusing to give the requested instruction, we think that even if, for the sake of the argument, it be assumed that the proof brought the case within the principle of comparative negligence established by the employers' liability act, the correctness of the ruling of the court below is clearly made manifest by the reasoning given by the court for its conclusion. But having regard to the state of the proof as to the defect in the coupling mechanism, its failure to automatically work by impact after several efforts to bring about that result, all of which preceded the act of the switchman in going between the cars, in the view most favorable to the railroad, the case was one of concurring negligence; that is, was one where the injury complained of was caused both by the failure of the railway company to comply with the safety appliance act and by the contributing negligence of the switchman in going between the cars. Under this condition of things it is manifest that the charge of the court was greatly more favorable to the defendant company than was authorized by the statute for the following reasons: Although by the 3d section of the employers' liability act a recovery is not prevented in a case of contributory negligence, since the statute substitutes for it a system of comparative negligence, whereby the damages are to be diminished in the proportion which his negligence bears to the combined negligence of himself and the carrier,—in other words, the carrier is to be exonerated from a proportional part of the damages corresponding to the amount of negligence attributable to the employee (Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Earnest, 229 U. S. 114, 122, 57 L. ed. 1096, 1101, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654),—nevertheless, under the terms of a proviso to the section, contributory negligence on the part of the employee does not operate even to diminish the recovery where the injury has been occasioned in part by the failure of the carrier to comply with the exactions of an act of Congress [50] enacted to promote the safety of employees. In that contingency the statute abolishes the defense of contributory negligence, not only as a bar to recovery, but for all purposes. The proviso reads:

Digitized by Google

"Provided, That no such employee who may be injured or killed shall be held to have been guilty of contributory negligence in any case where the violation by such common carrier of any statute enacted for the safety of employees contributed to the injury or death of such employee."

The only other objection pressed in the argument at bar concerns an instruction asked and refused by the trial court with reference to the weight to be attributed to the testimony of a car inspector who inspected the coupler in question before the accident. The subject of this asserted error was evidently carefully considered by the trial court and was adversely disposed of by the court below, both in its original and in the opinion on the rehearing. Under these circumstances, without going into detail, in view of the doctrine to be applied to cases of this character as announced in Chicago Junction R. Co. v. King, 222 U. S. 222, 56 L. ed. 173, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Brown, 229 U. S. 317, 57 L. ed. 1204, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840, 3 N. C. C. A. 826, we are of the opinion that we need do no more than say that after a careful examination of the subject, we are of the opinion that no reversible error was committed by the court below, and its judgment is therefore affirmed.

Affirmed.

[51] CHARLES CARLESI, alias Charles Carlese, Plff. in Err.,

v.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 51-59.)

States — relation to Federal government — criminal prosecution — second offenders — President's pardon of prior conviction.

No rights under the Federal Constitution are infringed by the provision of N. Y. Penal Law (Consol. Laws, chap. 40), § 1941, under which a person committing a crime against the laws of that state may be punished as a second offender because of a prior conviction of an offense against the United States, notwithstanding a pardon granted by the President of the United States after the convict had completed his term of imprisonment under such prior conviction.

[For other cases, see States, IV. k, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 679.]

Argued March 2, 1914. Decided April 6, 1914.

NOTE.—Pardon as affecting enhanced punishment for later offense.

The authorities are in conflict as to the effect of a pardon upon the liability of the defendant to suffer an enhanced penalty for a subsequent crime.

In a Pennsylvania case an application by the district attorney for the imposition of double the ordinary punishment because of prior conviction was withdrawn because of the fact that the governor had pardoned the defendant for his first offense, whereupon the court said: "Upon reflection I do not feel disposed to sentence the prisoner as for a second offense. It is at least questionable whether it could be done legally, in view of the pardon. Without, however, deciding this point, it is sufficient to say that it would seem to be a harsh administration of the law to visit the prisoner with any of the consequences of an offense for which he has received a full and free pardon from the governor." Com. v. Morrow, 9 Phila. 583.

In Virginia it is expressly decided that pardon of the first offense takes away the right to inflict additional punishment for a second offense under Va. Code 1893, chap. 195, § 25, providing that a convict sentenced to the penitentiary shall have five years added to his term if it is proved that he has before been sentenced in the United States to a like punishment. Edwards v. Com. 78 Va. 39, 49 Am. Rep. 377, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 460. The court says pardon relieved the defendant not only "of the punishment annexed to the offense for which he had been convicted, but of all penalties and consequences except political disabilities growing out of his conviction and sentence. One of those consequences was the liability to which it subjected him to receive the addi-

Digitized by Google

IN ERROR to the Court of General Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of New York in the State of New York, to review a judgment entered pursuant to the mandate of the Court of Appeals of that state, which had affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, First Department, affirming a conviction in the Court of General Sessions of the crime of forgery in the second degree as a second offense. Affirmed.

See same case below in Appellate Division, 154 App. Div. 481, 139 N. Y. Supp. 309; in Court of Appeals, 208 N. Y. 547, 101 N. E. 1114.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Almuth C. Vandiver argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George Gordon Battle, John Caldwell Myers, James E. Brande, Joseph Weber, and J. Joseph Lilly, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

When the President of the United States, acting pursuant to the authority conferred upon him by the Constitution, grants a full pardon for an offense against the United States, the effect of the pardon is to blot out of existence the guilt of the offender, so that, in the eye of the law, he is as innocent as if he had never committed the offense.

Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 380, 18 L. ed. 370.

The pardon of the plaintiff in error by tional punishment prescribed by the statute in case he should be afterwards sentenced to the penitentiary in this state. And that additional punishment has been imposed in this case, not by reason of the sentence for the second offense alone, but in consequence of that sentence and the sentence in the former case. Both causes must exist together to produce the effect contemplated by the statute; in the absence of either, no case is made for the imposition of the additional punishment the statute prescribes. But as the first offense was, in legal contemplation, blotted out, and its consequences removed by the pardon of the governor, it must be regarded for the purposes of this case as though it had never been committed."

---

If imprisonment for a felony is terminated by an unconditional pardon, it is not to be regarded as one of the two former imprisonments for felony required by § 7388–11, 2 Bates's Anno. Stat. to place the accused in the category of habitual criminals. State v. Martin, 59 Ohio St. 212, 43 L.R.A. 94, 69 Am. St. Rep. 762, 52 N. E. 188. And to the same general effect was the decision in State v. Anderson, 7 Ohio N. P. 562, 5 Ohio S. & C. P. Dec. 548.

On the other hand, it is the settled rule in Kentucky that a pardon of a convict does not relieve him from liability for the enhanced punishment provided for by statute for subsequent crimes. Mount v. Com. 2 Duv. 94; Stewart v. Com. 2 Ky. L. Rep. 386; Herndon v. Com. 105 Ky. 197, 88 Am. St. Rep. 303, 48 S. W. 989.

The court in Mount v. Com. supra, says: "The pardon relieved the convict of the entire penalty incurred by the offense pardoned, and nothing else or more. It neither did nor could relieve from any penal consequence resulting from a different offense committed after the pardon, and never pardoned. The increased punishment prescribed by statute for the subsequent offense was no part of the penal consequences of the first offense, but applied exclusively to the last as aggravated by its repetition of the same crime. The legislature, as required by justice and policy, ought to have provided a severer punishment for repeated than for only one crime; and whether it had done so by duplicating for a second offense the punishment of the first, or by any other measure of augmentation, cannot be material. In any aspect the augmented punishment is for the last, and not at all for the first, offense; and, of course, a pardon of the first could in no way or degree operate as a pardon of the last offense, or remission of any portion of the punishment denounced for the perpetration of it."

The reasoning of the Kentucky court is in harmony with all the decisions which sustain statutes of this character against constitutional objections, as they all proceed on the theory that the enhanced penalty is not in any sense a new punishment for the prior offense. If it were, the statutes would violate constitional provisions. Vide notes to Re Miller, 34 L.R.A. 398, and Com. v. McDermott, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 432. But if the statutes are to be upheld on the ground that the enhanced penalty is not a new or additional punishment of the prior offense, a pardon of that offense does not relieve from that penalty.

In agreement with this doctrine, it is held in a New York case that a pardon by the governor of another state of a person there convicted of an offense will not prevent the effect of such former conviction from operating under the New York statute to make him liable to an increased punishment for a subsequent offense in New York. People v. Price, 53 Hun, 185, 6 N. Y. Supp. 833 affirmed on opinion below in 119 N. Y. 650, 23 N. E. 1149.

If, on a trial of the defendant upon an information charging larceny as a second offense, a conditional pardon from the first offense can avail the defendant as a defense to any extent, it constitutes a defense simply in mitigation of the penalty to be imposed on conviction of the second offense, and to avail the defendant as such mitigation of the penalty it should be proven at the trial for such second offense. Henderson v. State, 55 Fla. 36, 46 So. 151.

The fact that a defendant has been pardoned upon one former conviction does not take him out from under the operation of the habitual criminal act, where he has admitted two other convictions. Williams v. People, 196 Ill. 173, 63 N. E. 681.

Digitized by Google

the President of the United States obliterated the first offense, so that the plaintiff in error could not thereafter be prosecuted as a second offender.

De Villeneuve & Carrette, vol. 1825, 1827, pt. 1, p. 135; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 333–380, 381, 18 L. ed. 366–370, 371; Carlisle v. United States, 16 Wall. 147, 151, 21 L. ed. 426, 428; United States v. Wilson, 7 Pet. 150, 159, 160, 8 L. ed. 640, 643, 644; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 584; United States v. Klein, 13 Wall. 128, 147, 20 L. ed. 519, 525; Re Monroe, 46 Fed. 52; United States v. Athens Armory, 35 Ga. 362, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 150, Fed. Cas. No. 14,473; People v. Pease, 3 Johns. Cas. 333; Locklin v. State, — Tex. Crim. Rep. —, 75 S. W. 305; Osborn v. United States, 91 U. S. 474, 477, 23 L. ed. 388, 389; Knote v. United States, 95 U. S. 149, 153, 24 L. ed. 442, 443; 29 Cyc. 1566, 1567; Territory v. Richardson, 9 Okla. 579, 49 L.R.A. 440, 60 Pac. 244, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 552, 10 Okla. 217, 61 Pac. 1135; Knapp v. Thomas, 39 Ohio St. 381, 48 Am. Rep. 462; Diehl v. Rodgers, 169 Pa. 319, 47 Am. St. Rep. 908, 32 Atl. 424; Fite v. State, 114 Tenn. 656, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 520, 88 S. W. 941, 4 Ann. Cas. 1108; Pargoud v. United States, 13 Wall. 156, 20 L. ed. 646; United States v. Padelford, 9 Wall. 531, 19 L. ed. 788; Boyd v. United States, 142 U. S. 450, 454, 35 L. ed. 1077, 1078, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292; 1 Bishop, New Crim. Law, § 919; Edwards v. Com. 78 Va. 39, 49 Am. Rep. 377, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 460; Puryear v. Com. 83 Va. 51, 1 S. E. 512; State v. Martin, 59 Ohio St. 212, 43 L.R.A. 94, 69 Am. St. Rep. 762, 52 N. E. 188; State v. Anderson, 7 Ohio N. P. 562, 5 Ohio S. & C. P. Dec. 548; State v. Williams, 7 Ohio N. P. 562, 5 Ohio S. & C. P. Dec. 545; Easterwood v. State, 34 Tex. Crim. Rep. 410, 31 S. W. 294; Jones v. Board of Registrars, 56 Miss. 766, 31 Am. Rep. 385; Perkins v. Stevens, 24 Pick. 277; Re Deming, 10 Johns. 233, 483; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 589, 590; Cuddington v. Wilkins, Hobart, 81; Leyman v. Latimer, L. R. 3 Exch. Div. 15, 352, 47 L. J. Exch. N. S. 470, 37 L. T. N. S. 819, 26 Week. Rep. 305, 14 Cox, C. C. 51; Hay v. Tower Division, L. R. 24 Q. B. Div. 561, 59 L. J. Mag. Cas. N. S. 79, 62 L. T. N. S. 290, 38 Week. Rep. 414, 54 J. P. 500; Graham v. West Virginia, 224 U. S. 616, 625, 56 L. ed. 917, 921, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583; Armstrong v. United States, 13 Wall. 154, 20 L. ed. 614; Hart v. United States, 118 U. S. 67, 30 L. ed. 97, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Bosworth, 133 U. S. 103, 33 L. ed. 554, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 601, 40 L. ed. 823, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 369, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644.

The pardon granted by the President to the plaintiff in error was full, absolute, and unconditional; and its absolute and unconditional character was in no wise restricted or impaired by the fact that it contained the recital that it was granted "to restore his civil rights."

Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 333, 18 L. ed. 366; Boyd v. United States, 142 U. S. 450, 35 L. ed. 1076, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292.

The pardon should be liberally construed.

Ex parte Hunt, 10 Ark. 286; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 574; 11 Ops. Atty. Gen. 230; People v. Pease, 3 Johns. Cas. 333; Osborn v. United States, 91 U. S. 474, 23 L. ed. 388; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 577.

The pardon obliterated the former conviction, though it was granted after the completion of the term of imprisonment.

24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 594; United States v. Jones, 2 Wheeler, C. C. 451; 9 Ops. Atty. Gen. 478; Singleton v. State, 38 Fla. 297, 34 L.R.A. 251, 56 Am. St. Rep. 177, 21 So. 21; State v. Baptiste, 26 La. Ann. 134; Sutton v. McIlhany, 1 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 235; Stetier's Case, 1 Phila. 302; Boyd v. United States, 142 U. S. 450, 35 L. ed. 1077, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292; State v. Foley, 15 Nev. 69, 37 Am. Rep. 458.

Among the "civil rights" restored to plaintiff in error by the presidential pardon was the right of immunity from punishment as a second offender, common to all other citizens of the community in which he lives.

Bowles v. Habermann, 95 N. Y. 247.

Mr. Robert S. Johnstone argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles S. Whitman and Stanley L. Richter, filed a brief for defendant in error:

It is the second offense alone that is punishable, and that is punished; but the prior conviction, whether it be alleged in the indictment and found by the jury as an ingredient of the crime charged "as a second offense," or ascertained after the plea or verdict, goes to the degree of punishment which may be inflicted for the later crime. The increased punishment is not inflicted for the former crime or criminal act. The idea is that the fact of previous conviction increases the magnitude of his later crime or criminal act.

Graham v. West Virginia, 224 U. S. 616, 623, 56 L. ed. 917, 920, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583; McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389, affirming 173 Mass. 322, 73 Am. St. Rep. 293, 53 N. E. 874; Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 676, 40 L. ed. 301, 302, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179, affirming 121 Mo. 514, 42 Am. St. Rep. 542, 26 S. W. 345; People ex rel. Cosgriff v. Craig, 195 N. Y. 194, 88 N. E. 38; People v. Sickles, 156 N. Y. 547, 51 N. E. 288; People v. Raymond, 96 N. Y. 38, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 124; People v. Price, 53 Hun,

Digitized by Google

189, 119 N. Y. 650, 23 N. E. 1149; People v. Reilly, 49 App. Div. 218, 63 N. Y. Supp. 18, affirmed in 164 N. Y. 600, 59 N. E. 1128; Ross's Case, 2 Pick. 171; People v. Stanley, 47 Cal. 113, 17 Am. Rep. 401; People v. Coleman, 145 Cal. 609, 79 Pac. 283; Rand v. Com. 9 Gratt. 738; Ingalls v. State, 48 Wis. 647, 4 N. W. 785; Mount v. Com. 2 Duv. 93; Herndon v. Com. 105 Ky. 197, 88 Am. St. Rep. 303, 48 S. W. 989.

It has been uniformly held that statutory provisions such as are here involved—

1. Are not void as ex post facto laws, even though the former conviction was had prior to the enactment of the statute permitting the increased punishment.

McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 313, 45 L. ed. 542, 547, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Com. v. Graves, 155 Mass. 164, 16 L.R.A. 256, 29 N. E. 579; Ross's Case, 2 Pick. 169; Re Miller, 110 Mich. 676, 34 L.R.A. 398, 64 Am. St. Rep. 376, 68 N. W. 990; Ex parte Gutierrez, 45 Cal. 429; Rand v. Com. 9 Gratt. 738; Blackburn v. State, 50 Ohio St. 428, 36 N. E. 18; People v. Raymond, 32 Hun, 123, affirmed in 96 N. Y. 38, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 124.

2. Are valid as against objections that they impose cruel and unusual punishments.

Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 677, 40 L. ed. 301, 303, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; People v. Stanley, 47 Cal. 113, 17 Am. Rep. 401; State v. Hodgson, 66 Vt. 134, 28 Atl. 1089; Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. ed. 519, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 467, 35 L. ed. 226, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

3. Do not infringe constitutional provisions against double jeopardy, the increased punishment being inflicted solely for the later crime, which is aggravated by the fact of the prior conviction.

Graham v. West Virginia, 224 U. S. 616, 56 L. ed. 917, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583; Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 677, 40 L. ed. 301, 303, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 313, 45 L. ed. 542, 547, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; People v. Sickles, 156 N. Y. 548, 51 N. E. 288; Kelly v. People, 115 Ill. 583, 56 Am. Rep. 184, 4 N. E. 644, 6 Am. Crim. Rep. 135; Ingalls v. State, 48 Wis. 647, 4 N. W. 785; People v. Lewis, 64 Cal. 401, 1 Pac. 490; People v. Coleman, 145 Cal. 609, 79 Pac. 283.

4. Are valid as against objections that they impose a penalty on crimes committed outside the jurisdiction.

McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389, affirming 173 Mass. 322, 73 Am. St. Rep. 293, 53 N. E. 874; People v. Cæsar, 1 Park. Crim. Rep. 648.

5. Do not deny the equal protection of the laws or due process of law.

Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 40 L. ed. 301, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

It is immaterial whether the "former offense" of which the defendant was convicted was pardoned or not.

8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d. ed. 492; State v. Manicke, 139 Mo. 547, 41 S. W. 223; State v. Austin, 113 Mo. 538, 21 S. W. 31; Evans v. Com. 3 Met. 453; Wood v. People, 53 N. Y. 513; Johnson v. People, 55 N. Y. 512; Mount v. Com. 2 Duv. 93; Stewart v. Com. 2 Ky. L. Rep. 386; Herndon v. Com. 105 Ky. 197, 88 Am. St. Rep. 303, 48 S. W. 989; People v. Price, 53 Hun, 185, 6 N. Y. Supp. 833, 119 N. Y. 650, 23 N. E. 1149; Re Miller, 34 L.R.A. 403, note; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 585, 587.

The prisoner may not even show that the prior conviction was erroneous on his trial for a subsequent offense as a second offender (Kelly v. People, 115 Ill. 583, 56 Am. Rep. 184, 4 N. E. 644, 6 Am. Crim. Rep. 135). Collateral attack on a judgment, except for want of jurisdiction, is not permitted (People ex rel. Hubert v. Kaiser, 206 N. Y. 46, 99 N. E. 195; Andersen v. Treat, 172 U. S. 24, 31, 43 L. ed. 351, 353, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67).

A pardon is an act of grace, proceeding from the power intrusted with the execution of the laws, which exempts the individual on whom it is bestowed, from the punishment the law inflicts for a crime he has committed.

United States v. Wilson, 7 Pet. 150, 160, 8 L. ed. 640, 643; 29 Cyc. "Pardons," p. 1559, note 1; Osborn v. United States, 91 U. S. 474, 477, 23 L. ed. 388, 389; Young v. United States, 97 U. S. 39, 68, 24 L. ed. 992, 1000; Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 591, 638, 40 L. ed. 819, 835, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 369, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Knote v. United States, 95 U. S. 149, 24 L. ed. 442; Re Spenser, 5 Sawy. 195, Fed. Cas. No. 13,234; United States v. Athens Armory, 35 Ga. 344, Fed. Cas. No. 14,473; United States v. Morris, 1 Paine, 206, Fed. Cas. No. 15,816.

A pardon does not annul a judgment of conviction.

Roberts v. State, 30 App. Div. 106, 51 N. Y. Supp. 691, 160 N. Y. 217, 54 N. E. 678; Re an Attorney, 86 N. Y. 563; Baum v. Clause, 5 Hill, 196; Eighmy v. People, 78 N. Y. 333; Cook v. Middlesex County, 26 N. J. L. 333, affirmed in 27 N. J. L. 637; 4 Bl. Com. 402; 23 Ops. Atty. Gen. 360; 1 Ops. Atty. Gen. 359; 2 Wigmore, Ev. § 980, (3), p. 1107; Curtis v. Cochran, 50 N. H. 242; 22 Ops. Atty. Gen. 36.

Digitized by Google

The pardoning power, vested in the executive authority by the Constitution, is logically vested in that branch of the government, because it is executive in its nature, being practically a suspension of the execution of the judgment; but it is fundamental that the executive branch of the government is not clothed with judicial authority, nor authorized to perform judicial functions.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. pp. 162, 128 et seq; Roberts v. State, 30 App. Div. 106, 51 N. Y. Supp. 691, 160 N. Y. 217, 54 N. E. 678.

One of the basic principles upon which our system of government, both state and Federal, is founded, is that the judicial, legislative, and executive branches thereof are each supreme in the exercise of the functions allotted to them, and that none of these branches of government can interfere with the functions of either of the others. That, we take it, is fundamental, except in so far as the power of interference is expressly conferred by constitutional provision or due legislative enactment.

Re Davies, 168 N. Y. 101, 56 L.R.A. 855, 61 N. E. 118; Ware v. Hylton, 3 Dall. 199, 266, 1 L. ed. 568, 596; 6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 1006, 1008; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 557; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, 190, 26 L. ed. 377, 386; United States v. Klein, 13 Wall. 128, 147, 148, 20 L. ed. 519, 525, 526; Black, Const. Law, pp. 91, 121, 122, 322; 2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 307; 2 Cyc. 284, 285.

There is no difference between a President's pardon and that of a governor.

People v. Bowen, 43 Cal. 439, 13 Am. Rep. 148; Ex parte Powell, 73 Ala. 517, 49 Am. Rep. 71; Hunnicutt v. State, 18 Tex. App. 517, 51 Am. Rep. 330; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 565; 6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 1010; Ex parte Wells, 18 How. 307, 15 L. ed. 421; United States v. Wilson, 7 Pet. 150, 8 L. ed. 640.

The limitations imposed by the Federal Constitution are limitations on the powers of the Federal government only, except in so far as it contains express limitations on the powers of the states.

Barron v. Baltimore, 7 Pet. 243, 250, 8 L. ed. 672, 675; Fox v. Ohio, 5 How. 410, 12 L. ed. 213; Smith v. Maryland, 18 How. 71, 76, 15 L. ed. 269, 271; Livingston v. Moore, 7 Pet. 469, 8 L. ed. 751; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588; Presser v. Illinois, 116 U. S. 252, 265, 29 L. ed. 615, 619, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580; Spies v. Illinois, 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21, 22; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 46.

Within the sphere of the enumerated powers which have been granted by the Constitution to the Federal government, that government is, of course, supreme; and no state can pass or enforce a law which, by its necessary effect and operation, usurps a power granted by the Constitution to the government of the United States. In such case, where a state law comes in conflict with a function vested exclusively in the Federal government, under which the Federal government had acted, the state law must yield (McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 60, 49 L. ed. 78, 97, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, 1 Ann. Cas. 561). But the conflict must be manifest, and the state law inconsistent with the Federal law, to render it invalid.

But except in so far as the people of the states have surrendered powers to the general government, the power of the state is supreme. It is subject to no limitations, except those expressly placed upon it by its own or the Federal Constitution.

Ware v. Hylton, 3 Dall. 199, 224, 1 L. ed. 568, 579; Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. 657, 720, 9 L. ed. 1233, 1258; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 304, 325, 4 L. ed. 97, 102; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 387, 1 L. ed. 648, 649; Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. 419, 435, 1 L. ed. 440, 447; Com. v. Klaus, 145 App. Div. 802, 130 N. Y. Supp. 713.

The police power of the state, which extends to all the great public needs (Noble State Bank v. Haskell, 219 U. S. 104, 111, 55 L. ed. 112, 116, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1062, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 186, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 487), reserved by the states, includes within its scope the right to declare what shall be a proper punishment for offenses against its laws, and its action in that respect is not subject to Federal interference.

McDonald v. Com. 173 Mass. 328, 73 Am. St. Rep. 293, 53 N. E. 874, affirmed in 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. ed. 519, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; Com. v. Murphy, 165 Mass. 66, 30 L.R.A. 734, 52 Am. St. Rep. 496, 42 N. E. 504, 10 Am. Crim. Rep. 67; People v. Sickles, 156 N. Y. 541, 51 N. E. 288; People v. Price, 53 Hun, 185, 6 N. Y. Supp. 833, 119 N. Y. 650, 23 N. E. 1149; Barker v. People, 3 Cow. 704, 15 Am. Dec. 322; Coffey v. Harlan County, 204 U. S. 659, 662, 663, 51 L. ed. 666, 668, 669, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305.

It is within the acknowledged power of every legislature to declare what shall be evidence, and the effect of that evidence in the courts of its own government. The only limitation is that there must be some fair and logical relationship between the factum probans and the factum probandum of which it is declared to be evidential.

Adams v. New York, 192 U. S. 585, 599,

Digitized by Google

48 L. ed. 575, 581, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 729, 37 L. ed. 905, 918, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 262, 349, 6 L. ed. 622, 653; Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U. S. 219, 238, 55 L. ed. 191, 200, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145; People v. Cannon, 139 N. Y. 32, 36 Am. St. Rep. 668, 34 N. E. 759.

It is always open to a defendant to show that he was not the person who was previously convicted, so that he may meet the main fact produced against him. There is no denial of due process.

People v. Sickles, 156 N. Y. 541, 51 N. E. 288; Coffey v. Harlan County, 204 U. S. 659, 663, 51 L. ed. 666, 668, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U. S. 219, 238, 55 L. ed. 191, 200, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145; Graham v. West Virginia, 224 U. S. 616, 56 L. ed. 917, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583.

The situation here is analogous to that in the Hawker Case (Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 42 L. ed. 1002, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573). See also People v. Sickles, 156 N. Y. 541, 51 N. E. 288.

A pardon by the President does not remove disabilities imposed by state laws.

1 Bishop, Crim. Law, § 920; Black, Const. Law, p. 327; Ex parte Hunter, 2 W. Va. 122; Ridley v. Sherbrook, 3 Coldw. 569; 8 Ops. Atty. Gen. 284; 7 Ops. Atty. Gen. 760.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error was accused of the crime "of forgery in the second degree as a second offense." The indictment contained a recital of the prior offense relied on, that is, a conviction in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York, and a sentence for three and one-half years in the penitentiary for the crime of selling and having in possession counterfeit coin. The statute of the state of New York, which was the authority for referring to the prior conviction, was as follows:

"A person who, after having been convicted within this state, of a felony, or an attempt to commit a felony, or of petit larceny, or, under the laws of any other state, government, or country, of a crime which, if committed within this state, would be a felony, commits any crime, within this state, is punishable, upon conviction of such second offense, as follows:

"1. If the subsequent crime is such that, upon a first conviction, the offender might be punished, in the discretion of the court, by imprisonment for life, he must be sentenced to imprisonment in a state prison for life.

[56] "2. If the subsequent crime is such that, upon the first conviction, the offender would be punishable by imprisonment for any term less than his natural life, then such person must be sentenced to imprisonment for a term not less than the longest term nor more than twice the longest term, prescribed upon the first conviction." [Penal Laws (Consol. Laws, chap. 40) § 1941.]

The accused pleaded not guilty, and while admitting the truth of the recitals in the indictment as to his prior conviction, sentence, and service of time in the penitentiary, moved to strike from the indictment all reference to those subjects, and insisted on his right to be tried without at all considering or in any manner referring to the prior conviction and sentence on the ground of a pardon granted to him by the President of the United States after he had completed his term of service under the prior conviction. The pardon relied upon was offered in evidence. On the trial which followed the refusal of the court to grant the motion to strike out or to rule as requested, the alleged Federal right based upon the pardon was further urged upon the court in every conceivable form, and was adversely acted upon, and after conviction was also pressed and adversely passed upon in both the appellate division (154 App. Div. 481, 139 N. Y. Supp. 309) and in the court of appeals of New York (208 N. Y. 547, 101 N. E. 1114). And it is the adverse ruling of the court of appeals concerning such asserted Federal right which forms the sole basis for this writ of error, addressed to the trial court because of the action of the court of appeals in remitting the entire record to that court.

The arguments at bar cover a wider field than is essential to be considered in order to pass upon the question for decision. As the state courts held that the statute directed the consideration of the prior conviction despite the pardon, we must treat the case as if the statute so expressly commanded, and test its repugnancy to the Constitution [57] of the United States upon that assumption. The issue is a narrow one, and involves not the determination of the operation and effect of a pardon within the jurisdiction of the sovereignty granting it, but simply requires it to be decided how far a pardon granted as to an offense committed against the United States operates, so to speak, extraterritorially as a limitation upon the states, excluding them from considering the conviction of a prior and pardoned offense against the United States in a prosecution for a subsequent state offense. It may not be questioned that the states are without right directly or indirectly to restrict the national government in the exertion of its legitimate powers. It is therefore to be conceded that if the act of the state in taking into consideration a prior conviction of an offense committed by the same offender against the laws of the United States despite a pardon was in any just sense a punishment for such prior crime, that the act of the state would be void because destroying or circumscribing the effect of the pardon granted under the Constitution and laws of the United States. And of course, conversely, it must be conceded that if it be that the act of the state in taking into consideration a prior offense committed against the United States after pardon under the circumstances stated was not in any degree a punishment for the prior crime, but was simply an exercise by the state of a local power within its exclusive cognizance, there could be no violation of the Constitution of the United States. The whole controversy therefore is to be resolved by fixing the nature and character of the action of the state under the circumstances for the purpose of deciding under which of these two categories it is to be classed. When the issue is thus defined and limited its solution is free from difficulty, as it has been repeatedly and conclusively foreclosed by the prior adjudications of this court.

Digitized by Google

In McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389, the court [58] considered and adversely disposed of a contention that a statute of the state of Massachusetts was repugnant to the Constitution of the United States because it provided for a punishment as an habitual criminal of any person convicted of a felony in Massachusetts who was found to have been "twice convicted of crime, sentenced and committed to prison, in this or any other state, or once in this and once at least in any other state, . . ." In holding that the statute was not in conflict with the Constitution, the court said:

"The fundamental mistake of the plaintiff in error is his assumption that the judgment below imposes an additional punishment on crimes for which he had already been convicted and punished in Massachusetts and in New Hampshire.

"But it does no such thing. The statute under which it was rendered is aimed at habitual criminals; and simply imposes a heavy penalty upon conviction of a felony committed in Massachusetts since its passage, by one who had been twice convicted and imprisoned for crime for not less than three years, in this or in another state, or once in each. The punishment is for the new crime only, but is the heavier if he is an habitual criminal. . . . It is within the discretion of the legislature of the state to treat former imprisonment in another state as having the like effect as imprisonment in Massachusetts, to show that the man is an habitual criminal. . . . The statute, imposing a punishment on none but future crimes, is not ex post facto. It affects alike all persons similarly situated, and therefore does not deprive anyone of the equal protection of the laws. Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 40 L. ed. 301, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; Ross's Case, 2 Pick. 165; Com. v. Graves, 155 Mass. 163, 16 L.R.A. 256, 29 N. E. 579; Sturtevant v. Com. 158 Mass. 598, 33 N. E. 648; Com. v. Richardson, 175 Mass. 202, 55 N. E. 988.

"The statute does not impair the right of trial by jury, [59] or put the accused twice in jeopardy for the same offense, or impose a cruel or unusual punishment." (pp. 312, 313.) The subject again came under consideration in Graham v. West Virginia, 224 U. S. 616, 56 L. ed. 917, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583, and was re-examined in all its aspects, and after a full reference to the English and American authorities, the doctrine announced in the McDonald Case was re-expounded and reapplied so as to now leave no room for any further controversy whatsoever on the subject. Applying the principles thus settled, the case before us clearly comes within the second category which we have stated, and therefore the contention as to the effect of the pardon here pressed is devoid of all merit, and the court below was right in so holding.

Determining as we do only the case before us, that is, whether the granting of a pardon by the President for a crime committed against the United States operates to restrict and limit the power of the state of New York to punish crimes thereafter committed against its authority, and in so doing to prescribe such penalties as may be deemed appropriate in view of the nature of the offense and the character of the offender, taking in view his past conduct, we must not be understood as in the slightest degree intimating that a pardon would operate to limit the power of the United States in punishing crimes against its authority to provide for taking into consideration past offenses committed by the accused as a circumstance of aggravation, even although for such past offenses there had been a pardon granted.

Indeed, we must not be understood as intimating that it would be beyond the legislative competency to provide that the fact of the commission of an offense after a pardon of a prior offense should be considered as adding an increased element of aggravation to that which would otherwise result alone from the commission of the prior offense.

Affirmed.

Digitized by Google

[60] KATE C. ARCHER, Petitioner,
v.
GREENVILLE SAND & GRAVEL COMPANY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 60–70.)

Equity — jurisdiction — continuing trespass.

1. A continuing trespass of such nature and of such character of injury that remedies at law by actions for damages would be inadequate and would entail repeated litigation, and hence a wrong redressable in equity, is disclosed by a bill filed by a riparian owner to restrain extensive and continued unlawful dredging of sand and gravel from the river bed owned by her, although an injunction is prayed for only after hearing of the cause, and although then the rights of the contestants may be finally adjudicated in her favor, or the dredging may cease before that time.

[For other cases, see Equity, I. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Waters — riparian rights — local law — title to bed.

2. Whether the title to the beds of the navigable rivers of the United States is in the state in which the rivers are situated, or in the owners of the land bordering upon such rivers, is a question of local law.

[For other cases, see Waters, I. d, 2, a; Courts, VII. c, 9, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Waters — riparian rights — title to bed.

3. The bed of the Mississippi river above tide water belongs, in the state of Mississippi, to the riparian owner up to the thread of the channel.

[For other cases, see Waters, I. d, 2, a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Waters — riparian rights — unlawful dredging in bed of stream.

4. A riparian owner on the Mississippi river above tide water, whose title under the local law extends to the middle of the stream, is not powerless to prevent a trespasser from dredging sand and gravel in the bed of the river in front of her land, even if she herself, under the river and harbor act of September 19, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 454, chap. 907), § 7, could not take out such sand and gravel without the permission of the Secretary of War.

[For other cases, see Waters, II. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Pleading — defense — trespass in bed of stream — authority from War Department.

5. Authority from the Secretary of War to dredge out sand and gravel in the bed of the Mississippi river in front of the land of a riparian owner whose title under the local law extends to the middle of the stream is a matter of defense, to be pleaded to a bill by a riparian owner to restrain such dredging as a continuing trespass.

[For other cases, see Pleading, III. g, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 271.]

Argued March 13, 1914. Decided April 6, 1914.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit court for the Southern District of Mississippi, dismissing the bill of a riparian owner to restrain the dredging of sand and gravel from the bed of the river in front of her lands. Reversed.

See same case below, 114 C. C. A. 664, 194 Fed. 1020.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Percy Bell and T. M. Miller argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

It is established by the decisions of the highest court in Mississippi that a grant of lands bounded by the waters of a navigable stream above tide water extends to the thread of the channel.

The Magnolia v. Marshall, 39 Miss. 109; Morgan v. Reading, 3 Smedes & M. 366; New Orleans, M. & C. R. Co. v. Frederic, 46 Miss. 9.

While this court has strongly approved the rule repudiated by the supreme courts of Mississippi and many other states, it has left it to the courts of the several states to determine the effect of riparian grants.

Kaukauna Water Power Co. v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 142 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 1004, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; St. Louis v. Rutz, 138 U. S. 226, 34 L. ed. 941, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984; Jones v. Soulard, 24 How. 41, 16 L. ed. 604; Packer v. Bird, 137 U. S. 661, 34 L. ed. 819, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210.

Equity alone can give relief to petitioner, and if the court below meant to hold that it was without jurisdiction, it was a grave error.

Warren Mills v. New Orleans Seed Co. 65 Miss. 391, 7 Am. St. Rep. 671, 4 So. 298; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 245; 3 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1357; 5 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 496; 22 Cyc. 760, 760b, 768, 768b, 771, 771a, 826, 826b, 836; 1 Cyc. 421e.

NOTE.—On injunction against repeated trespass—see notes to De Pauw v. Oxley, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 173, and Cragg v. Levinson, 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 417.

On jurisdiction of equity to restrain trespasses and wrongs—see note to Northern Indiana R. Co. v. Michigan C. R. Co. 14 L. ed. U. S. 674.

On title to land under water—see note to Goff v. Cougle, 42 L.R.A. 161.

Digitized by Google

Mr. John W. Yerkes argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George E. Hamilton and John J. Hamilton, filed a brief for respondents:

Bills of discovery are no longer necessary in equity, for the remedy at law is adequate and complete.

Rindskopf v. Platto, 29 Fed. 130; Brown v. Swann, 10 Pet. 497, 9 L. ed. 508; Drexel v. Berney, 14 Fed. 268; Ex parte Boyd, 105 U. S. 647, 657, 658, 26 L. ed. 1200, 1204; Ellis v. Davis, 109 U. S. 485, 27 L. ed. 1006, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Root v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 105 U. S. 189, 26 L. ed. 975.

The bill prays an accounting, but fails utterly to contain allegations sufficient to support the prayer, or to disclose facts necessary to obtain the equitable remedy of accounting.

Fowle v. Lawrason, 5 Pet. 495, 503, 8 L. ed. 204, 207.

No opinion can be relied upon as binding authority unless the case called for the expression of that opinion.

United States v. County Ct. 96 U. S. 211, 217, 218, 24 L. ed. 628–630; Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 44 L. ed. 1175, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000; McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. C. Aultman Co. 169 U. S. 606, 611, 42 L. ed. 875, 877, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443.

In the voluntary and necessarily gratuitous argument (because not germane to the question before the court) made by the court in Morgan v. Reading, 3 Smedes & M. 366, in support of the common-law doctrine as to the ebb and flow of the tide constituting a navigable stream, the court was in direct opposition and antagonism to the reasoning and opinion of this court in the frequently cited and approved case of The Genesee Chief v. Fitzhugh, 12 How. 443, 13 L. ed. 1058, decided in 1851, nine years before the opinion of the state court was handed down.

The proposition that the right of property between high and low water mark is a corollary of the proposition that the proprietor's ownership extends to the thread of the channel is not supported by the authorities, which differentiate distinctly between those rights which are admittedly riparian, and rights of ownership of or to the bed of the river.

Lyon v. Fishmongers' Co. L. R. 1 App. Cas. 662, 23 Eng. Rul. Cas. 141; Delaplaine v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 42 Wis. 226, 24 Am. Rep. 386; Diedrich v. Northwestern Union R. Co. 42 Wis. 262, 24 Am. Rep. 399; Indianapolis Water Co. v. American Strawboard Co. 53 Fed. 974; Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984; St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Schurmeir, 7 Wall. 272, 19 L. ed. 74.

The lands owned by Mrs. Archer were originally public lands, and this court has distinctly held that grants of the government on navigable streams extend only to the limits of high water.

Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 338, 24 L. ed. 224, 228; Packer v. Bird, 137 U. S. 661, 669, 34 L. ed. 819, 820, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141–163, 45 L. ed. 126–137, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; United States v. Chandler-Dunbar Water Power Co. 229 U. S. 53–60, 57 L. ed. 1063–1074, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 667.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Bill in equity to restrain respondent, herein called the Gravel Company, from trespassing upon the lands of petitioner, herein called plaintiff, and from taking sand and gravel therefrom. The bill also prayed for discovery of the amount of gravel which had been taken and an accounting therefor.

The bill alleges the ownership of the lands by plaintiff, and describes them by section, range, and township, and as "lying west of the levee along the river front . . . and fronting on the said Mississippi river," excepting therefrom two strips 100 feet wide each. That lying in the bed of the river in front of the lands and between the bank of the stream and the thread of the river are valuable deposits of sand and gravel which, under the laws of [64] Mississippi, are on the lands of plaintiff, her right and title extending to the lands under the river to the thread of the stream.

That the Gravel Company entered into a contract with the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley Railroad Company to supply sand and gravel for the purpose of grading and raising the line of the railroad, and that the Gravel Company employed the E. A. Voight Company to dredge from the bed of the river in front of the lands of plaintiff, and between the river bank and the thread of the stream, the sand and gravel required by it. That the Voight Company is dredging the same over the protest of plaintiff, and has taken therefrom large quantities of sand and gravel which it has delivered to the Gravel Company, and the latter company is selling the same to the public and to the railroad company.

That the Gravel Company has refused to cease dredging or to make compensation therefor. That petitioner does not know how much of such material has been taken, but great quantities thereof have been taken, the amounts of which are peculiarly within the knowledge of the Gravel Company.

That the dredging constitutes a continuing trespass upon the lands and property of plaintiff, and she is entitled to have the same restrained and to an injunction and accounting, and that she is remediless except in a court of equity. She prayed for such relief.

Digitized by Google

The deeds constituting her title were attached to the bill. The deed conveying title to her, after describing the lands and stating they consisted of 1,300 acres, contained the expression, "excepting such parts thereof as have been washed away by the river."

The suit, on the petition of the Gravel Company, was removed to the United States circuit court for the southern district, western division, of the state of Mississippi, in which court the Gravel Company filed a demurrer [65] under nine specifications, alleging want of equity in the bill because of an adequate remedy at law, and want of substance in it because petitioner was not the owner of the sand and gravel in the bed of the river.

The demurrer was sustained, and as plaintiff declined to amend her bill, a decree was entered dismissing it. The decree was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals without opinion. A petition for rehearing was made, which was denied without comment, and we are without knowledge of the views of the lower courts or of the grounds upon which their judgments were based, except that counsel for plaintiff asserts the circuit court sustained the demurrer "solely on the ground of the jurisdiction of the court."

The grounds of demurrer, we think, and the contentions of the parties, present two propositions—(1) the right of plaintiff to relief in equity and (2) that she does not show ownership of the property in question as a matter of law. In the latter is involved the question whether a grant of lands bounded by the waters of the Mississippi river, a navigable stream above tidewater, extends to the thread of the channel.

The first proposition is easily disposed of, and, passing by the prayer for discovery and an accounting, we think the bill shows a continuing trespass of such nature and of such character of injury that remedies at law by actions for damages would be inadequate, and would, besides, entail repeated litigation. Warren Mills v. New Orleans Seed Co. 65 Miss. 391, 7 Am. St. Rep. 671, 4 So. 298. Nor is this conclusion disturbed by the fact urged by the Gravel Company, that plaintiff prays for an injunction to be granted only after the hearing of the cause, and although then the rights of the contestants may be finally adjudicated in her favor or the dredging might cease before that time. The contention is somewhat strange. A plaintiff's right of suit cannot be defeated by a mere supposition that he or she may be successful, or that [66] the defendant may cease to offend against the right asserted. It is in the hope of one or the other of such results that the suit is brought against a present or threatened violation of rights. If wrongs are endured in the meantime, there is no loss of rights or remedies.

We are therefore brought to the second proposition, Is plaintiff the owner of the sand and the gravel in the bed of the river?

The law of Mississippi is an element in the case. It first found elaborate discussion and decision in Morgan v. Reading, 3 Smedes & M. 366, and it was held that the common law was adopted for the government of the Mississippi territory, and that the line of the territory was the middle of the Mississippi river, and that it hence followed that the rights of riparian owners on the east shore must be determined in the state of Mississippi by the common law, and that it was a principle of that law "that he who owns the bank, owns to the middle of the river, subject to the easement of navigation." 3 Kent, Com. 5th ed. 427, and notes were cited.

The case involved the right of the owner of the bank of the river to charge for mooring purposes on the river above low water mark. The right was sustained upon the principle which we have stated above.

The same principle was announced in the Magnolia v. Marshall, 39 Miss. 109. The case was said by the court to be identical in its facts with Morgan v. Reading. The opinion is too long to review or to quote from at any length. It left no case or authority unreviewed, nor any consideration untouched, and carefully distinguished the public and private interest in the Mississippi river, the court saying: "There is therefore no inconsistency, but, on the contrary, as before suggested, perfect harmony between the jus privatum of riparian ownership in public fresh-water streams, to the middle of [67] the river, and the jus publicum of free navigation thereof. The soil is granted to the riparian proprietor, subject to this public easement." And, again, in criticism of what the court considered an untenable view expressed by the court of another state, it said: "This general doctrine is as old as the Year-books, that, prima facie, every proprietor on each bank of a river is entitled to the land covered with water to the middle of the stream." This being declared to be the law of the state, judgment was entered for charges for the use by the Magnolia of a landing on the river.

But it is said by the Gravel Company that according to the agreed facts "there was no use or occupation" of the lands of the plaintiff in the case "beyond high-water mark; the only portion used and occupied being the bank of the river between high and low water mark;" and that the court, identifying the facts with those in the Morgan Case, said: "What are the rights of the riparian owners, and what the jus publicum incident to the free navigation of the Mississippi, are questions there presented, and are the main questions here again presented." This statement, it is hence contended, limits the binding authority of the opinions "as judicial determinations to a decision of what are the rights of a riparian owner between high and low water marks as connected with the rights of the public in using the Mississippi river as a public highway and navigable stream." And it is further contended that that "question is in no way connected with the ownership of the bed of the stream, or ownership of the gravel and sand in the channel of the stream," It is therefore insisted that "the case called for nothing more than a decision as to these bank rights, and if more was intended by the judge who delivered the opinion, it was purely obiter."

Digitized by Google

We cannot concur in this view. The court deduced the right to charge for the occupation of the water between high and low water marks from the ownership of the soil [68] to the middle thread of the stream. The elaborate reasoning and research of the opinion were directed to demonstrate that under the common law of the state, riparian ownership extends ad filum, and, as a consequence, embraces the right to charge for the use of the water between high and low water marks for landing purposes, although not for purposes of transit. The case is cited as having that purport in 3 Kent Com. 14th ed. *427, where the doctrine of riparian rights as they obtain in the states of the Union is considered and the cases collected. In the sixth edition of Kent the Magnolia Case is commended as "a frank and manly support of the binding force of the common law, on which American jurisprudence essentially rests." See also Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548, for a discussion by this court of riparian rights.

The Morgan and Magnolia Cases were cited in New Orleans, M. & C. R. Co. v. Frederic, 46 Miss. 1, 9, 10, to sustain "the right of the owner of the land on the bank of the river to the thread of the stream, subject only to a right of passage thereon as a highway when the stream admits it."

It is further urged that the argument in the Morgan Case "in support of the common-law doctrine as to the ebb and flow of the tide constituting a navigable stream is in direct opposition and antagonism to the reasoning and opinion of this court in the frequently cited and approved case of The Genesee Chief, 12 How. 443, 13 L. ed. 1058, decided in 1851, nine years before the opinion of the state court was handed down." Other cases are also cited in which it is decided that riparian rights pertain to the bank, and distinguished, as it is asserted, between rights admittedly riparian and rights of ownership of or to the bed of the river. We need not enter into a discussion of those cases, or assign their exact authority. This court has decided that it is a question of local law whether the title to the beds of the navigable rivers of the United States is in the [69] state in which the rivers are situated or in the owners of the land bordering upon such rivers. Packer v. Bird, 137 U. S. 661, 34 L. ed. 819, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; United States v. Chandler-Dunbar Water Power Co. 229 U. S. 53, 57 L. ed. 1063, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 667; Kaukauna Water Power Co. v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 142 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 1004, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; St. Louis v. Rutz, 138 U. S. 226, 34 L. ed. 941, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Jones v. Soulard, 24 How. 41, 16 L. ed. 604.

Plaintiff owning the land to the middle of the stream, it would seem to follow that she must have such property in its soil as to resist a trespasser upon it, such as the bill alleges the Gravel Company to be. The right, however, is denied, and it is said that she is powerless to prevent the Gravel Company from dredging in front of her land because, under the laws of the United States, she herself could not do so without permission from the Secretary of War. For this, § 7 of the rivers and harbors appropriation act of September 19 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 454 chap. 907), is cited as making it unlawful for any person to excavate or fill, or in any manner to alter or modify, the course, location, condition, or capacity of the channel of said navigable water of the United States unless approved and authorized by the Secretary of War. Whether if she took gravel from the front of her land she would incur the condemnation of this act it is not necessary to decide. She certainly had such an interest in the conditions to prevent one without right from disturbing them. We cannot help observing that the Gravel Company by its conduct has given an interpretation of the act against its contention, unless, indeed, it wishes to confess itself a violator of public law in order to escape responsibility for a private injury.

The Gravel Company tries to avoid this situation, saying that a violation of the law cannot be imputed to it because it cannot be assumed that the "extensive and continued dredging, as alleged in the bill, affecting necessarily the channel of the river, would be undertaken without proper authorization and authority, or that [70] the proper officers of the government would have allowed these operations to continue." The supposition is easily answered. There is no scheme of improvement of navigation suggested by the bill, and it cannot be supposed that the Secretary of War would authorize the Gravel Company to take material from the river for commercial purpose, and the bill alleges such to be the purpose. Besides, if the Gravel Company had authority from the Secretary of War, it is a matter of defense to be pleaded.

Digitized by Google

The Gravel Company further charges that, considering the allegations of the bill and the muniments of title attached to it, there is exhibited a possible failure to plead such title in plaintiff as would carry with it even a qualified ownership in the bed of the stream. We do not think so. At any rate, the bill is sufficient against a general demurrer.

Judgment reversed.

H. L. HERBERT, Plff. in Err.,
v.
HENRY BICKNELL, William Henry, and William Henry, Secretary of Benton G. Mining Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 70–75.)

Error to territorial supreme court — following decision below — local practice.

1. The decision of the territorial supreme court that the question whether the evidence was sufficient to support a default judgment cannot be raised by appearing specially before the time for suing out a writ of error has expired, and moving specially to quash the service and set aside the judgment for lack of valid service, would be followed by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error even if it seemed less obviously reasonable than it does.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1; Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to territorial supreme court — following decision below — local practice.

2. The Federal Supreme Court will not disturb the ruling of the territorial supreme court that leaving a copy of a summons at the place where the principal defendant in a garnishment suit last had stopped satisfied the requirement of Hawaii Rev. Laws, § 2114, that it be left at his last and usual place of abode.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1; Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — service of summons in garnishment suit.

3. The principal defendant in a garnishment suit in a territorial court having jurisdiction over small debts only is not deprived of his property without due process of law because judgment was taken by default, appropriating property within the jurisdiction to the payment of defendant's debt, with no other service of process upon him than that provided for in Hawaii Rev. Laws, § 2114, by leaving a copy of the summons at his last and usual place of abode, where he had actual knowledge of the suit before the time for suing out a writ of error had expired, and when it might still have been possible to set aside the judgment and retry the case.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 710–715, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 269.]

Note.—As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

Service of process on resident in action in personam by leaving copy at residence as due process of law.

As is shown by the notes to Pinney v. Providence Loan & Invest. Co. 50 L.R.A. 585, and Raher v. Raher, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 292, the doctrine that a personal judgment upon constructive or substituted service upon a nonresident who does not appear is contrary to due process of law is not generally regarded as applicable to a judgment in personam rendered upon constructive or substituted service upon a resident of the state, even though he may have been absent from the state at the time.

One form of constructive or substituted service which enables a court, consistently with due process of law, to render a personal judgment against a resident, is the leaving of a copy of the process at his residence. Bimeler v. Dawson, 5 Ill. 536, 39 Am. Dec. 430; Sturgis v. Fay, 16 Ind. 429, 79 Am. Dec. 440 (defendant absent from state); Cassidy v. Leitch, 2 Abb. N. C. 315, 53 How. Pr. 105 (defendant probably absent from state); Huntley v. Baker, 33 Hun, 578 (defendant absent from state); Biescnthall v. Williams, 1 Duv. 329, 85 Am. Dec. 629; Harryman v. Roberts, 52 Md. 64; Hamill v. Talbott, 72 Mo. App. 22 (defendant absent from state); Chatham v. Mansfield, 1 Cal. App. 298, 82 Pac. 343.

It is competent for the legislature of a state to provide for service upon one of its own citizens by leaving a copy of the summons at his residence. Bimeler v. Dawson, supra.

The manner of serving process must necessarily be regulated by every country for itself, and if a state permits process to be served upon one of its own citizens by the leaving of it, in his absence, at his domicil, with an adult member of his household, that method of service is not so repugnant to the

Digitized by Google

Submitted March 12, 1914. Decided April 6, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Honolulu, refusing to quash the service of process on the principal defendant in a garnishment suit and to set aside the default judgment for lack of sufficient service. Affirmed.

See same case below, 20 Haw. 132, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 1186.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. David L. Withington submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. William R. Castle, W. A. Greenwell, and Alfred L. Castle were on the brief:

The district court of Honolulu is a court of special and limited jurisdiction, and there is no presumption in favor of that jurisdiction.

Hang Lung Kee v. Bickerton, 4 Haw. 584.

The existence of property of the defendant within the jurisdiction, in a case like this, is essentially necessary to the exertion of the power of the court to render a binding decree.

Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; Chase v. Wetzlar, 225 U. S. 79, 56 L. ed. 990, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 659.

It is only in proceedings strictly in rem that the constructive notice resulting from the seizure is sufficient.

Hollingsworth v. Barbour, 4 Pet. 466, 7 L. ed. 922.

The defendant in garnishment must be notified "in time to have protected his rights" by personal service or some form of substituted service (Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797), the proper publication being made.

Harris v. Balk, 198 U. S. 215, 49 L. ed. 1023, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625, 3 Ann. Cas. 1084, 20 Cyc. 1033, 1048, 1054.

A fundamental condition under the 5th and 14th Amendments to the Constitution of the United States is "that there shall be notice and opportunity for hearing given the parties."

Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 111, 53 L. ed. 97, 111, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Earle v. McVeigh, 91 U. S. 503, 23 L. ed. 398.

A lodging house where the defendant is temporarily stopping is not a last and usual place of abode, within the meaning of the statute.

Fitzgerald v. Salentine, 10 Met. 436; White v. Primm, 36 Ill. 416; Hennings v. Cunningham, — N. J. L. —, 59 Atl. 12; Zacharie v. Richards, 6 Mart. N. S. 467; Wright v. Oakley, 5 Met. 400; Craig v. Gisborne, 13 Gray, 270; Missouri, K. & T.

---

principles of natural justice that a foreign tribunal should refuse to recognize it, and treat a sentence founded on it as a nullity. A foreign judgment rendered against a citizen of the state in which it was pronounced stands on a very different footing from a foreign judgment against one who owed no allegiance to, and was not subject to, the jurisdiction of the state in which it was rendered. Cassidy v. Leitch, supra.

There is nothing to the contrary in Currier v. Gilman, 55 N. H. 364, or First Nat. Bank v. Holmes, 12 N. D. 38, 94 N. W. 764. The former decision is merely to the effect that service by leaving a summons in due form at the usual place of abode of the defendant in the state, as provided by a statute, when the defendant was in fact absent from the state, and did not return until after the judgment had been rendered against him by default, was not a "personal service" within a statute providing that when no personal service has been made on defendant in an action which may be entered without such service, the court, on suggestion thereof, may order the action to be continued, and direct notice to be given by publication. The latter case merely involved the sufficiency of the service to sustain an attachment against a nonresident; and the decision is merely to the effect that a provision of the statute that service by leaving a copy of the process at the dwelling house of the defendant when he cannot be found shall be equivalent to personal service does not apply to service by leaving a copy at the residence of the defendant in another state. The statute further provided that when publication is ordered, personal service of a copy of the summons and complaint out of the territory is equivalent to publication and deposit in the postoffice; and the court said that personal service within that provision means actual service by delivering to the person, and not to the proxy. In this connection, the court said the term "personal service" has a fixed and definite meaning in law. It is service by delivery of the writ to the defendant. Other modes of service may be given the force of such service by legislative enactment. But the use of the words "personal service," unqualified, in a statute, means actual service by delivering to the person, and not to a proxy.

The decision in Amsbaugh v. Exchange Bank, 33 Kan. 100, 5 Pac. 384, denying the right to maintain an action in Kansas upon a personal judgment obtained in Iowa upon service by leaving a copy of the process with the defendant's wife at the place where he had formerly resided in Iowa, was upon the ground that the defendant had become a nonresident of Iowa prior to the service in question; but the court seems to have been of the opinion that, even if the defendant had been a resident, the service would not have been sufficient to entitle the personal judgment to recognition in another state.

Digitized by Google

Trust Co. v. Norris, 61 Minn. 256, 63 N. W. 634; Sturgis v. Fay, 16 Ind. 429, 79 Am. Dec. 440; Honeycutt v. Nyquist, 12 Wyo. 183, 109 Am. St. Rep. 975, 74 Pac. 90.

The provision for substituted service by leaving at the last and usual place of abode refers either to one who is an inhabitant, or is a resident at the time of service; therefore, as defendant had left, the attempted service gave the court no jurisdiction.

Earle v. McVeigh, 91 U. S. 503, 23 L. ed. 398.

Notice by service on the same day does not fulfil the constitutional requirement.

United States ex rel. Turner v. Fisher, 222 U. S. 204, 56 L. ed. 165, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 399, 44 L. ed. 520, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

No brief was filed for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of assumpsit begun on June 30, 1909, in the district court of Honolulu, by garnishment and leaving a copy of the summons at a place which, according to the return, was the defendant's last and usual place of abode, he being absent from the territory. The defendant did not appear and the plaintiff got judgment against the fund on July 2, 1909. No appeal or writ of error was [73] taken, but on December 31, 1909, the time for suing out a writ of error not having expired, the defendant appeared specially and moved to quash the service and set aside the judgment on the ground that the record showed that there was not sufficient service upon him to comply with the 14th Amendment and the laws of Hawaii. The motion was accompanied by an affidavit to the effect that the defendant had changed his domicil to Australia before the beginning of this suit, that he had returned and lived for a month in January and February, 1909, at the place where the summons was left, and then had gone back to Australia; and that his last and usual place of abode (before his change of domicil, as we understand it) was at Waikiki. The district court overruled the motion and its judgment was affirmed by the supreme court.

The argument for the plaintiff in error assumes a wider range than is open upon this motion. The supreme court says that the question whether the evidence was sufficient to support the judgment cannot be raised in this way, and we should follow the decision even if it seemed less obviously reasonable than it does. Montoya v. Gonzales, 232 U. S. 375, 376, ante, 645, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413. Moreover, the only errors assigned here are in holding that the service prescribed by § 2114 of the Revised Laws of Hawaii, as construed by the court, and that leaving a copy of the summons as above stated after garnishment of a debt due to the defendant, were sufficient to meet the requirements of the 5th Amendment (the court having assumed that the defendant referred to the 5th when he mentioned the 14th in his motion below).

The supreme court was of opinion that, if the question was open, leaving a copy of the summons at the place where the defendant last had stopped was leaving it at his last and usual place of abode within § 2114. On that point we see no sufficient reason for disturbing the judgment. Phœnix R. Co. v. Landis, 231 U. S. 578, 579, ante, 377, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179. Really the only matter before us that calls for a word is [74] the decision that a judgment appropriating property within the jurisdiction to payment of the owner's debt, which would be good if the property itself were the defendant, is not made bad by the short and somewhat illusory notice to the owner. Upon this point the court below relied upon the above § 2114 and Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 727, 24 L. ed. 565, 570: "The law assumes that property is always in the possession of its owner, in person or by agent; and it proceeds upon the theory that its seizure will inform him, not only that it is taken into the custody of the court, but that he must look to any proceedings authorized by law upon such seizure for its condemnation and sale." It has been said from of old that seizure is notice to the owner. Scott v. Shearman, 2 W. Bl. 977, 979, 11 Eng. Rul. Cas. 17; Mankin v. Chandler, 2 Brock. 125, 127, Fed. Cas. No. 9,030. See Cooper v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. 308, 317, 19 L. ed. 931, 932.

Summons of the defendant's debtor by garnishment is given like effect in express terms by § 2114. "Such notice [i. e., service on the garnishee] shall be sufficient notice to the defendant to enable the plaintiff to bring his action to trial unless the defendant be an inhabitant of this territory, or has sometime resided therein, and then a like copy shall be served personally upon him, or left at his last and usual place of abode." This statute was in force, no doubt, before the debt garnisheed was contracted, and gave the defendant notice that he must be ready to be represented in order to save a default if the debt was attached. If he had appeared, nothing shows that proper time would not have been allowed to produce evidence at the trial. The district court has jurisdiction over small debts only.

Digitized by Google

Rev. Laws of Hawaii, § 1662. Its proceedings naturally are somewhat summary. It appears that the defendant had knowledge of the action before the time for a writ of error had expired, and when it may be that it still would have been possible to set aside the judgment and to retry the case. He did not adopt the course that [75] would have opened effective ground of attack even as the record stood. We cannot discover that he has suffered any injustice —still less that he has been subjected to an unconstitutional wrong.

Judgment affirmed.

KANSAS CITY SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
KAW VALLEY DRAINAGE DISTRICT OF WYANDOTTE COUNTY, KANSAS. (No. 313.)

KANSAS CITY TERMINAL RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
KAW VALLEY DRAINAGE DISTRICT OF WYANDOTTE COUNTY, KANSAS. (No. 314.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 75–80.)

Commerce — exclusiveness of Federal power — state police power.

1. The police power of a state cannot justify a direct interference with interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state interference — ordering removal of interstate railway bridge.

2. The removal of the existing railway bridges over a navigable stream which form necessary parts of lines of interstate commerce cannot be ordered by a state court even in the avowed expectation that such order will lead to the desired elevation of the bridges, which the state court could not order directly without the authority of the Secretary of War.

[For other cases, see Commerce, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 313, 314.]

Argued March 19 and 20, 1914. Decided April 6, 1914.

TWO WRITS of Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review the issuance of peremptory writs of mandamus requiring the removal of interstate railway bridges over a navigable stream. Reversed.

See same case below, 87 Kan. 272, 123 Pac. 991.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Samuel W. Moore argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Samuel W. Sawyer and James M. Souby, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The police power of a state, for whatever purpose sought to be exercised, cannot legitimately be exerted so as substantially to prohibit or unnecessarily to burden interstate commerce.

West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 221 U. S. 229, 55 L. ed. 716, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1193, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Wharton, 207 U. S. 328, 52 L. ed. 230, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 203 U. S. 335, 51 L. ed. 209, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 142, 41 L. ed. 107, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Illinois, 177 U. S. 514, 44 L. ed. 868, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488.

To be repugnant to the commerce clause of the Constitution, or the acts of Congress thereunder, the action complained of need not be that of the legislature, but may be any exercise of state authority by any agency of the state government.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Wharton, 207 U. S. 334, 52 L. ed. 234, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121.

Of course, action by the state, if otherwise unobjectionable, may be upheld, even though it affects interstate commerce, provided its operation on such commerce is only indirect and remote.

Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 349, 45 L. ed. 224, 228, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132.

Thus, it has been said that the states may legislate with respect to the instrumentalities of interstate commerce, so far as such legislation is within their ordinary police powers.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714.

Such cases have always been sustained, however, upon the theory that such regulations aid rather than burden such commerce; and it is clear that a state cannot make such requirements of an interstate carrier as will impair or destroy the usefulness of its facilities.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Wharton,

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107, and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

Digitized by Google

207 U. S. 328, 52 L. ed. 230, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 203 U. S. 335, 51 L. ed 209, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Illinois, 177 U. S. 514, 44 L. ed. 868, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 154, 41 L. ed. 111, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096.

From the cases cited last above it appears that whether or not a requirement sought to be made by a state of an interstate carrier amounts to a direct regulation of interstate commerce, or merely affects it indirectly and remotely, may be tested by considering whether or not such a requirement is reasonably necessary. If it affects or burdens interstate commerce unnecessarily, it will be held to be invalid as a direct interference with the exclusive power of Congress to regulate such commerce.

Mr. Thomas A. Pollock argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

These cases arise upon petitions for mandamus filed by the defendant in error, the Kaw Valley Drainage District. The allegations are that the Kansas river flows through the district, is a navigable stream, and in 1903 overflowed its banks, flooded a large part of Kansas City, Kansas, and caused great loss; that the harbor lines established by the United States and the lines for a levee along the banks established by the plaintiff substantially coincide; that the defendants respectively own bridges across the river, which, at their present elevation, cause it to overflow; and that the plaintiff, in pursuance of the power given to it by the state, has ordered the defendants respectively to raise these bridges to specified heights and to remove the old ones, which the defendants have refused to do. On these petitions alternative writs issued, and thereupon the defendants made return, each making a general denial and setting up that its railway tracks across the bridge were used in commerce among the states, and that such commerce would be cut off and destroyed by enforcement of the order, and claiming the protection of the Constitution, art. 1, § 8 (cl. 3). They each alleged also that to raise the bridges would require a raising of the grades of the streets for the approaches, and that the right to raise them depended on the consent of Kansas City, which the city refused to give; that the raising would cut in two intersecting [77] tracks of other roads, that this could not be done without the consent of such roads, which they also refused; that the raising would do permanent damage to private property abutting on the streets that would have to be raised, and that the plaintiff had taken no steps to compensate the owners; that the damage to the defendant would exceed large sums mentioned; and that the plans for the new bridges have not been approved by the Secretary of War. Act of March 3, 1899, chap. 425, § 9, 30 Stat. at L. 1151, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3540. Each defendant relied upon the 14th Amendment. The Terminal Company also alleged a contract with the drainage district which was thought to preclude its present requirement, and to be protected by the Constitution, article 1, § 10. The cases were heard on the alternative writs and the returns, and the supreme court of the state issued peremptory writs requiring the defendants to clear the channel to specified heights. 87 Kan. 272, 123 Pac. 991.

Motions to dismiss were presented at the last term, but were denied, as the record shows not only that rights under the Constitution and laws of the United States were specially set up and claimed, but that the questions concerning them are not of a kind to be dismissed.

The supreme court recognized that it could not order the bridges to be raised to the required height without the authority of the Secretary of War. Therefore we may lay on one side the somewhat surprising answer made to the allegations that the consent of the city and other railroads was necessary and was refused,—the suggestion, namely, that if the defendants wanted to do it they would find some way of reaching their end. See Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 144, 53 L. ed. 441, 446, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246. It was not suggested that the railroads had the power to reach the result by eminent domain. See Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 27, 51 L. ed. 933, 945, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398. We lay on one side also various [78] over-refined objections to the defendants' pleadings made in the argument here, saying only that we read them as alleging what they fairly would convey to an ordinarily intelligent lawyer by a fairly exact use of English speech. Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 395, 49 L. ed. 518, 523, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276. But the court went on, on the assumption that it would lead to the elevation of the bridges, and seemingly for the purpose of accomplishing indirectly what it admitted that it could not do directly, to make an unqualified absolute order, as we have said, that the defendants should clear the channel of all obstructions on their lines up to the specified heights,—in other words, to remove the bridges as they stand.

Digitized by Google

These judgments must be taken as they read upon their face. They are not conditional orders to raise the bridge if the defendants can obtain the consent of parties not before the court, and of one authority, at least, not subject to its control. They cannot be qualified by speculation as to what is likely to happen in fact. They are out-and-out orders to remove bridges that are a necessary part of lines of commerce by rail among the states. But that subject-matter is under the exclusive control of Congress, and is not one that it has left to the states until there shall be further action on its part. The freedom from interference on the part of the states is not confined to a simple prohibition of laws impairing it, but extends to interference by any ultimate organ. It was held that under the permissive statute authorizing telegraph companies to maintain lines on the post roads of the United States a state could not stop the operation of the lines by an injunction for failure to pay taxes. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961. Williams v. Talladega, 226 U. S. 404, 415, 416, 57 L. ed. 275, 279, 280, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116. It would seem that the same principle applies to railroads under the commerce clause of the Constitution, especially if taken in connection with the somewhat similar statute now Rev. [79] Stat. § 5258, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3564. And so it is held. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Wharton, 207 U. S. 328, 334, 52 L. ed. 230, 234, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 203 U. S. 335, 51 L. ed. 209, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.

The decisions also show that a state cannot avoid the operation of this rule by simply invoking the convenient apologetics of the police power. It repeatedly has been said or implied that a direct interference with commerce among the states could not be justified in this way. "The state can do nothing which will directly burden or impede the interstate traffic of the company, or impair the usefulness of its facilities for such traffic." Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 142, 154, 41 L. ed. 107, 111, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096; Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 349, 45 L. ed. 224, 228, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Wharton, 207 U. S. 328, 334, 57 L. ed. 230, 234, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121. To destroy the bridges across which these railroad lines necessarily pass is at least as direct an interference with such commerce as to prohibit the importation of cattle or oleomargarin, or the export of natural gas. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 221 U. S. 229, 262, 55 L. ed. 716, 729, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1193, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564. Furthermore, in the present case it is not pretended that local welfare needs the removal of the defendants' bridges at the expense of the dominant requirements of commerce with other states, but merely that it would be helped by raising them. The fact that the court cannot order them to be raised does not justify a judgment that they be destroyed even in the avowed expectation that what it wants but cannot command is all that will come to pass.

A strong argument was made for the plaintiffs in error that they never had been allowed their day in court, as matters put in issue by them, such as the necessity of the change, were assumed against them. It was urged with seeming justice that, granting that, as was said by the court, the order of the drainage district was prima facie correct, still, when that order was challenged in the pleadings, it could not be assumed to be valid at a hearing upon [80] the writs and returns. But we express no opinion upon this point or upon claims under the 14th Amendment, as what we have said sufficiently decides the cases. The argument of the terminal company upon the contract with the drainage district does not impress us. By way of compromise the Terminal Company's predecessor agreed to build a permanent bridge according to a plan, and the drainage district "hereby consents to the construction of said permanent bridge . . . and declares that the same when constructed shall constitute a lawful structure . . . not waiving any right . . . to require the construction of an additional span." This, coming from a board created to exercise police power, not unnaturally would be construed rather as a license than as an abdication of a continuing duty, on which we are asked to take notice that new light had been shed by a subsequent flood that has given rise to cases before this court. But, for the reasons that we have given, the judgment must be reversed.

Judgments reversed.

Digitized by Google

SOUTHERN RAILWAY—CAROLINA DIVISION and Southern Railway Company, Plffs. in Err.,
v.
HATTIE E. BENNETT, Administratrix of the Estate of Luther W. Bennett, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 80–87.)

Appeal — reversible error — instruction as to prima facie negligence.

1. Instructing the jury in an action under the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322), for the death of a railway fireman, caused by the falling of his engine through a burning trestle, to the effect that if a servant is injured through defective instrumentalities (in this case a defective ash pan or damper in another engine and rotten wood in the trestle, likely to take fire), it is prima facie evidence of the master's negligence, and that the master "assumes the burden" of showing that he exercised due care in furnishing them, is not reversible error where the charge recognized and stated later that the burden of proving negligence rests on the plaintiff throughout.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5071–5126, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — excessive damages — review of verdict.

2. A case of a mere excessive verdict upon the evidence is a matter to be dealt with by the trial court; it does not present a question for re-examination in the Federal Supreme Court upon writ of error.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4755–4781, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 796.]

Argued March 2, 1914. Decided April 6, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of South Carolina to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas for Fairfield County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action for death, brought under the Federal employers' liability act. Affirmed.

NOTE.—On the constitutionality, application, and effect of the Federal employers' liability act—see note to Lamphere v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 38.

On the applicability of the doctrine res ipsa loquitur as between master and servant—see notes to Fitzgerald v. Southern R. Co. 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 337, and Byers v. Carnegie Steel Co. 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 214.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockey, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On review of questions of fact on writ of error to state court—see note to Smiley v. Kansas, 49 L. ed. U. S. 546.

See same case below, — S. C. —, 79 S. E. 710.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. E. McDonald argued the cause, and, with Messrs. L. E. Jeffries and B. L. Abney, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

In all actions by the servant against the master, brought in the Federal courts, for injuries sustained through negligence on account of defective machinery, the plaintiff must show affirmatively throughout the entire case that the master was negligent.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Barrett, 166 U. S. 617, 41 L. ed. 1136, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707, 1 Am. Neg. Rep. 745; Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Looney v. Metropolitan R. Co. 200 U. S. 480, 50 L. ed. 564, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303, 19 Am. Neg. Rep. 627; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. O'Brien, 67 C. C. A. 421, 132 Fed. 593; Shandrew v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 73 C. C. A. 430, 142 Fed. 320; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Townsend, 52 C. C. A. 369, 114 Fed. 737; Northern P. R. Co. v. Dixon, 71 C. C. A. 555, 139 Fed. 737, 19 Am. Neg. Rep. 637; Shankweiler v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 78 C. C. A. 353, 148 Fed. 195; Rogers v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 88 Fed. 462; Garnett v. Phœnix Bridge Co. 98 Fed. 192; Peirce v. Kile, 26 C. C. A. 201, 53 U. S. App. 291, 80 Fed. 865.

The law having placed the positive duty upon the master to furnish reasonably safe appliances, the presumption of law is that the master has discharged his duty; and there is also another presumption, that if they were defective, the master did not know of it.

4 Thomp. Neg. § 3864.

It is not sufficient merely to prove that the servant was injured through defective machinery or appliances, but it must be shown that the master knew of the defects, or by reasonable care ought to have known of them.

1 Labatt, Mast. & S. §§ 119–121, 128–133, 832–838; 2 Thomp. Neg. § 1053; 3 Elliott, Ev. § 2519; 4 Thomp. Neg. § 4362; 6 Thomp. Neg. §§ 4362, 7528, 7529; Fitzgerald v. Southern R. Co. 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 345, note; Walkowski v. Penokee & G. Consol. Mines, 41 L.R.A. 47, note; Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Barrett, 166 U. S. 617, 41 L. ed. 1136, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707, 1 Am. Neg. Rep. 745; Mountain Copper Co. v. Van Buren, 66 C. C. A. 151, 133 Fed. 1; Re California Nav. & Improv. Co. 110 Fed. 674; Looney v. Metropolitan R. Co. 200 U. S. 480, 50 L. ed. 564, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303, 19 Am. Neg. Rep. 627.

It was error of law not to grant a new trial or reduce the verdict to conform to the true measure of damages provided for by the act of Congress, upon the ground that the verdict was so excessive under the undisputed facts, as well as the charge of the court, that it deprived the plaintiffs in error of their rights under the Federal employers' liability act.

Digitized by Google

Duval v. Hunt, 34 Fla. 85, 15 So. 876, 13 Am. Neg. Cas. 848; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Trammell, 93 Ala. 350, 9 So. 870; Reiter-Connolly Mfg. Co. v. Hamlin, 144 Ala. 192, 40 So. 280; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Vreeland, 227 U. S. 59, 57 L. ed. 417, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; American R. Co. v. Didricksen, 227 U. S. 145, 57 L. ed. 456, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. McGinnis, 228 U. S. 173, 57 L. ed. 785, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426, 3 N. C. C. A. 806; Alabama Mineral R. Co. v. Jones, 62 Am. St. Rep. 132, note; Pickett v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. 117 N. C. 616, 30 L.R.A. 257, 53 Am. St. Rep. 611, 23 S. E. 264; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Goodykoontz, 119 Ind. 111, 12 Am. St. Rep. 371, 21 N. E. 472.

For the purpose of ascertaining whether full force and effect have been given the act of Congress regulating the liability of interstate common carriers to their employees, and the measure of damages allowed under such statute, this court will examine the entire evidence.

Mackay v. Dillon, 4 How. 421, 11 L. ed. 1038; Republican River Bridge Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 92 U. S. 315, 23 L. ed. 515; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704; Laing v. Rigney, 160 U. S. 531, 40 L. ed. 525, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. ed. 556, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316; Cedar Rapids Gaslight Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 223 U. S. 655, 56 L. ed. 594, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

Mr. W. Boyd Evans argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Edwin C. Brandenburg, F. Walter Brandenburg, E. J. Best, G. W. Ragsdale, and P. A. McMaster, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The exaction, as a condition of refusing a new trial, that the plaintiff should remit a portion of the damages awarded by the verdict, was within the discretion of the trial court.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642, 646, 29 L. ed. 755, 758, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590.

This court will not reverse a judgment upon a writ of error because the verdict is excessive.

New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Fraloff, 100 U. S. 24, 31, 25 L. ed. 531, 534; Herencia v. Guzman, 219 U. S. 44, 55 L. ed. 81, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 135; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Winter, 143 U. S. 60, 75, 36 L. ed. 71, 80, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356, 8 Am. Neg. Cas. 690; Lincoln v. Power, 151 U. S. 436, 438, 38 L. ed. 224, 225, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387.

A nice criticism of words will not be indulged when the meaning of the instruction is plain and obvious and cannot mislead the jury.

Rogers v. The Marshal (United States use of Rogers v. Conklin) 1 Wall. 644, 17 L. ed. 714.

In examining the charge of the court for the purpose of ascertaining its correctness in point of law, the whole scope and bearing of it must be taken together. It is wholly inadmissible to take up single and detached passages, and to decide upon them without attending to the context, or without incorporating such qualifications and explanations as naturally flow from other parts of the instruction.

Magniac v. Thompson, 7 Pet. 348, 8 L. ed. 709; Western Massachusetts Ins. Co. v. Norwich & N. Y. Transp. Co. 12 Wall. 201, 20 L. ed. 380; Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Edgar, 99 U. S. 645, 659, 25 L. ed. 487, 491.

Although detached sentences in a charge may be open to criticism, still, if, upon the whole, it is right, the jury could not have failed to understand it correctly, and the case will not be reversed upon that ground.

Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 157 U. S. 72, 87, 39 L. ed. 624, 629, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Washington & G. R. Co. v. Gladmon, 15 Wall. 401, 410, 21 L. ed. 114, 116; Evanston v. Gunn, 99 U. S. 660, 25 L. ed. 306; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Whitton, 13 Wall. 270, 291, 20 L. ed. 571, 578; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Estill, 147 U. S. 591, 614, 37 L. ed. 292, 303, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444; Northern P. R. Co. v. Babcock, 154 U. S. 190, 201, 38 L. ed. 958, 961, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 978.

Assuming error was committed in the charge, it was cured by specific instructions.

Gamache v. Piquignot, 16 How. 451, 468, 14 L. ed. 1012, 1019; Columbia Heights Realty Co. v. Rudolph, 217 U. S. 547, 557, 54 L. ed. 877, 881, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581, 19 Ann. Cas. 755; Garrard v. Reynolds, 4 How. 123, 126, 11 L. ed. 903, 905; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 157 U. S. 72, 86, 39 L. ed. 624, 629, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Tennessee, 191 U. S. 326, 334, 48 L. ed. 201, 207, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 99, 15 Am. Neg. Rep. 240; Gila Valley, G. & N. R. Co. v. Lyon, 203

Digitized by Google

U. S. 465, 474, 51 L. ed. 276, 281, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145.

Courts are not inclined to grant a new trial merely on account of ambiguity in the charge of the court to the jury, while it appears that the complaining party made no effort at the trial to have the point explained.

The Sybil, 4 Wheat. 98, 4 L. ed. 522; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 157 U. S. 72, 87, 39 L. ed. 624, 629, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491.

Under the peculiar circumstances we submit that the rule laid down by this court in numerous cases, that where no exception is noted at the time of the charge, it is not subject to review, should be followed in this case.

Humes v. United States, 170 U. S. 210, 212, 42 L. ed. 1011, 1012, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 602; Tucker v. United States, 151 U. S. 164, 170, 38 L. ed. 112, 115, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299; St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 153, 38 L. ed. 936, 943, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1002; Stewart v. Wyoming Cattle Ranche Co. 128 U. S. 383, 32 L. ed. 439, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101; McDermott v. Severe, 202 U. S. 600, 610, 50 L. ed. 1162, 1168, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709.

No Federal question was involved.

San Francisco v. Scott, 111 U. S. 768, 769, 28 L. ed. 593, 4 Sup Ct. Rep. 688; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 119 U. S. 615, 624, 30 L. ed. 519, 523, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; Bank of Old Dominion v. McVeigh, 98 U. S. 332, 25 L. ed. 110; Rockhold v. Rockhold, 92 U. S. 129, 23 L. ed. 507; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Hendren, 92 U. S. 286, 23 L. ed. 709; Dugger v. Bocock, 104 U. S. 596, 604, 26 L. ed. 846, 849.

Messrs. W. Boyd Evans and E. J. Best also filed a separate brief for defendant in error:

So long as the state tribunals in administering rights created by Congress observe the limitations of the due process of law clause of the Federal Constitution, the action, especially the questions as to the character of action, the order and manner of trial, the rules of pleading and evidence, the quantity and quality of proof, must necessarily be committed to such state tribunals without remedy of review by the Supreme Court, except where it is pointed out that such judgment and proceedings of state tribunals in some way or manner violate the fundamental law of the land.

Fleming v. Norfolk Southern R. Co. 160 N. C. 196, 76 S. E. 212.

The rule of evidence as embodied in the charge of the trial judge in respect to the doctrine of a prima facie case and the manner of its establishment, as distinguished and differentiated from the burden of proof or the preponderance of evidence, is not to be confounded, and the rule announced in the charge of the trial court as to a prima facie case, burden of proof or preponderance of evidence, is not novo impressio, but such principle is so firmly imbedded in our jurisprudence that the same is not longer open to debate.

United States v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 191 U. S. 90–93, 48 L. ed. 108, 109, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33.

Presumptions and inferences are coequal with substantive law itself. For the very nature of the occurrence or happening of an event, especially if caused by an agency or instrumentality under the control and management of another, makes a prima facie case and establishes the negative of the proposition. Examples might be mentioned in cases of lost freight, injuries to passengers, fires from locomotive engines. When circumstances are proven which establish a prima facie case, the burden is devolved upon the defendant to meet such prima facie case, and should not be confounded with the rule in reference to the preponderance of evidence, the establishment of which generally rests upon the plaintiff.

Ibid.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action under the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908, chap. 149, 35 Stat. at L. 65, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322, for causing the death of the plaintiff's intestate. The plaintiff got a verdict for $25,000, on which the court ordered judgment upon the plaintiff's remitting $5,000. Exceptions were taken, but the judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. — S. C. —, 79 S. E. 710. The exceptions related to the instructions of the court on the matter of liability, and to the entering of judgment upon a verdict alleged to be excessive. As to rulings of the former class, we have indicated that when the statute is made a ground for bringing up ordinary questions of negligence, we shall deal with them in a summary way, and usually content ourselves with stating results. Whether such questions are open in a case coming from a state court we need not decide, as, if open, they can be disposed of in a few words.

The defendant was killed by the falling of his engine through a burning trestle bridge. There was evidence tending to show that the trestle was more or less rotten, that the fire was caused by the dropping of coals from an earlier train, and that the engine might have been stopped had a proper lookout been kept. The first complaint is against an instruction to the effect that, if a servant is injured through defective instrumentalities, it is prima facie evidence of the master's negligence, and that the master "assumes the burden" of showing that he exercised due care in furnishing them. Of course the burden of [86] proving negligence in a strict sense is on the plaintiff throughout, as was recognized and stated later in the charge. The phrase picked out for criticism did not controvert that proposition, but merely expressed in an untechnical way that, if the death was due to a defective instrumentality and no explanation was given, the plaintiff had sustained the burden. The instruction is criticized further as if the judge had said res ipsa loquitur—which would have been right or wrong according to the res referred to. The judge did not say that the fall of the engine was enough, but that proof of a defect in appliances which the company was bound to use care to keep in order, and which usually would be in order if due care was taken, was prima facie evidence of neglect. The instruction concerned conditions likely to have existed for some time (defective ash pan or damper on the engine and rotten wood likely to take fire), about which the company had better means of information than the plaintiff, and concerning which it offered precise evidence, which, however, did not satisfy the jury. We should not reverse the judgment on this ground, even if an objection was open to an isolated phrase to which no attention was called at the time.

Digitized by Google

The supposed error most insisted upon is the entering of judgment upon a verdict said to be manifestly excessive. It is admitted that the judge charged the jury correctly, according to principles established by Michigan C. R. Co. v. Vreeland, 227 U. S. 59, 57 L. ed. 417, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, but it is thought to be apparent as matter of law that the jury found more than the charge or the law allowed. The argument is this: The deceased was making not more than $900 a year, and the only visible ground of increase was the possibility that he might be promoted from fireman to engineer, with what pay was not shown. He could not have given more than $700 a year to his family. His expectation of life was about thirty years by the tables of mortality. Therefore at the legal rate of interest the income from $10,000 [87] for thirty years was all that the plaintiff was entitled to, whereas she was given the principal of $20,000 out and out. It may be admitted that if it were true that the excess appeared as matter of law,—that if, for instance, the statute fixed a maximum and the verdict exceeded it,—a question might arise for this court. But a case of mere excess upon the evidence is a matter to be dealt with by the trial court. It does not present a question for re-examination here upon a writ of error. Lincoln v. Power, 151 U. S. 436, 38 L. ed. 224, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; Herencia v. Guzman, 219 U. S. 44, 45, 55 L. ed. 81, 82, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 135. The premises of the argument for the plaintiff in error were not conclusive upon the jury, and although the verdict may seem to us too large, no such error appears as to warrant our imputing to judge and jury a connivance in escaping the limits of the law.

Judgment affirmed.

TERRITORY OF ARIZONA AT THE RELATION AND TO THE USE OF J. N. GAINES, Tax Collector in and for the County of Cochise, in the Territory of Arizona, Appt.,

v.

COPPER QUEEN CONSOLIDATED MINING COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 87-97.)

Appeal — from territorial supreme court — following decision below — equalization of tax assessment.

1. The Federal Supreme Court will not disturb on appeal the ruling of the territorial supreme court that Ariz. Rev. Stat. 1887, § 2654, empowering the county board of equalization to determine whether the assessed value of any property is too small or too great, and to change and correct any valuation, either by adding thereto or deducting therefrom, gave such board no authority to raise the assessment of some only of a group of mining claims originally assessed en masse on the return of the owner.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1; Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Estoppel — to contest enforcement of tax — listing — part payment.

2. Neither the listing of a number of mining claims en masse for taxation, nor the payment of a part of the unlawful tax as a condition of injunctive relief, nor payments under an attempted compromise subsequently held invalid, will estop the owner from contesting the enforcement of the tax because the county board of equalization unlawfully increased the assessment upon a part of the property by singling out some of the claims.

[For other cases, see Estoppel, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 89.]

NOTE.—As to review by United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

Digitized by Google

Argued March 3 and 4, 1914. Decided April 6, 1914.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court of the Second Judicial District of that territory, refusing to enforce a tax lien. Affirmed.

See same case below, 13 Ariz. 198, 108 Pac. 960.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George P. Bullard, Attorney General of Arizona, and Mr. Elias S. Clark, argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William G. Gilmore and William C. Prentiss, filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Frederick N. Judson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. E. E. Ellinwood and John F. Green, filed a brief for appellee:

Under the repeated decisions of this court in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction over territorial courts, the court will not disturb the decision of the territorial courts in a construction of revenue or other local statutes unless there is manifest error disclosed. In the case at bar the assignments of error disclose no basis for consideration under this rule.

Idaho & O. Land Improv. Co. v. Bradbury, 132 U. S. 509, 33 L. ed. 433, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; Fox v. Haarstick, 156 U. S. 676, 39 L. ed. 577, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457; Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v. Territorial Bd. of Equalization, 206 U. S. 474–477, 51 L. ed. 1143, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695; English v. Arizona, 214 U. S. 359, 53 L. ed. 1030, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Treat v. Grand Canyon R. Co. 222 U. S. 449, 56 L. ed. 265, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125; Straus v. Foxworth, 231 U. S. 162, ante, 168, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42; Works v. United Globe Mines, 231 U. S. 595, ante, 389, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 274; Phœnix R. Co. v. Landis, 231 U. S. 578, ante, 377, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179.

There was no estoppel upon the appellee, in the fact that its manager gave a list of the sixty-five separate parcels by name in a group, which can cure the failure to show specific assessment upon the separate properties of the taxes sought to be enforced. No such estoppel was pleaded, nor could one exist under the facts found.

8 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 7; State ex rel. Hudson v. Carr, 178 Mo. 229, 77 S. W. 544; State ex rel. Musser v. Birch, 186 Mo. 205, 85 S. W. 363; State ex rel. Flentge v. Burrough, 174 Mo. 707, 74 S. W. 610; Centennial Eureka Min. Co. v. Jaub County, 22 Utah, 395, 62 Pac. 1024; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Auditor General, 53 Mich. 79, 18 N. W. 586; Sommers v. Boyd, 48 Ohio St. 663, 29 N. E. 497; Dunnell Mfg. Co. v. Pawtucket, 73 Mass. 277; Henshaw v. Bissell, 18 Wall. 271, 21 L. ed. 840; Power v. Bowdle, 3 N. D. 107, 21 L.R.A. 328, 44 Am. St. Rep. 511, 54 N. W. 404; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 60 Fed. 161; Bank of America v. Banks, 101 U. S. 240, 25 L. ed. 850.

There is no merit in the assignments of error warranting even their consideration on the question whether there was manifest error in the construction by a territorial court of a local statute. This is clearly shown by the shifting position of appellant.

Baker v. Kaiser, 61 C. C. A. 303, 126 Fed. 319; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Estill, 147 U. S. 591, 37 L. ed. 292, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a special statutory proceeding (Laws of Territory of Arizona, 1903, act No. 92, p. 148) brought in the district court of the second judicial district of the territory of Arizona in and for the county of Cochise to enforce the lien of the territory for the payment of taxes for the year 1901, assessed against certain patented mining claims in the county of Cochise, amounting to $120,039.35, the tax being assessed upon the increased valuation of the mining claims of the company, made by the board of supervisors of Cochise county. In the trial court judgment was rendered for the defendant. Upon appeal to the supreme court of the territory of Arizona the judgment was affirmed (13 Ariz. 198, 108 Pac. 960). An appeal was prosecuted to this court under the statute regulating appeals from territorial courts (18 Stat. at L. 27, chap. 80).

[89] The supreme court of the territory of Arizona made a statement of facts in the nature of a special verdict, and upon that finding this court must consider the case on this appeal. Eagle Min. & Improv. Co. v. Hamilton, 218 U. S. 513, 515, 54 L. ed. 1131, 1132, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Zeckendorf v. Steinfeld, 225 U. S. 445, 449, 56 L. ed. 1156, 1161, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728. From the facts thus found the following appears:

The appellee, a corporation doing business and owning real and personal property in Cochise county, Arizona, listed and returned for assessment in 1901 sixty-five mining claims belonging to it, by name, but as one tract, said to contain 636 acres, and valued at $3,180, with improvements valued at $55,431.76. Some of the claims are not contiguous to the others.

On July 17, 1901, the county board of supervisors, sitting as the board of equalization for Cochise county, after notice to the company and hearing at which appel-lee's superintendent and agent appeared, raised the assessment upon eight of the sixty-five claims originally assessed en masse, in amounts varying from $50,000 to $1,000,000.

Digitized by Google

Prior to September, 1901, the appellee brought suit in the district court of Cochise county to enjoin the collection of the tax, alleging that the increase had been fraudulently made and the property overvalued. It tendered the sum of $14,133.12, being the amount of the tax upon all of its property before the increase. The district court found that the increase was not based upon information or evidence, but was made arbitrarily and capriciously for the purpose of imposing an unjust share of the burden of taxation upon the appellee, and granted the injunction, upon condition, however, that the appellee pay the $14,133.12 into court and also the further sum of $9,589.20, the tax upon the increase in valuation of certain personal property, which the district court found to be valid. The $14,133.12 was accepted by the county treasurer, who was ex officio tax collector, "on account of any [90] moneys which might ultimately be determined as due from said company for its taxes for said year." The supreme court, upon appeal, reversed the case and remanded it for new trial (Cochise County v. Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. 8 Ariz. 221, 71 Pac. 946). Subsequently, an agreement of compromise was made, under authority of a resolution of the board of supervisors, the appellee paying the further sum of $5,661.44 in full settlement of taxes for the year 1901, and the injunction suit being dismissed. This last amount has been retained by the county.

Thereafter a mandamus suit was instituted to compel the tax collector to commence suit against the appellee for the balance of the 1901 tax, upon the ground that the compromise was void. The supreme court held that the board of supervisors had no authority to compromise the tax, and granted the writ (Territory v. Gaines, 11 Ariz. 270, 93 Pac. 281), in pursuance of which the present action was instituted.

The uncontradicted testimony showed that the raise in the assessment of the eight claims was not based upon evidence as to value, and that it was in fact arbitrary, and also that some of the claims were assessed far in excess of their full cash value. The duplicate assessment roll made out by the assessor contained the increase made by the board of equalization, the eight claims which were raised being separately itemized by name, with the amounts of the respective increases set opposite the names, but with no statement of their original valuation or the total valuation of them or any of them.

On the third Monday of December, 1901, the tax being unpaid, the tax collector turned in the delinquent list, certified by the board, giving the property of the defendant as shown in the assessment returned by the appellee, with the increases as they appeared on the duplicate assessment roll.

Under the 1903 law delinquent property was carried [91] into the back-tax book of that year, and this suit was brought to foreclose the territory's lien upon the pieces of property therein appearing. That book, which was put in evidence, gave the appellee's property, its total valuation, total tax, amount paid on account, and balance due. In enumerating the several tracts remaining unredeemed it showed sixty-five mining claims, containing 636 acres, valued en masse at $3,180, with improvements at $55,431, and named sixty-four claims; the number of acres, and all other valuations for real estate and improvements, were the same as in the other lists; and the list of increased valuations of the several claims and improvements was shown, but no total valuation of such separate pieces of property after the addition of the increase was given.

The discrepancies in description of the claims between the complaint and the tax documents are stated, and mention is made that in none of the latter is the total assessed valuation of any individual piece of real estate or the amount of taxes due on any of the separate claims disclosed. And it is said that the testimony of the assessor showed that there were 280 patented mining claims in Cochise county at the time the 1901 assessment was made, and that they were and had been assessed at a uniform rate of $5 per acre as a rule.

In its opinion the supreme court stated that the most important question raised upon the record was the validity of the action of the board of supervisors, sitting as a board of equalization, in raising the assessment upon eight of the group of sixty-five claims originally assessed in mass. After stating the minutes of the board's action, the court quotes § 2654 of the Revised Statutes of 1887.

". . . The board of equalization shall have power to determine whether the assessed value of any property is too small or too great, and may change and correct any valuation, either by adding thereto or deducting therefrom, [92] if the sum fixed in the assessment roll be too small or too great, whether said sum was fixed by the owner or the assessor; . . . and the clerk of the board of equalization shall note upon the assessment roll all changes made by the board. During the session of the board of equalization the assessor shall be present, and also any deputy whose testimony may be required by the parties appealing to the board, and they shall have the right to make any statement touching such assessment, and producing evidence relating to questions before the board, and the board of equalization shall make use of all other information that they can gain otherwise, in equalizing the assessment roll of the county, and may require the assessor to enter upon such assessment roll any other property which has not been assessed; and the assessment and equalization so made shall have the same force and effect as if made by the assessor before the delivery of the assessment roll to (by) him by (to) the clerk of the board of equalization . . ."

Digitized by Google

The court said (p. 212):

"It is apparent from an examination of this roll [the duplicate assessment roll] that there are in effect two assessments for the same year against each of the eight claims raised. One, an assessment, commingles with that of sixty-four other claims, en bloc; the other separate and distinct. This is no mere irregularity. The legality of the original assessment as an entirety has been sustained solely upon the ground that the property was so returned by the taxpayer. The board disregarded such return, and the validity of its action must be determined under the statute alone. It might be argued successfully that had the board of supervisors raised the assessment upon the group, such a raise would have been valid. But the board segregated from the group certain claims, and imposed thereon an additional assessment. It is a fundamental rule of taxation in this territory that a taxpayer may pay [93] upon any one of parcels separately assessed, discharging the lien thereon, without paying upon the remainder. Rev. Stat. 1887, ¶ 2676.

. . . . . .

"By the action of which complaint is made here, the board deprived the appellee of this right. Upon the raise being made it had the legal right to determine upon which, if any, of the claims so raised, it would pay. If it determined to pay upon none, it was nevertheless obliged to pay a portion of the tax thereon if it exercised its right to pay upon the fifty-seven claims remaining, for the tax collector, under ¶ 2676, supra (re-enacted, ¶ 3900, Revised Statutes of 1901), could not receive the tax upon less than the entire sixty-five claims, that being the least subdivision appearing on the assessment roll. If it determined to pay upon one or more of the eight so raised, and to abandon the remainder, it would have to pay the tax upon the raise, together with the tax upon the entire sixty-five claims as originally assessed. The undisputed testimony discloses that these claims were noncontiguous, in instances which would have invalidated an original assessment, except for the return. The board, in raising this assessment, disregarding the original classification, which has been held good as against the appellee solely by reason of its return. The board of supervisors, sitting as a board of equalization, had no power under ¶ 2654 of the Revised Statutes of 1887 to segregate, from a tract of land returned and assessed as one parcel, a portion thereof, and impose thereon an additional assessment, without first determining that such tract was improperly assessed as a whole, and causing such tract to be reassessed and raised in subdivisions in such manner as to preserve the right of the taxpayer to discharge the lien of taxes upon such of the several separate tracts as he might elect."

It is evident that in reaching this conclusion the supreme [94] court based its decision upon its construction of the statute in this respect. In exercising appellate jurisdiction over the territorial courts, where the construction placed upon a statute of the territory by the highest court thereof is brought in question, this court has frequently held that it will not reverse the action of the territorial court except in cases where manifest error in such construction appears. Straus v. Foxworth, 231 U. S. 162, ante, 168, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42; Phœnix R. Co. v. Landis, 231 U. S. 578, ante, 377, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; Work v. United Globe Mines, 231 U. S. 595, ante, 389, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 274. Applying this rule we are not prepared to say that there was manifest error in the conclusion reached by the supreme court in construing the statute. Indeed, the appellant in its brief filed in this case extracts from its motion for rehearing in the court below, and prints as a part of its argument, a statement to the effect that it is convinced that the board could not lawfully segregate the eight claims from the mass and raise the valuation separately, there being no separate assessment originally; but it contends that the value of the whole tract is equal to all its parts, so that when the value of a part is raised it merely increases the aggregate value of the whole tract. We are not prepared to say that the Arizona supreme court erred in its conclusion concerning what the board actually did. The original assessment, as the finding shows, contains a return of sixty-five mining claims, naming them as 636 acres of land. There was no separate statement of the amount of acreage in any one claim.

Digitized by Google

The claims were not described except by name, and that as a part of the 636 acres returned as a whole. The supreme court found, and we think correctly, that the reassessment picked out eight claims by name and raised the valuation of each by a given sum.

It is further contended by the appellant that certain things have happened as set forth in the findings which amount to an estoppel upon the appellee from denying [95] the right to have a lien charged, as claimed in this proceeding, upon specific property, and to have the lien enforced by the sale of the specific lot or tract covered by it. The statute (part of which is quoted in the margin†) is a peculiar one, and is said to have been adopted from the statutes of Missouri. It provides for a civil action against the owners of the property, to the end that a lien be charged upon land the taxes on which have become delinquent, and that such lien be foreclosed. In Missouri it has been decided that no personal judgment shall be rendered in the proceedings against the owner of the property, nor any execution issue except upon the property charged with the tax. State ex rel. Rosenblatt v. Sargeant, 76 Mo. 557; State ex rel. Hayes v. Snyder, 139 Mo. 549, 41 S. W. 216. And the supreme court of the territory of Arizona held that the construction of the statute by the court of last resort of Missouri was binding upon it.

In such a proceeding it is difficult to see how the principles of estoppel because of the description of the land made by the owner in returning the property or the payment of taxes, as appears from the finding in this case, could have application. Estoppel ordinarily proceeds upon principles which prevent one from denying the truth of statements upon which others have acted, where the denial would have the effect to mislead them to their prejudice. In this case the territory is undertaking to [96] collect its revenues by certain statutory proceedings duly provided for that purpose, and it would seem to be elementary that such enforcement of collection must depend upon a valid assessment as its basis, and this again was the holding in Missouri. Hannibal ex rel. Bassen v. Bowman, 98 Mo. App. 103, 71 S. W. 1122; State ex rel. Morris v. Cunningham, 153 Mo. 642, 55 S. W. 249. The fact that the taxpayer furnished the list of mining claims which included those upon which increased assessments had been made, and thereby acknowledged the ownership of the property by the description stated, would not permit the board, if authority was wanting, to increase the assessment upon a part of the property by picking out certain claims only, as was done in this case. If for such action the assessment was void, the description furnished by the property owner could not supply the defect. State ex rel. Flentge v. Burrough, 174 Mo. 700, 707, 74 S. W. 610. Nor do we think there is substance in the claim that the payment made by the appellee estopped it from contesting the lien sought to be imposed in this case. The finding of facts sets forth specifically the payment of the sum of $14,133.12 and of the further sum of $9,589.20 as a condition for granting the injunction in the original suit brought by the appellee in the district court; and the finding shows that the payment of the sum of $14,133.12 was "on account of any moneys which might ultimately be determined as due from said company for its tax for said year," and that the sum of $5,661.44 was paid on the attempted compromise which was subsequently held to be invalid. We do not find anything in these payments which, upon principles of estoppel, or as an affirmation of the validity of the assessment, would prevent the appellee from contending against the legality of the action here in question.

In the decision as made in the supreme court it was not found necessary to rule upon the attempted defenses based upon the arbitrary character of the assessment, nor [97] the fact that it was in excess of the cash value of the property. The conclusion which we have reached renders it unnecessary for us to pass upon the findings in this respect, which, notwithstanding the decision in the court below, are placed in the special findings upon which the case is sent here.

Nor de we need to pass upon the alleged violation of the equality protection of the Constitution in the finding that other patented mining claims in Cochise county at the time of the assessment in 1901 were assessed as a rule at the uniform rate of $5 per acre. Nor need we consider the ground upon which the supreme court of Arizona seems to have acted in part, that †The judgment, if against the defendant, shall describe the land upon which the taxes are found to be due, shall state the amount of taxes and interest found to be due upon each tract or lot, and the year or years for which the same are due, up to the rendition thereof, and shall decree that the lien of the territory be enforced, and that the real estate, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy such judgment, interest and costs, be sold, and execution shall be issued thereon, which shall be executed as in other cases of judgment and execution, and said judgment shall be a first lien upon said land. Laws of 1903, pp. 148, 153, act No. 92, § 88.

Digitized by Google

the assessment rolls and tax book varied from the complaint in the description of the property.

It follows that the judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona must be affirmed.

BOSTON & MAINE RAILROAD, Plff. in Err.,
v.
KATHARINE HOOKER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 97–157.)

Carriers — published tariffs — limitation of baggage liability.

1. A limitation as to the baggage liability of an interstate carrier, based upon the requirement to declare its value when more than $100, and pay an excess charge, is a regulation determinative of the rate to be charged and affecting the service to be rendered to the passenger within the meaning of the act to regulate commerce of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), § 6, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288), which requires regulations of that character to be filed and posted in accordance with its provisions as a part of the carrier's tariff schedules.

[For other cases, see Carriers, III. g, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — limiting baggage liability — effect of regulation in published tariff.

2. A regulation contained in the published tariffs of an interstate railway carrier on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission, limiting its baggage liability to $100 unless a greater value is declared and stipulated by the owner and the excess charges paid, is binding upon the passenger in case of loss of the baggage through the carrier's negligence, regardless of the passenger's lack of knowledge of or assent to such regulation, and regardless of the carrier's failure to inquire as to the value of the baggage, or of its outward appearance as indicating greater value, any state law or policy to the contrary having been superseded when Congress, by the amendment of June 29, 1906, to the act to regulate commerce of February 4, 1887, took possession of the subject of the interstate railway transportation of property.

[For other cases, see Carriers, II. a, 9; Commerce, I. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — baggage — receipts.

3. A railway carrier receiving a passenger's baggage for interstate transportation is not required to give any other receipt than the customary baggage check by the provision of the act to regulate commerce of February 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, that a railway company receiving property for transportation in interstate commerce shall issue a receipt or bill of lading therefor.

[For other cases, see Carriers, II. a, 9, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On limitation of carrier's liability for passenger's baggage—see notes to Wells v. Great Northern R. Co. 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 818, and French v. Merchants' & M. Transp. Co. 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1006.

[No. 121.]

Argued December 10 and 11, 1913. Decided April 6, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the State of Massachusetts for the County of Middlesex to review a judgment entered pursuant to the mandate of the Supreme Judicial Court of that state, overruling the exceptions to a judgment of the Superior Court against a carrier for the full value of certain lost baggage notwithstanding a limitation of such liability to the declared value, contained in the carrier's published tariffs. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 209 Mass. 598, 95 N. E. 945, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 669.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frederick N. Wier argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edgar J. Rich, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Congress has assumed exclusive jurisdiction of the subject-matter in issue, thereby making the determination of the effect and validity of the baggage regulations of the plaintiff in error a Federal question.

Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 672, 57 L. ed. 690, 698, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

Rates, parts of rates, and regulations affecting or determining rates, fares, and charges, or the value of the service rendered, have the force of law, and therefore enter into and become a part of all contracts for interstate transportation.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 245, 50 L. ed. 1011, 1013, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 445, 51 L. ed. 553, 560, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 81, 52 L. ed. 681, 694, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 656, 57 L. ed. 683, 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 U. S. 331, 28 L. ed. 717, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151.

The reasonableness of the regulation is not in issue.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Kansas City

Digitized by Google

Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 57 L. ed. 683, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391.

The regulations do not offend any principle of common law or public policy.

Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 U. S. 331, 28 L. ed. 717, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Fraloff, 100 U. S. 24, 25, 25 L. ed. 531, 533.

The regulations do not offend any Federal statute.

Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

The rule allowing a common carrier to graduate its rates according to the value of the goods shipped, that is, according to the extent of the risk it assumes in relation to goods accepted by it for shipment, has been sanctioned by this court whenever such a rule has been before it for interpretation.

New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Fraloff, 100 U. S. 24, 24 L. ed. 531; Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 U. S. 331, 28 L. ed. 717, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151.

The interstate commerce act of 1887 and its subsequent amendments were enacted not for the purpose of establishing new principles of law in the operation and control of the business of interstate transportation, but for the purpose of applying the principles calling for equality of treatment to all shippers under similar conditions, already established at common law, to the present needs of the railroad business. The object of this legislation was to establish and maintain, free from preferences and discrimination, a just and reasonable relationship between the rates, fares, and charges paid by the public and the service rendered by the railroads.

New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. ed. 297, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265.

When the filing of schedules of rates—regulations affecting rates—was made obligatory on the part of the carrier, this court held, in order to accomplish the purpose of the act, that the rates and the regulations affecting rates, when filed under the provisions of this act, have the force of law, and are conclusive and binding on all shippers and passengers, regardless of actual knowledge.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. ed. 1011, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Kirby, 225 U. S. 155, 56 L. ed. 1033, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 501; Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A. (N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Wells, F. & Co. v. Neiman-Marcus Co. 227 U. S. 469, 57 L. ed. 600, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 57 L. ed. 683, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

The valuation, or the amount to which the carrier was to be answerable in damages, was an essential element in determining the rate paid by the shipper.

Re Released Rates, 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 550; York Mfg. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 3 Wall. 107, 112, 18 L. ed. 170, 171; Squire v. New York C. R. Co. 98 Mass. 239, 93 Am. Dec. 162; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Fraloff, 100 U. S. 24, 25, 24 L. ed. 531, 533; Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 U. S. 331, 337, 343, 28 L. ed. 717, 719, 721, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 650, 57 L. ed. 683, 687, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 671, 57 L. ed. 690, 697, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

Giving a regulation, such as is in issue in this case, the force and the effect of a rate, of which it must be concluded to be an essential part, is doing no more than to bind the public by a regulation which the carrier has always had the power to enforce provided it gave the public actual or inferable notice of such a regulation. The notice required at common law has been provided for by the general effect of the Hepburn act.

Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 654, 656, 57 L. ed. 683, 689, 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Barstow v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 158 App. Div. 665, 143 N. Y. Supp. 983.

A fact agreed or assumed to be true as the basis of a contract must be taken to be true specifically until the contract itself is lawfully impeached by plaintiff or by defendant, or until such legal proceeding is taken to impeach the truth of the (supposed) fact.

Hoeger v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 63 Wis. 100, 53 Am. Rep. 271, 23 N. W. 435; Fourth Nat. Bank v. Olney, 63 Mich. 58, 29 N. W. 513; Bigelow, Estoppel, p. 459.

A misrepresentation acted on by the estoppel-asserter is not the less a ground for relief because he had the means of knowledge.

Ewart, Estoppel, p. 137.

The defendant in error was bound to take notice of the rates, and of their relation to the value of the baggage.

Digitized by Google

Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Kirby, 225 U. S. 155, 166, 56 L. ed. 1033, 1038, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 501; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 652, 656, 57 L. ed. 683, 688, 689, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 671, 57 L. ed. 690, 697, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

When a shipper or passenger has actual or presumptive knowledge that rates or charges are based upon valuation, he is held in effect to declare that the value of his goods shipped is in fact that valuation applicable to the rate of freight he assumes to pay.

Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 U. S. 331, 337, 28 L. ed. 717, 719, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151; Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 508, 57 L. ed. 314, 321, 44 L.R.A. (N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Wells, F. & Co. v. Neiman-Marcus Co. 227 U. S. 469, 476, 57 L. ed. 600, 602, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267.

When a shipper or passenger has declared or represented, by the act of taking advantage of a rate which he was bound to know was applicable to a certain valuation, that the value of his property was in fact that valuation, he cannot later show that the baggage had in fact a greater value, as his action in accepting this rate constitutes such a misrepresentation as will estop him from recovering more than the valuation which might rightfully have been shipped at this rate.

Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 U. S. 331, 338, 341, 28 L. ed. 717, 720, 721, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151; Wells, F. & Co. v. Neiman-Marcus Co. 227 U. S. 469, 475, 477, 57 L. ed. 600, 602, 603, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 651, 57 L. ed. 683, 688, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 670, 57 L. ed. 690, 697, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

The effect of the defendant in error being estopped by her implied misrepresentation of the value of her baggage will not be that of exempting the plaintiff in error from liability for its negligence in contravention of either the principles of the common law or the spirit of the Carmack amendment to the Hepburn act.

Bernard v. Adams Exp. Co. 205 Mass. 260, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 293, 91 N. E. 325, 18 Ann. Cas. 351; Alair v. Northern P. R. Co. 53 Minn. 160, 19 L.R.A. 764, 39 Am. St. Rep. 588, 54 N. W. 1072.

Mr. Samuel Williston argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

By the rule of the common law a limitation of liability was invalid unless a special contract was made by which the shipper agreed thereto, or unless the shipper was estopped by misrepresentation.

Brown v. Eastern R. Co. 11 Cush. 97; Malone v. Boston & W. R. Co. 12 Gray, 388, 74 Am. Dec. 598; Graves v. Adams Exp. Co. 176 Mass. 280, 57 N. E. 462; John Hood Co. v. American Pneumatic Service Co. 191 Mass. 27, 77 N. E. 638; The Majestic, 166 U. S. 375, 41 L. ed. 1039, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 597, 2 Am. Neg. Rep. 282; Henderson v. Stevenson, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. App. Cas. 481, 32 L. T. N. S. 709; Cau v. Texas & P. R. Co. 194 U. S. 427, 431, 48 L. ed. 1053, 1056, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663, 16 Am. Neg. Rep. 659; New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. 344, 12 L. ed. 465; York Mfg. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 3 Wall. 107, 18 L. ed. 170; New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 361, 21 L. ed. 627, 634; Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 U. S. 331, 343, 28 L. ed. 717, 721, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151; Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. (The Montana) 129 U. S. 397, 441, 442, 32 L. ed. 788, 792, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469; Saunders v. Southern R. Co. 62 C. C. A. 523, 128 Fed. 15; Williams v. Central R. Co. 183 N. Y. 518, 76 N. E. 1116, affirming without opinion the decision as reported in 93 App. Div. 582, 88 N. Y. Supp. 434; Martin v. Central R. Co. 121 App. Div. 552, 106 N. Y. Supp. 226; Homer v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. — Utah, —, 128 Pac. 522; Black v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 82 S. C. 478, 64 S. E. 418; Elliott, Railroads, 4th ed. § 1510; Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. § 401.

No jurisdiction, it is believed, has given any less protection to the shipper of goods, whether of freight or baggage, than that sanctioned by the decisions just cited; but some states have given more. In a few states, even though a limitation of liability had been agreed to, it has been held, nevertheless, either wholly invalid, or invalid so far as concerns the carrier's liability for negligence.

Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. § 405; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. ed. 268, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Adams Exp. Co. v. Green, 112 Va. 527, 72 S. E. 102.

And in a few states, of those which form the great majority and have upheld to its full extent a contract of valuation or limited liability, it has been held that no merely formal assent inferred from accepting a bill of lading or a receipt without actual knowledge of its contents, and without the shipper's attention being called by the carrier to the limitation, is valid, though an agreement made with full knowledge of the situation would bind the shipper.

Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. § 410; Plaff v. Pacific Exp. Co. 251 Ill. 243, 95 N. E. 1089;

Digitized by Google

Hill v. Adams Exp. Co. 82 N. J. L. 373, 81 Atl. 859; Wichern v. United States Exp. Co. 83 N. J. L. 241, 83 Atl. 776.

The ground upon which the validity of a limitation upon a recovery for loss or damage due to negligence depends is that of estoppel.

Wells, F. & Co. v. Neiman-Marcus Co. 227 U. S. 469, 476, 57 L. ed. 600, 602, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 651, 57 L. ed. 683, 688, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391.

The refinements of the law in different jurisdictions are only important in this case to indicate the scope of the recent decision of Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148, and the cases which follow it. These cases in effect hold that the Federal government has declared its purpose to exercise supervision over all interstate contracts of carriage, and that therefore this court will pass upon their validity. In effect, therefore, this court will decide both whether a contract limiting liability is valid in law and whether such a contract was made in fact. These decisions must necessarily affect the law hereafter laid down in a number of states. Those states which have had a different rule from that of this court, regarding either what is necessary to prove the existence of a contract to limit liability, or the extent to which such a limitation is valid, must modify their rules so far as interstate shipments are concerned; but the law of Massachusetts will remain unchanged, for that law is precisely the same as that laid down in the Croninger Case, both with reference to the validity of agreements to limit liability and with reference to what constitutes such an agreement. In Massachusetts it has long been the law that the acceptance of a document binds one who receives it, though he may not choose to read it (Grace v. Adams, 100 Mass. 505, 97 Am. Dec. 117, 1 Am. Rep. 131; Grinnell v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 113 Mass. 299, 18 Am. Rep. 485; Hoadley v. Northern Transp. Co. 115 Mass. 304, 15 Am. Rep. 106; Clement v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 137 Mass. 463; Graves v. Adams Exp. Co. 176 Mass. 280, 57 N. E. 462). And such had indeed been the law laid down by this court prior to the decision of the Croninger Case (Cau v. Texas & P. R. Co. 194 U. S. 427, 431, 48 L. ed. 1053, 1056, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663, 16 Am. Neg. Rep. 659).

But it should be observed that it has also been the law both of this court and of the Massachusetts court that a public notice of an asserted limitation by the carrier, even though the shipper was aware of it (which was not the fact in the case at bar), does not have the effect of an agreement or representation. Some actual assent is necessary.

New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. 344, 382, 383, 12 L. ed. 465, 482; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Mineral Springs Mfg. Co. 16 Wall. 318, 328, 329, 21 L. ed. 297, 302, 303; Judson v. Western R. Corp. 6 Allen, 491, 83 Am. Dec. 646; Buckland v. Adams Exp. Co. 97 Mass. 124.

And this is the generally accepted law of the United States.

1 Hutchinson, Carr. 3d ed. § 406.

It is suggested in the opinion of the Massachusetts court in the present case that the English rule is slightly more favorable to the carrier, but it is hard to find any warrant for this statement.

Henderson v. Stevenson, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. App. Cas. 470, 32 L. T. N. S. 709; Richardson v. Rowntree [1894] A. C. 217, 63 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 283, 6 Reports, 95, 70 L. T. N. S. 817, 58 J. P. 493, 7 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 482; Parker v. South Eastern R. Co. L. R. 2 C. P. Div. 416.

The Carl Case, Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 654, 57 L. ed. 683, 689, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391, is not to be understood as meaning that a limitation of liability, or the valuation on which such a limitation is based, is literally part of the rate itself.

Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 509, 57 L. ed. 314, 321, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Wells, F. & Co. v. Neiman-Marcus Co. 227 U. S. 469, 475, 57 L. ed. 600, 602, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267.

The amendments to the interstate commerce act in 1906 did not change the law either as to what a rate is or what the effect is of a rate duly filed. Whatever is now binding as a rate upon a shipper was binding before 1906. The statements in The Majestic, 166 U. S. 375, 41 L. ed. 1039, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 597, 2 Am. Neg. Rep. 282; Cau v. Texas & P. R. Co. 194 U. S. 427, 431, 48 L. ed. 1053, 1056, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663, 16 Am. Neg. Rep. 659, and Saunders v. Southern R. Co. 62 C. C. A. 523, 128 Fed. 15, all made shortly before 1906, would all have been inaccurate as general statements in asserting that the assent of the shipper was necessary for the validity of a limitation of liability. Moreover, the decisions in Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289, and in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. ed. 268, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132, which admitted the efficacy of state laws forbidding limitations of liability would have been wholly wrong. For, if the limitation of liability is literally part of the rate, not only must it be assumed that the schedules of the railroad showed the rate and the asserted limitation of liability, but the special contracts of limitation proved in the cases would have been clearly within exclusive Federal control prior to the amendments of 1906. It has been decided that the Carmack amendment gives full control to the Federal government of all contracts for interstate carriage, but it does not change the definition of what is a rate, and, if a limitation of liability is now part of a rate, it was part of a rate when these cases were decided.

Digitized by Google

A limitation of liability in any form except by contract or a representation by the shipper has never been permitted by the law. The attempt to escape from this rule of the common law is as ineffectual as the attempt to escape the statutory liability cast upon an initial carrier by the Carmack amendment, which was held futile in Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Wallace, 223 U. S. 481, 56 L. ed. 516, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Dixie Tobacco Co. 228 U. S. 593, 57 L. ed. 980, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

A limitation of liability is not within the meaning of the words "rule, regulation, or practice."

Curry v. Marvin, 2 Fla. 411; Re Leasing of State Lands, 18 Colo. 359, 32 Pac. 988; Martin v. Central R. Co. 121 App. Div. 552, 106 N. Y. Supp. 226.

There is no provision for the filing of contracts with shippers, and no method of making them public defined in the statute.

Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 81, 52 L. ed. 681, 694, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 479, 55 L. ed. 297, 302, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265.

A law or a statute is binding, whether persons subject to the law are aware of it or not. A rate duly filed is unquestionably equally binding; but it is not, perhaps, a fortunate mode of expression, even in regard to the rate itself, to say that shippers are conclusively presumed to know it. It is submitted that the exact expression is that in Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 652, 57 L. ed. 683, 689, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391, "want of knowledge is no excuse," or that in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. International Coal Min. Co. 230 U. S. 184, 197, 57 L. ed. 1446, 1451, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 893, "the tariff, so long as it was of force, was, in this respect, to be treated as though it had been a statute, binding as such upon railroad and shipper alike."

That the law recognizes the fact that a shipper may or may not know the rate is obvious from the criminal sections of the act. The words "wilfully," "willingly," and "knowingly" recur in the criminal provisions applicable to shippers. It can hardly be claimed that a shipper who ignorantly violated a prohibition of the act which was qualified by one of these words is guilty of a misdemeanor. Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 39 L. ed. 214, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 144. Yet, if it were true that he was conclusively presumed to know the contents of schedules duly filed, he would be violating the act wilfully, willingly, and knowingly.

Even in prosecutions under the Elkins act, which contains no express qualifying word such as "wilfully" or "knowingly," a shipper who ignorantly ships goods at a preferential rate is not criminally liable.

Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 90 C. C. A. 364, 164 Fed. 376; Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 103 C. C. A. 172, 179 Fed. 614.

There is no estoppel barring the defendant in error from showing the value of her baggage.

Re Released Rates, 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 550.

There is nothing in the decisions under the interstate commerce acts which is in conflict with the construction of the statute for which the defendant in error contends. It is, of course, well settled that a shipper has no redress because a rate is unreasonable, except by the direct proceedings allowed by the act (Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Robinson v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 222 U. S. 506, 56 L. ed. 288, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. International Coal Min. Co. 230 U. S. 184, 57 L. ed. 1446, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 893; Mitchell Coal & Coke Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 230 U. S. 247, 57 L. ed. 1472, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 916), and the unreasonableness of a rule, regulation, or practice of a carrier must be objected to in the same way.

Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. United States, 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. ed. 292, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Morrisdale Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 230 U. S. 304, 57 L. ed. 1494, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 938.

There is nothing in the decisions of this court at variance with these principles, nor does the case of Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A. (N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148, and the cases which followed it (Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Miller, 226 U. S. 513, 57 L. ed. 323, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Latta, 226 U. S. 519, 57 L. ed. 328, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Wells, F. & Co. v. Neiman-Marcus Co. 227 U. S. 469, 57 L. ed. 600, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 57 L. ed. 683, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep.

Digitized by Google

391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397), limit the principle that there is no provision for the filing of contracts with shippers, and no method of making them public defined in the statute.

On the exact facts of Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, the Massachusetts court, shortly before it decided this case in favor of the shipper, had decided in favor of the carrier (Bernard v. Adams Exp. Co. 205 Mass. 254, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 293, 91 N. E. 325, 18 Ann. Cas. 351); and the court of appeals of New York had reached the same result (Greenwald v. Barrett, 199 N. Y. 170, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 971, 92 N. E. 218).

Yet neither the New York court nor the Massachusetts court felt that such decisions in the least interfered with the general rule that a passenger, or, indeed, any shipper of goods, could recover their full value if lost by negligence of the carrier, in the absence of a special contract of valuation or of limitation of liability. In the cases where the liability of the carrier has been held to be limited, there was, in fact, a special contract to that effect or an agreed valuation. In Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger the shipper had accepted a receipt stating a valuation and limitation of liability as one of the terms of the contract contained in the receipt. This also was true in Wells, F. & Co. v. Neiman-Marcus Co. 227 U. S. 469, 57 L. ed. 600, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267.

In other recent cases (Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Miller, 226 U. S. 513, 57 L. ed. 323, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; and Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 57 L. ed. 683, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391), there was unquestionably assent in fact to the limitation of value.

Where a contract is made with a carrier which requires the court to choose between the alternative of saying that the rate is illegal or that the service contracted for is illegal, it is settled that the former alternative is the correct one.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. ed. 1011, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. ed. 910, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802.

If it be assumed that the schedules do not permit the carrier to fulfil the contract which it made to carry goods at full liability because the value was not previously declared and the rate paid in advance, what is the consequence? Certainly, under the decision of Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Kirby, 225 U. S. 155, 56 L. ed. 1033, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 501, the carrier would not be liable on its contract. But that the unenforceability of the contract would permit the carrier to destroy negligently the baggage intrusted to it, and pay for the consequences of its negligence at its own valuation, is emphatically denied. It is not a special service or privilege which the defendant seeks to enforce. Whether the agreement to carry baggage was valid or not, in any of its terms, is immaterial. The duty to restore the bailed goods without negligence is another matter.

Merchants' Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 151 U. S. 368, 388, 38 L. ed. 195, 205, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 499, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

Nor is the railroad, on the assumption that its contract of carriage was invalid, in the position of a gratuitous bailee. It received the baggage as part of a business transaction in which it had a beneficial interest, and, in addition to the price of the passenger's ticket, received a payment on account of the weight of the baggage.

Judge v. Northern P. R. Co. 189 Fed. 1014.

The schedules filed make the defendant in error liable for the excess charge for value, and the railroad liable for the full value of the baggage.

Re Released Rates, 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 550; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 650, 57 L. ed. 683, 687, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391.

There is no hardship on the carrier in the decision of the supreme court of Massachusetts. The obligation imposed by that decision is no greater than that which everywhere existed prior to the passage of the interstate commerce acts, and still exists as to intrastate shipments. To make inquiry from the passenger or shipper, or at least to give a receipt or bill of lading which states the terms upon which the carrier is willing to accept the goods, is all that is requisite. It is immaterial whether in any case the person presenting the goods has any knowledge of their value or authority to declare the same. The carrier may nevertheless demand from the person presenting the goods an acceptance or rejection of its terms, and the action of this person will bind the owner.

York Mfg. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 3 Wall. 107, 113, 18 L. ed. 170, 172; Squire v. New York C. R. Co. 98 Mass. 239, 93 Am. Dec. 162; Hill v. Boston, H. T. & W. R. Co. 144 Mass. 284, 10 N. E. 836.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

Katharine Hooker brought an action in the superior court of Middlesex county, Massachusetts, to recover from the Boston & Maine Railroad as a common carrier on account of the loss of certain baggage belonging to her, which had been transported by the defendant in interstate commerce from Boston, Massachusetts, to Sunapee Lake station, New Hampshire, on September 15, 1908. The plaintiff recovered a judgment for the value of the baggage lost, with interest. The case was taken to the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts upon exceptions of the defendant, and upon its rescript, returned to the [107] superior court, overruling the exceptions (209 Mass. 508, 95 N. E. 945, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 669), judgment was there entered for the plaintiff for $2,253.77.

Digitized by Google

The defendant insists that the recovery of the plaintiff should have been limited to the sum of $100, in view of certain requirements made by it concerning the transportation of baggage, and filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. From the findings of fact it appears that the baggage was checked upon a first-class ticket purchased for the plaintiff (although not used by her, she traveling upon another similar ticket purchased by herself); that at the time the baggage was checked the plaintiff had no notice of the regulations hereinafter referred to, limiting the liability of the defendant (further than such notice is to be presumed from the schedules filed and posted as hereinafter stated); that no inquiry was made by the defendant on receiving the plaintiff's baggage as to its value; that there was no evidence that any more expensive or different mode of transportation was adopted for baggage the value of which was declared to exceed $100 than for other baggage; that any reasonable person would infer from the outward appearance of the plaintiff's baggage when tendered to the defendant for transportation that the value largely exceeded $100, and that the loss of plaintiff's baggage was due to the negligence of defendant.

The court further found that previous to and during September, 1908, the defendant had published and kept open for inspection and filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, in accordance with the act of Congress relating to interstate commerce and amendments thereto and the orders and regulations of the Commission, schedules giving the rates, fares, and charges for transportation between different points, including Boston and Sunapee Lake station, all terminal, storage, and other charges required by the Commission, all privileges and facilities granted or allowed, and all rules or regulations [108] which in any way affected or determined such rates, fares, and charges or the value of the service rendered to passengers; that during the same time, in accordance with an order of the Commission of June 2, 1908, making comprehensive regulations as to rate and fare schedules, the defendant had placed with its agent in Boston all rate and fare schedules and the terminal and other charges applicable to that station, and had enabled and required him to keep in accessible form a file of such schedules, and had instructed him to give information contained therein to all seeking it, and to afford to inquirers opportunity to examine the schedules, and that the defendant in the manner shown and in all other ways conformed to the acts of Congress and the orders and regulations of the commission with reference to such schedules. The court also found that the schedules contained provisions limiting the free transportation of baggage to a certain weight, and the liability of the defendant to $100, followed by a table of charges for excess weight, and also contained the following provision:

"For excess value the rate will be one half of the current excess baggage rate per 100 pounds for each $100, or fraction thereof, of increased value declared. The minimum charge for excess value will be 15 cents.

"Baggage liability is limited to personal baggage not to exceed $100 in value for a passenger presenting a full ticket and $50 in value for a half ticket, unless a greater value is declared and stipulated by the owner and excess charges thereon paid at time of checking the baggage;"

that the excess charge for transporting baggage valued at $1,904.50, which was the value of the baggage lost, from Boston to Sunapee Lake station during September, 1908, according to the schedules, was $4.75; that notices were posted at or near the offices where passenger's tickets were sold in the Boston [109] station, stating that tariffs naming the rates on interstate traffic were on file with the agent, and would be furnished for inspection upon application, and that notices were posted in the baggage room of that station, in a conspicuous place, and in sight of persons using the room for checking baggage, reading that personal baggage not exceeding $100 in value would be checked free for each passenger on presentation of a first-class ticket, and containing information with reference to excess weight. And the court further found that the plaintiff did not declare at the time her baggage was checked that it exceeded $100 in value, and did not pay any charges for valuation in excess of that amount.

It is to be borne in mind that the action as tried and decided in the state court was not for negligence of the railroad company as a warehouseman for the loss of the baggage after its delivery at Sunapee Lake station, but was solely upon the contract of carriage in interstate commerce.

Digitized by Google

The supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, in deciding the case, held that the interstate commerce act did not in any wise change the common-law rule, applicable in Massachusetts, that regulations of this character, limiting the amount of recovery for baggage lost, must be brought home to the knowledge of the shipper and assented to, or circumstances shown from which assent might be implied. In reaching this conclusion that learned court relied upon the case of Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. ed. 268, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132, in which case it was held that a state might apply its local law and policy to recovery for the loss of a horse shipped in interstate commerce from Albany, New York, to Cynwyd, in the state of Pennsylvania, and injured by the negligence of a carrier in the latter state, notwithstanding the bill of lading contained an express condition that the carrier assumed liability to the extent only of the agreed valuation in event of loss. [110] It was further held in the Hughes Case that the interstate commerce act, in the respect then under consideration, had not enacted an exclusive rule upon which recovery might be had governing responsibility for loss, and that as the law then stood the state might enforce its own regulations authorized by statute or judicial decision as to responsibility for such negligence.

Since the decision in the Hughes Case the Hepburn act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288), has been passed, and this court has held that by virtue of that act (particularly § 7, the Carmack amendment) the subject of interstate transportation of property has been regulated by Federal law to the exclusion of the power of the states to control in such respect by their own policy or legislation. In this connection we may refer to the cases of Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Wells, F. & Co. v. Neiman-Marcus Co. 227 U. S. 469, 57 L. ed. 600, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 57 L. ed. 683, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman Bros. 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

The cases in 226 and 227 U. S., it is true, involved liability for express or freight shipments made upon express receipts, bills of lading, or separate contracts, showing on their face or by reference to tariffs the opportunity for valuation for the purpose of fixing the rate and liability, and the limitation appearing in such form of contract was declared to be valid and effectual to relieve the carrier from a greater liability than that therein expressed. But the court did not stop there: In Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 509, 57 L. ed. 321, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148, it said: "The knowledge of the shipper that the rate was based upon the value is to be presumed from the terms of the bill of lading and of the published schedules filed with the Commission." In Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 652, 57 L. ed. 688, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391, this court said: "The valuation the shipper declares determines the legal rate where there are two rates based upon valuation. He must take notice of the rate applicable, [111] and actual want of knowledge is no excuse. The rate, when made out and filed, is notice, and its effect is not lost, although it is not actually posted in the station. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. ed. 1011, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Kirby, 225 U. S. 155, 56 L. ed. 1033, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648. It would open a wide door to fraud and destroy the uniform operation of the published tariff rate sheets. When there are two published rates, based upon difference in value, the legal rate automatically attaches itself to the declared or agreed value. Neither the intentional nor accidental misstatement of the applicable published rate will bind the carrier or shipper. The lawful rate is that which the carrier must exact and that which the shipper must pay. . . . To the extent that such limitations of liability are not forbidden by law, they become, when filed, a part of the rate." And in Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 669, 57 L. ed. 697, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397, this court said that the shipper was compelled to take notice of the rate sheets contained in tariff schedules, "not only because referred to in the contract signed by them, but because they had been lawfully filed and published. . . . When the carrier graduates its rates by value and has filed its tariffs showing two rates applicable to a particular commodity or class of articles, based upon a difference in valuation, the shipper must take notice, for the valuation automatically determines which of the rates is the lawful rate." In Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Cramer, 232 U. S. 490, ante, 697, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383, this court said: "That rule of liability [the uniform rule established by the Hepburn act] is to be enforced in the light of the fact that the provisions of the tariff enter into and form a part of the contract of shipment, and if a regularly filed tariff offers two rates, based on value, and the goods are forwarded at the low value in order to secure the low rate, then the carrier may avail itself of that valuation when sued for loss or damage to the property." And in Great Northern R. Co. v. O'Connor, 232 [112] U. S. 508, ante, 703, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380, this court said: "But so long as the tariff rate, based on value, remained operative, it was binding upon the shipper and carrier alike, and was to be enforced by the courts in fixing the rights and liabilities of the parties. The tariffs are filed with the Commission and are open to inspection at every station. In view of the multitude of transactions, it is not necessary that there shall be an inquiry as to each article, or a distinct agreement as to the value of each shipment. If no value is stated, the tariff rate applicable to such a state of facts applies. If, on the other hand, there are alternative rates based on value, and the shipper names a value to secure the lower rate, the carrier, in the absence of something to show rebating or false billing, is entitled to collect the rate which applies to goods of that class, and if sued for their loss it is liable only for the loss of what the shipper had declared them to be in class and value."

Digitized by Google

Before these cases were decided this court had held that the effect of filing schedules of rates with the Interstate Commerce Commission was to make the published rates binding upon shipper and carrier alike, thus making effectual the purpose of the act to have but one rate, open to all alike, and from which there could be no departure. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. ed. 910, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. ed. 1011, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 81, 52 L. ed. 681, 694, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 476, 55 L. ed. 297, 301, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265. This principle, it will be perceived, was fully recognized in the series of cases decided since the passage of the Hepburn act, beginning with the case of Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, supra. It is true that the Carmack amendment requires a receipt or bill of lading to be issued concerning shipments of property in interstate commerce, and that in the cases construing that amendment a bill of lading was issued, and according to the circumstances of the case, the bill of lading and its effect are discussed in each of these, but the [113] effect of filing the schedule is not lost sight of, and the doctrine of the previous cases as to purpose of filing and the necessity of adherence to such schedule is uniformly recognized.

The court below, after conceding that the subject-matter of passenger's baggage in interstate travel is within the control of Congress, and saying that there was no specific regulation respecting it, said:

"The precise position of the defendant is that, as the limitation of liability for baggage was filed and posted as a part of its schedules for passenger tariff, the limitation thereby became and was an essential part of its rate, from which, under the interstate commerce law, it could not deviate, and by which the plaintiff was bound, regardless of her knowledge of or assent to it. If the premise is sound, then the conclusion follows, for the public are held inexorably to the rate published, regardless of knowledge, assent, or even misrepresentation. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. ed. 910, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. ed. 1011, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Melody v. Great Northern R. Co. 25 S. D. 606, 30 L.R.A. (N.S.) 568, 127 N. W. 543, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 727.

It follows, therefore, from the previous decisions in this court, that if it be found that the limitation of liability for baggage is required to be filed in the carrier's tariffs, the plaintiff was bound by such limitation. Having the notice which follows from the filed and published regulations, as required by the statute and the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, she might have declared the value of her luggage, paid the excess tariff rate, and thus secured the liability of the carrier to the full amount of the value of her baggage, or she might, for the purpose of transportation, have valued it at $100, and received free transportation and liability to that extent only, or, as she did, she might have made no valuation of her baggage, in which event the rate and the corresponding liability would have automatically attached. As to the finding [114] that the plaintiff's baggage was apparently worth more than $100, as above set forth, it appears that the contents of the two trunks and suit case were not disclosed or known to the carrier, and the finding in this respect, necessarily based on the appearance of the baggage, cannot be said to show a procurement of transportation in violation of the requirements of the filed schedules at a rate disproportionate to its known value.

Let us now turn to the interstate commerce act and see whether the matter of the limitation of baggage liability is covered by that act. Section 6 provides:

"That every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act shall file with the Commission created by this act, and print and keep open to public inspection, schedules showing all the rates, fares, and charges for transportation between different points on its own route and between points on its own route and points on the route of any other carrier by railroad, by pipe line, or by water when a through route and joint rate have been established. If no joint rate over the through route has been established, the several carriers in such through route shall file, print, and keep open to public inspection, as aforesaid, the separately established rates, fares, and charges applied to the through transportation. The schedules printed as aforesaid by and such common carrier shall plainly state the places between which property and passengers will be carried, and shall contain the classification of freight in force, and shall also state separately all terminal charges, storage charges, icing charges, and all other charges which the Commission may require, all privileges or facilities granted or allowed, and any rules or regulations which in anywise change, affect, or determine any part or the aggregate of such aforesaid rates, fares, and charges, or the value of the service rendered to the passenger, shipper, or [115] consignee. Such schedules shall be plainly printed in large type, and copies for the use of the public shall be kept posted in two public and conspicuous places in every depot, station, or office of such carrier where passengers or freight, respectively, are received for transportation, in such form that they shall be accessible to the public, and can be conveniently inspected. The provisions of this section shall apply to all traffic, transportation, and facilities defined in this act.

Digitized by Google

. . . . . .

"No carrier, unless otherwise provided by this act, shall engage or participate in the transportation of passengers or property, as defined in this act, unless the rates, fares, and charges upon which the same are transported by said carrier have been filed and published in accordance with the provisions of this act; nor shall any carrier charge or demand or collect or receive a greater or less or different compensation for such transportation of passengers or property, or for any service in connection therewith, between the points named in such tariffs, than the rates, fares, and charges which are specified in the tariff filed and in effect at the time; nor shall any carrier refund or remit in any manner or by any device any portion of the rates, fares, and charges so specified, nor extend to any shipper or person any privileges or facilities in the transportation of passengers or property, except such as are specified in such tariffs. . . ." [24 Stat. at L. 380, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3156, as amended by § 2 of act of 1906, 34 Stat. at L. 586, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1289.]

It is to be observed that the schedules are required to state, among other things, in naming certain charges, "all other charges which the Commission may require, all privileges or facilities granted or allowed, and any rules or regulations which in anywise change, affect, or determine any part or the aggregate of such aforesaid rates, fares, and charges, or the value of the service rendered to the passenger, shipper, or consignee." The question then is, did the limitation as to liability for baggage, based [116] upon the requirement to declare its value when more than $100 was to be recovered, come within that provision?

It seems to us that the ordinary signification of the terms used in the act would cover such requirements as are here made for the amount of recovery for baggage lost by the carrier. It is a regulation which fixes and determines the amount to be charged for the carriage in view of the responsibility assumed, and it also affects the value of the service rendered to the passenger. Such requirements are spoken of, in decisions dealing with them, as regulations; as, a common carrier "may prescribe regulations to protect himself against imposition and fraud, and fix a rate of charges proportionate to the magnitude of the risks he may have to encounter." York Mfg. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 3 Wall. 107, 112, 18 L. ed. 170, 171. "It is undoubtedly competent for carriers of passengers, by specific regulations, distinctly brought to the knowledge of the passenger, which are reasonable in their character, and not inconsistent with any statute or their duties to the public, to protect themselves against liability, as insurers, for baggage exceeding a fixed amount in value, except upon additional compensation, proportioned to the risk. And in order that such regulations may be practically effective and the carrier advised of the full extent of its responsibility, and, consequently, of the degree of precaution necessary upon its part, it may rightfully require, as a condition precedent to any contract for the transportation of baggage, information from the passenger as to its value; and if the value thus disclosed exceeds that which the passenger may reasonably demand to be transported as baggage without extra compensation the carrier, at its option, can make such additional charges as the risk fairly justifies." New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Fraloff, 100 U. S. 24, 27, 25 L. ed. 531, 533.

Mr. Justice Brewer, sitting in the circuit court, in Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 165, 178, thus defined the term "regulation:" "Within the term 'regulation'[117] are embraced two ideas: one is the mere control of the operation of the roads, prescribing the rules for the management thereof,—matters which affect the convenience of the public in their use. Regulation, in this sense, may be considered as purely public in its character, and in no manner trespassing upon the rights of the owners of railroads. But within the scope of the word 'regulation,' as commonly used, is embraced the idea of fixing the compensation which the owners of railroad property shall receive for the use thereof; and when regulation in this sense is attempted, it necessarily affects the property interests of the railroad owners; and it is 'regulation' in this sense of the term."

Digitized by Google

Turning to the act itself we think the conclusion that this limitation is a regulation required to be filed by the act is strengthened by § 22, which provides: "But before any common carrier, subject to the provisions of this act, shall issue any such joint interchangeable mileage tickets with special privileges, as aforesaid, it shall file with the Interstate Commerce Commission copies of the joint tariffs of rates, fares, or charges on which such joint interchangeable mileage tickets are to be based, together with specifications of the amount of free baggage permitted to be carried under such tickets, in the same manner as common carriers are required to do with regard to other joint rates by section six of this act." [As amended 28 Stat. at. L. 643, chap. 61, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3171.] This section would indicate that Congress thought that § 6 of the act had to do with specifications of the amount of baggage which would be carried free, and that such regulations should be filed under the requirement of § 6 to which it referred.

This conclusion is further strengthened by the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in requiring by its Tariff Circular No. 15-A, entitled, "Regulations Governing the Construction and Filing of Freight Tariffs and Classification [118] and Passenger Fare Schedules," effective April 15, 1908, and in force at the time of the loss here in question, that:

"34. Tariffs shall contain, in the order named:

"(g) Rules and regulations which govern the tariff, the title of each rule or regulation to be shown in bold type. Under this head all of the rules, regulations, or conditions which in any way affect the fares named in the tariff shall be entered. . . . These rules shall include . . . the general baggage regulations, and also schedule of excess-baggage rates, unless such excess-baggage rates are shown in tariff in connection with the fares."

This requirement is a practical interpretation of the law by the administrative body having its enforcement in charge, and is entitled to weight in construing the act.

The act of June 18, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 539, 546, chap. 309, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288), defining, in § 1, the duties of carriers to make just and reasonable regulations affecting, among other things, the carrying of personal, sample, and excess baggage, may be noted in passing. This statute was before the Commission in a case involving such regulations. Regulations Restricting the Dimensions of Baggage, 26 Inters. Com. Rep. 292. Concerning it the Commission, by Clark, Chairman, said:

"Prior to June 18, 1910, the act to regulate commerce contained no specific provision relating to the interstate transportation of baggage, except in connection with the issuance of joint interchangeable mileage tickets. The Commission had, however, under authority of § 6, required carriers to publish and file their general baggage regulations and their schedules of excess baggage rates. Section 1 was amended on the date named, the amendment, in so far as it is material, reading as follows:

"'It is hereby made the duty of all common carriers subject to the provisions of this act to establish, observe, [119] and enforce . . . just and reasonable regulations and practices affecting classifications, . . . the manner and method of presenting, marking, packing, and delivering property for transportation, the facilities for transportation, . . . the carrying of personal, sample, and excess baggage.'"

And it is to be observed that the Commission considers its requirement with reference to including baggage regulations in the tariff schedules, quoted above, as adequate, for the same provisions appear in its current circular.

We are therefore of the opinion that the requirement published concerning the amount of the liability of the defendant, based upon additional payment where baggage was declared to exceed $100 in value, was determinative of the rate to be charged, and did affect the service to be rendered to the passenger, as it fixed the price to be paid for the service rendered in the particular case, and was, therefore, a regulation within the meaning of the statute.

By permitting the baggage regulations, including the excess valuation rate, to be filed and become part of the tariff schedules, the rule of the common law that the carrier becomes an insurer of the safety of baggage against accidents not the act of God or the public enemy or the fault of the passenger (the rule established in this country, 3 Hutchinson, Carr. § 1241) was not changed. The effect of such filing is to permit the carrier by such regulations to obtain commensurate compensation for the responsibility assumed for the safety of the passenger's baggage, and to require the passenger, whose knowledge of the character and value of his baggage is peculiarly his own, to declare its value and pay for the excess amount. There is no question of the reasonableness or propriety of making such regulations, which would be binding upon the passenger if brought to his knowledge in such wise as [120] to make an agreement or what is tantamount thereto. This much is conceded by the learned counsel for the plaintiff in error. The liability of a carrier under the interstate commerce act was said, in the Croninger Case (p. 511), to be (aside from the responsibility for the default of a connecting carrier) "not beyond the liability imposed by the common law, as that body of law applicable to carriers has been interpreted by this court as well as many courts of the states." And in that case (p. 509) it was laid down as the established rule of common law "as declared by this court in many cases that such a carrier may by a fair, open, just, and reasonable agreement limit the amount recoverable by a shipper in case of loss or damage to an agreed value made for the purpose of obtaining the lower of two or more rates of charges proportioned to the amount of the risk." And see the previous cases in this court there cited. But the effect of the regulations, filed as required, giving notice of rates based upon value when the baggage to be transported was of a higher value than $100, and the delivery and acceptance of the baggage without declaration of value or notice to the carrier of such higher value, charges the carrier with liability to the extent of $100 only.

Digitized by Google

The language of the regulation filed reads: Baggage liability is limited to personal baggage not to exceed $100 in value, etc., unless a greater value is declared, etc. We have said that this limitation does not relieve from the insurer's liability when the loss occurs otherwise than by negligence, and we think applies equally when negligence of the carrier is the cause of loss, as is found in this case. The effect of the filing gives the regulation as to baggage the force of a contract determining "Baggage liability." In Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 U. S. 331, 28 L. ed. 717, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151, followed in the later cases in this court, it was held that a recovery may not be had above the amount stipulated though the loss results from the carrier's negligence. "The carrier [121] must respond for negligence up to that value." The discussion and conclusion reached in the Croninger and Carl Cases, supra, leave nothing to be said on this point. This rule is recognized in New York (Tewes v. North German Lloyd S. S. Co. 186 N. Y. 151, 8 L.R.A.(N.S.) 199, 78 N. E. 864, 9 Ann. Cas. 909, 20 Am. Neg. Rep. 701; Gardiner v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 201 N. Y. 387, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 826, 94 N. E. 876, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 281).

If the charges filed were unreasonable, the only attack that could be made upon such regulation would be by proceedings contesting their reasonableness before the Interstate Commerce Commission. While they were in force they were equally binding upon the railroad company and all passengers whose baggage was transported by carriers in interstate commerce. This being the fact, we think the limitation of liability to $100 fixed the amount which the plaintiff could recover in this case, and there was error in affirming the recovery for the full value of the baggage, in the absence of a declaration of such value and payment of the additional amount required to secure liability in the greater sum.

We do not think the requirement of the Carmack amendment, that a railway company receiving property for transportation in interstate commerce shall issue a receipt or bill of lading therefor, required other receipts than baggage checks, which it is shown were issued when the baggage was received in this case. When the amendment was passed Congress well knew that baggage was not carried upon bills of lading, and that carriers had been accustomed to issue checks upon receipt of baggage. We do not think it was intended to require a departure from this practice when the matter was placed under regulation by schedules filed and subject to change for unreasonableness upon application to the Commission. Such checks are receipts, and there is no special requirement in the statute as to their form. It is doubtless in the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission to make requirements as to the checks or receipts to be given for baggage if that [122] subject needs regulation. Act of June 18, 1910, §§ 1 and 15 (36 Stat. at L. 539, chap. 309.)

Reversed and remanded to the Superior Court of Massachusetts for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Mr. Justice Pitney, dissenting:

I have been unable to find a previous instance where any court, in this country, at least, in an action by shipper or passenger against common carrier for loss of freight or baggage, occasioned by the negligence of the carrier or its employees, has held the recovery to be limited to an arbitrary sum unrelated to the value of the goods lost, and this without any previous valuation or agreement assented to by the shipper or passenger, without any representation of value made by him, and without even notice brought home to him of any rule or regulation upon which the limitation of liability is based. The effect given by the present decision to a "regulation" prescribed by the carrier, that, while formally promulgated, was in fact unknown to the passenger, seems to me an entire departure from the principles governing the duties and responsibilities of common carriers as heretofore recognized by this court and by the courts of the states generally, as laid down in the text-books and cyclopedias of law, and as reiterated and applied by this court in a recent series of notable decisions.

Digitized by Google

We are referred to the "act to regulate commerce" of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), as amended in 1906 by the Hepburn act (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288), with citation of the provision in § 6 of the act respecting the filing and publication of schedules showing the rates, fares, and charges for transportation, etc., and with particular emphasis upon the so-called Carmack amendment. I do not find in either of these any phrase or expression that manifests a legislative intent to lessen or limit in any way [123] the carrier's liability as quasi insurer, much less its responsibility for losses due to its own negligence or that of its employees. Neither enactment in terms imposes any duty or burden upon the shipper or passenger affecting the question at issue; and the Carmack amendment, at least, contains a clear expression of the legislative purpose to enforce the carrier's responsibility for losses of property caused by it, without regard to any rule or regulation exempting it.

The result reached in the present case—which seems so contrary to all previous adjudications and to the apparent meaning of the acts of Congress—is based (if I understand the opinion) not upon any legislation directly addressed to the particular subject, but upon inferences deduced by indirect reasoning from the assumed policy of the law. The reasoning, as I am constrained to believe, disregards familiar principles established by repeated decisions of this court, in the light of which Congress undoubtedly legislated; and it has the effect of placing honest but unskilled shippers and passengers at a serious disadvantage in dealing with common carriers, enabling the latter, by "regulations" never called to the attention of the former, to obtain practical immunity from responsibility for losses due to their own negligence.

The consequences are so serious that I have been unable to convince myself that I should acquiesce in silence.

The salient facts are mentioned in the opinion, but some are not noticed, and it is proper to state that plaintiff traveled, in September, 1908, as an interstate passenger upon defendant's train from Boston, Massachusetts, to Sunapee Lake, New Hampshire, having in fact paid two first-class fares, one ticket being used for the checking of her baggage, the other for her personal transportation. Defendant's schedules, filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission and published in the mode prescribed by the act of Congress, showed the rates of fares between [124] these places, and contained a provision stating that "one hundred and fifty pounds of personal baggage, not exceeding $100 in value, will be checked free for each passenger on presentation of a full ticket. . . . For excess weight, charge will be made as follows [here was inserted a table of charges for excess weights, and at the foot of it the following]: For excess value, the rate will be one half of the current excess baggage rate per 100 pounds for each $100, or fraction thereof, of increased value declared. The minimum charge for excess value will be 15 cents. Baggage liability is limited to personal baggage not to exceed $100 in value for a passenger presenting a full ticket . . . unless a greater value is declared and stipulated by the owner and excess charges thereon paid at time of checking the baggage." Plaintiff's baggage consisted of three pieces, of the value of $1,904.50, and the charge on this valuation for transportation from Boston to Sunapee Lake, acording to the schedules, would have been 25c. for each excess $100 or fraction thereof, or $4.75 in all. Plaintiff did not declare and stipulate at the time the baggage was checked that it exceeded $100 in value, and did not pay any charge for valuation in excess of that amount. Defendant's agents did not request any such declaration, and made no inquiry respecting value; but it is found as a fact that from the outward appearance of the baggage when tendered to defendant for transportation any reasonable person would have inferred that its value largely exceeded $100. There was nothing to show that any more expensive or different mode of transportation was adopted for baggage whose value was declared to exceed $100 than for other baggage. Nor was there anything to show that plaintiff, or her agent who attended to the checking of the baggage for her, had notice of defendant's regulations for limiting its liability. In the Boston passenger station notices were posted that "Freight [125] and passenger tariffs naming rates on interstate traffic are on file with the agent, and will be furnished for inspection upon application;" and in the baggage room was a notice that "One hundred and fifty pounds of personal baggage, not exceeding $100 in value, will be checked free for each passenger on presentation of a full ticket." There was nothing in either of these notices to call attention to any charge for excess value, nor any statement in terms that the baggage liability was limited to $100. Nor was it shown that the notices themselves were ever seen by plaintiff or her agent. It appears, however, that because the weight of her baggage exceeded by 45 pounds the weight allowable under the company's rules, a payment of 23 cents was made for checking the baggage. Ordinary numbered baggage checks appear to have been delivered to plaintiff's agent, but nothing else in the form of a receipt or bill of lading. The baggage was not lost in transit, but was destroyed by fire while in defendant's charge, more than twenty-six hours after its arrival at defendant's Sunapee Lake station. It was distinctly found as a fact that the loss was due to defendant's negligence.

Digitized by Google

In the trial court, plaintiff relied wholly upon a count of her declaration which, after reciting the status of defendant as a common carrier, and the contract of carriage in interstate commerce, averred as ground of recovery the neglect and refusal of defendant to deliver the baggage to plaintiff at Sunapee Lake upon demand made, accompanied with a tender of the checks. But the course of the trial shows that negligence was a principal issue, if not the only vital issue; both parties requested findings upon the question, and findings were made in response to their respective requests; and upon review the state supreme court treated negligence as the asserted ground of liability, saying (209 Mass. 599, 95 N. E. 945, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 669): "The plaintiff, an interstate passenger of the defendant, claims [126] damages in excess of $2,000 for loss of her baggage occurring through the negligence of the defendant."

Although, according to the well-known Massachusetts doctrine, the railroad company's responsibility strictly as carrier would seem to have terminated with the completion of the transit and the safe deposit of the baggage in the railroad station, its responsibility thereafter being that of warehouseman (Thomas v. Boston & P. R. Corp. 10 Met. 472, 477, 43 Am. Dec. 444; Norway Plains Co. v. Boston & M. R. Co. 1 Gray, 263, 273, 61 Am. Dec. 423; Barron v. Eldredge, 100 Mass. 455, 459, 1 Am. Rep. 126; Lane v. Boston & A. R. Co. 112 Mass. 455, 462; Stowe v. New York, B. & P. R. Co. 113 Mass. 521, 523; Rice v. Hart, 118 Mass. 201, 207, 19 Am. Rep. 433), the distinction appears to have been ignored by the Massachusetts court in discussing the case, perhaps because it does not affect the responsibility for loss of goods attributable to negligence; there being in this respect no difference between a carrier and a warehouseman. But it might affect the question whether defendant's responsibility is to be determined in the light of the interstate commerce act; and I concede that it is.

It is, of course, true that in Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148, this court held that by the Carmack amendment (34 Stat. at L. 595, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1307, set forth in the margin†) the [127] subject-matter of the liability of railroads under bills of lading issued for interstate freight is placed under Federal regulation so as to supersede the local law and policy of the several states, whether evidenced by judicial decision, by statute, or by state Constitution.

And I concede that the supreme court of Massachusetts erred if it intended to hold that the carrier's responsibility for interstate passengers' baggage is not likewise within the sweep of the amendment.

The concrete question, therefore, is whether, under the interstate commerce act and the Carmack amendment, this defendant's liability to plaintiff, upon the facts stated, is properly to be limited to $100.

My views, in brief, are:

(a) That the baggage regulation limiting the liability to the amount named (if construed as operative without the knowledge or consent of the passenger, and in the absence of an actual valuation of the goods, assented to by the passenger), is not authorized or sanctioned by the commerce act, and is invalid because contrary to the established policy of the law governing the common carrier in the performance of its

†"That any common carrier, railroad, or transportation company receiving property for transportation from a point in one state to a point in another state shall issue a receipt or bill of lading therefor, and shall be liable to the lawful holder thereof for any loss, damage, or injury to such property caused by it or by any common carrier, railroad, or transportation company to which such property may be delivered, or over whose line or lines such property may pass, and no contract, receipt, rule, or regulation shall exempt such common carrier, railroad, or transportation company from the liability hereby imposed: Provided, that nothing in this section shall deprive any holder of such receipt or bill of lading of any remedy or right of action which he has under existing law."

Digitized by Google

public duties, and because contrary to the letter and spirit of the Carmack amendment.

(b) That the regulation had not received the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, but, on the contrary, was covered by an adverse administrative ruling made by the Commission a few months before the occurrences that gave rise to this action.

(c) That, being invalid per se, the regulation derived no legal force or vitality from being included in the filed and published schedules.

(d) That the filing of the regulation cannot give it the force of a contract, because (1) plaintiff was ignorant of the regulation in fact; (2) to make it a part of her contract without her knowledge would render it a contract limiting [128] the carrier's liability for negligence to an arbitrary sum, without any agreement or representation of value on the part of plaintiff, and therefore void as being contrary to the established public policy; and (3) the law will not raise by implication an agreement that is contrary to the policy of the law.

(e) That plaintiff is not estopped to recover the full value of her goods, for she was entirely free from blame in the matter, made no representation as to value, and sought no special advantage.

(f) That even were the contract of carriage as actually made invalid, this would not render the bailment unlawful, and (at least) the carrier would be responsible for the loss of the goods through negligence, irrespective of the contract.

(g) That by the terms of the Carmack amendment the railroad company in this case is precluded from setting up a limitation of liability, (1) because the limitation, as asserted against a passenger who was ignorant of the regulation, and had made no contract under it, amounts to a rule or regulation for exempting the carrier from liability for a loss of property caused by the carrier's negligence, contrary to the terms of the amendment; and (2) because the carrier waived any benefit of the regulation (if that were valid) by failing to deliver to plaintiff a receipt or bill of lading embodying the terms of the contract as required by the same enactment.

The importance of the subject seems to warrant a somewhat extended discussion.

(1) Reference is made to § 6 of the commerce act as amended by the Hepburn act; the portion relied upon being that which requires the filed and published schedules to state "any rules or regulations which in anywise change, affect, or determine any part or the aggregate of such aforesaid rates, fares, and charges, or the value of the service rendered to the passenger, shipper, or consignee." [129] In this respect the act has remained substantially unchanged since the amendment of March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. at L. 855, chap. 382, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1911, p. 3158), quoted in the margin.†

It is important to observe that § 6, either before or since the Hepburn act, does not prescribe what the rules and regulations shall be. Neither this section nor any other section of the act confers upon the carrier any authority over the subject. It is implied that there may be, indeed must be, rules and regulations for carrying on the business of a common carrier, in order to secure system, efficiency, and a just performance of its public duties; and § 6, recognizing this, prescribes—and, as I think, only prescribes—that whatever rules and regulations may be duly established which "in anywise change, affect, or determine the rates, fares, and charges, or the value of the [130] service rendered," shall be included in the filed and published schedules. But does it follow from this that the carrier may make any rules and regulations it chooses? Is the carrier to be a law unto

†"Sec. 6. That every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act shall print and keep open to public inspection schedules showing the rates and fares and charges for the transportation of passengers and property which any such common carrier has established and which are in force at the time upon its route. The schedules printed as aforesaid by any such common carrier shall plainly state the places upon its railroad between which property and passengers will be carried, and shall contain the classification of freight in force, and shall also state separately the terminal charges and any rules or regulations which in anywise change, affect, or determine any part or the aggregate of such aforesaid rates and fares and charges. Such schedules shall be plainly printed in large type, and copies for the use of the public shall be posted in two public and conspicuous places in every depot, station, or office of such carrier where passengers or freight, respectively, are received for transportation, in such form that they shall be accessible to the public and can be conveniently inspected. . . . And when any such common carrier shall have established and published its rates, fares, and charges in compliance with the provisions of this section, it shall be unlawful for such common carrier to charge, demand, collect, or receive from any person or persons a greater or less compensation for the transportation of passengers or property, or for any services in connection therewith, than is specified in such published schedule of rates, fares, and charges as may at the time be in force."

Digitized by Google

itself? And, if not, what are the limitations upon its power? The answer, I think, is plain. The authority to establish rules and regulations, unless it arise from express legislative authority, is derived by implication from the necessities of the case, in view of the nature of the business, and is plainly subject to the limitation that the rules and regulations shall not be such as to contravene the letter or the policy of the law, nor such as to evade responsibility for the due performance of the public duties of the carrier.

This is a principle universally recognized from an early day by the courts of this country, and it lies at the foundation of the rule everywhere prevalent (differing, in this regard, from the rule that prevailed in England for a time prior to the railway and canal traffic act 1854, 17 and 18 Vict. chap. 31, § 7), that the carrier cannot limit his liability by any general regulation or published notice.

It is for this reason, primarily, that the regulation here in question,—"Baggage liability is limited to personal baggage not to exceed $100 in value . . . unless a greater value is declared," etc., if treated as intended to be effective without the knowledge or assent of the passenger, seems to me to be a regulation entirely beyond the power of the carrier to establish. The state reports are full of cases recognizing the principle, and applying and enforcing it with respect to the particular subject-matter now under conisderation. It is not necessary, however, to go outside of our own reports, for this court from the beginning until now has constantly recognized and steadfastly enforced this limitation of the authority of the common carrier with respect to regulations of the same essential character as the one now in question.

[131] Thus, in New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. 344, 382, 12 L. ed. 465, 482, the court held that the carrier could not by published notices seeking to limit its responsibility exonerate itself from the duties which the law annexed to its employment. And, dealing with an express stipulation, the court, by Mr. Justice Nelson (p. 382), said: "But admitting the right thus to restrict his obligation, it by no means follows that he can do so by any act of his own. He is in the exercise of a sort of public office, and has public duties to perform, from which he should not be permitted to exonerate himself without the assent of the parties concerned. And this is not to be implied or inferred from a general notice to the public, limiting his obligation, which may or may not be assented to. He is bound to receive and carry all the goods offered for transportation, subject to all the responsibilities incident to his employment, and is liable to an action in case of refusal. And we agree with the court in the case of Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. 234, 247, 32 Am. Dec. 455, that, if any implication is to be indulged from the delivery of the goods under the general notice, it is as strong that the owner intended to insist upon his rights and the duties of the carrier, as it is that he assented to their qualification. The burden of proof lies on the carrier, and nothing short of an express stipulation by parol or in writing should be permitted to discharge him from duties which the law has annexed to his employment."

In York Mfg. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 3 Wall. 107, 112, 18 L. ed. 170, 171, the court, speaking by Mr. Justice Field, said: "The law prescribes the duties and responsibilities of the common carrier. He exercises, in one sense, a public employment, and has duties to the public to perform. Though he may . . . prescribe regulations to protect himself against imposition and fraud, and fix a rate of charges proportionate to the magnitude of the risks he may have to encounter, he can make no discrimination between persons, or vary his charges from their condition or character. [132] He is bound to accept all goods offered within the course of his employment, and is liable to an action in case of refusal. He is chargeable for all losses except such as may be occasioned by the act of God or the public enemy. He insures against all accidents which result from human agency, although occurring without any fault or neglect on his part; and he cannot by any mere act of his own avoid the responsibility which the law thus imposes. He cannot screen himself from liability by any general or special notice, nor can he coerce the owner to yield assent to a limitation of responsibility by making exorbitant charges when such assent is refused. The owner of the goods may rely upon this responsibility imposed by the common law, which can only be restricted and qualified when he expressly stipulates for the restriction and qualification. But when such stipulation is made, and it does not cover losses from negligence or misconduct, we can perceive no just reason for refusing its recognition and enforcement."

In Michigan C. R. Co. v. Mineral Springs Mfg. Co. 16 Wall. 318, 329, 21 L. ed. 297, 302, the court, after repeating the language I have quoted from the opinion in 6 How., proceeded to say: "These considerations against the relaxation of the common-law responsibility by public advertisements apply with equal force to notices having the same object, attached to receipts given by carriers on taking the property of those who employ them into their possession for transportation. Both are attempts to obtain, by indirection, exemption from burdens imposed in the interests of trade upon this particular business. It is not only against the policy of the law, but a serious injury to commerce, to allow the carrier to say that the shipper of merchandise assents to the terms proposed in a notice, whether it be general to the public or special to a particular person, merely because he does not expressly dissent from them. If the parties were on an equality in their dealings with each other there might be some show of reason for assuming acquiescence from silence, but in [133] the nature of the case this equality does not exist, and, therefore, every intendment should be made in favor of the shipper when he takes a receipt for his property, with restrictive conditions annexed, and says nothing, that he intends to rely upon the law for the security of his rights. It can readily be seen, if the carrier can reduce his liability in the way proposed, he can transact business on any terms he chooses to prescribe. . . . The law, in conceding to carriers the ability to obtain any reasonable qualification of their responsibility by express contract, has gone as far in this direction as public policy will allow."

Digitized by Google

So, in New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Fraloff, 100 U. S. 24, 27, 25 L. ed. 531, 533, the court said: "It is undoubtedly competent for carriers of passengers, by specific regulations, distinctly brought to the knowledge of the passenger, which are reasonable in their character, and not inconsistent with any statute or their duties to the public, to protect themselves against liability as insurers, for baggage exceeding a fixed amount in value, except upon additional compensation, proportioned to the risk. And in order that such regulations may be practically effective, and the carrier advised of the full extent of its responsibility, and, consequently, of the degree of precaution necessary upon its part, it may rightfully require, as a condition precedent to any contract for the transportation of baggage, information from the passenger as to its value; and if the value thus disclosed exceeds that which the passenger may reasonably demand to be transported as baggage without extra compensation, the carrier, at its option, can make such additional charge as the risk fairly justifies."

(2) And if it is against the policy of the law for a common carrier to limit its "common-law liability"—that of quasi insurer of goods—by general regulation or published notice not assented to by the passenger or shipper, this is more emphatically true with respect to its responsibility for losses due to the negligence of the carrier or of its servants; for, even by express contract, upon whatever [134] consideration, the carrier is not permitted to obtain exemption from liability for negligence. New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. 344, 383, 12 L. ed. 465, 482; York Mfg. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 3 Wall. 107, 113, 18 L. ed. 170, 172; New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 375, 384, 21 L. ed. 627, 638, 641, 10 Am. Neg. Cas. 624; Bank of Kentucky v. Adams Exp. Co. 93 U. S. 174, 183, 23 L. ed. 872, 876.

The rule admits of but one exception, and that is hedged with important qualifications. It is, that where a contract of carriage is fairly made between shipper and carrier agreeing upon a valuation of the property carried, or based upon a valuation declared by the shipper and relied on by the carrier, with a rate of freight based upon a condition limiting the carrier's liability to the amount of the agreed or declared valuation, and the valuation is in good faith relied upon by the carrier, and is not a mere cover for an attempt by the carrier to escape liability for negligence, the contract will be recognized as a proper mode of securing a due proportion between the amount for which the carrier is responsible and the freight he receives, and the shipper will be estopped from claiming more than the agreed or declared valuation, even in case of a loss due to negligence. So it was laid down by this court in Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 U. S. 331, 338, 28 L. ed. 717, 720, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151, and the grounds of decision were expressed in the opinion of the court (by Mr. Justice Blatchford) in terms so clear that besides being uniformly followed by this court until now, they have been adopted generally by states that adhere to the common-law rules of liability. To quote from the opinion (112 U. S. 340): "As a general rule, and in the absence of fraud or imposition, a common carrier is answerable for the loss of a package of goods though he is ignorant of its contents, and though its contents are ever so valuable, if he does not make a special acceptance. This is reasonable, because he can always guard himself by a special acceptance, or by insisting on being informed of the nature and value of the articles before receiving them. [135] If the shipper is guilty of fraud or imposition, by misrepresenting the nature or value of the articles, he destroys his claim to indemnity, because he has attempted to deprive the carrier of the right to be compensated in proportion to the value of the articles and the consequent risk assumed, and what he has done has tended to lessen the vigilance the carrier would otherwise have bestowed [citing cases]. This qualification of the liability of the carrier is reasonable, and is as important as the rule which it qualifies. There is no justice in allowing the shipper to be paid a large value for an article which he has induced the carrier to take at a low rate of freight on the assertion and agreement that its value is a less sum than that claimed after a loss. It is just to hold the shipper to his agreement, fairly made, as to value, even where the loss or injury has occurred through the negligence of the carrier. The effect of the agreement is to cheapen the freight and secure the carriage, if there is no loss; and the effect of disregarding the agreement, after a loss, is to expose the carrier to a greater risk than the parties intended he should assume. The agreement as to value, in this case, stands as if the carrier had asked the value of the horses, and had been told by the plaintiff the sum inserted in the contract. The limitation as to value has no tendency to exempt from liability for negligence. It does not induce want of care. It exacts from the carrier the measure of care due to the value agreed on. The carrier is bound to respond in that value for negligence. The compensation for carriage is based on that value. The shipper is estopped from saying that the value is greater."

Digitized by Google

(3) Such was the state of the common law of this country, as universally recognized, when the interstate commerce act was passed, and I am unable to see in § 6, or elsewhere in that act, any purpose to change it. During the entire time that intervened between the passage of the act and the passage of the Hepburn act (including the Carmack amendment) in 1906, the courts of the states [136] (except in the few states that adopted a policy less favorable to the carrier) and the Federal courts generally administered the law as before, and without a suggestion, so far as I have observed, that § 6, in requiring that all rules and regulations having a bearing upon rates should be filed and published, had in any way authorized common carriers by any mere rule or regulation, although properly promulgated, to limit the liability for damages by negligence in the absence of an express agreement as to value assented to by the shipper, or some representation of value made by him.

